

Complete History

WITH THE LIVES

OF ALL THE

and

THEREOF;

From the Earliest Account of Time, to the Death of His late Majesty King

CONTAINING

A Faithful RELATION of all - of ECCLESIASTICAL and CIVIL.

The Whole Illustrated with Large and Useful nuscripts, and other good Authors: And the from the Originals, Engraven by the best Masters.

taken from divers Maof the Kings and Queens

VOL. II.

CONTAINING

I. The History of King ... Written by the Right Honourable Ed-

II. The Life of King By Sir John Hayward.

III. The Life of Queen Written in Latin by Francis Godmin, Lord Bishop of Hereford, newly Translated into English by Mr. J. H.

IV. The History of Queen Written by William Cambden, Efq; Clarencieux King at Arms; newly done into English.

V. The Annals of King

By the faid Mr. Cambden.

VI. The History of King By Arthur Wilson, Esq.,

Printed for Brab. Aylmer, Reb. Bonwick, Sam. Smith and Benj. Walford, Will. Freeman, Tim. Goodwin, Tho. Bennet, Matth. Worton, John Valbee, Sam. Manship, Tho. Lewborough, John Viebolson, Richard Parker, and Benj. Tooke. 1706.

では、 A * B, 41711, 14, 表。

THE

A N D

King Henry the Eighth.

Together with which is briefly represented

A General HISTORY of the Times.

Written by the Right Honourable Edward Lord Herbert of Cherbury.

T is not easie to write that Prince's History, of whom no one thing may constantly be affirmed. Changing of Manners and Con-dition alters the coherence of Parts, which should give an uniform Description. Nor is it probable that Contradictories should agree to the same Person: So that nothing can thake the Credit of a Narration more, than if it grow unlike it felf; when yet it may be not the Author, but the Argument caused the Variation. It is impossible to draw his Picture well who hath feveral Countenances.

I shall labour with this Difficulty in King Henry VIII. not so much for the general observation (among Politicks) that the Government of Princes rarely grows milder towards their latter end; but because this King in particular, (being about his declining Age, so diverse in many of his Desires, that he knew not well how either to command or obey them) interverted all, falling at last into fuch violent Courfes, as in common Opinion derogated not a little from those Vertues which at first made him one of the most renown'd Princes of Christendom.

Concil. His Education was accurate, being deftined Trid. I. 1. (as a credible Author affirms) to the Arch-glorious way for disposing of a younger Son. For as he at once disburdned his Revenues, and For as ne at once dispured his Kevenues, and the Publick from the Charge incident to fo great a Person, so he left a Pallage open to Ambition; especially ever since Eugenius IV. had de-Vid. Constituted the Place of a Cardinal above all other in da. 1449. the Church. Besides, he considered it would be no little Security to his Posterity, that this Dignity was conferred on one who had Interest in the Confervation of the Crown. By these means Confervation of the Crown. By these means not only the more necessary Parts of Learning were infused into him, but even those of Ornament; so that, besides his being an able Latinity, 77 agroud Philosopher and Divine, he was (which one might Philosopher and Divine, he was (which one might Philosopher and Divine, a carrier which the property of the Transport and Terrors, its was (whiten one linguit groups wonder at in a King) a curious Musician; as two plot n pie intire Masses compos d by him, and often sung wine, and in his Chappel, did abundantly witness. These were Qualities which invefted in an excellent and well form'd Personage, made him every way recommendable. To which again, a great Courage and active Spirit being added, he seem'd to hold that strong Temper of Authority, which made him esteem'd and redoubted both at home and abroad. Had his Age answer'd his Youth, He was or Expectation, none of his Predecessors could Brave, have exceeded him; but as his exquisite Endowbishoprick of Canterbury, during the Life of his ments of Nature engaged him often to become a elder Brother Prince Arthur; that prudent King his Father chusing this as the most cheap and which are ordinarily incident unto them; so his Vol. II,

Courage was observ'd by little and little to receive into it some mixture of Self-will and Eut Obsti- Cruelty. nate and Cruel.

I am the more particular in his Description, for that Princes Actions are not always drawn from Reason of State, but sometimes even from Inclination and Humour. They have many ways to be Wife, and seldom err while they keep their Estate and Reputation. Nothing is so case as to reign, if the Body of Government be well framed. Let the Counterpoiles of Reward and Punishment go aright, the Wheels of this great Clock seldom fail. This King used both well as long as his Means and Complection fuffer'd him; though at last, passing these Bounds on either side, he cannot be denied to have sallen into divers Irregularities.

Tune 28 1491 April 22.

The time of his Birth was June 28. 1491, and of his coming to the Crown April 22. 1509, when 1509 though he might be thought aprer for Delights than Bufinefs; yet, as he follow'd the Advice of able Counsellors, fewer Errors were committed than when all things were fwayed by his own Arbitrement; for, as they were felected (out of those his Father most trusted) by the Countels of Richmond his Grand-mother, (noted to be a vertuous and prudent Lady) fo he took their Impressions easily, both out of a diffidence of his own ftrength in the managing of the weighty Affairs of his Kingdom, and a defire he had to be free to those Exercises which most forted with his Youth and Disposition. And certainly it was a happy Conjuncture for him, fince, if the first part of Wisdom consist in an Ability to give good Counfel, the next is to take it; the Condition betwixt both being ever most obnoxious to Danger. But that their Names may be known to Posterity, I shall mention them as they are upon Record.

His Coun-

William Warham, Archbishop of Canterbury, and Lord Chancellor of England.
Richard Fen, Bishop of Winchester, Secretary, and Lord Privy-Seal.

Thomas Howard, Earl of Surry, Lord Treasurer of England.

George Talbot, Earl of Shrewsbury, Lord Steward of the King's Houshold.

Sir Charles Somerfet, Lord Herbert, of Gower, Charles, and Rayland, Lord Chamberlain. Sir Thomas Lovel, Master of the Wards, and Constable of the Tower.

Sir Henry Wyat.

Thomas Ruthall, Doctor of Law.

Sir Edward Poynings, Knight of the Garter, Controller.

" April 9. 1532.

Sir Henry Marney, * afterwards Lord Marney. Sir Toomas Darcy, † afterwards Lord Darcy.

The frame of this Council was of Scholars chiefly, and Soldiers: Among the former fort I find the Archbishop Warham, much celebrated by the learned Erasmus; and of the latter kind, there will be divers mention'd with Honour, in the following History. So that their Choice proceeded rather from their sufficiency in the Busi-ness they were to discharge, and Care of that Authority they mult support, than from any private Affection. Infomuch, that notwithstanding the high Reverence they bore to their Prince's Person, they were observed so to love the Profperity of his Affairs, as they would not only impartially advise, but often modellly contell with him in any thing for his Good. Betides, among them (though not many) there were diversable to execute and perform as well as counfel. So that, without divulging any Secret, or descending from the Dignity of their sences, except Murder, Felony, and Treason, Place, to require Advice from their Inferiors, 1509. they mov'd in their own Orb. This held up the No com-Majesty of the Council. Only I find it itrange, monLawthat among all these there was not so much as years his one that I may call stilled from the Common Council, I aw; which, though I cannot commend, (Wife part of his dom evermore beginning at home) yet 1 doubt Reign. not was fo temper'd, as, when any Difficulty in this kind didarife, the Counfel learned in the Law was fent for. However, it feems that King kept them at a distance towards the beginning of his Reign, though towards the middle and latter end I find fome were (through their great Abilities) received into the Body of his Council; yet fo, as the King was noted not to admit reafon of Law every where, for reason of State: Therefore he us'd to take their Advice obliquely, and no otherwise than to discover how safe his own Defigns were, and fo with less danger to vary from them. Which Deviations yet he would fo regulate, as his Actions at home had still, if not their ground, yet at least their pretext from the Common Law. Neither was it hard, the pra-Aice thereof having been fo long intercepted in the Civil Wars of Lancafter and Tork, as there were not a few Overtures for the Regal Authority, both in his Father's time and his, to appear in, and enter.

The first Office perform'd by these Counfellors, was mix'd betwixt Piety to their deceas'd Prince, and Duty to their new; it being the best continuance of that Regal Authority which thould never die, to revive the memory thereof in that way only which is permitted, being Pomp and Ceremony. This appeared not only in a great May 9. Funeral, but by that magnificent Structure in Westminster, where the Chappel having been similared by Henry VII. himself, had the Tomb afterwards added and perfected by his Executors, 1519. Concerning which, though it be reported that the Chappel coft only 10000 l. (or, as others Henry VIII fay, 14000 l.) and the Tomb 1000 l. yet as Mo-Chappel ney went then, it might be thought a fumptuous coft but Monument.

While the Obsequies and Rites were prepa- April 23. ring (the particulars whereof Hall after his man-Ha ner relates) King Henry retired privately from Richmond (where his Father died) to the Tower of London, both that he might with more leifure advife with his Council concerning the prefent Affairs of his Kingdom, as also the better to avoid those Salutes and Acclamations of the Pcople, which could not but be unfeafonable, till the Lamentations and Solemnity of his Father's Funeral were paft. He thought not fit to mingle the Noifes. Here then it was in the first place refolv'd to make good his Authority, as having more undoubted Right to the Crown by the Union of the White-Rose and the Red in his Person, than any King ever deliver'd to us by warranta-ble Hiftory. For this End he found or took occasions. In one kind Henry Stafford, Brother to the Duke of Buckingbam, ferv'd for Example, who (upon I know not what suspicion) was apprehended prefently, and committed to the apprenenced pretenty, and communication of Tower; which yet feem'd afterwards fo frivolous, that to repair this Difgrace, he was the fame Year made Earl of Willipire. In the other kind, Doctor Ruthall became the Object, being (together with one of his Council) made the fame Day Lishop of Durcime. Thus, though it feems he hafted to take upon him the real Marks of Sovereignty, yet he fo temper'd them, as to leave his Subjects in hope of an even hand. Befides, that he might flew himfelf gracious to his Subjects, he not only confirm'd the Pardon his Father gave a little before his death for all Of-which general Abolitions do not properly reach) ing them wrongfully to hold under that Tenure they but for further performance of his Father's last will caus'd a Proclamation to be made; That if be permitted to a Traverse, till they had payed great Will caus'd a Proclamation to be made; That if any Man could prove himself to be then wrongfully depriv'd of his Goods, by occasion of a certain Commission for Forseitures, he should (up-on due complaint) have satisfaction; whereupon fo many Petitions were prefently exhibited E_{imp} for against Sir Richard Empson and Edmund Dudly, Esqrs. (employed lately for taking the Benefit of Penal Statutes) that it was thought fit to call them before the Council, where Empfon spake to and Dudiy an Account. April 25. this effect:

Empfon's

Right Honourable and others here prefent: Have remark'd two Caufes in general, that move Speech before the Attention. One is the greatness, the other is the before the frangeness and novelty of Argument. Both these concur so manifestly in the Affairs now question'd, that I will not much implore your Patience. Though on the other file, confidering my violent Perfecution, I cannot but think it a favour, that I may speak for my self; but (alsa) to whom? The King my Masser, which I should appeal, as to my supream Judge and Protector, abandons me to my Enemies, without other Caufe, than that I obey'd his Futher's Commands, and upheld the Regal Authority. The People, on whose equal tryal I should put my Life, seek my Descruction, only because I endeavour to execute those Laws whereof themselves were Authors: What would have happen'd to me, if I had disobey'd my King, or broke my Country's Laws? Surely, if I have any ways transgress'd, it is in pro-curing that these Penal Statutes might be observed, which your seives in open Parliament decreed, and to which you then suomitted, both your Persons, Estates, and Posterity; and if this he a Crime, why do you not first repeal your proper Acts? Or if (which is truth) they stand still in full force and vertue, why do you not vindicate from all Imputation both your selves and me? For who ever yet saw any Man condemn'd for doing Justice Especially when by the chief dispenser thereof (which is the King) the whole frame of the proceed-ing hath been confirmed and warranted? Nay, who cour faw Min on these terms not rewarded? And must that which is the life and strength of all other Actions, be the subversion and overthrow of Mine? Have you read or heard in any well-govern'd Country, that the infractors of Larus made by Publick Vore, and Consent escaped without Punishment, and they only punish d who labour'd to sustain them? or when you had net read or heard any fuch thing, could you imagine a more certain sign of ruine in that Common-wealth. And will you alone hope to decline this beauty Judgment? When contrary to all Equity and Example, you not on-ly make Presidents for Injustice and Impunity, but to-gether with desaming would instite a cruel Death on those who would maintain them; as if this might be a fit Guerdon for those who (1 must tell you) every where elfe would have been thought the best Patriots; what can we expect then, but a fatal Period to us all? But let God turn this away, though I be the Sacrifice. Only, if I must die, let me desire that my Enditement may be entred on no Record, nor divulged to forreign Nations, left if they hear, in my Condemnation, all that may argue a final dissolution in Go-vernment, they invade and overcome you.

To this was answer'd briefly. That he receiv'd a great deal of liberty to speak ill, as well as to do:
That he should find at last, he was punish'd for passing the bounds of his Commission from the late King, and for stretching a Law which in its felt was severe enough to the common and poorer fort of People, from whom he exacted most unjustly. The chief parts of his Accusation (that I can find) were,

1. That he had committed divers Persons to prifon, without suffering them to answer till they had compounded for their Fines.

For fearthing unduly Mens Estates, and bring-

Fines and Ransoms.

3. That Wards, being come to full years, were not allowed to fue out their Livery, till they had paid ar excessive Composition.

4. That Outlaw'd Persons could not be allow'd to fue out their Charter of Pardon, till they had paid half the profit of their Lands for two years, upon pre-tence that it was according to Law.

5. That he usurp'd upon the Jurisdiction of other Courts, in hearing and determining divers matters properly belonging to them.

6. Lattly, That whereas a Prifener being indiffed for Thefi, in the City of Coventry, to the value of one pound, was by the Jury acquitted; the faid Empson conceiving the Evidence to be sufficient, committed the Jury to Prison, till they enter'd into Bond to appear before the King's Council; where the matter being again confider'd, it was order'd they should pay Eight Pounds for a Fine, (which was thought so beinous, as, at a Sefficis being held afterwards at Coventry, a particular Indistment was fram'd against him, and he was found Guilty.) How many of these Allegations were verified, or how far they might be warranted by the last King's Commillion, appears not to me. Howfoever, for the prefent, they were * committed to the Airil 23 Tower.

This Empson, reported to be a Sieve-maker's

Son in Torcefter, from this mean beginning, by his Wit and Industry, came to be of Council to King Henry VII. and Master or Surveyor of his forfeits in divers kinds; in which place he ferved as an Instrument, for raising great Sums to the King. Dudley (a Gentleman of Birth, and fuch parts as he was chosen Speaker of the Parliament House † 19 Henry VII.) affishing him. + 1503. These Men (call'd by Polydore Virgil Judices Fif-cales) having it seems, exceeded their bounds, were detested of all, but especially the poorer fort, who found it cafier to hate, than to pay, To fatisfie their Complaints therefore, it was thought fit to permit them to the ordinary ways of Juffice: The Promoters they used being so severely punish'd in the mean time, betwixt the Pillory and Shame, that they dy'd all (a few Emplos days after) in Prison, save one Giovanni Baptista & Douby's Grimaldi, who, foreseeing the storm, took San-Informers ctuary in Westminster.

All Clamors being thus filenc'd, the next care was, that the Crown might be put on the King's Head, with that Solemnity, which in former times was used. This was not yet so speeded, but that the King's Council thought fit first to advise with him concerning his Marrying. About which many Propositions being made, the graver fort told him, that the same reasons which made his wife Father chuse to match with Spain, (first by marrying his eldest Son Arthur, to Kutharine Daughter of Ferdinand King of Arragon, and after Arthurs Death, by treating a Match between the faid Lady and Him) were in force still. That fince he had pretences on France, no Alliance Reafons could be useful on that part. Besides, that be- K. Horry, twixt great Estates adjacent to one another, such for his Jealounes use to rife, that they may make Peace marrying fometimes, but never Friendship. That Leagues the Prince and Confederations have in them the nature of of Spain, harmonical Accords, which jar in the fecond, his Bro-but agree in the third Interval. Therefore, that ther drihe should match with Spain, or at least with some that dow. Prince, that might joyn with him, when there dow. should be question of opposing France, which, since the lare * Union of the Dukedom of Bri- 1499.

tain, he was to confider as a potent and dangerous Neighbour. As for the Honse of Burgandy, Vol. II. B 2 of Maximilian the Emperor, by his march with Mary, Daughter and Heir to the last Duke called Charles the Bold, Carolus Audax) he needed not fear any thing, unless he did wilfully provoke them; the causes of love on that part seeming to be perpetual, as being founded upon the nutual necessity of those Ports and Havens, to which, upon all foul weather, the Shipping must τ5¢8. refort on either fide; and lately confirm'd by a new Contract of Charles, Grandchild and Heir of Dec. 16. Maximilian, with Mary the King's Sifter [which yet held not,] it was then confider'd, whether he might not immediately take the faid Lady Katherine; and the rather, because the Treaty had not only been dispensed with, in the time of Henry the Seventh, his Father; but some offence lately taken by Ferdinand, because it was deferred so long; (for perfecting whereof therefore, he had sent ample Commission to his Emelbedge beat (see I. dad his many December 1). 1503. bailador here, (as I find by our Records, about this time;) and to conduce hereto, was alledg'd Poled, Virg. (as Polydore hath it) the Law, Deuter. 25. of mar-Hillor rying the Brother's Wife; and, to help this again, Angl. the Princess Katherine protested her self to be a Virgin, offering to be try'd by Matrons. It was added also, that the Lady was prefent, and that faved time and charges; befides, she had given fo much proof of Vertue and sweetness of Condition, that they knew not where to parallel her. Again, when she shou'd depart the Kingdom, a great Dower must follow her, which wou'd be transported yearly out of the Nation. All which Motives were corroborated by the above-mention'd Difpenfation, obtain'd divers years before 1503. from Julius II. who, as he was a ftirring and warlike Prelate, and had his ends upon King Henry the Seventh, in the Wars then begun in Italy, made no great difficulty to grant it; and the rather, because he was sensible that all the Children which should be gotten betwixt them, would be firm to the Papacy; fince, if ever they renounc'd the Pope's Authority, they must disclaim the Power by which themselves were made Legitimate. A Messenger therefore having been fent to Rome, Anno 1503. (Ferdinando's Power and Mediation concurring) obtain'd a Licence from the Pope, many of the Cardinals, in vain, oppofing it; whereof more amply, when we shall have occasion to speak of the Divorce. Thus, upon the third of June, being about fix weeks after his Father's Death, he espouled the Lady Katherine. June 24. Their Coronation was yet deferr'd till the 24th of the fame Month. The Forms and Magni-June 29 ficence whereof being fet down by Hall, Hollin-shed, and others, are by me purposely omitted. Not long after the King, who had left off Mourn-

Holinsh

The death mother, the Lady Margaret, Countefs of Riebmend of the and Derby, a vertuous Lady, and a great Bene-Countefs actor to both our Univerties, by whose Advice spankling (as is faid) chiefly the King's Counfellers were spankling (before Whose As Co. 325-65-3 chofen: Whom the fo disposed, as they might deliberate well among themselves always, before they gave their advice to this young King, as not thinking fit (at that Age) he should be distracted by difference of Opinions. Neither did they vary much, during her Life; though afterward, some smothered Jealousies broke out into open Faction. Infomuch that Thomas Howard Earl of Surrey, and Richard Fox Bishop of Wincoeffer, our of a competition for being most emi-nent in the King's favour, became at last not sufficiently united between themselves. But, as it is a rare felicity in Princes to make election of able Counfellors, fo it is no less to order them aright. For, as fecret Combination for their State; and first, that during the sickness of the own ends, usuall brings them too close to one late King in March last, they summon'd certain and Low-Countries, (which was come to the hands another, fo ambitious Opposition keeps them 1509. too far off; the true diffance being that only, which is created by a just emulation to do their Mafter Service; in which pofture, unless they be fludiously kept, without being suffer'd to decline to either extream, many inconveniences must follow in the administration of Publick

Henry's Grand-

Polydor

Now though these two (as Polydore relates) had brought all business within their Verge, (William Compton chief Gentleman of the Bed-Chamber, and who was next in favour to them, being more attentive to his profit, than to Publick Affairs:) I doubt not yet, but their fellow Counsellors were often admitted; though, perhaps not being acquainted with all the Premifes, they were hardly able to ground a folid Advice. The Bishop was an old and intimate Counsellor to King Henry the Seventh, and knew all the Mysteries of State. The Earl of Surrey was (in deed) later in Credit, yet a brave and understanding Nobleman, though (as Polydore observes) his Estate was much wasted by the Civil Wars, (his Father John, who was made Duke of Norfolk by Richard the Third, having been kill'd in Befu orthfield on his fide, and the Earl himfelf kept Prifoner in the beginning of Henry the Seventh's Reign.) However, his very place of Lord Treafurer, which he held ever fince the 16th of Hersry the Seventh) made him much in request; as one who both kept and difpenfed that Mass of Wealth, left by Henry the Seventh; which (if we may believe Authors) was 1800000 Pounds Sterling. A greater Sum (doubtless) than any King of this Realm before had in his Coffers. And fuch as might be thought in effect quadruple to so much in this Age. It seems yet, so great a part of it was by the King's Order, distributed to divers of the Court-Gallants, that the Bishop, who was Lord Frivy Seal, and remember'd how hardly it was gotten, repin'd at it, and thereupon did ill offices to the Earl, as if (faith Polydore) he parted with it too eafily, or, perchance, made advantage to himself thereby. But that we may leave these things to the credit of Polydore (in whom I have observ'd not a little Malignity,) I find it refolv'd between them, that in imitation of his Father (who inftituted first a Band of 50 Archers to wait on him) fome Horfe-Guards fhould be ready always to attend his Person. 1485. The number propos'd was but 50. But, as every one had an Archer, a Demilance, and a Custrel (as our History calls it, but being truly Coustillier) or a kind of Ambactus, or Servant belong ing to him, besides three great Horses for his own use, so it grew to a considerable number: Of these Henry Bourchier Earl of Effex was Captain, and Sir John Peachie Lieutenant. But whether this might raise some Jealousie among the People (which yet my Authors mention not) or that their expence were greater than that it could continue after the rate it began, (both they and all their Horfes being trapp'd in Cloth of Gold, Silver, or Gold-smith's Work) 1 find it was diffolv'd at laft, and came to nothing.

This Year a great Plague begun at Calais, which though it confum'd many Perfons, was not thought sufficient yet to keep off an Enemy. So that Sir John Peachie with 300 Men, was fent thither to defend the Place; by whose good order the Town was fecured.

Empfon and Dudly being (as is abovefaid) com- The mitted to the Tower, new and strange Crimes Crimes were found and objected against them, as appears laid to the in their Indictments upon Record, wherein, they Charge of are accus'd of Conspiracy against the King and and Dual's 1509. of their friends to be in Arms at an hours warning; and upon the Death of the faid King, to haiten to London. Out of which, and other Circumftances, it was collected by the Jury, that their intent was to feize on the Person of the new King, and fo to affume the fole Government, or when they could not attain this, to deftroy him.

July 16. Octob. 1. as Traytors.

Princes

porary

Henry

1503.

* 1490.

† 1498.

1 1;06.

Of which Crimes, how improbable foever, Dudley in his Tryal at Guildhall in London, July 16. 1509, and Empson at Northampton, Octob. 1. were found guilty by their Juries, and both condemn'd condem'd of Treason, and so remanded to the Tower.

Our King being thus fetled in his Throne, took feveral profpects upon all his Neighbouring Princes.

In Scotland (then) reign'd James the Fourth, The For being of a middle Age; who was his Confederate by Treaty, and Brother-in-Law by the Match Contemof Margaret (whom Henry the Seventh gave him, Anno 1503.) Howbeit, as he held a stricter Correspondence with France, than stood with the Interest of our Kingdom; some Jealousies of State arose betwixt Henry the Seventh and him, which yet were past over a little before our King's coming to the Crown, and the former Treaty confirm'd.

In France, Louis the Twelfth, an old and warlike Prince reign'd; who studiously yet conferv'd the made betwixt Henry the Seventh and himself, 1498, both that he might the better incorporate and fettle in the French Crown the Dukedom of Britaign, claim'd by him in Anne his Wife's Right, (being not only a large addition to his Down to his tion to his Dominions, but of great nearness and consequence to this Island) and that he might be freer to attend his defigns in Italy (whereof in its due place.) For which reasons also he had concluded (by the means of James the Fourth) a League with John King of Denmark, 1499. Apr. 30. du Tillet. and Sweden then powerful by Sea, by which that King was bound to affift him, in cafe of

In Arragon, Ferdinand an Ancient and Politick Prince rul'd in his own Right, and in Cafile by the right of Isabel his Wife, Inheritrix thereof, who dy'd 1504. By this Lady he had one Son, who deceas'd 1497, and four Daughters. If abel the eldeft being Marri'd to * Alphonfo Prince of Portugal, and afterwards to Manuel King thereof, † dy'd without Islue, whereby fone the fecond Daughter became Heir of Caftile in the Right of her Mother; and had by her Husband Philip (Son to Maximilian the Emperor) Charles and Ferdinand (Emperors successively) and four Daughters, Leoneta, Katharine, Mary and Isabel. This Philip shortly after his * coming to the Kingdom of Castile in the Right of Jone his Wife † dying, and the through fome Indifposition of Mind or Body, proving unapt for Government, Ferdinand reastsum'd his Power in regard of the Minority of his Grandchild Charles. Mary third Daughter to Ferdinand, was Wife to the forefaid Manuel King of Portugal, in place of her de-ceas'd Sifter. And for the Match of Katharine with England, the following History will fufficiently speak ir.

In the Empire Maximilian (though chofen only King of the Romans) appear'd potent; both by the Authority deriv'd thence, and by the Match he had made with Mary, Daughter and Heir of Charles the Bold, Carolus Audax last Duke of Burgundy; by which not only his Estate there, but all the Low-Countries descended to him. Nevertheless, as he consider'd of what Importance it was, for his defigns to make a firm Alliance with England, He hrst offer'd a League 1503. to

of) his Daughter Margaret, Downger of Saway; and, when that fail'd, procur'd a kind of Contract Decemb. 16. 1508. betwixt Charles (afterwards Dec. 16. Emperor, and not above eight years old) his Grand-child, and Mary (afterwards Queen of France) younger Daughter to Henry the Seventh. Neither of which Marriages yet taking effect, the refult was only a Peace and Friendship, establish'd upon the first proposition of Alliance betwixt them; of which also Maximilian was no less glad (as having secured the Low-Countries thereby) than Louis XII. was for Britaign. And they had reason; the adding of the one to France, and the other to the House of Austria, being not only the greatest strengthning our most sufpected Neighbours ever had, but a weakning of us, while we loft two of our best and most uleful Confederates; fo that the permitting thereof fo easily, may be thought a greater Indulgence than could fland with reason of State, had not a confumption and weariness, through our long civil Diffentions at home occasion'd it. For the Inhabitants of both Countries, wanted not pretext to dispute the right of their Princes: In Portugal reign'd Manuel, of whose Matches having formerly spoken, I shall add little more, than that he had already made divers discoveries towards the East-Indies.

In the Low-Countries, Margaret Dutchess of Savoy, appointed Regent by her Father Maximilian, and having also the charge of her Nephew Charles his Education (who was born at Gaunt.) many ways approv'd her felf a difereet Lady; as appears by the many good Offices she did to our King, and to all other Christian Princes, as well as by the bringing up of her Nephew for a Tutor, to whom, in that part of Learning call'd bumanieres Literæ, the politer Studies, she chose Adrian of Utretcht, afterwards Pope; and for State-business Anthoine de Croy, Lord of Chieures, an able Person, who instructed him therein as foon as he was capable of it.

In the Papal See Julius the Second, a warlike Prelate prefided; who having far more, and other deligns than flood with the Dignty and Function of an Eccleliafical Person, adventur d to trouble all things. As for offing himfelf not only priviledged by his force, from all Attempts of Foreign Princes; but that the power of Peace and War did for immediately depend on him, that he should at least, not want occasion to exercise his charge of Arbiter of their Differences. Towards which also, because he knew how much our King could contribute, he paf-fionately defir'd a ftrict League with him, which was embrac'd, as will appear hereafter.

As for the Great Turk Bajazet the Second, though now grown a formidable Enemy to Chriftendom, our King look'd on him at a diffance, and no otherwise than as he stood in Relation to his Confederates.

Having thus furvey'd the prefent Monarchs in particular, he did not forget to take into his fpecial Confideration the State of Venice, which about this time did much inlarge it's Territories, so that, notwithstanding the opposition not only of the chief Christian Potentates, but even of the Turks themselves, they extended their Dominions every way: Infomuch, that the Pope Maximilian Ferdinand and Louis the Twelfth had the last year, being 1508, enter'd at Cambray into a League against them, the Conditions whereof Dec. 9 were; That they should not desift till they had recover'd all those places which the Venetians had taken from them; upon confidence yer, that the with England, He first offer'd a League 1503, to first Conqueror should restore to any of the Henry the Seventh, and (for Consolidation there-

- Armies, and perfonally prefent in the Expedition. To which also he was the more disposed, for that the Venetians had gotten from him sundry places belonging to the Dutchy of Milan. Howbeit, as these Affairs did not directly concern our King, to he took the more leafure to attend the event, and to ferve himfelf thereof.

A Parliain ent

E 5 ...

120, 21.

By this time it was thought fit for many Reafons, but especially for contenting the Commonalty, which feem'd to be wholly alter'd by the rigorous proceedings of Henry the Seventh, to call a Parliament, which began in January following. Here then Empson and Dudly, formerly not only expos'd to the revenge of all Men, but publickly condemn'd (as is above related) were attainted of High Treason. And here I shall touch a little upon the Laws enacted the first year of this King, as far as they may concern the more Historical and Political parts. I find therefore, divers of these Statutes by which King Henry the Seventh took advantage of the People, repeal'd, explained on limited. explain'd, or limited. Among which the benefit of forfeitures for Penal Laws, was reduc'd to the term of three years next preceding. Infomuch that the principal fcope of this Parliament, feem'd to have reference to Empfor and Dudly's business, which was fo represented, (by the I ower-House of Parliament chiefly) that the King was willing to reftrain his own Authority in some fort, that he might enlarge the Peoples Confidence and Affection towards him. Laftly, in this kind fome untrue Inquifitions found by Empfor and Dudley, as also some affurances of Lands past to them, were annihilated and made void. Besides which I find little material, save only that a Sumptuary Law against Excess of Apparel, was Repeal'd, and a new one a little more decent Subrogated.

As our King was now in high efteem with his People for Justice, fo was he no less redoubted abread, for the hopes he gave of being an Active and Couragious Prince. All which was the more regarded, because his Treasure was fo great, that he might be thought able fuddenly, and without the delays usual in raising of Money, to execute his Designs.

Therefore divers Ambaffadors repair'd to him from France, Denmark, Scotland, and other places, who were magnificently entertain'd.

The business of the French King (Louis the Twelfth) was chiefly to keep good Correspondence between the two Countries, while him-March 23, felf went on with his Wars in Italy. In sequence hereof also Tillet faith, there was a Peace made between England and France this year, March 23. And, whereas at the Treaty of Peace in July 1498. Louis, the Twelfth had given caution to Henry the Seventh, to pay that which remained of 745000 Crowns, due according to a Treaty made between Charles the Eighth, and the faid Henry, 13 Novemb. 1492. Now the faid Louis did March 23 stipulate to pay the remainder of the Sum.

That of Seed and was Congratulation in King Tames the Lourth's Brother-in-Law, and his Sifters Names, with confirmation of the late Treaty of Peace; containing also some Propositions tending to the penetrating of our Kings prefent Deligns, that they might frame their Countels accordingly, which was with fome relation to France.

That for Denmark, was chiefly to establish a better course for Trade; for which purpose a Statute was repeal'd at this Parliament, which did prohibit our Men other Traffick towards Denmark and Ifeland, than to a place call'd North-The King finding now all things fafe both Actions hereafter, as we shall see in its place.

1509, that Louis the Twelfth should be General of the abroad and at home, took those liberties which 1510 became his Youth; yet were not his Exercises K. Horry's sportful alone, but had in them a mixture of Sports Letters and Arms. Therefore though fome re- and Ex-late that he used Singing, Dancing, playing on excelenthe Flute and Virginals, making Veries and the like: Yet his more ferious Entertainments were the fludy of Hiftory and School-Divinity (in which he especially delighted,) Justs, Turneys, Barriers, and that not in an ordinary manner, but with the Two-handed-Sword and Battle-Ax. These again were set forth with costly Pageants and Devises, and these so frequently, that not only much time, but a great part of the Treasure was confum'd in 'em. Of which whoever defires to fee more, may perufe Hall and Hollinfhed, who have many particulars worth looking on, for him that hath to much leafure. Besides these he used sometimes Tennis and Dice, at which certain Strangers used to play with him; till the King, finding 'em to be Cheats, at length chas'd 'em away.

Empfor and Dudlylying now in Prison, condemn'd and attainted by Parliament, the importunate cla-mours of the People prevailing with the King in this years Progress, he not only restor'd divers Mulcts, but for further latisfaction to the Emplea Commonalty (by a special Writ) commanded to beheaded have their Heads struck off, Angust 18. doing Aug. 18. therein (as thought by many) more like a good King, than a good Master.

Julius the Second having recover'd what he defir'd in Italy, by his Wars the last year, was contented now to accept the submission of the Venetians, with whom (his Confederates not being privy thereto) he made Peace Feb. 24. 1510. Feb. 24. and being jealous of the greatness of the French in Italy, (with whom he had also this quarrel, that they defended Alfonso d' Este Duke of Ferrara a-gainst him) he endeavour'd all he could to oppose them; to this purpose he inclin'd Ferdinand Speed. by giving him the Investiture of Naples, King Head of Homy the Eighth he follicited, by putting him in the Italian mind of the Glory of his Ancestors, &c. and League. offering him the Honour to be Caput faderis Italici. Our King upon this fends Christopher Bambridge Archbishop of York, to reside at Rome, treat of these matters. In the mean while the Pope and the Venetians proceed, and attempt Firfper'd not, he lays hold on his Spiritual Sword, hw It. and Excommunicates Effe, with all his Adherents. Louis the Twelfth on the other fide calls a Synod the Duke of the French Church at Tours in France; where of Ferrare, certain Questions touching the Popes late Acti- Sept. ons and his Authority were proposed, and re-Duplix. solved against him, and his Excommunication pronounced void. It was also decreed, that an A Natis-Admonition should be fent to him, to imbrace nal Synodin France in France Peace and Moderation; which if he refus'd, he declares should be summon'd to call a free and general that Ex-Council (according to the Decree of the Coun-commu cil of Basse.) Louis having proceeded thus far, nication, void. communicated the matter to Maximilian whom as yet the Pope had not won from him) and joyning with themselves the Cardinals Bernardine, A Coup-Brifonet, and others, they fummon'd a Council to cil fumbe held I Sept. 1511. at Pifa, commanding the mon'd Pope to appear there. While these things were without doing, the French under Chaumont came before He is ci-Bononia, where the Pope now lay fick, and be-ted to 274 fieg'd it, forcing him to fuch hard Conditions, pear before one as upon the coming of relief he would not fland to. Howfoever, this befieging of the Pope being given out, founded fo ill, that our King prefently made a League with Ferdinand for his Defence; which was an engagement for greater

* g Hen-20 VI.

1429.

1510.

1498.

The first day of this year, being 1511, the Queen was brought to bed of a Son, which there-fore in the Name of a New-years-Gift, was by lan. 1. her presented to the King. But as the Child liv'd not to the latter end of the next Month, so the greatness of Joy did more than expire in the shortnefs. Notwithstanding which, it is said the youthful Parents were foon comforted, reputing, that in Children (as in Silver Veffels) little is usually loft, but the fallion. But it fell not out fo well, for it pleas'd God, that no Heirs Males remain'd betwirt them two. In the mean time Ferdinand King of Arragon, being not ignorant Feb. in what estate his Daughter was, sent Ambasfadors to perform his due Complements on that occasion, and withal, to follicite the King for Affiftance against the Moors in Africk. He had already conquer'd those in the Province and City of Granada; through the Streets whereof as he 1492. rode triumphantly, 1492, the certain News was brought him of those great Riches, discover'd in the Indies by Columbus; which I therefore mention, because (to use the Spanish Phrase) I think it the greatest Cojuntura that ever happen'd; he having reduc'd his Dominions in Spain to an intireness, and at the same time receiv'd News of that immense Treasure in another World. His demand was prefently granted by our King, and the Lord Thomas Darcy fent with 1500 Archers the Soldiers then in request) to Ferdinand, June 1. Aug. 30. 1510.

with whose help he intended to revenge the loss receiv'd the * last year at Gelves in Barbary. Howbeit, as Julius the Second being much press'd by the French (whose Affair's prosper'd in Italy) requir'd the help of Ferdinand against them; he defitted from his Enterprise, and resolv'd to fuccour the Pope; whereupon also our Men richly rewarded, did return home.

May.

June 9. 1509.

In like manner Alrgaret Regent of the Low-Countries, obtain'd of the King 1500 Archers to affilt her against the Duke of Gueldres, though Confederate of Lewis the Twelfth, and James the Fourth. These therefore under the Command of Sir Edward Popnings Knight of the Garter, lately * made Warden of the Cinque-Ports, prefently after their landing were met by the faid Lady Regent, and thereupon united and recommended with much favour and particularity to the rest of her Army. The Exploits done by this brave Cavalier, and our English, I have not exprefly fet down, both for that the Lady Regent joyn'd not any confiderable forces with them, for the exployting great Actions; and that themfelves were not free to attempt any thing by themselves. Howsoever, I find they were licenfed to return, (not without great testimonies of their worth) and that, upon review of the Troops, Sir Edward Poynings found that not fully a hundred of his Men were wanting.

The King's Authority over the Narrow-Seas (fludiously conferved ever by his Ancestors) was about this time somewhat lessen'd by the Piracies of Andrew Breton (whom our Chronicles call Barton) a Scottish-Man. This Breton, in revenge of his Fathers Death, as also other Injuries, having in vain fought redrefs in Flanders, for a Ship taken from his faid Father by some Portugals, obtain'd Letters of Mark from James the Fourth, upon condition yet, he should not exercise Pi-Notwithstanding which, he feiz'd on divers of our leffer Barques (upon pretence of carrying Portugal's Goods) and pillaged them. For remedy of which Inconvenience, the two Sons of Thomas Earl of Surrey (Lord Treasurer, and Earl-Marshal of England) were imploy'd. The Earl-Marshal of England) were imploy'd. The younger call'd Edward, being Lord Admiral, commanding in one Ship; and Thomas the elder ces, though at one time) they invested Bretons 1511. two Ships; which, though the Scottish Writers of make to be far less than ours, maintain'd a cruel Buch. Fight: The obstinate Pirare (though so grie- Andrew right: The obtained Prince (though to gine Antenna voully hurt that he died on the place) encoura- Baren, a ging his Men with his Whilftle, even to his laft South PyBreath. But our English puritied their point fo, that at laft they forc'd these Ships, and brought by the that at last they forc'd these Ships, and brought by them (together with the Men that remained) Aug. 2. away, and presented them to the King; who, upon their submission, graciously pardon d them; fo that they would depart out of his Kingdom within 20 days. James the Fourth hearing of this, fent to require fatisfaction, as being against the Treaty betwixt them. But it was answer'd, That it did not become a King to impute breach of Treaty to his Confederates and Allies, only for doing Juffice on a Pirite. The Meffenger, rather filene'd with this Answer, than fatish'd, The King returns to his King; who, when occasion was land re-offer'd, fail'd not to shew how ill he took the sens it. death of Breton.

The Pope being freed from Siege at Benenia, proceeds in his Wars against the French; goes in Person against Mirandola, and by Composition takes it ; but, not long after loofes Bononia to the Jan. 2. French, led by Gafton de Foix, his whole Army be- I. de Serr. ing routed. Yet was not this a greater Affront to May. him, than the Council to be held at Pifa, a City now in the hands of the Florentines, whom therefore Julius presently interdicts, and shortly after expelling Soderinus (Governor thereof by means Charles the Eighth of France) restores the Family of the Medices, who were formerly expuls'd. The Princes also and the Cardinals who summon'd this Council being Excommunicate, &c. notwithstanding which they proceed. But being flighted by the Citizens of Pifa, they tranflate the Council to Milan; but finding no better respect there, they remove it to Lyons in France; where they fummon'd Julius to appear, and answer, and finally suspended his Authority. The Coun-Upon this, the Pope thunders against France, ex- all suppling it, (together with Navaere, whose King Spends the about 'd Lewis') to the Conqueror; and, to Aboption brogate the Council of Lyons, he summon'd another to be held at the Lateran in Rome, April 19. 1512. Unto this Council our King fent his Commissioners, being Sylvester Bishop of Worce-fer, John Bishop of Rochester, Thomas Docura Lord Prior of Saint Johns, and Richard Abbot of Winchelcombe, Feb. 4. 1512, as appears by our Records. Feb. 4. In this Council the Sentence of Excommunica-1512 tion was confirm'd against the Authors of the other Council, and the Acts of it revers'd. Not content herewith, he fent also to Ferdinand, and to King Henry the Fighth (who had already privately mediated a League with him) to take open Arms, and fall upon France. Not neglecting together to use all means for withdrawing Maximilian from the French Party. For though he had joyn'd with Lewis to call the Council at Pifa, (first rough-hew'd at * Tours) and did flill Island adhere to him: Yet, as the Pope and Ferdinand, whom he would not disoblige, offer'd him more advantagious Conditions, he was gain'd at last to the contrary Party, and Lewis exposed to the Danger. The Principal Agent which the Pope batter interparate and the state of the stat which also he obtain'd in March 1511. In the mean while, the business being brought to our Council-Table, fome spake in this manner. Comman Earl of Surrey (Lord Treaturer, and Earl-Marshal of England) were imploy'd. The That a fairer Opportunity was never offer'd, where for a younger call'd Edward, being Lord Admiral, ther he desir'd to maintain the Authority of the Pope, Breach commanding in one Ship; and Thomas the elder Brother in another. Thereupon (in several plander) of these were just Considerations, but both together not taken page to the Pope were full Considerations, but both together not taken page to the Pope were full Considerations, but both together not taken page to the Pope were full Considerations.

Reafons

1511. to be pretermitted. To further these Designs, he should not only have the Assistance and Blessing of his Holiness, but of his Father-in-Law. Besides which, it nets, but of his between-them. Beflace which, it was possible Maximilian the Emperor might joyn here-in; however he and Lewis the 12th, had of late concurred in their Designs. That it was probable, his Subjects in France retain'd still a due Memory not only of their Allegiance, but of the henselt received from the Crown of England. Besides, that in France there never wanted discontented Persons, who would come with his Everse. And so his Coffers, they were your with his Forces. And for his Coffers, they were not so full in any King's time; to which again he nor 30 Juli in any King i time; to motion again the could not doubt but a large Supply would be given by Parliament, which never fail d in Contribution, when there was no question of War with that Country. At for the Difficulties he should find in the Enterpile, they were not considerable. Louis the Twelfib being not only deeply engaged in a War in Italy, but having lost his belf Men there; fo that before he could give order for his Affairs at home, he might be oppress a; or, when he would leave his pricences on Italy, to look to his own Country , that would get free the Pope from the danger be was in, and confequently give his Majeffy the Honour of performing his Intentions. Some yet, that did more feriously weigh the against it business, opin'd thus; That the Kings Title indeed in France, especially to the Hereditary Provinces, was undoubted; the occasion fair; and many Circumstances besides conducing to this great Business: Yet that all these overe not sufficient for the making of a War all these were not sufficient for the making of a War against so proten a Neighbour, unselfs there were more than possibility of effecting our Parposes. This they might consider by comparing these times with the former, And if when all Guyenne, Anjou, Tourane, and for a long while Normandy was ours; and when, besides this, the Duke of Bretagne was our friend, and the House of Burgundy an efficient all of ally and Consederate to this Kingdom, we yet could ally and Consederate to this Kingdom, we yet could not advance our Designs in that Country, what hope is there now to attain them? Are we stronger now than at that time? Or can we promise our selves bet-ter Success? Let it be granted, that as many Battels as we have sought against the French, have been almost so many Victorics; what was this Kingdom the thereby? Had we ever a more glorious time than that of Edward the Third; and was yet the Country that of Edward the Ibira's, and was yet the Committee very more poor or weavy of the Wers. If you will not believe our Hifteries, look even on our Records, and you will find not only how the Treasure of our Kingdom was much exhausted, but even the People three felves glutted with their Prosperity. And shall we trust mow to better days? What though with our 12000. truft now to better days? It hat though with our 12000 or 15000 we have oft defeated their Armies of 50000, or 60000? Stands it with reason of War to expect the like Success still? Especially, since the use of Arms is changed, and for the Bow (proper for Men of our strength) the Callever begins to be generally received. It hich, besides that it is a more costly Weaters. pon, requireth a long practice, and may be mannag'd by the weaker fort. Let us therefore (in God's Name) leave off our attempts against the Terra firma. The natural Scituation of Islands feems not to fort with Conquests in that kind. England alone is a just Empire. Or, when we would inlarge our felves, let it be that way we can, and to which it feems the Eternal Providence bath defin'd us; which is, by Sea. The Indies are discover'd, and vast Treasure brought noe theirs are allower a, and wast Treasure brought from thence every day. Let us therefore bend our endanceurs thirberwords; and, if the Spaniard or Portugals suffer us not to joyn with them, there will be Pet Region enough for all to enjoy. Neither will a Piety, equal to that of succouring Julius the Second, be manning; since, by converting those Insides to the Christian Religion, there will be a larver field one'd for Christian Religion, there will be a larger field open'd for doing of good, than by establishing a doubtful and controverted Head of the Church: The Council of Pisa having determin'd both to depose him, and substitute another.

But our young King, with whom zeal to do 1511. the Pope Service, and ambition to recover that Patrimony whereof our King Henry the Sixth was in possession, and which our Civil-Wars only lost, declin'd this sober Advice, and adher'd to the former. And that, especially, for two Reafons urg'd by way of Supplement; whereof the one was, that there was new hope Maximilian the Emperor would be won to his fide. The other was, that he understood from Rome, the Pope had an intention to take away the Stile K Honey of CHRISTIANISSIMUS from the French, himself (which their Historians confess) and transfer it for a Was, on him; which he thought would be a perpetual glory to the Nation.

Hereupon it was refolv'd, together with calling a Parliament, to fend (by John Young Do-ctor of Law, and Mafter of the Rouls) unto Louis the Twelfth a Monitory Ambaffage, requiring him to defift from War against the Pope. But Louis, whether out of his own Courage, or that he thought the Emperor affur'd to him, or that (indeed) there was no hope of a Peace, (he having been privately advertis'd that our King refolv'd War) regarded not at his Advice; Our King therefore, that he might have more than, one Title to invade France, fent to require his Patrimonial Inheritance of Anjou, War de-Guyenne, &c. and, in case of refusal, to denounce clard. War. This then being proclaim'd, Leavies were (which began Febr. 4.) were rais d. While thefe ment things were doing, I shall observe my former call'd. Method, and by the way touch on the Laws then applied. enacted, which may belong to History.

That because Money, Plate, and Jewels being 15:11 transported out of the Kingdom, had impover- Feb. 4ish'd it, a double value should be paid by the Of- An Rog 2.

fenders.

There was also confirm'd an Order formerly taken concerning Escheators, Commissioners, and finding and turning of Offices; which it feems had relation to Empfou and Dudley's proceedings. Because also unlawful Games kept Men from shooting in the Long-Bow, they were put down, and Archery commanded. For the better understanding of which Act, another past, whereby the Crofs-Bow was also forbidden.

There were likewife certain great Priviledges granted to Men that went beyond Sea with the King. As alto Penalties ordain'd for Captains that abridg'd the number of their Soldiers, or detain'd their Wages; as also for Soldiers departing without Licence.

following Hiftory.

At this Parliament also the King was pleas'd John Duster to reftore John Dudley, Son and Heir of Edmind Son of Ex-Dudley lately attained. On whom, towards the mand Dud-end of his Reign, he conferr'd the place of in Blood. Lord Admiral of England, as shall appear in this in Blood.

Hiftory. About this time there was one Hieronymo Buenviso Buenviso born at Lucca, who being a Bankrupt Merchant, Agent, bethrough his friends in Italy, obtained to much the through his friends in Italy, obtain'd fo much fat-rays the vour from the Pope, as to be made a kind of King's Agent here. This Man being acquainted with to the all the Popes bulines, and upon his Letters of freme. Credence, receiving likewife the King's and Council's Answers to his Negotiations, became fo expert in all those Affairs, that being corrupted by the French, (who gave him a Pension, as I find in our Records) he discover'd many things that much concern'd either fide. And from hence it arose chiesty, that Louis the Twelsth was so many Preventions, as may be observed in the The War with France being thus determin'd, it was confulted in what part we should begin. And though particularly inform'd of our Defigns, that he used

Curita.

June 3.

yet, because Ferdinand promis'd to joyn with the King in this War, (which was call'd Holy) it was by his confent refolv'd to land somewhere in the Spanish Dominions; and that from thence both their Armies (being united) should joyntly invade Guyenne. For better understanding of which Project, I must observe, that both the Kings (besides that of vindicating of Julius the Second) had their several Designs, as will appear The Mar afterwards. The General nam'd by the Kings was Thomas Grey Marquis of Derset, with whom Derset Seas went, besides his three Brothers, the Lord Thomas Residion. pedition Howard, Son and Heir to the Earl of Survey, the into Spain Lord Brook, Lord Willoughby, and Lord Ferrars, and divers Knights and Squires, all of them brave Persons, and about 10000 Soldiers; among whom I find in the Spanish History, there were about 5000 Archers, who befides their Bows and Arrows, carri'd Halberts, which they pitch'd on the ground till their Arrows were flot, and then took up again to do execution on the Enemy. An excellent part of Military Discipline, and yet not remarkable by our English Chronicles. These Men about the third, or as the Spaniards have it, the eighth of June, (being shipt in Spanish Vesfels) arriv d at P. flage, a Port in Guipus coa, where one Faderique Bishep of Signenca, (an able Perfon) attended them. This Bishep after he had affur'd them of their welcom, and that the Duke d' Alva, General of the Spanish Forces, with 1000 barded Horfe, 1500 Gennets or Light-Horfe, and 6000 Foot would shortly joyn with them, did much cheer cur Men after their long Sea-Voyage. In the mean while John d' zilbret (King of Naver e in the right of his Wife Cathorine de Foix) having the Spinish Army in Arragin on the one fide, and the English on the other of his Kingdom, thought himself in some Straits. And the rather, that the Pope having lately Excommunicated him for affifting the French, and by a Bull dated M reb 1. 1512, exposed his Kingdom in prey to the Conqueror; He suspected Ferdinand had fome defign upon him. Neither was he deceived; for, that he might be drawn away from Loin, or at least that a quarrel might be pickt against him, Ferdinand sends to require that he would declare himfelf; pretending some jealousie of his proceedings ever since Louis the Twelfth (who was advertis'd of this Holy League, as it was termed had requir'd his help, or when he would refuse, threaten'd him with taking Bearne away, as being a Feud held of France. To comply with Ferdinand also, the English General fent to him, not only to remember the ancient League and Friendship betwixt the two Nations, when the English were in possession of Gaycome; but thereupon as well as in the name of the Church) to require his help in this Help War. The King of Nayarre in this perplexity (for he was urg'd no less to the contrary by the French) protested that it concern'd him to be Neutral, he being as much in danger of lofing Bearne on the French, as Navarre on the Spanish fide. Yet, whether to gain time, or indeed really to flew his forwardness in this Church Affair, he offer'd (upon fecurity given that neither Ferdinand nor the English should molest him) that for four Months space, the States of Navarre should by their Oaths) folemnly affure him of all amicable usage in that Country; and before that time he doubted not, but Bayone (which was the Key to Gujenne) would be taken by Ferdinand and the English. But this was not thought fufficient; therefore it was demanded that the King of Navarre would deposite some Towns as cautionary on that behalf. But as he still excus'd rately treated before) thought now joyntly to fend their Agents to the King of Navarre, fo that Antenio de Acuna Bishop of Camera, and Sir John Stile (Resident Ambassador for our King in Spain) were prefently dispatch'd to him. Being admitted to Audience, their demand was, to have the Fortresses of Estella, Maya, and Son Juan, confign'd for their fecurity in the Enterprize of Guyenne. But the King of Noverre protesting slift that it concern'd him to hold Neutrality, was at last press'd to make a final Answer. Here then he agreed that Tima, and fome other places of lefs strength than those demanded, should remain as Pledges of his Fidelity: Yet, before this could be feeled, the French were come to the confines of both Jurildictions: Where the Englift, being defirous to give fome proof of their Valour, without any order from their General, pass'd over the River of Videsfina, which divides Guipufous from Guyenne, to skitmith with the French. This grew at last fo hot, that the Marquis was constrained to pass over the rest of his Army to difengage them, which being done, Army to diengage them, which being done, he retir'd again to his Camp near Funtacehit, in good order. Hereupen the Marquis of Dorfar The Bankag given the Funds time to raite these Force should by to appose them; and together demanded briefly the system of the state his clear Refolution, what he meant to do in the nimb. point of invading Guyenne: But he was answer'd, that fince the King of Nevarre would not admit a way through his Dominions, he must be forcd; neither did he think that John would take it ill to suffer a little Violence, when it were for nothing elfe, but to fnew the French, that he did not voluntarily content thereunto. Marquifi reply'd, that this being no part of his Commission, he must first acquaint the King his Mafter with it. But Firdinand finding that both the French Army increased, and that the fuffering them to come nearer might frustrate Lis designs in Navarre, commanded the Duke of Alva without more delay, to invest Pamplina, the chief Town of Navarre, entertaining in the mean while John's Ambaffadors with hope of an Accommodation, who feem'd also to believe it, until they heard of the Siege. The industrious Fordinand, that he might draw also the Marquiss of Dirfet to assist him, us'd these Reasons, That the passage to Bayone by the way of Fuentarabia was narrow, having the Sea on one fide, and on the other fide the huge Mountains of Navarre and Bearne; fo that if they should undertake the Siege at Bayone, without affuring themselves of the Countries behind them, they might be that up on every fide, whenfoever fohn should declare himself for the Franch Party. Therefore that he should proceed according to Military Rules, and prevent this Inconvenience by feizing first on all the Avenues. The Marquis of Dorser hereupon calling a Council of War, return'd this Answer 3 That he defir'd to lofe no time, and therefore thought it the best course for both to divide the Armies: And that Ferdinand should enter Gayenne by Navarre, while he took the way of Bayone. Yet the King who still pursu'd his Design, seeming not satisfied herewith, desir'd rather that both the Armies might pass joyntly through Navarre. The Spanish marching flill first, and making way for the English to follow. But the Marquils of Dorset answer'd again, he might not transgress his Commission, which permitted him not hofilely to enter into Navarre upon any Terms. Infomuch that now almost fix weeks were spent in those Treaties.

1511. though that of Callais feem'd the most ready way,

Ferdinand finding no more to be expected from the English, resolves alone to invade Navarre himself, the English and Spanish (who had sepa- promising the Marquiss yet from thence to fall Vol. II.

1512. on Guyenne; not doubting (on this affurance) but | this he did to try whether it would move him 1512. the Marquiss would stay, and at least ferve as a Countenance to his Enterprize. Hereupon the *July 22. Duke of Alva being commanded to * proceed,

(without hurting any yet but those who resisted) †July 25 foon after † took Pamplona, which when our Marquiss heard, he testiss a much Discontentment, both as he found Ferdinand kept not his Peomise and his Visual manual for a Promife, and as his Victuals were much shortned on this occasion, he having been abundantly supply'd before from Navarre.

In the mean while Ferdinand to prevent that ill Intelligence, which the Marquis might give, fends to England a Messenger on purpose, with account of his Actions, and to desire a more ample Order to the Marquifs to affift him; not neglecting the while, any occasion either for reducing the best part of Novarre to Obedience,

"July 31. or * entitling himself to the Right thereof, as our Records tell us: Which in all particulars of this Affair, do much confirm the Spanish Hi-

Being thus advanc'd, He thought fit again to of his

ftory.

follicite John King of Navarre (now retir'd to-wards Bearne) that he would joyn in this Holy August. War. And that he might do so the better, He temper'd Threats and Promifes in a more effectu-The Spa- al manner: The Bishop of Comera and Sir John niards and Srile hereupon were dispatch'd again, requiring French distributed in final Antiwar. But the Duke of Lawring erene did his final Answer. But the Duke of Longueville King of being come with puissant Forces being come with puiffant Forces near to those parts, they made bold to detain the Bishop, not without terrifying him with worse usage; giv-Territoing leave yet to Sir John Stile to return. Things being brought to these Extremities, John King of Novarre thought fit to go to the French Court, to excuse himself for suffering the Spanish to become so soon Masters of Nivearre. Neither had he it feems any way to make this fo credible, as by permitting the French with the fame facility to feize on Bearne. Thus was this King in a thort time, disposses'd of all his Estate, only for not knowing how to behave himfelf, either like a Friend or Enemy. Now Louis the Twelfth, though not fo much as hoping that the English and Spanish should stand thus divided, yet as he desir'd rather a War in that Country, than his own, fo he prepar'd as if he were at once to fustain both their Forces; commanding the Duke de Longueville to proceed warily. But the difficulty was not great. For though Salvatierra was kept by Jehn, as long as he treated with Ferdinard; yet now he abandon'd it to the French, and retir'd himself to Paris. Betwixt this Town and Bayane, then the French enquarter'd their Army, though for having 5000 in that City (daily reinfore'd by new Levies) it feem'd not to stand in so much need of Defence. This while the Duke de Alva requires an Oath of Obedience from those of Pamplona, and in general from the rest of the chief Inhabitants of Navarre. They again offer it upon the terms agreed on, which was for four Months, and till they had given proof of their Neutrality in the business of Guyenne. But the Duke reply'd, that King John being fled away to the French, and therein having declar'd himself an Enemy both to him and this Holy War, He would now accept no Oath, but that of a simple Obedience to his King and Master: Upon this ensu'd difputes and diverfities of Opinions; all which yet were moderated by the Spanish Army, which did not much infift upon Reason, having Power in their hands

Navarre being thus in a manner reduc'd, Fer-dinand fends the Mareschal Aquilera to the Marquis Dorfet, protesting that his Army should pass the Mountains at Saint Juan de Pie del Puerto; And yet to joyn Forces. But the Marquis, who was inform'd that the place did lead to Bearne (which remain'd only for an intire Conquest of the Dominions of John) as well as to Bayone, thought fit to attend more certainty, concerning the way of the Spanish Army. Ferdinand on the other fide, taking this as a delay, would not omit the profecuting of his Intentions, laying (in the mean while) all the fault on the Marquifs flackness. But no Man ought to blame any General in this kind, unless he knew his Instructions. Ferdinand therefore was too forward herein. But the Duke de Alva who confider'd of what moment diligence is in great Affairs, sends some away pre-sently to seize on Saint Juan de Pie del Puerto; which accordingly was perform'd, though the French were now entring that Country. To make this good alfo, the Duke himfelf (by the King his Mafter's Commandment) follows with the Body of his Army. And now Ferdinand again fends to invite the Marquiss. But as the English could not pass thither, but by a place call'd Maya (a rough and almost untrodden paf-fage) or another way far about (for either of which they wanted Horses to draw their Ordnance) fo was there a new difficulty interpos'd, for joyning the Armies. Howfoever, it concern'd Ferdinand (after many delays) to acquit himself so sar, as to seem at least roundly to go on in the invading of Guyenne. And his Ma-fter-piece was, together with performing his own Intentions, now to have brought his offer to our King, within the compass of Probability. He confider'd alfo, that alone, he was too weak for the French Forces, fo that he had more than one reason to follicite the English Army.

Being in this Posture, he begins to think what remain'd to be done: On the one side, he had the honour of diverting the French from their great Defigns in Italy, (for Louis began now to attend his home Affairs) and therein to have freed the Pope. On the other fide, having reduc'd all Navarre, (only Estella excepted, which he took afterwards) and pass'd the Mountains, He feem'd ingag'd to fecure his Conquefts. Therefore he thought on nothing now but going on; trufting for the rest, to the Negotiation of Martin de Ampios, whom he had fent to Curita. our King. And this Man (if we may believe the Spanish History) obtain'd that the Marquis Dorset should do whatsoever he was advis'd by Ferdinand for the Holy-Cause. But, before this Instruction could come, the Marquis, who saw Winter now approaching, and very near 2000 of his Men fick or dead of Diforder, and drinking those hot Wines, and for the rest suffering much for scarcity of victuals; and lastly, being advertis'd that the French had fortifi'd Bayone, and planted a great Army before it, thought it too late to begin any great Enterprize. Therefore he fent the Treasurer of his Army, and Sir John Stile to Ferdinand, to represent those Difficulties, and to acquaint him with his Determination to be gone. At last, though with much ado, Ferdinand (according to an Article of the Agreement) provided fome Ships for the English; but before they could depart, the Marquis between Discontent and ill Diet so discomper d himfelf, that he fell fick, the Lord Howard being fubflituted in the mean while for Command of the Army. While yet they made ready for Sept. Windfore the Herald, commanding the Army to flay; promising withal to send a New Supply under the Lord Herbert his Chamberlain. But the Soldiers fo mutined, that at last the Generals

ques Dor- England. Whereupon Ferdinand (who desir'd now let returns only to maintain what he had gotten) turns himwithout felf to other Arts; labouring (by Maximilians doing any Mediation) to withdraw the French from affiffing Novemb. John. The Conditions being, that Charles Prince of Castile their Grand-child should match with Reynera, or Reynee, second Daughter to Louis the Twelfth (which yet was but colourable as appears in their Histories) and, that the French should condescend hereunto, it was no little Mo-tive, that they had acquir'd so much in Bearne; fo that keeping their possessions on either part, much Treaty pass'd without any other effect, than that John on both fides was outed: Though, for Oftentation, Richard de la Pole (calling him-October felf Duke of Suffolk) as I find by our Records, was appointed by Louis to attempt the recovery of Pampelona though in vain. And thus ended this Voyage to the grief of our King, who teem d to much offended with the ill success, that he purpos'd once to punish the principal Authors of it. But his General excus'd himfelf by the narrowness of his Instruction, and partly lay'd the fault on Ferdinand, who being bound by promife to furnish the Army with many Ne-cessaries, yet fail'd. Lastly, they made it appear that Ferdinand never intended any thing but the Conquest of Navarre, (which therefore his Successfors hold to this day.) ¶ Though this Voyage were improsperous, yet I find by Polydore, that Sir Edward Howard, who conducted the Marquifs to Spain, having with the Fleet first clear'd the Seas from Enemies, landed at a little Bay in Brittaign, and march'd feven Miles into the Country, whence after burning fome Towns) he brought away rich Spoils. Not contented herewith yet, he pur his Men on fhore at Conquet, and divers other places; where the French fill receiving the worke, they at laft defir'd a May 23. Parley. The fubitance whereof was, That the English would leave off this kind of defultory and cruel War, which tended only to the burning of Villages, and ranfacking the Poor. But he reply'd, He was not to take his Directions from them. Besides, that it was the part of brave Gentlemen to defend their Country, and not shamefully to sue for Mercy. After which, and a Banquet in his ship, they were difinised, and our Admiral return a home. § The Frozb in the mean while, making great preparatives by Sea, Our King thought fit to reinforce his Fleet, adding to twenty Ships under the Command of his Admiral, five and twenty more under the Command of the choiceft of those Gallants that attended him; placing in the chief Ships call'd the Regent, Sir Thomas Rnevet Mafter of his Horle, and Sir 'John Carew in the Soveraign; Sir Charles Brandon, and Sir Henry Guilford, went with fixty of the talleft Yeomen of his Guard. This brave Fleet chancing to meet thirty nine Sail coming out of Breft in Brittaign, affaulted Aug. 10. Bellay.

Aug. 10. dem, where two of the greateft Ships on both fides being grappled, fell on fire by fome Accident, or as the French will have it, by the defperate Courage of Primangus (barbaroufly, as I conceive it, styl'd by our Chronicles Sir Piers Morgan) and to were confum'd. The Captain of the English Ship (being the Regent) and of the A Sea.

French (call d the Cordeliere) together with the tween the Soldiers in them, perish'd all, save only a few English.

French, Who sav'd themselves with Swimming.

May.

Ha//.

Tune 1.

and French. Howfoever, the rest of the French were so terrifi'd herewith, that they made away prefently, fome to Breft, and fome to the Isles adjoyning. To repair this lofs, our King built a Ship, the 1512. were conftrain'd to embarque themselves, and Lesse fay, that Fames the Fourth, King of Scat- 1512.

The Mar- come home (about the end of November) to land made one; whom the English and French King desiring atterwards to imitate, fail'd so 13c6. much, that they were not able to make it steer.

The King finding now that bufineffes were grown to fome extremity, betwixt the two Nations, discloses his design of going in Person into France, as choosing rather to make War in his Enemies Country, than to attend it at home: This also, that he might the better perform, He is advised to discover what Correspondence he might expect from his Neighbours and Confedemight expect from his recignosus and contract rates. Therefore he had fent a good while fince Sir Robert Wingfeld to Negotiate with Arxinilian, and draw him to his Party; neither found he much difficulty therein. The Emperor being lead that the Wealth Diffusion of our King glad that the Warlike Disposition of our King turn'd it self against France; so that with assurance of his Affection, he incourag'd our King to go on. For Maximilian was now faln off from the French, both that the Pope ffrongly procur'd it, and that he thought it best to adhere rather to Ferdinand and his Grand-Child's Intereffs: For pretext whereof, yet alledging only fome breach of Article of the Treaty of Cambray on Louis his part. The French on the other fide, joyning with the Duke of Ferrara, prepar'd nice, joyning with the Duke of Ferrana, prepard to defend themselves; raising for this purpole a puissant Army, under the command of Gaston de Foix, Duke of Nemours, Governor of Asslan, who in the name of the Pism Council) fought the April 11. Battle of Revenus, which being won for his King, he lost for himself, as dying (almost wilfully) against a little Body of the Enemies, when the Vistony for the rest was correct. Victory for the rest was gotten. Howbeit, the French under Monsteur de La Palisse proceeding took Ravenna, and divers other places, which they deliver'd to a Cardinal Legate in the name of the Pifan Council, fo that they were now (together with this City) Masters of Milan, General, Bonenia, and Florence. Nevertheless, as the contrary part led by Raymond de Cardona, (Vice-Roy of Smalov-Naples under Ferdinand) had in the name of the Carl V. Holy-League, brought huge Forces into those parts, the French were forc'd to quit all those places, within the space of two Months: (as Sandoval hath it,) Maximillum Sforza (Son to Lodevice) whom the French had divested, being replacid in Milan, to hold it in the Name, or at least under the protection of the Suiffe, whereupon allo the Duke of Ferrara (unable any longer to sub-fift) humbled himself to the Pope, and was pardon'd. Maximilian yet, not content with thefe Victories, would have added to them Vicenz. detain'd by the Venetians. But they refusing, the Pope, whether defirous to conferve Maximilian's friendship at what price soever, (since he had now disavow'd the Pisan Council) or that perchance he thought not himfelf fufficiently reveng'd on the Venetians, joyns in the Enter-

Ferdinand in the mean while, (according to his wonted manner) makes a double Treaty. On the one tide therefore, he not only joyn d Offices with our King to Maximilian for this purpose, but incourag'd him to repair the imputation of flackness laid on the English in their Voyage to Spain, defiring yet, that if he fent any Army again into those parts, it might be under the command of his General. While on the other fide, he fecretly treated with Louis the Twelfth, for the match above mention'd; promifing also to affift him in his Affairs in Italy. That Politick King's Intention being, by one means or other, to divert the French from aiding

To repair this lofs, our King built a Ship, the greateft ever known before, though Buchanan and vol. If we will be to the standard of the stan and some other Affronts, he sends Nicholas West Dean of Windsor, and Doctor of Law, to know how he flood affected: And the rather, that he return of the English Army, was contrary both was informed King James had an Army on Foot. To which he answerd, That he lovel, and esteemed that if he might have Assistance against the lovel, and esteemed that if he might have Assistance against the lovel as the beauty of the state. alike, both Henry the Eighth, and Louis the Twelfth; and therefore that he thought it heft, to be Neutral and interestive took in thought it very to be Neutral in any difference betwint them. Well reply'd, that be might do well to spenific thus much by Letters. But King James laid, that the sending any Declaration of Neutrality under his Hand, might argue be inclin'd a little to the English side, and consequently might breed a Sufficion; especially when Louis the Twelfib could not be ignorant of the favourable Audience given bim, and therewithal dismiss him. Upon whose return; our King taking this Cautelous Answer into mature Consideration, found it arose from a private League betwixt Louis and James, (which our Records furnish us) to this effect.

I. Because the King of England's Predecessors bave Arricles of a Treat eften fought to endanmage both Princes and Realms, tween the therefore they combine to resist the same; and one to twen the the therefore they combine to refift the same; and one to king of aid the other perpetually against the said king.

Frome and II. If the King of England shall at any time wage sayding Kar against the King of England south King of France against the king of the said with the king of England, and the Scottish King tromises the like.

III Misham Vina and Committee and one to

111. Neither King shall fusser his Subjects to serve or aid the King of England against the other.

1V. Neither of the two may take Truce with the King of England, without the other give his confent, comprehended therein if he please.

V. If the faid Louis decease without Children, and there be firife about the Succession, the King of Scots shall not intermeddle, but accept him who shall be made King, for his friend, and defend him against his Adversaries, if the King of England assist them. King decease without Isline.

This Convention shall be confirmed by the Pope, and reither of the Contrabents shall procure nor accept any sibsolution from the Oath.

call'd. Nov 4

A Poll-Tax rais'd.

1512.

Fcb. 21.

Our King understanding this, resolv'd to send his Treasurer Thomas Earl of Surrey into Yorkshire, and the Northern parts, to have an Army in readiness, in Case the Scots should stir in his ab-A Paulia fence. Together with all this provision, He thought fit to call a Parliament, where, befides chaefing divers good Laws (whereof I shall hereafter mention some) He obtaind two fifteens and four demies. He had also a kind of Subbidy, call'd Head or Poll-Money, That is, of every Duke ten Marks; an Earl five Pounds, a Leaf for Pounds and Subbidy and Su a Lord four Pounds, a Knight four Marks, every Man valu'd at eight hundred pound in Goods, four Marks: And so after that rate till him who had forty shillings in Wages, who paid Twelvepence, after which every one who was above lifteen years of Age, paid four Pence. Order was also given that Bulwarks, Brays, and Walls, should be rais'd in his Castles, and strong-holds on the Sea-fide, wherefoever it was needful.

Julius the Second expecting now the Success of that War he had kindled against the French, * dyes; in whose place was chosen Cardinal Giodi Medici, by the name of Leo the Tenth. This Pope purfuing his Predeceffors Defigns, incourageth our King ro War against France. But he having now accomplified the Age of twenty Excommunication granted by Julius the Second one years, needed little Invitation, and the ra- against James King of Scots, in case he should Sir Edward Popnings, Sir Thomas Bolen, and John England, and * granting an Indulgence to all 'March. Lang, that Maximilian would really perform his that should affift King Honry, and the other Con-

1512. remembring how the Scots have usually helpt the French, and being informed besides, that James Therefore (I find by our Records) he fent into the Fourth did resent fill the Death of Breton, Spain, William Knight Doctor of Law; commanding him together with Sir John Stile, to use all should be given in hand to Ferdinand, and as much more when it was gotten. For this purpole also promiting pay for 6000 Men at its pence per diem for fix Months. But Ferdinath now, to whom nothing was dearer, than the Confervation of his Conquest in Navanye, conningly declin'd this Prepofition; as hoping by a Treaty with France, to effect his Purpofes; howbeit he advis'd our King to fend his Standard Royal with fome Forces to Guyenne; and to try whether the People would follow it; fince he faid, they were very affectionate unto him. But our King gathering hence, as well as by fome private Advertisements, that Ferdinand treated fecretly with France, resolv'd to press him to declare himself, and therefore by Letters, June 17. June 17. he requires Ferdinand to feal a Treaty against France, to which his Ambassadors here had confented. But Ferdinand disavowing his Ambassadors proceeding, fince the Holy League (as he faid) became void, upon the return of the Kings Army, discovers withal that he had made a Truce with France for one whole year, which he advis'd our King also to accept. The Treaty to which Ferdinand's Ambaffadors enter'd at this time, was the Treaty here fet down, which I find among our Records, and have mention'd, as being full of defign, how ever eluded.

I. The first article of the Confederation made be type for the 1. De prij Article of the Confederation made be-threen the Pope, Emperor, Kings of England and Holy Vior the Arragon, againft Louis the Twelfth, was to be of which Evicuds of the Friends, and Enemies of the Enemies, &C. K. Hong to give mutual aid, at the Charges of the Deman-Had.

II. To denounce War within 30 days after the date bereof, and within two Months to invade him, viz. The Pope in Provence or Dauphine.

The Emperor in some other fit place. The King of England in Aquitaine (or Guyenne) Picardy or Normandy.

The King of Arragon in Bearne, Languedoc, and Aquitaine. Not to defif from Hoftility, or make any Truce without common confent.

III. That the Subjects of the Confederates ferve not the Enemy under pain of losing Life and Goods.

IV. That the Empror (if he have not yet done it) shall recall the Authority by him given to the Schismatical Cardinals, and their Conventicle, and within a Month after the date of this, signifying his pleasure to them, shall Void and Nullifie all their Proceedings and Acts in the Same.

V. The Pope shall (at the request of the Confederates) fulminate his Ecclefiastical Censures against all that of-pose this League.

VI. The King of England shall give the Emperor, (towards the great Charges he shall be at) 10000

VII. Tet the Emperor by his Treaty will not engage his Grand-child Charles (now under his Tuition) into this War with Louis.

But this Treaty being refus'd by Ferdinand, our King proceeds by the help of his other Confederates, to the War with France; the Pope for the more declaring himfelf, both confirming an 1513. federates, against Louis and the Schismaticks of at a great Advantage, their Gallies being not the Council of Pifa.

All things here being thus dispos'd for a War, Maximilian with some patience attends the comming of our English Army; as being confident, however the buliness succeeded between the two Nations, he could make his advantage thereof. That he might do this the better, he thought it not amiss to interpose some difficulties. Neither could he be wholly won, till he had obtain'd of Henry 120000 Ducats towards his charge in bringing 3000 Horse and 8000 Foot which should enter Burgogne, as soon as the King attempted Picardy. While thefe Preparations were in hand, our King, to take off James, fends Doctor West again into Scotland, where, instead of all other Offices, that King exhorted ours to a Peace with France, promiting on those Terms his Friendship. But our King being resolved to proceed, thought fit in the first place to clear the Sea from the French Navy: And therefore fends his Fleet, being compos'd of forty two Sail, besides lesser Barques, against them. The French being inform'd hereof against them. The French being inform'd hereof long before, had gotten one Pregent, a Knight of Rodes, (called by our Historians Prior John with four Gallies to pass the Streights, and come to Britagne, where many good Ships were appointed to join with them. And till they came, it was thought better to keep within the Haven of Briff, than to encounter our Navy lying at Anchor in fight of them. Our Men therefore resolve to attempt them in the middle of their Defences; while they intend this, one of our Ships (under the command of Arthur Plantaginet) was cast away on a blind Rock. This staid our Men a while; at last they pursue their Design, and enter the Haven, where the French Fleet lay under the Covert of many Platforms that were raifed on the Land. Befides, they had joined twenty four Hulks together, with purpose to set them on fire, and let them go adrift with the Tide, when our English should approach them; or (as our Records have it) to keep the Fire April 17. from theirs. Laftly, they mored their Ships as near the Castle as they could, and so attended

Pregents coming. Being prepared thus, the Lord Admiral, Sir Edward Howard, confidering the order in which the French lay, thought fit to advertife his King and Mafter thereof, adviting him withal to come in Person, and have the glory of this Action. But our King's Council taking this Meffage into Confideration, and conceiving that it was not altogether Fear (as was thought) but Stratagem and Cunning, that made the French thus attend their Advantage, thought the King was not fo much invited to the Honour, as Danger of this Action, and therefore rejected the Overture. Thereupon they write tharply to him again (as our Historians fay, thoughour Records mention not this particular) commanding him to do his Duty. Whereof that brave Carva-lier was fo fenfible, as it caused him to hazzard his Person afterwards so rashly, that it occasion'd his death; the manner whereof was thus, as it is drawn out of our Records: Where, by a Let-April 17. ter dated from him, April 17, it appears, That, after he had come before Brejt with his Navy, he fent out his Boats, to make a flew of landing; whereupon the Frinch flocking to the fhoar, to the number of above 10000 (the English in all the Boats being not above 1500) he thought fit to land over-against Brest, where he burnt the Country in fight of the Castle; the French Ships (the while) lying beneath it, being defended with their Hulks: And that he thought not fit to do any more till Victuals came, whereof he stood then in need, though he said he had them yet come. Together with which Difpatch unto the King, he fent Mr. Arthur Plantaginet, much difcouraged as he faid by the cashing away of his Ship; and disabled to serve in any other kind, because his Soldiers that remain'd were bestow'd elsewhere. After which I find by ano- Ma. 6. ther * Letter of Sir Edward Echingham (who was 'Apr. 22, prefent in the Expedition) that, Italia 22, fix Gallies of the Enemies, (being two more than were expected) and four Foytts under Pregent, put into Blanc-fablon-bay near Conquett, a little below Breft; which being notified to our Admiral, he himself, being attended with four choice Captains, refolv'd to board them April 25. Where- April 25 upon entring himfelf into one of the two Gallies (which only the English had at that time) and committing the other to Walter Devereux I ord Ferrers, he advances with two Row-Barges and two Crayers; in the one of which was Sir Tocmas Cheyny and Sir John Wallop, in the other Sir Henry Sherborne and Sir William Sidney; Pregent (this while) lying betwixt two Rocks, that had Bulwarks on them, full of Ordnance. All which yet could not deter our Lord Admiral, who therefore about four in the Afternoon (the fame day) boarded the Galley in which Pregent was, and enter'd it with his Sword and Target, one Curroz, a Spanish Cavalier, and seventeen English more attending him, commanding together his Galley to be failtned or grapled to his Enemies; Sirely, but whether the French hewed afunder the Cable, Howard, or our Mariners lee it flip for fear of the Ord-Adm.rd, nance, the English Galley fell off, and this Noble engages Person was left in the hands of his Enemies; the Franch. of whom therefore our Men could give no other account, but that when he was part all hope of recovering his Gallies, he took his Whiftle from his Neck, and flung it into the Sea. The Lord Firrers in the mean time (who was in the other Galley) fail'd not to do his part, until having spent all his Shot, and seen the Admiral's Gailey fall off, he retired; which the Row-Barges also did, as not knowing but the Admiral was fafe. The fad News of whose loss yet being at length made known, it was thought fit to fend to the French Admiral, to know what was become of him. Whereupon Sir Thomas Chejn), Sir Richard Cornwall, and Sir John Walley came to know what Prisoners were taken; to whom Pregent (or Pri- And is or John) answered, None, but a Mariner, who kill'd. told him, that a certain Person they bore over-board with their Pikes was their Admiral. Lastly, he added (in the Letter) that the French in Bourdeaux had made fix new Gallies, which were shortly expected at Brest, and that our Gallies, Upon news of our Admiral's death, his Place was * prefently bestowed on his Brother the * May 4. the advantage of the French Gallies in a Calm, and number of their Ships, and the danger of the Winds for us, if they blew South-weil, defired of the King fo many Soldiers as might both man the Ships, and make good the Landing. But befor the came, our Fleet (it feems wanting one to command it) was return'd, and Prigent upon The notice thereof) encourag'd to land in Suffee, from Final whence yet he was quickly repuls'd, without do- Suffex, and ing more that Year. And now the Lord Admi- are re-ral having equipp'd the Navy Royal, foured puls'd. the Seas, and fecur'd our King's intended Paffage. The Particularities I shall omit, until (in imitation of Polydore) I have fet down the Description of Thomas Woolsey (afterwards Cardinal) a Man at this time beginning to be in special favour with the King, the Original whereof I as he faid, could do the French Men most displea-

The rife of Cardinal Wool-

1513. must deduce from his chief Raiser and Founder, ~ Richard Fox Bishop of Winchester

This Bishop, being made Principal Secretary and Privy-Seal, became not only an able, but potent Minister of State; having yet difference with the Lord Treasurer Thomas Earl of Surry, a Noble Man of great Courage and Experience in Affairs, he flood not fecure. They had often been reconciled by the King, who not only beft knew, but often fuffered moft for their opposition. Yet as the wiping out of Blots formetimes makes them greater. It is Said-Said-Joine for Injuries makes them greater, fo Satisfactions for Injuries feldem expiate them fo totally, but that fome imprefion remains. Therefore they ftood ftill at a diffance, in which Condition yet they wanted not their Advantages on either fide. The Binot their Advantages on either fide. shop had abundant matter to suggest; the huge Treasure, which Henry VII. left, being so exhaufled, that it was now almost confumed; while the Lord Treasurer in the disposing of this young King's Bounty, fo ordered Bufineffes, as in facilitating Difpatches, he got him many Friends and The Lord Treasurer, on the other Followers. fide, faid, that nothing being done without the King's special Order, it was through Envy only the Bishop thus opposed him. In these terms then they stood still, without almost concurring in any thing, but in excluding all others from gaining on the Kings Disposition; which yet they did not so much by mutual Consent, as by diminishing in their turns, every body else, that was extraordinarily in his good Opinion. At last the Bishop thinking how to better his Party, brought in this Thomas Woolfey; to which purpose also Sir Thomas Lovell Knight, and Master of the Wards, assisted him. This Man, though of mean Birth, being observed by them to be of a quick and ftirring Wit, and particularly famous for a Dispatch in Henry VII. his time, wherein he used extraordinary diligence, was thought a fit Instrument for their purpofes. He was already a Chaplain in the Houshold, and Almoner, and from thence raifed to the place of a Counfellor. Being in this nearnefs he knew as well how to difcourfe with the King in matter of Learning, (the King being much addicted to the reading of Themas Aquinas) as to comply with him in his Delights; infomuch, as (faith Polydore) he would fing, dance, laugh, jeff, and play with those Youths in whose Attendance and Company the King much delighted. Briefly, (to use Polydere's words) he made his private House Voluptatum omnium Sacrarium, quo Regem frequenter ducebat: A Receptacle for pleasures of all kinds, where he frequently on on im'd the King. He omitted not yet in the midft of all thefe Jollities, to speak feriously, reprefenting foall Bufinetles to the King, as he got much Credit with him. And this, again, was confirm'd by those Gallants, who contributed no little thereunto. Whereupon he began to tell the King, that he should fometimes follow his studies in School-Divinity, and fometimes take his Plea-fure, and leave the care of Publick Affairs to him: Promifing that what was amifs in his Kingdom should be rectified. Likewife, he omitted not to infuse Fears and Jealousies of all those whom he conceived the King might affect. Whereby he became fo perfect a Courtier, that he had foon attained the heighth of Favour. For as Princes have Arts to govern Kingdoms, Courtiers have those by which they govern their Princes, when through any Indipolition they grow un-apt for Affairs. These Arts being hopes and sears, which as doors and passages to the Heart, are to guarded by their vigilancy, that they can both let themselves in, and keep all others out: And therefore may be termed not only the two Neither flowed I far to fall when any heacht might ends of that Thred upon which Government grow to your Majely thereby. The young King be-depends, but through their dexterous handling, 1513 may be tyed upon what Knot they will. Particularly, he defired to reduce all Businesses to himself; for which End he spake in this manner:

Sir, Your Highness bath now Sufficient experience of Wooller's

frange effects, which Contradictions in Councils bring Speech to tooth: It is unlafe to believe founds without the King forth: It is unsafe to believe singly either of those on before his whose advice your Highness most relies, and impossible Advancemunge awaree your Higgings may there are a man impossed Awar to believe both. May your Higging's therefore cloude ment. fome one, who being dif-interested, may have no position or thought but to serve your Highness. All those frong Reasons of State which conclude Monorchy the hest form of Government, make for a Favourite in the next place. Insomuch, that of Supream Authority, as next piace. Information, that of supream supports, of these pramidal heights on which the Statues of Princes were anciently plac'd, I dure say, there can be none well rais'd, that from the lowest sometiments in not sharpned by degrees unto its point. But left this should be thought looking upwards only, be pleas if a while to look down, and consider things the other way. and the Prospective will hold its Proportion. For how, Sir, should a King conscrue his Power, if he divide and let it fall at once on divers inferior Persons? Bolieve me, Sir, to diffuse it over-suddenly, is to take away not only from the Dignity, but oven intireness area no only from the Authority, as with a Spring or Fountain, which, that it may keep his Course and Name, must be cherish'd and entertain'd, till it grow great, by the Contributions and Concurrences of those leffer Heads that run into it. Kings must never descend but by fleps. The more Orders are under them, the higher fill they fland. Neither will your other Coun-cellors think themselves much lessend this way; for when they may use the ordinary power and sway allow'd them over their Inferiors, they will not think themselves much concern'd for the rest. Besides, your People will be glad of it, as knowing which way to address their Suits. To leave them more at large, were to expose them to those delays and uncertainties they would never patiently endure. Again, it would they would never patiently entaile. Name, it would be impossible any other way to keep served in Business, (which yet is the life of Council) or almost to find out who is the Divulger. Moreover, when your Highness naho is the Dirulger. Moreover, nahew jour Highu, sin seme great and perplex'd Affairs, hath occasion to acquaint your Councellors only with some part of your meaning, what instrument can be so apt as a Europerite? While, if things succeed is, or otherwise two your Highness would not seem to have the Advice proceed from you, how easily may your Highness idstrained all, and lay the fault on him? Thu may your Highness all, and lay the fault on him? Thu may your Highness find the many siles you may make of your Favorite. Tet, Six, set me say, I should never advise your Highness to see by his Exercise. Highness to see by his Eyes, or hear by his Ears only; this were to keep you in too much Darkness and ly standard to prevent this therefore, be pleas d to appoint able Persons, and such as may not know if each other, by whom your Highness may be informed, not other, by whom your lugarys may be injuried, monty what is done, but even faid vulgarly. Thus shall your Highness take order not to be deceived. As for the more doubtful and intricate parts of Business, which require particular Scrutiny and Examination, your Highness in my Opinion, may do well to have three or four confident Perfons, not yet of the Body of your Council, with whom Jeparately your Highness may advise, before those difficulties be brought unto them. This mill enable your Highness to speak thereof when you transfer it to the Body of your Council, and make you discent their Opinions; only if any thing be determined, let your Favorite shill be the chief Alder in the Execution. Hereof then your Highness may please to advise. Neither will I presume to nominate my self eitherwise; only I will crave leave to fay thus much, that when your Highness would out of your own Election, think fit touse my best Service herein, I should not doubt but so to establish and conserve your Highness Authority, as to make you the greatest and bappiest Prince living.

He is great in the King's Favour, gets his Relations Friends.

Reasons

Reafons

This ders him to difpatch his chiefest Affairs. got him not only Estimation and Addresses, but Presents and rich Gifts from the greatest Per-They again brought him to that Infolency, that he feem'd not only to forget his Birth, (being a Butchers Son) but all his former Friends; infomuch as no Man (faith Polydore) durft remember him of an ancient Acquaintance. Badge or Livery whereof (he faith) appear'd in his outward Garment, he being the first (faith the fame Polydore) among all Priefts, Bishops, and Cardinals, that ever wore Silk for his uppermost Yet was it not alone; for as divers Vestment. other Priefts imitated him, fome envy was rais'd on the whole Clergy. But this was when Silk was either more rare, or more efteem'd; it being in this Age fo common, that it is become the wearing of every mean Person. The Gallants of the Court finding now the Kings favour manifeftly shining on Weolfey, apply'd themselves much to him. And especially Charles Brandon, who for his goodly Perfon, Courage, and Conformity of Disposition, was noted to be most acceptable to the King in all his Exercises and Pastimes. Notwithstanding all which saith Polydore) the King fadly examin'd bufineffes himfelf; and howfoever the chief trust was committed to Weolfey, did not omityet (as far as his youth would fuffer him) to use his own judgment in his weightiest Affairs.

All preparations for the expedition to France

being now hastned, amongst which that of Vi-ctualling the Army was (not without a Sarcasm to his Birth) recommended to Woolfey, it was yet controverted whether the King should go in Person. They who oppos'd it, urg'd first their against the King's due affection to, and renderness over him; saying going in further, that if the King should die without Iffue, (however the Succession were undoubted in in Person his Sister Margaret) yet that the People were so affected to the House of Tork, as they might take Edmund de la Pole out of the Tower, and fet him up. That the War in France was not of that Confequence (especially since, with the death of fulius the Second, it seem'd the chief causes of diffention ceas'd) that the King should go in Person, and desert his own Kingdom. On the other side it was alledg'd, that to commit an Army wherein the flower of his Nobility and Kingdom was, to any one Subject, was not only unfate, but to the prejudice of many worthy Competitors for that Honour. That it was no new thing (whether they regarded the ancient King's of England, or the modern Emperor, and two French Kings fucceffively) to go in Person with a Royal Army. That the fame Providence rul'd every where. But it was reply'd, that till That the fame Providence the King had more lifue (and that Masculine) it was against all reason of State to hazzard the Kingdom to those Tumults which might follow; to which Opinion, as the best, it is likely the King would have condescended, had not fresh Letters arriv'd from Maximilian, in the Popes name exhorting him speedily to come; and promiting that he would not only give him meeting, but take pay under him. In the mean while it was thought fit that Edmund de la Pole (Son of John de la Pole, Duke of Suffolk, by Elizabeth Sister to Edward the Fourth, who had been made Prisoner by Henry the Seventh, and fo continu'd ma-"Apr. 30. ny years) should have his Head * struck off; Edmund de la Pole

Our King therein but executing what his Fa-

1513. ing perswaded thus, without other Advice or him, doth not sufficiently appear to me by any Record. Though some Correspondence with his younger Brother Richard de la Pole (who I find by the French Writers, commanded 6000 French at the Siege of Thereure) might perchance accelerate his End.

The King refolv'd now to go in Person, Hall. thought fit yet to fend his Vanguard before. This was commanded by George Talbet Earl of Shrewf-bury, High Steward of the King's Houshold, who was accompany'd with Thomas Stanley Earl of Derby, Thomas Documa Lord Prior of the Order The Earl of St. John's, Sir Robert Ratcliffe, Lord Fitz-water, of shrenf-the Lord Hastings, the Lord Cobbam, Sir Rice as fer sover Thomas Captain of the Light-Horse, and many to calais other beauty Visiba and Edwinds and the source of the order of the Grider of the other brave Knights and Efquires, and the num- with 8000 ber of above eight thouland, who came to Calai, Men-in Mid May. These being follow'd again with the Middleward of about six thousand more, commanded by the Lord Herbert, Lord Chamberlain to the King (whom also the Earls of Northumberland, Kent, and Wiltshire, the Lords Audley and De-la ware, the Barons Carow and Curson, and The Lord divers other worthy Knights and Efquires, ac- Herbert company'd) arriv'd at Calais fifteen days after. tollows These two Lords attending the Kings surther Di- 6000. rections, stay'd there till June 17. when they June 17. both in good order of Battel march'd towards Therouene, before which Town they arriv'd upon the two and twentieth following, pitching their June 22. Tents about a Mile off. This Town was fenc'd with a large Ditch, ftrong Bulwarks, and quan-Hall, tity of great Ordnance, which shot freshly, in-somuch that the Baron of Carow Master of the Ordnance was the first night kill'd by a Bullet They atin the Lord Herberts Tent, which came fo near tack Tehim, that the French (though erroneously) writ I de Serre he was flain there.

The Earl of Shrewsbury planted himself on the North-west, and the Lord H.rbert on the East fide of the Town, whence they made their approaches. In the Town was a Garrison of about two thousand Foot, and two hundred and fifty Lances, commanded by Monsieur François de Teligny, and Anthoine de Crequy, Sieur de Pondormy: To relieve them again, the French rais'd a puiffant Army, to which ten thousand Men under the Duke of Gueldres, and fix thousand more under Richard de la Pole, Brother to Edmund lately

Beheaded, were added.

In the mean while our King having constitu- Hall. ted Queen Katharine Regent, passeth the Sea to Queen Calais upon the last of June; bringing with him Katherina the rest of his Army, which was transported with appointed about 400 Sail: With him came also the Almo-Regent. ner, and new Favorite, Thomas Woolfey, who for paffes over thaving liv'd long in that Town under the Treatocalist. furer thereof, was perfectly acquainted with the Addreffes of it. The King being vifited by the Ambaffadors of the Emperor, the Regent of Flanders, and Duke of Brunswic, stay'd here till the 21 of July, when hearing that the French July 210 meant to relieve Therouene, under the Command of Louis Duc de Longueville, and Marquis de Rote-Matches lin, whom le Seigneur de la Palisse, as also the fa-towards mous Bayard, la Fayette, Clermont d' Anjou; and Treumen.

Builfe d' Amboife accompany d, he haitend his departure. His Army confilted of about 9000 good fighting Men, betides those who belong'd to the Carriages, which were some 2000 or 3000 more. Sir Charles Brandon (a little before *Crea-May 15. ted Viscount Lisse) had the Vantguard, whom the Earl of Effex (Lieutenant-General of the Spears) accompanied. In the Battel the King came, having the Duke of Buckingbam on the one hand with 600 chosen Men, and Sir Edward Caufe al. that he was of a turbulent and audacious Spirit: Popnings on the other with as many more; Sir Halledg'd But whether any late matter was alledg'd against Henry Guilford carrying the Standard Royal. The But whether any late matter was alledg'd against | Henry Guilford carrying the Standard Royal.

de la Pole beheaded, ther Henry at his departure out of the World no lawful commanded, (as Bellay hath it.) And true it is ledg'd for it.

25

Aug 9.

Retinue of Richard Fox Bishop of Winchester, and the stranger, that the fight was between the Weelfer to the number of 800 Men was led by Horsener only, and many of the bravest of The Lat-Sir dilliam Compton. In the spaces betwixt, the great Ordnance (among which Bellay mentions those call'd the 12 Apostles) was drawn, and part of the Carriages dispos'd. After all these vet came Sir Anthony Oughtred and John Neville with 400 Spears. This little, but flourishing Army, was fearce enter'd the French Confines near zirdres, when news was brought that the Enemy appeard. Hereupon Sir Rice of Thomas (who came from Thereuse with 500 Light-Horse to meet the King) joyning with the Earl of Essex, and Sir Thomas Guisford, who commanded 200 Asphare A. Hash had dearn and the sir Thomas Guisford, who commanded 200 Asphare has the sir th Archers on Horse-back, drew towards the French, but they presently disappear'd. As they march'd yet, two pieces of Ordnance miscarry'd, the one * July 28, whereof was * loft, the other † recover d in de-thuly 29 fifte of the French. Upon the fourth of August French the King came to Thereizen, before which he his Tent caus'd a fumptuous Pavillon to be pitch'd. Sir before the Alexander Baynam, Captain of the Pioneers, shortly after caus'd a Mine to be made under the Walls; but the French countermining, it was well difputed, and divers kill'd on both parts. Musimilian being * now come to Apre, it was thought fit an Interview should be made. But the day being very foul, the Ceremony was fhort. Ang 11. About two days after, Lyon King of Arms in Long King Scotland in his Heraulds Coat, comes to the Camp, of Arms and defires leave to deliver a Letter *to the King. Gartier brings him in. The King having perus d his Camp the Contents (which were Expostulation for some pretended Injuries, and thereupon denunciation of War unless he return'd) makes a sharp Answer by word of Mouth, among other things telling him, That he had left an Earl behind him in the North, who could very well defend his Kingdom against the attempts of his Master. But Lyan refus d to carry Nome Dat Julio Answer, any verbal Message. Whereupon our King Aug. 12. thought fit by Letter again, to answer to this purpose, That be underfrood this Exposulation, to be property 10th in anaergous an experiment, in the French, His Let- and invade him in his ablence. That he wish d him tert a the to call to mind how John King of Navarre, for aiding Seat King start King the French in the same manner, lost his Kingdom and advis d bim to take that for a varning. Latt-ly, He bid bim be affired, that what he did to him or his Realm now he was absent, should be remembred, and requited again in like measure. Before yet these Letter's could be deliver'd by Lyon, his King and Mafter James the Fourth was kill'd, as shall be hereafter related.

Aug 12. Upon the twellth of August, Pharmacon The Emperor came to the King, in the quality of perorstar. his Soldier, and therefore not only wore the but pereivd his pay duly. comes to Crofs of St. George, but received his pay duly, the King's which I find by fome, to have been a hundred Crowns per diem. Notwithstanding which, that all due respect might be render'd to his Person, the Sr. G. org.'s Crois, and King gave order to lodge him according to his receives Dignity, in a Tent of Cloth of Gold, for the his Pay, reft molt fumptionally entertaining him the figure a hundred of two days have been added in the form of two days that he flay'd in the Camp. Therouene was not yet fo flreightly befieg'd, but that on the one fide which was towards the River Lys, there was a way open, on which part the French intended to relieve it. The King therefore commanded five Bridges to be inflantly made over the faid River, by which himfelf with Maximili-their Nation were among them; Our Men pur-tel of fu'd and took Louis Due de Longueville, Marquis The Ende Rotelin, Bayard, Fayette, Clermont, and Buijfe d' glijb beat Ambois, and brought them away, together with the Frankline Cornets. The Seigneur de la Palisse, and and take Monsteur d Imbrecourt were also taken, but agree- Persons of ing for their Rantom upon the place, were pre-Quality, fently let free, or as others fay, efcap'd. This Battle hapning the 16th of zinguft, was call'd by Aug 16. the French, la Journee des Esperons, because they made little use of any thing but their Spurs, for the good fuccess whereof therefore both the King, and Maximilian the Emperor (wearing still his Badge of the Red-Cross) did upon the place congratulate with each other, and afterwards affifted at a folemn Te Deum for this easie Victory. Neither had the French better fortune, in fetting upon a Convoy going with Provisions for our Army betwixt Guifnes and Therewine, they being repuls d (as Belly hath it) and Monfieur de Philis llain. While the French held Battle with Another our King as is aforeful a part of their Cavily, Skimilis which had divided it felt that it might the better the French. ter bring in Provision, fell on the quarter of the have the Earl of Shrewshury, and Sir Rice on Thomas on the work other fide of the Water; but they were allo foon repuls'd, though the Garrilon and Townsmen taking this occasion, fallied forth upon the Trenches of the Lord Herbert to make a Diversion; for that Lord being prepar'd to receive them, they were quickly beaten in again. Few days after the Seigneur de Pontdormy despairing to keep the place long * yielded both it and the Ord- Aug. 22nance to the King, upon Condition they might nance to the King, upon Condition they might Aug. 23. depart with their Arms, Bagg and Baggage, and Diany M.s. Drums beating in Military Order. Which being Theorems done, our King and the Emperor (who as I find furrenit confirm'd in an Ancient Manufeript Diary der'd to extant in our Records, ftill gave our King the Aug. 24. Precedence) entred the Town, sugust 24.

This City being gotten, it was now diffuted whether our King should hold it; a question which could not but feem strange as well to the Authors of the Council as Complices in the hazard, especially since it cost so much, as Guicciardine doubts not to call it, Spefa intollerabile & infinita; Howbeit it was at last refolv'd, that because it so confin'd on Maximilians Territories, and that the Garrison infested his Subjects by frequent Incursions, that at Maximilians Intreaty, the Town should be raz'd, save only the Church and Religious Houses; so much did our King defer to the Emperor Maximilian for being his Soldier, and taking pay under him. Befides, our King confider'd that to leave any Troops behind, would disable his further designs, for which Mo- Aug 24. tives therefore he gave the Town to Maximilian, Page 7. 7. who levell'd it, which yet I find was not fo done, 122'd. but that the French did thortly after repair, and put it into defence. From hence the King (being perfwaded to it by Maximilian) refelves to by the Princels Marguarites perhadions (who de-Sept. 12 fir'd much to fee him at Lile) he pass'd three days being at the pass'd three days being three days being the pass'd three days being the pass in her Company, and the many fair Ladies that ALS, attended her; when remembring himself, that Had.

it was time to visit his Army (which Lay at some Sept. 14. distance from him strongly encamp'd) he takes leave of the Ladies. Being now out of the Gates K Hours † Aug. 15 at (who was now * return'd again) and a great the first one, when our Light-Horfe brought word, that the French were in light. Our King thereupon march'd towards them. The French at first came, as if they meant to fight; but after a slight Skir-

Camp,

Crowns

1513-Sept 15. He befieges Tour-T.43.

He re-

of them all. The 15th of Septemb. the Army (which Maximilian had now left, upon pretence of I know not what unfatisfaction which yet was fhortly repair'd, fet down before Tournay, which thereupon was fummon'd to yield; but the greater part refuting, the King encamping on the North, the Earl of Strengtury on the South, and the I ord Highert on the West of the Town began their Batteries. When upon the 21/f a Meffenger from the Earl of Surrey brought the Gint-let, or as * others fay, the Coat-Armour of James the Fourth, as a Token of the Victory IT. Diar obtain'd at Fiddin. This, as it rejeyed the King, so it put him in mind of the Vicissiande news of the Victo- of all worldly things. Therefore he temper'd this Mirth witch a fericus Confideration of the tense states to which Wars are subject. Howfoever, he caus'd Te Deum to be fung publicitly the day following, and a Semon to be preach'd by the Sept. 22. Bithop of Recheffer, who laid all the fault on that Tarang vielded to of Tournay capitulated and yielded to our King, him. by the name of Rej Tres-Circlien, as I find in the zens stile Original r Contract) upon condition of Fidelity, zens the and prefent payment of fifty thousand Crowns most Chri-de Soleil, and a yearly Pension of four thousand flianking, pounds Tourneis, for the space of ten years. Whereupon the King, as John Taylor Doctor of Law, present at the Siege, suith in his Manuscript La-Sept. 23. tin Diary, gave them leave to enjoy their An-Ms.Latin Cient Cuftoms and Liberties; upon Condition yet they should admit a Garrison. Neither as it feems could they do otherwife; the French being fo much discourag'd by their late Misfortune, Sept. 24. that they did not attempt the relieving of it. Thus, on the 24th of September, our King enter'd the Town Triumphantly. And here, upon Conful-tation what was next to be done, it was refolv'd to furcease the War for this year, Winter now beginning to enter. It was thought fit also, to leave Sir Edward Poinings with a strong Garrison to keep it. Which cannot but feem strange, to those who consider that Therowene was raz'd; fince Therousne was nearer the English Pale, and might be better defended, and would besides, have kept the paffage open to this. But false Counfels are like false Gemmes; which how counterfeit foever, have (when they are well fer) one good light to be feen by. Therefore W. e.f.;, (who was fo much Author of this Council, as he got the Bishoprick of the place thereby) could glofe his advice, with telling the King, he might now have confidence in Maximilian, as having forv'd under him. Besides, that the razing of Thereiene at his request, would put a perpetual obligation on him. But as for Townsy, that it was fir it should be kept as a Trophee of his Victories; and the rather, that Cæsar (in his Commentaries) confesseth here, more than in any place elfe, to have found a valourous Resistance. But how well the Arguments were grounded, the fequel will shew. The first use our King made of this Town, was to repay the Courtesses received of the Princess Margaret. Hereupon Sept 25 receiv'd of the Princels BLorgorer, Thereupon, 2.7.1.0.or. flee being invited, came thicher, as also her Nephow Charles Prince of Coffile; (afterwards Emperor.) between whom and his Siller Mory, there had inverceded a kind of Contract, (as is before related) ever fince the time of their Father Henry the Seventh; which likewife for the prefent feem'd to be confirm'd betwixt them, infomuch that they came to divers Particularities; among which one was, that the King should bring her with him the next Spring. I find also some O-

and Favour on her part. In the mean while, 1513. that the Ladies and the Emperor who came with Early J. I them, might be receiv'd according to their Quality and Worth, the King taking the faid Lord for his Affociate, did * hold a folemn Justs there 'Odol 11. against all Commers; which he bravely perform'd. And now having feasted the Ladies Royally for divers days, he + departed from Timna) to Lij.e, Tilts and where he was invited by the Lady Mirgaret; Tourna-who caus'd there a Justs to be held in an ex-Note that a fact to be neut in an expression traordinary manner; the place being a large Octob 1. Roem, rais'd high from the ground by many Using the Steps, and pay'd with black figure Stones like for the Marble; while the Horfes to prevent lifeting and "" notic, were shod with felt or shocks, the Lytin Works are the for "Towns".) After which the words are filtre five Tomente.) After which, the Lords and Ladies danc'd all Night.

Yet, as I find by Foreign Authors, these Jollities were not the only cause of his slay. For suries Fordinand (the first mover of these Troubles) hearing that the War against France was likely to ceafe for this year, fends Pedro de Orrea, and Fuan de la Nuce, and Gabriel de Orti to Horr, the Eighth, with Commission to treat for a League, by which both Kings, with the Emperor, should feverally enter France the next Spring: And that, for this purpole, each of them should from their Frontiers begin the War. That Ferdinand therefore from Noveme should invade Guyenne with fifteen thousand five hundred Foot, and one thoufand five hundred Horfe of his own Subjects, and to be paid by him; and fix thousand Germans, to be paid at the rate of twenty thousand Crowns Monthly by the King of England. In Confideration whereof, the War was to be made in the faid King of England's Name, and for the re-covery of his Patrimony in Guyenne. On the other fide, that the King of England affifted by M.ximilian, should with fixteen thousand Foot, and four thousand Horse, from his Territories, invade Normandy or Picard); and that they should not relinquish this War without mutual consent. A Grand Laftly, there was place left for the Pope, the Confede-Prince, Arch-Duke, the Duke of Milan, the racy a-Swifs and the Florentines, to enter into this League; gainst which was Sign'd at Life on the 17th of October, Octob. 17 by Richard Bishop of Winchester, and the Marquiss Dorset on our Kings part; The Seigneur de Berghes first Gentleman of the Bedchamber to the Emperor, and General de Pleine President of his Council; and Pedro de Orrea, Don Luis Curvos, and Juan dela Nuca, Ambassidors of Ferdinand. This being done, and the King for the rest testifying much Satisfaction, October departed thence, and two days after in good orders of Days and Company of the Company der of Battel, came to Calais, having in this Voyage bettowed honour upon divers perfors of Worth. Sir Thomas Cornwal, Baron of Burford, Diar. N.S. Sir Thomas Leigton, Sir Too. Blown, Sir Henry Sz-Sit I tooma Leigen, sir Loo. Beamt, sir Hemy sa-chevered, &c. being made Knights Bannerers; and Sir John Majnwaring, Sir John South, Sir John Digby, &c. created Knights. And here the King gave order for fecuring Taenny, as well as the reft of his Poffelions in those parts, which be-

Having now related the King's Expedition England. (which I was unwilling to interrupt by any intervening Occasion) I must return to the Narration of that Battel, which was fought betwixt James the Fourth, and Thomas Earl of Sarrey, com-The Sorri monly call'd Flodden-field. This King retaining Was in his Mind some rancour for divers Causes forwith him the next Spring. I find also some O-merly related, thought he could not any time verture of a Match between Charles Brandon, more seasonably revenge himself, or for the rest now Lord Life, and the faid Princes Margaret; give a more acceptable Teffinion of his love to which, though it took no effect, was not yet Louis the Twelfth, than now in the King's abwithout much Demonstration of outward Grace you. It. Do wing wing the control of the transfer of the tr

ing done, and the wind proving fair, he fliortly Octob 24. came to his Queen at Richmont, who had long The King expected him.

1513. ving first denounc'd War by his Herald, he respectful Terms, they provok'd him to descend 1513. fent Alexander Lord Humes, his Chamberlain, to forrage the Borders; which Sir William Bulmer hearing, pfed that Diligence, that he overtook Aug and fought with him in his Retreat, fo that he recover da rich Booty. The King hereupon in Perfon, with an Army of fixty thousand (some Ha4write a hundred thousand) Men, enters the Country, and, after a few days Siege, takes Nor-bam-Caftle. Thomas Earl of Surrey hereupon hathousand, appointing his Son the Lord Admiral to come by Sea, and meet him at or near Alactick, in Northmberland. This brave Lord fail'd schild him to the Lord fail and the L *Sept. 4. not his * time, bringing with him also about one thousand Men; of whom when the Earl had taken view, and given order in what place every one should fight, he marches towards the King; who had remov'd his Army to an Hill call'd Endder (or Flutder) on the edge of the Mountain Checiet; where he ftrongly entrench'd himfelf. The Scotch Writers here relate, that many of Euch. their Country-Men (for want of Victuals) fecretly fled home, leaving the Kings Troops but Our Writers on the other fide, make the Seateb-Men much superior in Number. Howsoever, the Earl of Surrey defir'd nothing more than to fight, as finding the whole Country thereabouts to forrag'd and spoil'd, that he could not long subjift. Therefore on Sund 7, Sept. 4. he Sept. 4. thought ht to fend Rouge-Croix Herald, with a Trumpet, and Instructions to James the Fourth, The Earl to tell him, That in regard be had violated his Faith of surrey challenges and League, and hoftily enter'd the English Ground, the sent that on I riday next he would hid him Battel, if the faid King would fray fo long in England, and accept it. The Lord Thomas his Son, also requir'd Rouge-Croix particularly to certifie the King of his Jour-The Earls ney by Sea; and that, because he could meet no Sondelis. Scotch Ships there, he thought fit to land, that he might justifie Andrew Breton's Death; And added further, as he look'd for no Mercy from his Enemies, To be wreal for no litery from the Landing, for be wreald four error but the King only, if he came in bis Hands. And to make all this good, that he would be in the Vanguard of the Rettel. Lastiy Ronge Croix was charg d, if any were remanded, he should (for preventing efficial) bring him no nearer than two Miles unto the Camp. James the Fourth * receiv'd this Message gladly, and Sept. 6. as he was a Prince of great Courage, by his own That Herald affures the Earl, that he did so much defire to encounter him, that the he had been at Eden-Kings burgh, he would have left all bufines for that purpose: And therefore wish a him to rest afford, he would not fail to abide Battel the day nam'd, which was Friday. This being done, the + erald delivers a Proteflation from his King and Master, in these flulation of the Earls. As to the Caufes alledg'd of our coming into England, against our Bond and Promise (as is alledg'd,) thereto we answer; Our Brother was bound as far to Hall. His defence of ding Eng. us, as we to bim; and when we sware last before bis Ambessador in presence of our Council, we express despecially in our Oath, that we would keep to our Brother, if our Brether kept to us, and not elfe. We five ar our Brother brake fift unto us. And fince his Breach, we have required divers times him to amend. And lately we ward our Brother, as he did not us eye he brake. And this we take for our Quarrel, and with God's Grace shall defend the same at your spirit it time, which with God's Grace we shall abide. Hereupon the Earl advancing, came within three Miles of Flodden; but perceiving that the King still kept Sept. 7.

very words, being in answer to the former expo-

from his Fortifications, and fight in a large Plain call d Milfeild (which lay between them) upon Friday following; alledging for this purpose, the promife they receiv'd from his Grace heretofore. But no Satisfactory Answer being given to this, and the Hera'ds being return'd on either fide, the Earl removes with his Army to fuch a place, that if the Scotch-Men would not leave the advantage of their Site, he might cut off their Victuals, and confequently draw them down. James the Fourth hereupon firing his Hutts, diflodges covertly by the benefit of the Smoak, and keeping still on the higher Ground, at last he commands a flay. Prefendy after the Earl affo tra-verting feme Boggs and Marshes, till he arriv'd to the bottom of this Bank, found the afcent not very fleep, and thereupon incourageth his Men to fight. This done he marcheth up; the Vant-The Barguard was led by his two Sons, the Lord Thomas tel of Find dur field. and Sir Edmund; the Battle by himfelf, and the den field.
Rear by Sir Edward Stanley. The Lord Ducres with his Horfe, being appointed as a Referve on all occasions. The King observing this well, and judging that it was not without much difadvantage that the English came to fight, exherts his Men to behave themselves like brave Soldiers, and thereupon joyns Battle. Sir Edmund Howard at first was in some distress, by the singular Vaour of the Earls of Lenon and Argile, but the Lord Darrer coming to his Succour, as affo one Heren, the fight was renew'd; the Lord Thomas Howard pursu'd his Point better, yet so, as he found a brave opposition from the Earls of Crawford and Montrojs. The Kings Battle, and the Earls likewise maintain'd together a long and sharp fight. This while Sir Edward Stanley by force of Archers, confirmin'd the Scots to defeend the Hitl, infemuch that for avoiding his ftorm of Arrows, they open'd their Ranks, and therein feem'd to give one of the first Over-tures for Victory. The King perceiving the Diftures for Victory. The King perceiving the Dif-order, redoubl'd his Courage, infonuch that our Writers confess he had almost overthrown the Earls Standards. But the Lord Thomas Howard, and Sir Edward Stanley, who had discomfitted their opposites coming to Succors, and the Lord Dieres also flying in with his Horse, the Scots were so hardly put to it, that for their last de-fence they cast themselves into a Ring; in that order of fight doing all that valiant Men possibly cculd to defend themselves. No Man yet did in his Person more than the King; Infomuch, that proffing on still, he was at sast kill'd on the place, as our Writers have it. The Scotch Jums the Writers yet fay it was one Elphinitione, who wear-of Scotland ing the fame Arms the King did, was taken for kill'd. him, affirming further that the King fled over the Buch. River Treed, and was there (I know not how) flaughter'd. The fight continuing three hours, made the event doubtful, and the execution great. In conclusion, most of the nobler fort, one Arch- The Score Bishop, and two Bishops, besides four Abbots on routed. the Scots fide were flain there, and about ten thousand others. On our fide (fays Pelydore) there died about five thousand, others fay fewer; fo that as it was a Bloody Victory, it might be thought somewhat uncertain till the next Morning, when the Pody fuppos'd for the King's, and fo acknowledg'd by divers of both Nations (as our Hiftorians fay) was found among the dead Carkaffes, having received (as our Writers have it) a mortal wound with an Arrow, and another with a Bill. The Scats lay the occasion of Hall. upon the Hill, which was unapproachable, He fent Range Grax again, with a Letter tubicrib dby that look don, and never fo much as gave froak, himfelf, his Son the Lord Admiral, and diverse that we may leave theer things to their Reother principal Noblemen and Knights, wherein main'd,

main'd, return'd home much griev'd for the unfortunate fuccess of that Day, being Sept. 9. The Earl took all the Ordnance, and particularly feven extraordinary fair Culverins, call'd the feven Sisters. And so after giving God thanks, dismis'd the greatest part of his Army, and retir'd himself home, until News of the King's coming to Richmont brought him thither, taking order in the mean time, that the dead Body, being em-balm'd, should be carried first to New-Castle, and after to Shene in Surry; though, as that King was excommunicate, it may be doubted, whether it were buried in any Confecrate place; fince I Nov. 29. find by Breve dated November 29. 1513, and extant in our Records, that our King obtain'd a Breve from the Pope, for transferring the Body to St. Paul's in London. Upon condition yet, that the Bishop of London should first absolve the said James, and our King Nomine ipsius aliquam convenientem panitentiam adimpleret; in bis Name under-

Records.

Jan. 3. The Parliament fits. Rigni 5.

M.S.

went some fitting Pennance. Our King now (the Parliament still sitting) establish'd an Order, how the Subjects he had in his new Acquisitions in France, might recover their Debts from those in England, as well as the English from them. Moreover it was enacted, that every Person that would sue for the King's Pardon, upon certain Articles, fhould have it.

In this Parliament also Margaret, Daughter of George Duke of Clarence, late Wife of Sir Richard de li Pole Knight, petitioned, That fince, by Act of Parliament, 19 Henrici VII. Edward Earl of Warwick was declar'd Traytor, and fo his Lands forfeited; it would pleafe the King, that she might inherit (as being Sifter and next of Blood) his State and Dignity, and so be stilled Countess of Sarum; which was granted.

I find little else memorable this Year among our Historians, fave only a Commotion in Lon don; which hapned on this manner. The Villages of Islington, Hockston, and Shoreditch having so inclosed their Grounds, that they debarred the Citizens from their accustom'd Freedom and Exercifes; the Apprentices of London threw down the Hedges and Dirches, after this manner. A Turner running in a Fools-Coat through the Streets, and prentices. crying Shovels and Spades, was prefently followed in fuch numbers, as all their Inclosures were quickly levell'd. For which therefore the Lord Mayor was well check'd, and command given him to prevent further Mischief.

The French King, now finding two Frontier Towns taken, the Flower of his Chivalry made Prisoners, while the rest ran away, his best Confederate James IV. kill'd, and the chief Administration of Scottish Assairs devolv'd to the hands of Margaret, Sifter to King Henry VIII. (at least until she married again,) a League, in opposition to him, fworn by three the most puiffant Princes of Christendom: The Pope animating all this against him, under the odious name of a Schifmatick; and lastly, himself far strucken in years, begins to think how beft he might come off. And, to this, he had but a Winters space; for the War was to begin the next Spring. He negotiates therefore with the first. To this End he offers fatisfaction for his Obstinacy; next, he stipulates to give way to the accomplishing the Pope's Designs in Bononia, and ellewhere; to renounce the Council of Pi- fide. That Rebels and Figuives should not be enterfa, and accept that of Lateran, promising withal to remand the Cardinal Remardino, (whom as the filtin) to their Sovereigns. That they should be Friends Pope desired to have, so he graciously pardoned.)
Taitly, whereas great Inconveniences might follow, not only to his Holiness, but all Christenshow, not only to his Holiness, but all Christenshow, not only to his Holiness, but all Christenshow, it, by these Intestine Wars a passage were should not be entershould be viewed by singular to the Euclines of their present than Intestine Wars a passage were should not be entershould not be en and elsewhere; to renounce the Council of Pi-against them. All which being taken by the Pope into ferious confideration, makes him relent; and, in fequence thereof, nor only recommends Peace and Unity to all Christian Princes, and particularly to our King, but, thortly after enters into a League against the Turk; for this Decemb purpose using those potent Ministers of his the The Church-men, who were in favour with their fe- Frence is veral Princes. Louis the twelfth also draws Mani- makes his milian off, partly by reprefenting the danger with the above-mention'd in Hungary, which (next La-Pope diflaus) most concern'd him; and partly by ac cording the demands he made about divers pretences in Burgogne; and laftly urges fome Difcontents remaining in Maximilian's Mind, ever fined Henry VIII. and himfelf met laft, (though in effeet they were little more than Puntiglios, ordina rily hapning on the Interview of great Princes.) And for Ferdinand he was eafily taken off, to that he might enjoy Novarre, and for the reft keep his Authority in Italy. To which therefore Loais the twelfth condescended, proroguing the * laft years Truce with him for twelve Months longer. Laftly, because Hem, VIII. was without all thefe) able alone to find him work, he offers his Friendship, and Alliance in marching with his Sifter the Princess Alory, thought then one of the fairest Ladies of her time. To ftrenghthen this Proposition also, he advertises our King, that Charles Prince of Caffile (afterwards Charles V.) was treating of a Marriage with Anne Daughter of Ladiflaus King of Hungary; and were it in earnest, that he intended to match with his Sister the Princess Mny, that yet (being but fourteen Years old in February next) he was not ripe enough for her; concealing in the mean time that himfelf was as much too old.) He privately also acquainted the King how Ferdinand did but deceive him; as one, that would at all times be drawn to his Party, when he might enjoy Navarre. Together with which, it is probable he did reveal the aforefaid fecret Truce made by the Spanish Secretary Quintana, betwixt himself and Ferdinand for one Year more An Article whereof was, that, during the faid Truce, Louis XII. should not molest Milan. He told him, befides, that Maximilian's Defigns were on the Venetians, and not on France. And that the Levies in Flanders for the Wars proposed against France the next Year, were and should be returded by the Princess Marguerite, purposely, because her Father had other Designs : All which was represented to the King by private and confident Messengers, who under colour of treating for the delivery of Louis Duc de Longueville, and the rest who were Prisoners of War, negotiated this great Affair. Our King hereupon difdain- K Honry ing to be twice deceived by his Father-in-law concludes Ferdinand, and detefting withal the Ingratitude a Peace and Levity of Maximilian, agreed a League with French K. Louis XII. upon the feventh of August 174, for Aug. . the term of their joint lives and one Year after. Do Tilles The effect was, That all former Offences should be remitted and abolish'd, Traffick restor'd, and all Impositions on Strangers since fifty two Years last past, extinguish of That no Letters of Merque should be gran-ted, but against the principal Delinquents, and that only in case Justice were deviced. That no Robbers by Land, or Pirates by Sea should be maintain'd on either side. That Rebels and Fugitives should not be enter-

A Tumult in London by the An-

August.

1:14. by Land, and five thousand Men at Sea, with Shipping, at the requisition of Louis XII. But if either of the two Kings shall require Aid of the other for the recovery of his Pretensions, then Louis shall lend King Henry fix hundred Lances only, and King Henry him but five thousand Archers for Land-Service; the Sea Forces retaining the numbers above-mention'd. All this to be testaining two numers accovermention a. Als toos to be at the coft of the Demandant. Tet, if either of the faild Princes shall be invaded, only for the cause of this Con-fideracy, then the other shall aid bim at his own Charge. If War be made by common Consent, neither Prince may make Peace severally. That the English Merchants should have their ancient Privileges at Bourdeaux restor'd. That this Treaty should be published and ratif d by the Pope, (by whom it was chiefly proeur'd) with a Claufe of Excommunication on the Infractors. Among the Allies of each Prince, the Scots Journs. Among one Amery each errine, the Scots affer Septemb. 15, they bould make no brentfion the English by publick Authority; and if any were otherwise made, that faitfulling bould be feeding of the Miller this, the Food Wissers conference Belgish this the Food Wissers conference. ven. Besides this, the French Writers confess before there was a Treaty apart, by which Lois pro-mifed to pay Henry VIII. a Million of Crowns, the did Henry rendring him an Obligation, by which Charles Dake of Orleans, Father of the faid Louis, Tillet. and other Princes of France were bound to pay the faid Sum. For, whereas Charles VIII. Predecessor to Louis XII. by a Treaty at Estaples 1492, bound him-Orig Rec filf and his Heirs to pay King Henry VII. and his Heirs to pay King Henry VII. and his Heirs to be Sum of 745000 Growns; and, after the death of the faid Charles, Louis XII. bound himfelf and his Heirs to pay so much as remain'd thereof, Nov. 3. 1492. and this Bond was twice made by the faid Louis XII. July 14. first to Henry VII. 1498, and after to Henry VIII. July 22. 1510. And whereas (besides this Bond) the after-July 22. faid Charles had bound himself to the Lady Marga-March 7: rite Dutchess of Sommerset, Anno 1444, to pay her a certain Sum of Money, which was not yet discharged. Therefore, as also for confirming the Amity between Louis and Henry, the faid Louis did now bind himself and Heirs in a Bend of a Million of Crowns to be paid to King Henry VIII. in his Town of Calles to be planta King Helli (M. Man Form) Galais, at feweral times, (viz.) November 1. next following fifty thouland Francs; and May 1. next following fifty to the thought over paid. (Which Obligation I find in an Original thereof, dated Sept. Sept. 14 1314.) All which minuted by Louis de Longueville (called by fome Louis d'Orleans Duc de Longueville) dwing bis refersion, was at laft thus fully concluded. The Princels M vy afto was to be configned to him, with convenient speed; not-Polyd ving, withflanding (faith Pulydore) the King had fecretly destind her once to another, who though The Fr K, he gave place, when it was fo much for her Dig-Low XII nity, yet married her not long after. The Conagrees to dition for the Marriage, betwixt the faid Lou-marry K. is XII. and Mary the King's Sifter, were thefe, as we find them in our Records. The Mar-

That, 1. within ten Days following, Matrimony riage Ar hall be contracted by both Ferfons by Proxies, per verba past be contracted by b. to Ferjons by Fronces, pervection de practical. 2. After the Contract above-faild, within two Months, the King of England shall fend and convey her, with Jewels and Housboll-fulf string her Efface, to Abbeville in France; where within four days following the fail I louis XII. shall foluming marks. ry her. 3. King Henry shall give with the Princels Mary four hundred thousand Crowns; of which Sum (in regard of the traduction of the Lady, her Apparels, femils, &c.) Louis will be content to accept the one balf, i.e. two bundred thousand Crowns, and to pay himself the rest out of the Monies which by the late Treaty be is obliged to pay King Henry. 4 Louis shall assign to the Princes Mary a fainture as great as any Quen of France (and namely as Queen Anne the last Queen) buth bad. And this during her life the shall enjoy, whereforever she reside. 5. If Louis die first, then the Princes Mary, during her life, shall enjoy ber Downy and Jointure, and all Jewels which 1514, the Queens of France have used to enjoy after the death of their Husbands. 6. If Louis survive the said Princess, then be shall have and enjoy her Portion, fointure, Jewels, and Goods, according to the Custom

While thefe things were in agitation, the King (who called to mind many that had ferv'd him with much Fidelity, Courage, and Success in his late Occasions and Enterprizes) thought he could not do any thing more jully and prudently, than to bestow some condign Recompence upon them; it being fuch a Mystery of State as not only gives the greatest Lustre of Regal Authority, but of that Confequence, as being used well, there will be little need of Punishment. The Reward to these brave Cavaliers he had selected out for this purpole, the King thought good to inveit in honour chiefly. Therefore upon the fecond of February, Thomas Earl of Survey was by him created Duke of Norfolk; (a Title * before Feb. 2. conferr'd on John his Father by Richard III. and then again extinguish'd.) His eldest Son, the Lord Thomas Howard also being substituted Earl of Surrey. Together with which he had an augmentation of Arms for his Atchievement in Flod den-Field. Sir Charles Somerset also, being in Eli- Acreation zabeth his Wive's right, (who was Daughter and of Noble Heir to William Herbert, Earl of Huntington) Mea. Lord Herbert of Chenfton, Gower, and Ragland, was created Earl of Worcefter. Sir Charles Brandon, Viscount Lifle was now also created Duke of Sutfolk; and Sir Edward Stanley, not long after made Lord Mounteagle. Laftly, Thomas Woolfey Bishop of Tournay, was constituted Bishop of Lincoln.

The King, being at some rest now from transmarine Affairs, begins to look towards Scotland; upon which he had many Advantages. For as the two Princes, left by King James, were very young; his Sifter Queen Margaret (their Mother) having the Administration of all the Affairs there; the chief and most active part of their Nobility kill'd, there wanted not many occasions to prevail himself of; whereupon also, either by gentle means or otherwife by force, he refolv'd to procure an Interest in the Govern-ment of that Kingdom. To this it conduced not a little, that those Nobles which remain'd, betwixt Envy and Ambition, were diffracted a-mong themselves. The Queen forcseeing well, that, in this ill condition of Affairs, many Inconveniences might follow, in a Country, whereof (by fpecial Clause of a Testament made by the King before the last Expedition) she was declar'd The Regent, as long as the continued unmarried, Queen fends to the King her Brother, to crave his Ad-Regent of vice and Affiftance; befeeching him withal, that he would defift from Hostility. The King most Peace, he would defift from Hostility. The King most Peace generously answer'd, that, If the Scots would have The Peace, he would keep Peace; if they would have War, King's he would likewife have War. Thus were all things Aniwer. compos'd for the prefert, and James V. (being not two years old in Parliament declar'd King, in February 15%. Yet as, not long * after, the 'Aug & took to Husband Archibald Dongleije Earl of An-Feb. ons the eminentest she could chuse in that Country) fome Innovations and Troubles enfued. For while Dongle fe labour'd by his private Power for twine Danging taxout at the hispiriate Power to supply that Authority, which by marrying him, she feem'd to have lost; the Kingdom was broken into Factions. The favourers of Dow-Divisions glaffe alledg'd, there was no other way to keep in the Peace, but by submitting all to Queen Margaret; Scottajh for, fince the King of England did therefore only ment defit from pursuing his Victory, because the Administration of Affairs was in his Sitters hands, it were best to leave them there; to creet any other form of Government, were to draw the Sir John Wallop hereupon being fent into NorEnglish in again; and when all their forces united were not able to refift him absent, what Villages, landing many times in despight of the might they attend from him prefent? Especially, when not only their chief strength was lost in the late Battel, but Henry should find a Party with his Sifter, (both in her own Name, and in the King her Sons) would make for him. The other Fastion (whereof Alexander Humes was chief) urg'd the Ancient Custom of Scotland, which in these cases, he said, did always choose some Pro-tector or Vice-Roy. Neither did it hinder, that they had hitherto pay'd fo much deference to the Vertues of the Queen, that as long as possibly there was pretext for it, by the King's Testament, they had admitted her for Regent: For now, fince by Marriage of Douglass, she had voluntarily relinquish'd that Power; that the Country therefore should resume their wonted Right and Priviledges. For, if in the most quiet and serene times, Women had been excluded from Government, how much more now? Yet was not this the only reason that mov'd Humes. For, while he doubted lest the ancient followers of his House should by the Power of Donglass be now drawn from him, he left nothing unat-tempted that might diminish and weaken either him or the Queens Authority. Therefore he recommended every where John Stewart Duke of Albany, Coufin-German by the Father to James the Fourth; who, though then in France, was yet of great efteem at home. This again, was feconded by the Arts of the French, who could by no means suffer the good Affection of that Nation to be divided, much less drawn from them. Howbeit Louis thought not fit openly to discover himself, as fearing to offend our King, with whom he was now contracting a strain League and Affinity. Therefore he would not fuffer the Duke to come into Scotland, though not long before * elected Governor; by the 13. Lifte. Queens confent as was pretended; which yet may be doubted; the protesting † to our King afterwards, it was extorted from her.) Howfoever, after the Death of Louis he was fent over. (as shall be shew'd hereafter) well furnish'd both 1515. with Men and Money, to take Possession of the chief Government of all things, during the Minority of the Prince.

While bufinesses were now in preparation for Peace and Allyance betwixt our King and Louis the Twelfth, it was thought fit for discharge of the King's Engagement and Honour, to fend to Fl. nders, to discover how in those parts their affection stood towards the Match proposid be-twixt Prince Charles and the Princess Marr; and withal, to require Men for the War intended the next Spring. Fut Charles having already broken two Articles of the faid Treaty of Marriage; one whereof was, that when he came to four-teen years of Age, he should send a Proxy into England to contract the Princess per verba de præfeni; the other, that at a day appointed he should come himself to Calais to espouse her; and our Ambaffadors finding for the reft nothing but delay and irrefolution, the King would no longer omit to give order that his Sifter should neither be flighted, nor his Affairs otherwife fuffer detriment. Therefore, after a short Protestation, whereby the fault was laid on them; (without yet, that any intention was difclos'd for dispoting the Princess Mary in any other place, or of making a League with Louis the Twelfth) the King proceeds more roundly in his Business. Beyet this could be effected, Pregent with his Gallies coming to Suffee by Night, and landing there, after a lhort flay was driven back, and in the Retreat, shot in the face with an Arrow.

Villages, landing many times in defpight of the which feem'd the more strange, his Soldiers exceeded not eight hundred Men. The French also appearing in some numbers near the English Pale, Sir Tommis Levell was fent with June, certain Troops to Calairs, for the better frength-ning of the place; and the rather, that Richard de la Pole was now gathering Forces for fome great Defign. But before he could do any thing, the Treaty and Peace was made; among the Articles whereof, though the remanding of Richard de la Pole was propos'd, yet Louis would never confent to it, but fending him out of France Bed. gave him an yearly Pension.

Louis de Lorgueville having now power from his King to contract Marriage par parole de pre-fent with our King's Sitter, the also fent * her Aug. 22 Procuration to the fame effect, the Ceremony Sept 14, whereof was folemnly held at the Celeftins in The Kings whereof was folemnly held at the Celeftins in Silter the Paris, Septemb. 14. News whereof was no foon-Proncess Queen conducting her to the Sea-fide bid her Islands farmed accommended her to the Duke of France. Norfolks care. Shortly after which landing at Boulegne, and being met by fome principal Perfons deputed by the King, she was attended on, and guided towards Abbeville; in the way to which, the old King on Horseback met and saluted her, and afterwards retir'd himself privatethe the state of the was received into Abbeville with much Pomp. Where on St. Demis Day, Octob. 9. Octob. 9. the was in Perfon marri'd to Loin the Twelfth; And is who, after beflowing many Jewels on her, and marry'd rich Prefents to those who came along, difmiss d the 12th. all, save a few Officers and Attendants, amongst whom I find Mrs. Anne Bollen, Daughter to Sir Mrs. Anne Thomas Bollin, as one. Howbeit, occasion was Bollin one given of bringing over fome of our prime Nobi-tinue. lity and Cavaliers to Paris not long after.

François de Valois, Duke of Angoulesme, and next Heir Male to the Crown (having in May before marry'd Claude eldest Daughter to Louis the May 18. Twelfth , by Anne who was Inheritrix of Bretague) delir'd now, in the King's declining Age, to give fome proof of his Valour. Therefore, before the English departed from Abbeville, he claimed caus'd Justs to be proclaimed; which, for being remained. fo extraordinary (the Perfons and Manner con- Duke of fider'd) I thought worth the relating. The ef- Ano fect thereof was, that in November enfuing, he afterwards with nine Aids, would answer all Comers that First. were Gentlemen of Name and Arms, on Horse-back and on Foot. The Laws on Horse-back Haz. were, that with fharp Spears they should run five Courfes at Tilt, and five more at Random, being well arm'd and cover'd with pieces of Advantage for their best Defence. After this to fight twelve stroaks with sharp Swords. This being done, he and his Aids offer'd to fight at Barriers with the same Persons, with a Hand-spear and Sword. The Conditions were, that if any The Con-Man were unhors'd, or fel'd fighting on Foct, ditions of his Armour and Horfe should be render'd to the them. Officer of Arms. That for this purpose an Arch Triumphant should be fet forth at the Townelles, near Rue Saint Antoine in Paris, on which four Shields should be placed. That he who would touch any of them, must first enter his Name and Arms. That he who touch'd the first, which was Silver, should run at Tilt, according to the Articles. Who touch'd the Golden Shield, should run at Random as above mention'd. He that touch'd the black Shield, fhould fight on foot long held, and after that twelve stroaks with a double Title, both as he was of the House of 1514.

* March

† March 15, 16.

the Sword. He that touch'd the tawny Shield, Orleans, to which the Claim of the faid Dutchy should cast a Spear on foot with a Target on his Arm, and after fight with a two-handed Sword. This Proclamation being made, the Duke of Suffelk, and Marquis Dorfet, and his four Brechren, the Lord Pinton, Sir Edward Nevile, Sir Giles Capell, Thomas Chenye, and others, obtain'd leave of the King to be at the Challenge; which they so hasten'd, that before the end of October they came to S. Denis, where they found the Queen; the Solemnities for her Coronation, as also for her Reception at Paris, being not yet in He defires readiness. François de Valois, knowing how good the Duke Men at Arms the Duke of Suffolk and Marquiss of suffolk Derfet were, requested them to be two of his and Mar-quis Darfet Aids, to which they affented. But while these to be two things were in preparing, Mary the French Queen of his Aids. was upon the Fifth of November Crown'd in St. Denis, the Earl of Worcester and Dr. West (who were appointed for this purpose by our King attending her in the Solemnity thereof, and Fran-cois de Valois (afterwards King) holding the Crown Mary the (which was very weighty) over her Head. The day following the enter'd Paris with great Pomp, Queen Crown'd and the morrow after the Jufts began, of which Nov. 6. the King and Queen were Spectators; the King Nov. 7. being yet so weak that he lay on a Couch. These Justs continu'd three days, in which three hundred and five Men at Arms were answer'd by the Defendants; among which fome were fo hurt, that they dy'd not long after: At Randon and Tourney, the Duke of Suffolk hurt a Gentleman very dangerously, and the Marquis Dorset did no less to another. Then the Duke overthrew a Man both Horse and Arms, and so did The Duke the Marquis. Francis at laft being hurt, defires of safult the Duke and Marquis to fight at Barriers; who and Mar therefore took the first place against all Comers. In the mean while, Francis intending an Affront, Bravery at (as was thought) to the Duke, cauleth a German the Julis (the strongest Person in all the Court) to be arm'd fecretly, and present himself at Barriers; they both did well; yet the Duke at last with the but-end of his Spear struck the German till he flagger'd, and fo the Rail was let fall. The Marquils Dorfes also foil'd another French-man. Then they took fome breath and return'd to fight again; when the Duke fo pommell'd the German about the Head, that Blood gush'd from his Nofe, which being done, the German was convey'd away fecretly. Divers other brave feats were done likewife, which the reader may find elfewhere. At last our English with singular honour, return'd to their King and Mafter, whom they found much comforted for the * birth of another Prince, though not living long af-

H.17

" Nov.

T 5 14

Jan- 1-

But the contentment of Louis the Twelfth was almost as short; who being aged, and in-firm, after some eighty days possession, rather than enjoying of his Queen, dy'd January 1. 1515. leaving behind him no Iffue Male; though otherwife of that effect among his Subjects, for his care not to opprefs them with Impositions longer than his neceffities requir'd, that he was call'd Lower the Pere du Penple, Father of his People. After him fuc-tion dy's cceded Francois de Valois, above mention'd, a Francisthe Prince of great hope. His Age was twenty one eadshim or twenty two; wherein as well as in the most part of his Manners, there was much conformity betwixt our King and him. Particularly, they might be thought two the goodlieft Perfonages, not of their Cuality only, but of their Time. This Prince was Sacred (to use the French term) Jan. 25. at Repres 25 of January, 1515, taking on him, together with the name of King of France, that of Duke of Milan. To which he feem'd to have fee also not a little contributing thereunto, while belong'd, as also being comprehended in the Investiture made by the Emperor, according to the Treaty at Cambray. And because he succeeded as well to the Right, as to the means of recovering the said Dutchy, he thought on nothing more than how to vindicate the glory his Predecessors had lost in that Attempt. His first care was how to affure himfelf of our King: This he procures, partly by addreffing himfelf to Woolfey, who then prevailed most with the King, and parely by giving great Conditions. And Aug. 7: thus the state Treaty of Peace with Louis the 1514-Twelfth, (being to endure but till the first of January † next,) was (as I find both by ours and t 1516. the French Record) renewed in the fame Terms, K Henry the 5 of April following, and prorogu'd for term the Peace of their joynt Lives, and one year after. Only with better order was given for Depredations than ba before; it being agreed now, that no Merchant April 5. of either Nation should depart out of their Ports,

Sea. Upon the 8th of May, the French King agreed May 8alfo to pay at certain days a Million of Crowns 7. du Tid. to our King; (for fo the French have it,) which whether it were a new Stipulation, or that formerly agreed on by Louis the Twelfth, appears not to me; and Polydere's words are obscure, Polydere which import only pretium pro pace datum, Money Gays Fran-paid for obtaining a Peace. The 15 of Mey follow-the Peaceing, the Scors enter'd into this Treaty, (for they May 15. were comprehended under a condition of keep- The Scotz ing the Peace.) Neither did our King eafily be-included ing the Peace. Neither did our King earny bein the lieve, that under-hand they would have made Treaty. any other. Notwithstanding which, the French Jan. 2 without giving caution to their feveral Admirals, that no Wrong or Molestation should be done by and they did, upon the second of January following, privately enter into a League Offensive Title. and Defensive against England.

Together with the proposing of this Treaty the breads (in which the Duke of Suffolk, Sir Richard Wing- and Sout. feld Deputy of Celais, and Doctor West, were employ'd,) our King lent a Letter to the Queen Fet. 3. his Sifter; wherein he defir'd to know, how the flood affected to her return to England, defiring her withal not to match without his Confent. She on the other fide, who had privately engag'd her Affection to Charles Duke of Suffelk, made no great difficulty to difcover her felf to both Kings; intreating Francis to mediate this Marriage, and our King to approve it. Unto the former Francis eafily agreed, (though once intending to propose a Match betwixt her and the Duke of Saver; but our King, for the Conservation of his Dignity, held a little off; However he had long fince defign'd her to Suffolk. Queen also believing that this Formality was the greatest Impediment, did not proceed without some scruple, though protesting (as appears by an Original) that if the King would have her married in any place, five where her Mind was, the would that her felf up in fome Religious-House. Thus, without any great Pomp, The E & a being secretly married, the Queen writ Letters Queen of evening the King her Brother, taking the Marry's of excule to the King her Brother, taking the the Duke fault (if any were) on her felf; and together, of suffelk, pro-March. fefs'd that she prefix'd the space of four days to him, in which she faid, unless he could obtain her Good-will, he should be out of all hope of enjoying her. Whereby, as also through the good office of Francis, who (fearing left our King by her means should contract some greater Alliance) did further this Marriage, our King

did by degrees reftore them to his favour; 15001

flays in France

rives in England.

May 13.

their Husbands.

1515. he told our King, how much better flie was be-to gain the major part of Voices, in any thing flow'd on him, than on some Person of Quality they desired to obtain) it was order'd they should

Thus having prepared all things for their departure, they took their leave of the French Court; the Queen carrying with her, of the Jewels, Plate, Tapefiry of Lewis XII. to the value of two hundred thousand Crowns, as the French have it. Among which a great Diamond, call'd le Miroir de N ples (as I find by our Records) was one; though not without much reluctation of Francis, who would fain have redeem'd it at a great Order also was taken for the payment of her Jointure, being fixty thousand Crowns yearly. Whereupon the Queen and Luke with al-Mrs. Bolen her Train (fave Mrs. zinne Belen, who flaid in the Franch Court) * began their Journey; to the April 19. farisfaction of Francis, as hoping by their means to confirm his fo much defir'd Peace and Treaty with our King. Thus arriving at Cd.is the April 25. 25th of April, and from thence coming to Dever, and after to Greenwich, they were publickly mar-ried the 13th of M.y. Thus our King's two Si-Ougen arfters, after their being join d with great Princes, did not difdain to accept inferiour Perlons for

Feb. 5. IST. Reg. 6. Laws the Parparel

But that I may return to my proposed Method in this History, I shall fet down the I aws en-acted in the Parliament fact of this King beginning Floreary quinto; where I find one of their chief cares was, to put into better order the forliament, mer Laws concerning Apparel; which yet was 6.46 % not fo well digested, but that the Year following, about Ap- even the Law it felf chang d falhion. Howieever, that of Archery, made before, was not only confirm'd, but made perpetual; so that, not-withstanding the use of Caleevers or Hand-guns (for Muskets were not yet known) it thought fit to continue the Bow. Wherein I cannot but ecmmend the Constancy, if not Wifdom of thefe Times; it being certain, that, when he that carries the Cheen goes unarm'd, the Arrow will have the fame effect within its diflance that the Bullet, and can, again, for one shot return two. Bendes, as they used their Halberts, with their Bow, th y could fall to execution on the Enemy with great advantage. I cannot deny yet but against the Pike they were of less force than the C. Levers: Therefore I believe the meaning of these Times was, to command it as an Exer. ife to the common People, and for the reft referve it for these Occasions, where they might be of ufe. Howfoever, Hand-guns and Crofs-bows were forbidden under certain Penarties, to all Men that had less than five hundred Mark per zamum. The Wages for Artificers also was setted, and the Price of Watermen. A Penarty affo was imposed on those who changed Triliage into Pasture. And very good Order taken, concerning deceit in Cloth, as being the only cause they had not so good vent abroad. The Commission of Sewers extending to the making up of the Sca-wasts, &c. in England, the Marches of C Lin, Guijnes, and H mis, (begun f.mo Hanitifeen, and continued quarto Henitifeenini, for twenty five Years) being now upon exfpiration, was continued also for ten Years more. It was commanded also, that the River of Canterbury thouad be deepned. It was provided also, that Wooll thould not be carried beyond Sea; which was to the benefit of Clo-thiers. No fecond Letters Patents also might be taken, without mentioning the first: Which 1515 lose their Wages, if they went without the leave Parliaof the Speaker, and Common House, to be en- lose their tred in the Book of the Clerk of the Parlia- Wages, if they went

During the ftay of the French Dowager and home without : her Husband, a Treaty also past concerning the leave of reflicution of Tournay, upon a Sum of Money of-the House for d. Howbeit, as our King demanded in exchange thereof, the County of Guifues, or zards, Francis, who desir'd not any enlarging of the Enth Pale, fell off, to that our King provided for defence. For which purpole, as well as diminilhing his charge in keeping an excessive Garifon, he rais'd a Citadel there; without that Fr nas thought fit either to interrupt the Defign, or otherwise to offend our King; as hoping, by the means of Woolfey, (to whom, together with the unuffulness of Towns, he represented a Cardinal's Hat) to obtain his defire. And it was the true Dait to take him; he being extreamly ambitious of that Dignity, both as he thought it would fecure his Greatness, and as it enabled him to terve his King and Master's Turn. Therefore he had many ways attempted it, and particularly by the intervention of Cardinal H drien de Caffedo an Italian (Bithop of Bath, and the Pope's Collector in England) not omitting together to use the help of Sylvaster (Italian insentic) Bishoprick of Hireefter; and the rather, that they were both at Rome, where Cardinal Bambridge as 15 on our King's part refided : But this Cardinal dying July 14. 1514. not without suspicion of Poying ful) 34, 1514, not without impution of roy-lon, our King having lately * given Wedfer the March 4. Bilhoprick of Lincoln, he furrendred it now, and 1614, † tock the Arch-Filhoprick of 2014; and, not fa- Nov. 6. listicd herewith, afpird also to be Successor in 1514. the Cardinalthip; wherein, because it feems, he conceiv'd that Adrian Lithep of Bath had not ferved him faithfully, he oppos'd him in the Colved him faithfully, he oppose time in the some ecterlish, and put Pidder Virg! (his Sab-collector) in the Tower (from whence he came Private not * fadd, and, nor without the Pope's media—prified tion) he used therefore, besides his ordinary by it of y. Means and Friends in Reme, the he'p of Francis; who, for the more obliging of him, fan inthe News, that, in S. premb rt. i. Year, his Suit was Sept. 7. granted, and the Tire of 8 nates Cacellae 11. Mostly made Care taining of the Charges whereof, he had at this nat. time in Farm at very case Rates the Fisherpricks 'Nov. of Rath Marsthan and Marsthall Linear Land 18. of Bath, Woreefter, and Harford, in regard the Ei-sheps of these Places lived beyond Sea; he get alfo fucceffive'y the Lifht pricks of * B. th, † Lu - *1518. bem, and | Wnebster, which he to exchang'd, as t 1522 he held ever one of them with his Arch-bifhoprick; he held allo in Command on the * Abby of ereal Sc. 415 m's, and many other Ecclefialtical Preferation Benea ments, and had the dispeting of most of the ene-tices, fices that feel void. A.lo, thortly after his being conflitted Arch-Pilhop of Yok, William Was lam, Arch-Bishop of C merbury, resigning to the King Arch-billiop of common, reighting to the All 5 voluntarily the place of Lerd Chancellor, and retiring himfelf from Court, by reaften of his Age, (or perchance some Lifection) to a primary Digvate Life, that Place was conferr'd on him. Thus nities. were Dignities and Wealth heaped fo fast on Woolfer, that, being in his Nature info ent, he grew at length intolerable. Neither could the le His Prile excellent Parts, wherewith he was endowed, exempt him; infomuch, that not only much Arrogance, but extream Vanity was observed in him, was very equal, both for the king and subject, whereas yet nothing commands Church-una to And because divers now, being weary with litmuch as a pious M. h. h.; All Degrees of Persons, ting so long in Pariaments, did depart home but especially theirs, being like Coins or Memirout License, (they only remaining who dals; to which, howstover Vertue give the stamp factions of combined themselves, with intention and impression; Humility must give the weight.

Wages for Me-chanicks, Prices of men About Ti'lage. Cloth.

Commif-Sewers.

Against Experia tion of Wooll.

noted by Polydore to have used Silk and Gold in his outward Vestments, and even Saddles: He caused also the Cardinal's Hat to be born by fome principal Perfon before him, on a great height, as it were an Idol to be worshipped, (Loco capeldam Idoli facri,) and, when he came to the His flate. King's Chappel, would admit no place to rest it on, but the very Altar; he had besides, his Ser-jeant at Arms and Mace, and two Gentlemen carrying two Pillars of Silver, befides his Crofsbearer; concerning which it is observed, that he did bear the Cross of Tork, somewhat to the prejudice of that of Canterbury, which perchance might be some canse of Discontentment to the Arch-Bithop Warbam. In conclusion, all his Actions were fuch as argued a haughtier Spirit than could become his Place (as Polydere will have it.)

The Pope, being intentive now to a War against The Clergy refuse the Turk, * requires Aid from the English Clergy, the Pope which they yet (in their † Synod) deprecated, defiring our King to give his affiftance therein; alledging (by Letter to the Pope, dated No t Nov 12, vimber 25. 1515.) that they were exhausted Nov. 25. through their Contribution to the War of France, at the infligation of Julius II. remonstrating further, that by a Decree of the Council of Confrance, the Pope could impose no Tributes on the Church, but in case of necessity, and by a General Council.

The twelfth of this Month the Parliament fate again; wherein, among other Acts, further As-floo Order was given, for preventing Tillage to be of Pather turned into Pathure. A repeal of Licenfes allo to Strangers for carrying in of Gafcoigne and Guycome Wines, or Tholoufe Wood was enacted. Which was much to the increase of our Shipping. ing Huf-A time was also prefixt, without which all Motions, Suits, Bills, Indictments or Informations popular thall be fued, either for the King or Party; and To regath this fetled a great deal of quietness. The A& late in concerning Labourers Wages, made the Year proceeding, was also repealed, forasmuch as con-

cern'd certain Labourers in London.

Towards the end of this Parliament, Sir Edmard Poynings defiring to be discharg'd from his Government in Tournay, and the adjoining places of Mortaigne and St. Amand , Sir William Blunt, Lord Mountjoy was substituted; who appointing Sir Samplin Norton to be his Marshal, so offended the People, that they rose in Arms: Neither would they be quieted, till the faid Sir Sampfon was banish'd for ever. But, if Poynings return'd to his Counfellor's place, divers others went away from it. For, besides the Arch-Bishop Warbam, Bishop Fox, offended with the Cardinal, retir'd himself; desiring this only of the King, that be would not suffer the Servant to be greater than his Master. To which the King answer'd presently, ing to the That it should be his Care, that those who were his Subjests should obey and not command. Then Thomas Duke of Norfolk craved leave to go to his Counmuch exhaufted by his late Wars and Triumphs, Answer try-House. For, as the King's Coffers were fo not finding it easie to supply those vast Ex-The Duke pences, which (in Pageants and Devices) in-of Merid created daily, he wifely withdrew himfelf: retters, & Carrier Duke of Suffolk allo, not long after, fol-of well-a lowing them. For, having borrowed Money of the King for his Journey into France, and being unable (through the Cardinal's opposition) to obtain remission thereof, or otherwise to pay it prefently, he retird into the Country; fo that the Cardinal had his free fcope and liberty to fway all things, under colour of doing the King Service. For, whatfoever he went about, that was his Pretence; though (for the most part) in labouring to reform, he did nothing but inno-

1515. Yet this Cardinal, contrary to all Example, is | vate. Hence many Clamours arose among the 1515. People; who being capable of almost nothing but their own ancient Customs, foldom indure a change, though for their bettering and advan-tage. Hence was it, that they thought none fo true among them, as these who traduced the present Government; nor so wise, as those who fuspected most, though beyond all probability. There was yet occasion enough to fear Weolfer, Hisascenbeing observed to have that Ascendant ever the the King. King's Disposition, as he knew not how to be ferious, or almost merry, without him: In either of which ways he still introduced something for his own ends; for no Man studied them more. One Example whereof I will here insert. The Cardinal, having for his first Bishoprick, that of Tournay, was not yet without an ancient Competitor, one Louis Guillart a French Man, to whom it A French formerly appertained: This Man, grudging to Man pro-be thus disposses of, obtains from the Pope a Bull, Bull for whereby he was reftor'd to that place, (as far the Bi-as words could carry it,) with a Claufe of U/que theprick ad Invocationem Brachii Secularis, if denied admif- of Tourney, fion, to call in the affiftance of the Civil Magiftrate, both in the City and without. So that the French and Flemmings feem'd equally interested thereby to procure his Confervation. Our King understanding hereof, and knowing well the dangerous Confequence, * writes to the Bishops of "1517, Bath and Worcester, his Agents then at Rome, to K. Henry protest against this strange and inordinate Bull, writes to (as he terms it in his Letter;) commanding bisAgents them withal (not without fome Threats) to late at Romein bour that it might be recalled, as tending not on- Card. Weily to the raifing of Sedition in that City, and for Quarrels betwire him and the confining Princes, but to the wrongful displacing of the Cardinal, who, being subrogated to the other as well in conformity to the right of his King, as upon the contumacy or negligence of the other (who had not as then done his Homage and Fealty for his Temporalties) could not now be remov'd without much feandal. Before this, the Cardinal had Polydor. defired Francis to bestow on Guillant some other Virg. Bishoprick: But Francis delaying to give satisfied. Bishoprick: But Francis delaying to give latil-faction herein, so incensed the Cardinal, that he against became his fecret Enemy afterward, (as Polydore the Francis hath it.) Hereupon he intimates to Maximilian, King athat, notwithflanding the * late League betwixt bout it. England and France, there was probability, the 1515. King would not fuffer France to grow greater by the acquisition of Milan † (Maximilian therefore † 1516. fent, in the name of Sforza Duke of Milan, one Anchiftes Vis-Conte, a Milanese, to implore our King's affiftance against Francis, in Men or Money: Of which also there was some hope secretly given by Woolfey.) However, our King (in lo great a Cause) would resolve nothing, without communicating the business first to the ancientest and wifest of his Counsellors. Therefore recalling Warbam, Fox, the Duke of Norfilk, Lovell, Fox and and divers others, he demanded their Opinion reality. and divers others, he demanded then opinion recalled in full Counfel; where Woolfy fpeaking first, Novmb, alledged, that Francis had already broken the Frenty, by favouring Richard de la Pole, a Fugirieve and Traytor; in allfiling those Scots, which opposed his States of the Angelows and in contraining a bour bour and in contraining a few points. fer Queen Margaret; and in contriving a fecret breaking Lengue with that Nation, to the prejudice of that into with Fr which they lately entred with England. Besides, that Worston Francis with-held some Goods and Jewels of Queen it sinft Mary. That when all this were otherwise, yet it stood not with reason of State to suffer France to grow any greater. Laftly, he faid all this might be done warily, and without affusion of English Blood, only when he would but privately assist Maximilian. This was no sooner uttered, but Thomas Bishop of Du-The Ep. refine rifeth up, and not only confirms the Car- of Dinkom dinal's Speech, but extols it with fome palpable confirms his Speech.

Flar-

Nov. 12. Laws

& Trade.

veriess from

King.

GF on Ban

Cac linal left to do when he

1515. flatteries. Neither must it seem strange, that the Churchmen concurr'd in this Vote; it being Ford Fire, likely that (besides Cardinal Woolfey's particular animofity against Francis the First) Lee the Tenth had a hand herein, as knowing how much fafer it was for Italy, that a fingle Duke should govern Milen, than such a Potent Prince as Francis the First; all the others at the Table yet were of another Opinion. Among whom therefore a reply was made to this effect. The AnThat to break a Treety or League (foliamly favoru)

Exercise to dial from a frange Council in any, but effectably in a

Divine. That, for their parts, they conceived the violating of publick Faith, was to call God and Man in lating of publick E.ith, was to call God and Man in sudgment againft them. They would not deny yet, but juft carfe of dissolving Leagues might be given. Ent then that the arong d Parry ough beth to protest the fault and denome Wan, That, if any ether Course should be allow'd among Princes, and Estates, there were no ground for upholding Truth and Justice, without which yet the Law of Nations, and even Mankind it self could not subsist. That therefore it were good to examine the grounds of the proceedings mention'd. In which though it could not be deny'd but Richard de la Pole was admitted still in France. yet, whether as Trayter to his Country, or a Perfin that came thither only for safety of his Life, might be questioned. That if the Spies, they had on Richard. be auttion d. That if the Spirs, they had on Kichard, faild true, his design was only to go into Italy with Francis the First, and then there entit he no danger on his part. And for the other Point, which was also fitting the Scottish Fallian against Queen Margaret, or contricing a fevert Leagure which which he a prejudice to the former, much might be failt; yet if business where well examined, both the Frenties of Francis with a might the latter with Scotland him. cis might confift; This latter with Scotland being provisionally only, in cofe we should come to a Rupture with France. They nould not deny yet, but berein an advantage was taken by the French, forewhat against the Laws of Hosour. But that we might make a benefit thereof. For, while Francis was in Italy, and far remote from Scotland, it was was in 1931, and far remote from Scotland, it was offe for his Majeffy, under colour of ressling the new Faction set up by the French in Scotland, to be more than revenged. For, whether in his Sister's name or his com, it was not hard to reduce a divided Comtry to his Devotion. And that this might be thought a greater Addition to him, than Milan to the French, when yet they could obtain it; that to take any other when yet they could obtain it; it has to take any other counts, was to feek caufes of quarrel, without colours, either of Reason or Justice; to draw the French on himself; to intervent his way to Scotland, which now hay open; and lastly, to make him loofe credit both at Heme and Abroad. The King, who knew the opposition among his Counsellors, seem'd to temper the diversity of Opinions in a middle way; yet fo, as in effect, he inclin'd to the Cardinal.

The King Therefore he faid, he would hinder the designs of inclines to Francis, without coming yet to a manifest Rupture; the Cardi-whereof also occasion was given. For as Fran-nion. as being * Confederate with Charles, (now fixteen years old, and taking on him the Government of the Lou-Countries) as also with the Venetians, had renew'd a War in Italy, and after a bloody Battel at Marigana, had compell'd Marinillan Sforza to refign his Right to Milan, and accept a Pension in France; so our King, who suspected this great Addition to Francis might be damageable to him, refolv'd fecretly to affift the Emperor, with whom also the Pope and Ferdinand joyn'd, for the defence of Italy, and op-Novemb. position of the Invaders. Returning for this purpole by Richard Pace (late Servant to Cardinal Bambridge, and, for the present Secretary of State) not only a huge Sum of Money; but giving him Commission to treat both with the Emperor and

* April.

League upon certain Conditions. Among which 1515 Ladge upon certain Conditions. Among which 1419 it was agreed, That, if Milan were recovered, fack affit the a yearly Tribute or Penfion floud be paid our King, Duke of as this supply of Money did desve; Woolfey not saking forgetting also, (after his usual manner) to capitalise guant for an Annual payment of ten thousand Ducatitis him-E-mic on self. Hercupon, Pace, levying for the Emperors consistency of the Miland Paliant of Smil's, (who wil-Records lingly emped this War. both as they were obliged Walling's lingly entred this War, both as they were oblig'd Westley to the Confervation of Sforza's Interest, and as have they defir'd to revenge their loss at Marignan, Ducats the Emperor in Person marcheth towards Mi-yearly. Neither did it hinder him, that the Pope was fallen away to Francis, and had appointed an Interview at Bononia, for the accommodating of their Dec. 11. Mutual Affairs; the Pope promising Parma and Piacenza to Francis; and he, on the other fide, flipulating to recover Urbin for the Pope (as indeed follow'd the next year.) Where also an Agreement call'd the Concordat was made, which the French Writers observe as Derogatory to the Pragmatick Sanction, and the Liberties of the Gal-Plagmatich General Being thus upon his way, Charles Duke of Bearben, who was appointed by Francis to defend his Acquifitions in Italy, fends to his King for Relief, preparing in the mean time to defend himself the best he could. But Maximilion being now in a fair way of obtaining his defires, retires suddenly into Germany; neither May. could be alledge other caufe of it, than a simple diffidence of the Swifs, (as Polydore hathit;) tho Guicciardine tells another Reason; which was, that Meximilian receiving no fupply of Money from England, and being not provided himself to pay them, was forc'd to desift. This encourag'd the French and Venetian to proceed in their defigns of befieging Brefeia, which they got; but being repulsed at Verona, Maximilian takes heart ogos, again, and fends Matteo Cardinal of Sedum (or Stiten) into England, to negotiate for a fupply of Money, and withal to excuse his late Retreat, both for his diffrust of the Swifs, as also because they openly refus'd to fight against some of their Countrymen, who were under Bourbon. Befides, Maximilaas he had long entertain'd our King with a hope on flatters that he would refign the Empire to him, fo on K. Henry this occasion (as I find by an Original from Sir hopes that Robert Wingfield, dated 17 May 1516.) he renews he would the Propositions; offering, besides to give him resign the the Dutchy of Milan; for the more affurance Empire to whereof, defiring our King to pass the Seas to May 17.

Calais, and so to take his way through the Law-Countries, till he came to the City of Triers; where Invites he, together with the Electors would meet, for him to performance of the aforefaid Refignation of the come to Empire; which also being done, he propos'd that pur-that an Army from thence should invade France, pose. while our King with one thousand Horse, and one thousand Archers should pass through Germaone thouland Archersinous pais through Germany to Copre, and so over the Lake of Como to the State and City of Milan; where having reposed a while, Maximilian promised to go along with him to Rome, to see him receive the Imperial Crown; which being done, he faid, our King might choose whether he would make an honourable Peace with France, or War, for recovering his Right; which, he faid, the Pope and all Christian Princes could not but like well of. And thus far Wingfield; to whose relation though our King gave as much Credit, as a Profession often made by Maximilian could Merit; yet as he confider'd withal, that there was much improbability in the offer, and the Action it felf in a manner without Precedent; and, howfoever, that he should engage his Kingdom for the Affair of the Empire, (it being then so scant of K. How; Francisco Sforza, Brother to the late Duke of Mi- Moneys, as Muximilian was nick-nam'd Pechi Juné agrees to lan, concerning the Loan thereof, and a strict Dinari.) So by his Answer in June following, Vol. II. E. has he thankfully accepted those Offers, yet that he defir'd they might be kept fecret until the French we'e driven out of Italy. For which purpofe, (as well as the Reafons before fet down) I find he promis'd Maximilian fome more Money, excuting together the former defect of Payment, with laying the fault on some Genetia Merchants. Befides, at the Cardinal of Seduns intreaty in the Emperor's Name, he entred into a ffrict League with Maximilian; which yet, because it lasted Maximilian to, I shall not particularly mention. For Maxwould imilian, confidering how little trust he could renot truit not trust pose in our Cardinal for the obtaining of Mo-troofy. ney, and (for the rest) being wearied with the Hwijg.

Wars, first makes a Truce with his Adversaries, Makes his and particularly the Venetians; after which, for Peacewith a Sum of Money being two hundred thousand the Fraction Ducats, he reflores Verons unto them, and then are, makes a Peace. To which purpose the Death Jan. 23. of Ferdinand did serve; who departing this Life in the beginning of Anno 1516, did free himself rather than the World, from not a few Troubles, whereof he was the first Procurer and Author. This Prince (leaving to his Successors the Stile of Cathelice) was thought the most active and

and Cha-racter of King of Curita.

Section

The Death politick of his time. Infomuch that he hardly took rest, or suffer'd it in others. No Manknew better how to ferve his turn on every body, or to make their ends conduce to his. But while he escap'd not the Opinion and the Name of Falls, (which yet his Country Writers palliate, no otherwise than with calling it Saber-raynar) he neither comply'd with his Dignity, nor indeed the Rules of Wildom; true Reason of State confifting of fuch folid Maxims, that it hath as little need of Deceit, as a fure Game at Chefs of a false Draught; there is no use of it, therefore, among the wifer fort; as being only a fupply of Ignorance among the ruder and worse kind of Statesmen. Besides, it appears fo much worse in Publick Affairs than Private, as it is never almost hid or unreveng'd. Reputation again is still lost thereby; which yet how much it concerns Princes, none can better tell than fuch as imagine them without it. This is strange of him, that being of vast Peffessions, enrich'd much from the Indies, prosperous in almost all his Attempts, of a frugal Difpolition, and long Life; (for he attain'd fixty three) there was hardly yet found in his Cof-fers, enough to discharge his Interring, though not very Sumptuous; that I may fay nothing of not very stamptious; that I may as moving or his Debts. His Will and Tettament declar'd his Daughter Junns of Caffile to be his Heir. On-by, because of her delect of Wisson, and her Sons young Age, He appointed the Cardinal Ximmes Archbishop of Toledo to govern, till the faid Charles came to Castilla. He left also to Fernando, Brother to Charles, great Poffessions and Legacies, as loving him inwardly best; both that being born at Alcala 1503, he was a Native of Spain, (which his Brother was not,) and that he gave much hope of Towardliness, and besides bore his Name. Infomuch that, could he have contriv'd it handfomly, it is thought he would have made him his Heir in Spain: Sundry Parricularities whereof, concurring much with the Spanish History, being advertised to our King by Sir John Stile his Ambassador there; Our King and Queen (as they had before done for Louis the Twelfth caus'd a folemn Obsequy for him to be kept in the Cathedral Church of St. Paul in But they mourn'd not long; the Birth London. of our Princess Mary following shortly after, up-Eds. 18. on the eighteenth of February 15-5.

Ferdinand thus dead, Charles, who thought him-felf as capable of governing Caftilla, as he was 1515. he wish'd Wingfield to tell Maximilian, that though of the Low-Countries (which Maximilian the last 1516 year put into his hands) fends immediately to Spain, to claim the Right and Title; which also was acknowledg'd; yet fo, as it was thought that it ran thus, Down Jusan, and Don Carlos, Queen and King of Cafilla, Leon, and Arrigin, &c. Navarre (which was now incorporated to them) being not forgotten; He determin'd al-fo in Person to go thither. For which purpose, as well as the better fecuning the Low-Countries in his Absence, he past several Treaties with Francis and our King; The former was conclusionally conclusions and our King; The former was conclusionally conclusions. praness and our Mng; The former was conclus a Peace ded at Noyon, Aug. 15, where it was agreed, That concluded within fix Months fillowing Henry d' Albrec (Jean Charles & d' Albrec, and Catherine bis Wife being muly dead) et spain, floudd be reford at tothe Kingdom of Navarre, or at and France leaft fufficient content given him otherwife; and if all may not, that it flould be lawful for Francis to affit him. The ConThat Charles flould mary Louile Demokra of Fron, divisor of That Charles should marry Louisse Daughter of Fran-ditions of cis, (then not a year old) who in Consideration there-it. of should renounce his Claim to Naples, and accept a Process of one hundred thousand Crowns rearly. That Sandoval. of position retinance in common examics, and accept a Pension of one hundred thousand Creviny searly. That the Venetians giving the Emperor two hundred thou-land Ducats, he should deliver them Verona. Be-fides which, their Orders of Chevalry were fent to each other, and an Interview appointed, which yet the control of the Control of the Theory with the pereach other, ame an interview appeared, among to took no more effect than the Treaty it felf. The lat-The Conter League was form'd at London, Ostober 29, dirions of between found of Charles of Caffile, the Emperor the treaty than and Charles of Caffile, the Emperor the treaty than a content of the Content Maximilian, and our King to this effect.

That the Confederates should defend one another, and and King point Aid by Land at their own Costs, (being re-Harri-guir'd) within a Month ofter complaint, against the Other 29. Enemy.

If the Enemy have Port Towns, &c. then the War fluil be all made by Sea, by them bath, and the Fleet supply'd if it be diminish'd, &c. That no Peace shall be made with the Enemy, or Truce, but by mutual confent.

Place also was left for other Princes whatsoever, to come into this League within eight Months, by the con-fent of all the Confederates. That Leo the Tenth shall be comprehended in this League, if he will Excommunicate the Persons and States that shall molest the Confederates, and that he enter within fix Months.

That the Swifs shall be admitted, if they will; so that they bind themselves to serve under the Confelerates, and not under any other Prince; And, on the se Conditions to have Penfions.

I must now return to the business of Scotland, The Scott (intermitted a while, that I might not break the Affairs. context of my Hiftery,) and therein call to mind, how John Stewart Duke of Albany, having been how John Stewart Dake of Albany, having been recall'd home, was prefently upon his Arrival (which was Aliy 20. 1515.) declar'd Vice-Roy, May 10. till the King cane to full Age. Neither did it 1515-hinder, that he was born in the time of his Father's Banishment; and, for the reft, fuch a Stranger, that he could not speak the Country Language. For 25.2 figures Opinion of his Language. For as a fingular Opinion of his worth went before, and the Recommendation of the French accompany'd him, so was he faluted with that universal App aufe, wherewith new comers that have given hope of themselves, are usually welcom'd. The businesses of the Country were yet fo strange to him, that he was inforc'd to use the directions of others. In this number, Bahan one John Hepburne did much appear. His first advice was, that he should not punish the Delinquents, both as they were many, and well ally'd; and as it would gain him throng Enemies.

That he had more use of the Peoples Affections, than to alter them at his first Entrance. therefore his chief endeavour should be, to make good his Authority, neither should he oppress any, but those who were in estate to oppose him;

Archibald Douglass was one, who, besides that he had marry'd the Queen, was a Person much in favour with the People. Secondly, Alexander Humes, a busie, potent, and able Lord. Thirdly, Andrew Forman, whose Riches were fuch, as alone would suffice for a great Defign. The Vice-Roy, taking this Advice into confideration, thought not fit yet to begin with Donglass, left the Queen, for protecting him should draw the English into Scotland, which he most doubted. Befides, he was fo gracious with the greatest part of the Kingdom, that he was to be undermin'd rather than affaulted. And for Forman, he thought it was nothing but his Wealth that made him enw'd. Only Humes he thought it not amifs to question; as having between vehement Suspicions, and fome Proofs, not a little matter against him. Humes having some notice thereof, chan-ges his Party, and now strives to combine with Douglass, and the Queen. Therefore he laments to them the fortune of the King, who was fal-len into the hands of one, who besides that he was a ftranger to his Country, might be sufpected for attempting on his Person, as being next Heir to the Crown, after the King and his Bro-That this was the more probable, because his Father Alexander (as the Scottiff Writers have it) had taken the like course with his eldest Brother Fames the Third, whom he would have difposses of the Kingdom. That there was no way to avoid these Dangers, but to sly with her Son into England, (to which also our King had perswaded her privately,) and recommended the rest to his care. This Advice (whether spoken by Humes to discover the Queens Designs, and thercupon to make his Advantage with the Vice-Roy, or that he did indeed think this to be the beft way for the Kings fafety,) was brought beforehand to the Vice-Roy, who believing it easily, thought fit to leize on Sterling-Castle, in which Aug. 10. the young King and his Mother were, and to put a Guard on them; yet admits fome, who were of great Credit, to give by turns their Di-rections for the young Kings Education, and u-feth briefly fome such Providences, as might argue all was done with a good Intention; among which the taking an Oath of Fidelity to the young [ulv 12. King, was most remarkable. This while Humes, with his Brother William, refußing to obey a Citation to the Parliament, and being thereupon proferib'd, fled to England; Dougless also taking the Queen with him follow'd shortly after, staying yet at Harbottle-Castle in Northumberland, by our Kings Command, till surther Order was given. It appear'd not yet, whether this were in escape in them, or that the Vice-Roy were under-hand confenting to their departure, only to be freer for his Deligns. Howfoever, he fent inflantly to our King, to clear himfelf from all Sinister Practices against the Queen. He also labours with the friends of Douglass and Humes to draw them home, promiting for this purpose all the good Conditions that could be required. Humes takes the Invitation, and returns; Douglass also (confidering the Queen was with Child, and near her Time, and therefore unable to remove any way far) makes use of this occasion to settle his Affairs at home. The Queen, in the mean Octob. 7. while, being * brought to bed of a Daughter, (whom she call'd Margaret) by easie Journeys comes to the English Court in the next Spring 1516. Yet were not businesses in Scotland 10 quieted; for Alexander Humes having submitted himfelf (as aforefaid to the Vice-Roy, who gave him to the cuftody of his Brother-in-Law, James verely punished, unless the Hamilton Farl of Arran, upon pain of Death if to make their private Peace he fuffer'd him to depart; thortly after by reprefenting to Hamilton fome nearnefs of Blood on 1516. his part, which might enable him to be Vice-Octob, 12 Roy, perfwaded the Earl to escape away together with him; while the Vice-Roy being not griev'd (perchance) thus to be quit of those he suspected most, seems now to be at rest. Only he would not omit to take this Advantage against Hamilton; therefore he batter'd and took his Caftle; Humes in the mean time ravaging the Country about Dunbar. The Vice-Roy hearing this, returns to his wonted Invitations of both him and Hamilton to come back. Hamilton accepts it first, and Humes after; but Humes being fummon'd again to come to the Parliament, Sept. 24. thinks fit (for redeeming his former fault when he last absented himself) to appear. He perswades his Brotheri William also to go with him, though many of the r friends oppos'd it; for as his Brother was equal with him in Power and Authority, to the keeping him back would have conduc'd perchance to the fecuring of both. But he, confident of good Ufage, neglects the Advice, and comes with his Brother to Court; where being feiz'd on, they were committed to divers Prifons, for crimes objected against them; and particularly against Alexander, who was thought to have used some Treachery in Flodden-Battel, if not to have kill'd the King. All which though he con-Bu be ceiv'd either fuggested maliciously against him, or at least by a long intermission to have been antiquated and forgiven, yet prevail'd not; his Odob. Head and his Brothers being flruck off in Octo-Life. ber 1516. Shortly after which (as Lefleur hath it) Jan. the Kings younger Brother dying, the Duke of 15th Albany obtain'd in Parliament to be declar'd next Heir. Which being done, he enters (in January following) into a League with Francis, and fo * June return'd to that Country; only that he might 1517. manifest his pretences were without any Ambiti-May. on which might derogate from his Loyalty. The Queen of Scots coming to London, May 3. Downger 1516. was much welcom'd by the King, the of Scot Queen, and her Sifter Queen Mary, who all London. conjoy'd therein a happiness rare for Princes in that kind, which was to fee one another after they had been once dispos'd of abroad; the King May 19. for the more honour of her coming, commanded a Justs, in which Sir William Kingstone was, both himself and Horse, overthrown by him.

This year also those who manag'd any Money for the King in the Wars, or otherwise, were by the Cardinals command call'd in question. Among whom fome by Bribery, and fome by Cunning escap'd; others being condemn'd in great Sums; fo that the Cardinal might be faid to have in him fo much of a good Servant, as he willingly fuf-fer'd none other to deceive his Mafter. To accompany this feverity also, he caus'd Perjury to be rigorously punished, wherein I can never enough commend him; all other Treacheries extending for the most part, but to the depriving geodQua-of Life, Possessions, or good Name; but this hires such a one, as without much labour may take away all together. Some Courts also were crected in the favour of poor People, against the oppression of the Great; which at the beginning were Hast much frequented; but at last, the People receiving many delays and unfatisfactions in their Suits, every one left them, and went to the Common-Law: As fearing, under this pretence, an Innovation. I must not deny unto the Cardinal yet, the attribute of Just, in all Affairs of publick Judicature; whereof, (if we may believe Authors) he was ever apparently fludious. Therefore, where Diforders were committed, he feverely punish d, unless the Parties found means

Vol. II.

HsI

1 (1". our Records. Leo, continuing still the Council of Lateran, among other Reformations, propos'd that of the Calendar, inviting (for this purpose) our King, to fend fome of our most learn'd Divines and Altronomers thither; but as it appears not what answer our King return'd to this Breve, July ... Dated July 10. 1516, so neither should I have inserted any thing hereof, but that it seems they were not fufficiently fatisfy'd concerning the Principles from which the Calculation should be About this time a Riot and Sedition in Eng

A Riot by land hapned in this manner. Some Citizens and Apprent. Apprentices of London of the poorer fort, being against offended that all their chief Customers were won Foreign- from them by the diligence and industry of Strangers, and (for the rest) pretending to have re-ceived from them divers Contempts, Affronts and Injuries, found fome occasions, and took others, to make an Infurrection against them; and the lather, that the Seditious Sermons of one Doctor Bile, by the Infligation of John Lincolne a Broker, had not a little incited them: Who taking Texts (as near as he could find in the Scriptures) to rag'd to it this purpose, traduced the sence thereof even to by one Dr. Bole a encouraging the People to a Commotion. The Presence. neither ended it to well. For two Apprentices playing only at Buckerels in the Street, late on April 30. May-Eve, contrary to the Lord Mayors Command, (who upon notice taken of the Citizens intent, was charg'd by the King's Council to require, under great Penalties, all Housholders to keep themselves and their Servants within doors from nine over-night, till feven of the Clock the next Morning) an Alderman came to arreft one of them; but the faid Apprentice thinking therein that an Ancient Custom for taking liberty at that time more than any other, was infring'd, cry'd Clubs. Hercupon, they came forth in so great Numbers, that the Alderman fied. The Apprentices being encourag'd herewith, and for the rest finding themselves in a greater Multitude, than to do nothing, break open fome Prifons, and took out divers Perfons, committed thither for abusing and hurting of Strangers. Neither could the Mayor or Sheriffs then present, hinder this ; nor Sir Thomas Moore, (late Judge of the Sheriffs Court in London, but now of the Kings Council,) though much respected by them, as being a Native of that City. The Prisoners being now fet loofe, advise the Multitude to run to the House of one Meutas a Picard, much hated by them: Where they kill'd some, chas'd the rest, and risled his Goods. Hence they went again to other Strangers Houses, which they spoil'd in like manner. The Cardinal hearing this, and being not much more in the Peoples favour than the Strangers, fortifies his House with Men and Ordnance. But the Lieutenant of the Tower proceeding otherwise, discharg'd some of the great Pieces among them. Howbeit, this made them not so much desist, as that having reveng'd themselves as far as the offence taken seem'd to May 1. require, they thought good about three in the Morning to scatter and go home. But in their way, they were apprehended by the City-Officers first, and afterwards by some followers of

I will conclude this year with a Paffage out of the Lord Mayor, proceeded legally against the chief Offenders; to the terror of the Citizens, who were the more affraid, that the Duke of Norfolk upon the killing of a Priest of his in Cheape, was reported to have faid (as our Hiftorians have it) in some Passion, I pray God I Hall. may once have the Citizens in my Danger. This (though perchance a Calumny, forg d against the Duke) wrought fo, that they thought themfelves over-rigorously dealt with, in that the Statute Secundo Henry the 5. Chap. 6. (which makes breakers of Truce, and fafe-Conducts guilty of High Treason) was extended against them, tho' repeal'd afterward, 20 Henrici Scati. Howfoever much mercy was shew'd; for, of two hundred feventy eight Persons which were Prisoners, Lincoln only, who was thought the most Seditious, and three or four more were Hang'd, Drawn, May 7. and Quarter'd; the rest, who were about ten, suffer'd nothing extraordinary in their Death, but that for the more example they were hang'd on Gibbets erected in the Streets. All the others were thus pardon'd; the Recorder of London, May 11. and divers Aldermen coming in Black to Court, and desiring most humbly to be heard, the King, after some Admonition and Check, as if the better fort had conniv'd at this Riot, refers the rest to the Cardinal, then Lord Chancellor. In Con-May 22. clusion, the King sitting in Westminster, and being attended with his principal Nobility and Officers, and the Lord Mayor; all the Prisoners in white Shirts, and Halters about their Necks (into which Habit divers also, (not yet discover'd) put themselves, to be capable of the King's Par- The Kings the King graciously accorded, permitting also terms the Gibbets, which much scandaliz'd the Citizens, to be taken down.

Shortly after, the Sweating Sickness (call'd for Sweating the propriety by which it feiz'd on the English Sickness Nation chiefly, Sudar Anglicus,) did much infect the July. Kingdom, being of that Malignity, as within the space of three hours it kill'd. This caus'd the King to leave London, and adjourning three Terms 1517, to remove Trinity Term, 1518. to Oxford, where yet it continu'd but one day, and was adjourn'd again to Westminster. Nevertheless divers Knights, Gentlemen and Officers in the Kings Court dy'd thereof; as the Lord Clinton, Lord Grey of Wilton, and others of Quality, the vulgar fort fo commonly perishing, as in some Towns it took away half the People, in others the third part.

Let us look now a while on foreign Bufiness. Maximili-Maximilian continuing the foremention'd Treat and double ties with our King, concerning divers publick with King Affairs, and particularly that of rendring the Harry. Empire, was defired by King Harry, to give him a meeting in the Low-Countries. But Alexander theory of the Maximiliant temping Audient, That to averallable theory. lian returning Answer, That to excuse that labour he would come over into England, King Henry sent the Earl of Wereester, and Doctor Cuthbert Tonfall to him, * lately then come into Floriders. * Jin. But as Maximilian was a Prince of great Diffinulation, they observ'd in him, that while on the one fide he entertain'd our King with the offer of the Empire, &c. on the other he continu'd his Treaty (begun in December last) with the French. the Earls of Strengthery and Surrey, who hearing of this Difforder, and taking the Inns-of-Court Men with them, clearld the Streets of this nurully Company. The beginning of the Riot was for cupon examin'd, and Doctor Bele and John Lincolne lent to the Tower. About three days after the Duke of Narfalls the Earl of Surrey heards which Hapour his Polferity should in-Besides, his Grand-Child Charles refus'd to confirm Octob.29. the late League with our King. So that our 1516. after the Duke of Norfolk, the Earl of Surrey his Romans; which Honour his Posterity should inson, and divers others, with about 1300 arm'd herit. Sometimes, that he would resign the Empire to Chirles of Costile, and make Homy King of that fo he may be equal to the Electors. But as Doctor Tonstal advertis'd the King, that the Emperor must be Electout of the German Nation: That King Heavy in accepting the Empire, must confess England to be under the Empire; Lastly, that he must be first King of the Romans, when yet the Emperor had declar'd he meant to hold The King that Title ftill: So our King rejected thefe Prorejects his positions, as Vain, and Artificial only to draw Offers a-Money from him; and our Agents return'd habout reving only obtain'd, at last, an Oath from Charles and Queen Foane, his Mother, for performance of the late Treaty at London, with some small figning the Em-Octob-29 Alterations. Maximilian also, about the same time * departed out of Flanders, having † first * May † March concluded a League at Cambray betwixt himfelf, Aug. Decem-Francis, and his Grand-child Charles, by which they confirm'd the League at || Noyon, and * Bruckells, refolv'd on a War against the Turk; 1516. March (as it was now projected in the Council of Late-25. r_{nn} ,) and appointed an interview for all three in April or May following. Place also was left for the Pope to enter as Protector thereof, and for King Hinry. This being advertis'd to our King, made him think how to defend Tournay, and therefore caus'd a Citadel to be built there; not neglecting together to prevail himself of the Pope's Mediation for a General Peace. Which, as it was willingly embrac'd, fo our King was intreated to fend him two hundred thousand Du-

England by Neither was there, in the use of these Indulgen-the Pope. ces, that distinction of Persons or Sins made, which from fo grave a Pattor might be expected, fo that (promiseuously) all Men, who would come to the prize, (as fome Authors have it) were not only promis'd everlasting bills, but made capable of delivering the souls of others out of Purgatory. When those Indulgences first came forth, no divine Worship in the West parts of Europe, but what the Church of Rome prescrib'd, The rife was publickly known. For though some opof the Re- pofers of the Papal Authority had appear'd long formation fince, yet wanting those supporters who might establish and uphold their Dectrine, it quickly fail'd. Some of their impressions yet were deriv'd to Pofferity; though in fo obscure and perplex'd a manner, that they ferv'd rather to flew Errors, than rectifie them; forming (for the reft) no eminent and visible Body, or at least no other than fuch as quickly disappear'd. that all those, who for the present dissented inwardly from any Opinion commonly taught, lept yet the unity of the Church. Of which kind though (I doubt not) there were many, yet by dillinguishing in private only the good Doctrines from the ill, they both conferv'd their Confei-cnces, avoided Schism, and maintain'd towards God, and among themselves, an Uniformity; being therein not unaptly compar'd to Sheep, and other Creatures, who in Paftures; where both only the better fort. While thus, they might not cats (on fecurity) for that War, which yet it was thought the Pope would employ for fome Affairs in Italy. Who also sent a Croisade and Indulgences into Germany, England, and many other An extra places: The Conditions of which were, That, vagant la whossever perform'd certain Religious Rites, and paid dulgence certain Sums of Money, should have their Sins forgiven, then the of these lands

1517. the Romans, and his Grand-Child Firdinand King which the fubrilities of the Schoolmen brought of Audinia. and himfelf Marshal of the Empire, forth) declin'd. Neither did Men think themfelves bound to fludy the Intricacies and Sophifms of Authors, in matters impertinent to Salvation; but were contented with a fingle faith in God, the comfort of a good Life, and hope of a better upon true Repentance; taking the rest for the most part upon the faith of the Church. By which means as Peace was generally confervid, fo it was not doubted by those who fearch'd into the Primitive times, but that together divers new Doctrines (if not Errors) were crept into the Church Discipline. Among which some, yet, might have been more excufable, had not they not been fo feverely commanded, that the common fort understood them for little less than ne-cessary Articles of Faith. While thus they were held in much fubjection, as being not able fufficiently to diffinguish the true and effential Parts from those that were added only for Conveniency or Ornament. But as Learning now (the Learning benefit of Printing) became publick, fo almost thebeneft all Men, either through Reading or Conversation, were Literate. Infomuch, that they durit ing. look into the Principles of Religion, and take upon them to discuss the parts thereof. Among thefe, none was more famous than one Martin Martin La-Luther, an Hermit Fryer about thirty two years the oppo-les Indul-old, living about this time at Utitenberg upon the aences. Elbe, within the Dominions of Frederick Duke of j. 38-st. dar. Saxony. This Man, having observ'd diversthings, 1.1. Comnot mention'd in the Belief, call'd Symbolum Apo-ment-fedorum, to be introduc'd lately, examines all; beginning first with the Indulgences that came our this year; though so modestly, as he advertis'd At first only his Superior the Arch-Bishop of Migenta of Modelly fome abuse therein, and pray'd Reformation; not omitting together, as he was of an acute, but vehement Wit, to let forth ninety five Conclusions, and preach publickly against them; (which yet he submitted to the Pope by Letter dated in He writes fune 1518.) Maximilian also, foreseeing whis there these Divisions might tend, (and the rather, Pope. that he found them favour'd not only by Frederick Duke of Savony, but divers other great Per- Aug 18. fonages) wrote to the Pope, defiring him to moderate things fo, as all cause might be taken an wut. derate things to, as an earne inight to taken anway, not only of Disputations, but concerning affortone impertinent Points of Religion. But as the Pope, Pope, about those times, had, (betwixt publick Affairs Concil, and private Liberties) so exhausted the Ecclesiand Private Liberties. affical Revenue, as it was necessary to supply the wants thereof by extraordinary means, he pursu'd his Design, using therein much the help of Lorenzo Pucci Cardinal Sanctorum the Fourth; The Pope who, finding the Schism of the Council of Pila The Pope for far extinguished, as the Roman Church needed the point not fear to reaffume her former Authority, con- of Indulfirm'd the Pope therein. So that, though for geness-not above four hundred years, they had taken on them this and divers Authorities, not known before, he perfuaded their Continuance, left any thing of that kind should feem invalid, or ufurp'd; Especially, where the pretence was, if not the fame, yet of a like Condition. Whereup-on looking further into Records, and finding that Urban the Second, had not only given Indulgences to those, who went Perfonally to the War of the Holy Land; but that his Successfors wholesom, and hurtful Herbs grow, choose yet had bestowed them on such, who being not able to go, would maintain a Soldier there; And only reach to Antiquity in all times, but univer- laftly, having difcover'd that they were granted fality in all places; fince not the Men (who may even against those that were disobedient to the err) but the Doctrine giveth the true denomina- Roman Church, and also to those who gave Motion unto the Church. It will be enough there- ney for building or repairing Churcher in Rome, &c. fore that there was always a Catholick, and a vi- He neither question'd their Right, nor Leo confible Doctrine in the more important parts there-of. And thus were all Controversies (fave those men and Favorites, and as it maintain'd his Augences oppos'd

Sand

thops agand

them.

White-meats on Fasting-days, of choosing their Confessor, and some such Habilities. Had this yet been all, less scandal had follow'd. But without tegard to the end for which they were given, He, by way of Anticipation, bestow'd on several Persons the Money to be levy'd; affigning, among others, to Magdalen his Sifler, and Wife to Francesco Cibo (Natural Son to Pope Innocent the Eighth) all that quarter from Sexony to the Sea fide. And the rather, that in Con-templation of this Marriage, himself had been made Cardinal at fourteen years old, 1489, and therein given a beginning to the Ecclefiastical Greatness of the House of Medici. Besides, he was indebted to Cibo for his Entertainment at Genoïa, at what time he was forc'd to fly the Perfecution of Alexander the Sixth. They again committing this butiness to Arembaldo a Bishop, but a covetous Person, much Rapine was us'd:
The Induspences (as is said) being generally granted to fuch as gave most for them. And as this caus'd much Offence, so again the Fryars Hermits, (by whom they were ordinarily difpene'd) were not a little troubl'd, that the Dominicans had now charge thereof. All which, together with the finful and inordinate life of certain Commiftioners deputed under Arembaldo, for those Levies, together with the so notorious a Sale of twenty Cardinalfhips (as Sandaval himfelf diffembles it not Anno 1517, being notified, oc-casion'd these following Revolutions, which take up a great part of this Hiftory. For, as these Indulgences (upon further examination,) were found to be no elder than is above-mention'd, nor much confirm'd but by a Bull of Clement VI. 1350. (who abridg'd Jubilees from every hundredth year to the fiftieth) nor anciently practis'd at all, but for relaxation of Pennances, or Ecclefiaftical Discipline (without that they were faid to de-liver from any thing towards God) many exceptions were taken against them; so that, though to the Merits of fuch Saints as did works of Superevegation (being a Treasure which might be confumed) they had added the Merits of Christ, by way of supply; yet Luther and others after him, vexed all this again, with that fuecess which shall be told hereafter. Neither did there want fuch as opposed them in England, amongst whom, one who was zealous of God's Honour and the inEngland publick Good, observing that not only Sins towards God, were pardoned for Money, but Of-fences towards the Law compounded for at no great Rates (as shall be told more particularly in its place, where it will appear to what excels this Abuse grew) spake after this manner to some of the principal Clergy. That Punishments might have been left to God, but that they ferve to deter o-thers. But who would be afraid now, when he knows at what he may put away his Crimes? Of what use would our Threatnings for Sins be, if they grow so contemptible as a little Sum of Money would discharge to the Bithim, is not this to make Heaven venal, doth not this reflect so much on Christian Faith, that it makes a non Price for Sin ? Believe me, my Lords, to make our Faults cheap, is to multiply them, and to take away not only that reverence is due to Vertue, but to diffelve those Bonds which knit and hold together both Civil and Religious Worship. For when Men see what they are to pay for their Faults, what will they care for other Redemption ? I would I could fay we were not Aready fallen under force disofteem, when by our enjoyning of cafe Fafting, Prayer, and Jome little Alms, Men find the fuffer no more than what they would gladly endure to fin again; for who is the leaner or poorer for or Pennice ! Let its not then make the Mifteries of being projected, he sent forth these Induspences, on those terms, that it may be obtained for Money, granting besides, the liberty of eating Eggs and which we find so seldom yet without deceit or mischief. which we find so seldom yet without deceit or mischief. Let Mens Sins rather lie against them still than open such easie ways to remit them : And take this Advice in good part, fince it so much concerns us all. What effect yet this Advice took will appear hereafter.

tito, thority. Whereupon, a War against the Tinks Salvation necrenary, or propose everlasting Happiness 1518.

The Differtions of Italy being for the prefent composid, Francis first thought himself at leifure, now to refent our King's affilting of Maximi-lian. But (faith Polydore) because he consider'd as well, that he should get nothing that way, and that withal he was inform'd this butiness cost our King fo much, that the loss thereof might be taken for a reasonable Revenge; (for I find in our Records, that in one Year it cost our King five hundred thousand or fix hundred thoufand Ducats,) he diffembled the matter. Therefore converting Malice into Guile, his only la-. bour was how to corrupt the Cardinal; whom at length, between Bribes and Flatteries, he fo dextoufly won, that he durft commit his De-figns to him. Thefe yet were fuch, as the Cardinal would not abruptly disclose to the King. Francis I. Therefore he faid not much at a time of them, bribes the Cardinal nor without making the King first some Present; again to which yet (faith Polydore) was but part of that which his In-Francis gave him; fo that white the K. confider dthe terest. workmanship or rarity of the Gift, he would convey his meaning, and give those Impressions he most desir'd should remain in the King's mind. At these opportunities, he made no difficulty to say, That Francis jought to him by Letters earnestly (con-Woolfe's That Francis Jougnt to him by Letters earnestly (sont seeding in the mean while his large Bribes) and that Speech to the King all this did reflect on his Majesty, whom that King in his fa did address himself to, by his Mediation. That others your. perchance would suppress and hide these things, as being enough to breed suspicion, but that he would ever preceed clearly and openly with his Majesty. According to which liberty he would take the boldness to advise, That, fince the French King did fue to his Majesty in so submissive a way, as to begin at his Servants, that be could not but think be was in earnest: And for Maximilian (as being often difablig'd) little help, or indeed trust could be expected. Our King also confidering that fo much hereof was true, that if he could not make friendship with Francis, it were not amifs yet to avoid War, embraces the mo-tion. Of which Woolfey makes his advantage, and brings again another Meffage from Francis, to fuch effect, that our King faid openly, that he K Hom? fam well near Woolfey would govern them both. The Saying of French King, having obtained this Interest in the Conduct Cardinal, besides new Gifts, sends him divers polyd.irg. Letters, terming him therein Dominus and Pater, and his Advices Oracles, till at last he thought he might open unto him his Design of having Tournay re-deliver'd for a certain Sum of Money. Woolfey promifeth his affiltance, and hereupon brings the business to the King, and from thence, by his Command, to the Council: Where he openly declares, what was the same it had oof the King Waster to win Therouene and Tournay; in the former of gand by which yet he had get nothing but the gratifying of an Familia to which yet he had get nothing but the gratifying of an familia. unthankful Perfon, which was Maximilian; in the that I.z. unthouslat Perfor, which had MAXIMILIAN; in the that Tar-ather little elfe but a mouber of timeleful and lafected as flowed Subjects; who, that they might be kept in Order and be re-Obedience, would coff more than they were worth. The charge of the Garifon alone heing above twelve those. His cea-fond Paund yearly; befides that of Convoict and Am-Constor. munition. That, after all this Expense, yet we could hold it no longer than it pleased either of the two Princes, between whose Dominions it stood; since being fo remote from the English Pale, it was improbable that from thence we could succour it; so that it were better to let it go fairly, as for a Sum of Money, or the like, than to strive to hold it under so weak and dangerons a Title, as the Sufferance of his Enemies ;

1518. one of which, being Francis, he thought by the resti-tution thereof might be obliged to be his Friend, and the Affront he might receive though the taking it by force, avoided. Neither could Maximilian take it ill in point of Tustice, if we restor'd to Francis a Town formerly in his possession. This being done, that it were mest expedient for all Christendom to join in League with one another, and against the Turk, who lately had made himself formidable. These Reasons were valid enough, had they not come from fo false a ground as the corruption of the Cardinal; (which Polydore continually inculcates:) therefore they were embrac'd by all, but especially the Bishop of Durham, now Lord Privy-Scal; only it was requir'd, how much that Money was, and of what kind those Conditions were? Whereupon it was declar'd, that if it pleas'd the King to hear the Ambaffadors of Francis, he had already demanded leave for them to come over, which al-to he had reason to endeavour; for as I find by our Records, he and Nicolas de Villeroy the French Resident, had in a manner concluded the business in private already. This being granted, Guillaume Gouffier Scignicur de Benivet and Admiral July 9 Records.

Sept. 301200 Men of France, and Estienne de Pencher Bithop of Paris came, with an unruly number for an Ambassade, (their Train being twelve hundred) unto Greenwich; the French yet, betwixt Pride and Diffimu-lation, thought fit not to begin at the Bufiness Ambaflathey most desird to effect. Therefore their fift Over-ture was a Proposition for a League in general betwist all Christian Primes against the Turk, projected by the Pepe the Near before. That the Authors hereof should be both their Masselies. That the Pepe, Emperor, and King of Spain should be admitted because, as Train Their Proposi-1517. Mit. 16. principal Contractions, (if they defined it) within a cer-tain time, and their Allies and Confederates as com-prehended only. This being taken into confidera-

Oftob. 2. tion, upon the fecond of October 1518. a League A League was concluded; which, for being fingular in its concluded kind, and an excellent Precedent for Peace to the Biffland & future Ages, I shall more at large recite, both out of our own and the French Records; and gainst the the rather that it feems to have been the Rule by which our King framed his Actions many Years after, as will appear in this Hiftory

That perfect Friendship and Amity should continue The Arti-Les of it. for ever between them, and their Successors, by Land and Sea; (wherein likewife all their Subjects and Alties were to be comprifed.) That they should be the Friends of the Friends, and the Enemies of the Enemies of each other; insomuch, that, if any of the said Confederates, or ther being a franger to them, flould in-vade any of the faid Confederates prefent Dominions, they should give the said Assailant an Admonition to defill and make reparation; which if he did not, within the space of a Month accept, they should declare themjelves his Enemies, and two Month's after, both by Sea and Land, make War against him, at an equal charge; allowing for this purpose free passage through each others Dominions, paying only for what was taken. That if Civil Wars did arife in any of their faid Countries, none of the Confederates should meddle, unless the said Civil Wars were kindled and maintain'd by some Fo-Civil wars were kinsted and manitath a Josopher Frign Prince. That no one of the Confederates (hould fuffer their Subjects to bear Arms against the other, or [hould key any Forces of Strangers, to be imployed against the faild Confederates, upon pain of being held a Violater of the fail League; which notwithstanding [hould held sum among the rest. That none of the fail Confederates should take the Vassal or Subject of the other into protection, without the consent of the King, to whom formerly he owed Obedience: That all Rebels, Traytors, or superfected of High-Treason, and Fugitives should not be received, entertain'd or favour'd, in any of the Dominions of the Said Confederates; but that, after truenty drys warning and requisition, they part of King Henry, that they upon payment of the ment of booled bould be remanded. That the Pope should have notice intire Sum of fix hundred thousand Crowns, Tournay Crows, of this League; upon condition yet, that if he accepted these Articles within four Months after, he speuld be a principal Contractor in this League, and name his Allies also. That all the Princes before-named should, ties days. Lost all the expenses before-nome pound, within the pace of four Months, be received as principal Contractors, if they defire it, otherwise not, without declaration and request to the faid two Kings. That any other King, Petentate, or chief Lord, might upon his shift be admitted to have the benefit of this Confederation, but not as a principal Contractor. Lastly, That, how foever other Princes should observe or accept the fail Treaty, that yet it should remain inviolable between them two.

Leo X. hereupon, though more defirous of a Dec. 31. General Confederacy against the Turk, accepted this League, as an Introduction thereunto upon the last of December following, naming together fome leffer Allies whom he delired might be compris'd; the Venetians having been nominated al-Jin. 12. ready both by Henry and Francis; upon mature deliberation also, Charles King of Spain enter'! into it, and the rather that Miximilian the Emperor, conceiv'd that all Christian Princes might the fooner be dispos'd thereby to war against the Turk. Though as he died shortly after, the League feem'd restrain'd chiefly to Henry, Francis, and Charles, and particularly to the first Contractors, A Match though not with fuch confidence and forvency concluded as it first began. To reinforce this Treaty also, between the Dau-phin and Francis did propose a Match betwixt the Dauphin the Prinhis Son, and the Princels Mary, which according- cells Mary his Son, and the Princeis autory, which accounting of England ly was * concluded two Days after, upon their of England Octob. 4. Conditions.

That our King should give with his Daughter 333000

Crowns, and Francis as great a Joyature as any King of that Country ever give. That within four Months the Sponfals should be made by the two Kings in their Childrens name. That if the Dauphin died before this Marriage, the next Son of Francis should before this Marriage, the next son of Francis points take the Princes on the fame Conditions. And if the Princess died first, the King's next D. ughter (if he had any) should be given. For further Testimony of this defined Alliance, on King condicated also to remnay exfore Tournay, Mcresigne, and St. Amand, and Tentage to the testing the conditions of the testing the testin the Territorics adj.cent, upon the payment of fix him-be re-dred thousand Crowns, at certain terrus. For which thord, Payment, as also performing of the Merriage, sufficient Hostages should be delivered to the said I wis. That yet out of this Sum the faid Francis 333000 Crowns, for the aforesaid Downy Princess Mary, in case she did not inherit the of England. That the said French King should don, and take into his favour all the Inhabitants of ibe faild City of Tournay, and Places adjacent, referving to them all ancient Privileges; and that King Henry bould the enpen release the Oath of Obedience they had made him. That whereas the Citizens of Tournay did yet owe to King Henry twenty three thousand Liwres, which now the French King had figulated to pay, he should substitute the French King to receive it of them again. That King Henry might carry from Tournay all the Artillery, Munition, and Instruments Journay at the Artificity, Mainton, and Informatis of War, either Offenfiew, or Definitive, Victimals, &C. That in case the Marriage intended should take no effect by the default of Francis, that then Tournay should be delivered back again to King Henry or his Heirs, together with the Profits received in the man. while, without any deduction for reparation of the faid Place. And that the Inhabitants thereof should be difcharg'd from all Superiority or Oath of Ocalience made or acknowledg'd to the faid French King: Upon con-dition that the faid King Henry should restore the faid French King the Sum of fix hundred thousand Crowns, or so much as he should receive thereof. But if the Impediment for Marriage should happen on the On pay-

the id

dox's

cion.

Lordon.

Livers Year, in

Letion for them by

1518. Should remain to the French King. And herein our the Kings, accompanied with their Queens, and 1518. Records and du Giller do so concur, as the chief Madam Lewise the Mother of Francis, and their Difference seems to be only about the Sum of Houshold Officers. The time appointed was the 500000 Crowns, which our Records fay was the Penalty on either fide, for non-performance of the Marriage. There was also at the same time a Treaty concerning the Admiralties in both Kingdoms, having relation to one made the Year Fally 16. precedent July 16. and that of April 5. 1515. By which it was agreed, That all Suits, upon occasion of A Fresty removed to London before the Admiral and Vice-Adconcern mival, or their Deputies, and the Master of the Rolls Admiral of England; and at Rouen before the Admiral and Admington of France, their Lieutennis, and the bothking first President of the Parliament in Normandy; who, downs.

upon appeal of the Parties on either side, were bound to give a definitive Sentence within the Space of one Year; give a diffusive southme putton to espace of one I car; which, in cose of weeeffire, might be executed by firing hand, or main force. The faid Appeals yet might be brought before the King's Council on either fale, there to be determined a finitively within the space of fix Months, &c. All things being thus feeled for further extraoresis that Princeto Months. ture quietness, the Princess Mary was promised OR 11. The Print and * betroathed to the Dauphin in St-Paul's in cels Mary London. And the Earl of Worcester, with Nicolas cels May London. And the Earl of the overlier, with Micolas betterful Upf new Bilhop of Ely, and a Train equal to that to the Olauphin of Boniver, were fent to require performance in Spaul's from Francis, who thereupon * took his Oath, Church, gave eight Hoftages for payment on the Rendition of Tournay, and contracted the Sponfals in the Dec. 14 name of his Son. In sequence whereof, Feb. 8. Dec. 19. following the Earl of Worcefter delivered Towns, The state of the s Chaftillon to enter it with Banner display'd, but rolled up, it being (as he faid) voluntarily yielded, and not gotten by Conquest. Our Writers add, that by Francis four hundred thousand Crowns were allowed our King, for the building of the Citadel; but because neither the French nor our Records (from whom I have taken the effect of these Treaties) mention it, I leave it to the discretion of the Reader. Only I must Whele has not forget what I find concerning the Cardinal's fatisfaction in this particular, who had twelve thousand Livres Tournois yearly, for relinquishing the Bi-thopick, ney should be distributed among them by the The Engl. French King, its ut consuevissint facere olim ejus Considers Majores; as had been customary amongst bis An-have Money given cestors. Thus was Tournay restor'd again to the French, the Ir. K. however divers concurrent Articles were not perform'd afterwards, as will appear.

the Bilhopick of Tournay. As for the other chief Counfellors, Polydore faith, a certain Sum of Money should be distributed among them by the Howbeit, it was agreed betwixt them, that John Duke of Albany should not be permitted to return to Scotland any more; it being not thought fit by our King, that one who was next in fuc-cession to James his Nephew, should have charge over him. Moreover, it was agreed that this young King should be comprehended in the League. This particular being refolved a good while since, though not fully signed till now, May 18. was the cause that Queen Margaret * return'd to Scotland, where her Husband met her at Barwick; yet fo, as there was not thenceforth that intire Love formerly observ'd betwixt them. Our Ambaffadors being still in France, the Bishop of Ely went to fee the Queen at Amboife, from whence Octobes, he certified our King, that he faw the Dauphin Anharer (now almost a Year old) and imbraced and kisfed him. Four days after the above-mention'd rween the Treaty, being the eighth of Ottober 1518. anoagreed on ther was concluded for an interview betwirt be found, carried on great Horses before him.

laft of fuly 1519, at Sandinfeld in Picardy, or some other Neutral place, according as their Deputies on either fide should advise; which upon the first of April following were to meet together for this purpofe.

While Affairs past thus with France and Scotland, the Pope fent Laurentius Campejus Cardinal as Legace, hither; to procure a géneral League among Christian Princes (or at least a quinquennial Truce) for a War against the Turk. Be-sides, he gave him Authority to demand a Tenth from our Clergy, as also a Commission (frecified in a Bull) wherein Cardinal Woolfey and himself had Legatine power to visit Monasteries. This Legate (called by Polydore, Inter Juris-confults Jure-evalutifforms; the mest a Lawyer of all the Lawyers) coming to Calais was desired by our June 29. Cardinal to flay there, as our * Historians write, Antig. till he had procured from Rome that Woolfey might Brit. be join'd in the aforefaid Commission with him; but, as I find in our Records and Polydore, until Polyd. he had obtain'd from the Pope, that Hidrian de Castello, the Cardinal (now in Prison for a Confpiracy against the Pope) might be devested from the Bishoprick of Bath, and the Dignity confer-red on him; of which also he had the greater hope, that the Pope (as I find by our Records) had condemn'd him for the faid Conspiracy. Besides, it was the care of our Cardinal, to suffer none to have access to our King, whom he had not first obliged. Therefore our Cardinal Cardinal prefented him, together with a promife to affile the prefented him, together with a promife to affile the promife to affile the promife to affile the promife to affile the promife to the billoprick of Salisbury when it floud the promife the promise the promife the promife the promise to affile the promise the promise to affile the promise the promise to affile the promise the also the * night before his coming to London, he July 28. fent him twelve Mules, with empty Coffers fair-ly covered; fome of which yet were overturn'd and broken in his paffage † through the City, † July 29. to the great flame of Campejus; who finding at laft his demand for a Tenth rejected by our Clergy, advertiles the Pope, and proceeds to the other point of visiting Monasteries. But our cunning Cardinal thinking himself able enough to discharge this Office alone, (while Campejus staid in England) dispatches John Clarke Doctor of Law to the Pope, both to give account of this bufiness, and to obtain the whole Power for himself. This Clarke coming to Rome, negotiated by our King's commandment, fo well on the Cardinal's behalf, that he obtained from the Pope a *Bull, whereby (Campejus being now *Dat Jane revoked) he was made Legat à Latere, and en-10.1519. abled to visit not only Monasteries, but all the Cardinal Clergy of England, and dispence with Church-Woolley's Laws for one Year next enfuing the date there- Power. of: Which though it gave him great Power, ministred much Offence; as abridging the Bishops Power, and scandalizing the whole Clergy, who were fo defam'd by the Cardinal's Information, that they were termed Dati in reprobum sensum, given up to a reprobate fense, and the like, in the original Bull among our Records, which Ishould have inferted in toto contextu intire, but that it is too long and infamous to the Hierarchy, and all religious Perfons. And now (faith Polydore) the Cardinal's Pride did fo prodigiously increase, His prethat on folemn Feaft Days, he would fay M /s digitor after the manner of the Pope himfelf, not only Bishops and Abbots serving him therein, but even Dukes and Earls giving him Water and the Torvel. Befides, not contented with the Crofs of York to be carried before him, he added another of his Legacy, which two of the tallest Pricits that could

Infomuch

1513. Intemuch (as Polydore faith) it grew to a Jest, as which pass'd not without trouble; there being to that which follow'd. For, erecting a parti-cular Court of Jurisdiction, which he call'd the Lights Court, and placing in it as Judge one folia Allian Doctor of Law, thought to be a perjurd wicked Person, all manner of Rapines and Extertions were committed there. For making enquiry into the life of every Body, no offence elcap'd Cenfure and Punishment, unless privately they gave Money; of which they found two Commodities: One that it did cost less, the other that it exempted them from shame. Thus as the Rules of Confcience are in many cases of a greater extent, than those of the Law, so he found means to fearch even into their fecretest And Ar corners. Befides, under this colour he arrogated birrary power to call in question the Executors of Proceed-Wills, and the like. He fummon'd also all Reliings. gious Persons of what fort soever before him; who, casting themselves at his feet, were grievoufly chidden, and terrifi'd with Expulsion, till they had compounded. Befides, all Spiritual I ivings that fell were conferr'd on his Creatures. The Arch The Archbishop of Canterbury understanding how Bishop of all Orders were thus ransack'd by the Cardinal, Bishop of Canterbury goes to the King, and acquaints him with it. acquaints The King replies, that he should not have beard hereef but by him; adding, that no Man is so blind any the King Posyd Virg. Fond ling, where, as in his own House; Therefore, I pray you, Auswer, field he, Fither, go to Woolsby, and tell him, if any thing be amifs, that he amend it. This grave Per-fon hereupon admonishes him, and afterwards particularly told him, that in medling with the last Wills and Testament of the dead, he assumed a Power, not so much as claim'd by the Pope himfelf, and for disposing some Benefices in the gift of the Nobility, and other great Perfons, he thought he ulurp'd too much upon them. All the ule Weelfey made thereof was to hate the Arch-hishop, with whom he was formerly offended; only because (as Polydore hath it) he styl'd himfelf in the Subscription of his Letter Gulielmus Frater Cantuariensis, your Brother William Cant. left the Archbishop should do him ill Offices, he temper'd his Speech for the time. But shortly after his Agent John Allen being accus'd by one John London a Prieft, it appear'd fufficiently that He grows all the former Allegations against Woolfey were more Mo true; which made our King rebuke the Cardinal fo fharply, that after that time, he became if not better, yet more wary than before: at this time also certain abuses about Sanctuaries were taken away by the King's Authority in fequence of a Bull granted to that purpose by Julius the Second 1504. June 19. to King Harry the Se-

Let us turn our Eyes on foreign Bufineffes, now fomewhat intermitted. Charles intending a journey into Spain, the French King offer'd him the convenience of paffing through France, and Hostages for fecurity, together with the Keys of the Ciries be should go thorough; but Charles (as our Ambassidors write) retus d, faying, if he landed any where it should be in England. According to which Resolution, taking Ship, he came to Spain aug. 25. 1517. as Sandoval hathit, (our Records fay he fet not to Sea till Sept. 8.) where he found things much discomposed, through the severity of the Cardinal Ximenes. Besides, there wanted not suspicion that many would have fet up his Brother Ferdinand against him, whom therefore he shortly after sent to Flanders. Howsoever Ximenes dy'd, not without probability that he was poylon'd, though by dion for the confervation of their Liberties whom is uncertain. Charles his first Art was (which endur'd some years following, with more calling a Cortes or Parliament in Castilla and Leon, method than in such popular Commotions are if one Crofs did not fuffice for the expiation of no. little contention whether the People should his Sins. All this yet was but a kind of prelude fulfil fivear Obedience to Charles, or he the obfervance of their ancient Laws, Liberties, and Priviledges, which yet at last was so temper'd, as they came near in time together; though, for conferring the Royal Dignity, fome particular Persons were induc'd to swear first. He also caus'd Justs and Tourneys to be held according Jan. to the manner of that Age: Into which Sandsvall faith, fixty Cavaliers enter'd, their Lances pointed with Diamonds, who also encountred for roughly, that most of them were overthrown and fore hort, and twelve Horses kill'd; though yet this was little in regard of a Justs that * follow'd, at which seven of the Actors were killed outright; wherein nevertheless Charles, though very young, appear'd, breaking three Lances in four Cariers. After this, establishing some Laws, and obtaining fome Money from his People, he went to Aragon, where he call'd a Cortes likewife; and fhortly after, (hearing, that fince the death of Horruc Barbarella, who from a low fortune and birth, made himfelf first a formidable Pirat, then * King of Argier) Hariadin Barbaroffa his Bro- * 151". ther, succeeded in that Kingdom; and in the exercife of Piratey,) fent Don Hugo de Moncada Vice-roy of Sicily to Argier, with as ill fuccefs as their Expeditions thither have commonly prov'd. Not long after which, news was brought him of the death of Louise of France, whom by the Treaty of Noyon he should have marry'd, and of the fickness of Maximilian; who, now growing old and infirm, determin'd to make one of his Grand-children Emperor: Affembling for this purpose a Diet at Augsburgh, and proposing particularly Ferdinand; as believing the Electors Aug-would iooner choose him, than greaten any other Prince with that Accelfion. But as he alone could not dispose this business, so both Francis and Charles were earnest in it. Our King also not cmitting to discover how Germany stood affected to him; and the rather, that the Pope, as I find by our Records, did encourage him thereanto. Meximilians death upon a differency Janu-Meximilians death upon a difference of the state Francis and Charles afpir d to this Dignity; faying nevertheless, that the Electors of Alayentz, Colon, K Henry, and Tryers flood fo affected, that if our King had Francisthe put in fooner, and before they were engaged, he L and thought his Majesty might have carry dit, fince of spain the Popes Nuncio there affirm d still he had Com-Competimission from his Holiness to affift him; as being tors for defirous it were bestow'd on any rather than the Emeither Charles or Francis, but especially on Charles, pire. Though at last, finding that betwixt Money given, and Forces rais'd by Charles, he would prevail, his Holines thought fit to comply, and give his assent: and the rather, that the Duke of Saxony, whom the Electors once nominated, refused it. Whereupon June 28, 1519. Charles Jun 28, was publickly cholen at Framfort; News whereof Charles the being brought to Barcelona, at first rejoye'd, but Fish choafterwards troubled him; as confidering what a fin Empeburden he had undertaken, especially in a time rer. when the Turk made his approaches against Christendom. Yet, were not these all his Cares; for, as his Clergy in Spain was so offended at the demand of a tenth of their Revenue towards a War against Infidels, that there was Coffatio à Sander. Divinis, no Divine Service, (as Sandoval hath it) for above four Months in all the Kingdom; and as the People again began a dangerous Infurre-

Vol. II.

derate.

1517

August.

Sept. 7 1517.

cover'd.

ordinarily found) so he had much to do at home.

Besides the People in Austria began another no less dangerous in those parts, and of little less Continuance. Again, Francis, who was now in good correspondence with our King, press'd the reflication of Navarre, according to the Treaty of Nojen, and rais'd him troubles in Naples and Sicily. All which important Affairs yet were pretermitted, only to comply with the Ceremony (for it was no more) of receiving the Imperial Crown, fo fecure was he of all things but his Title; only in the midft of these Afflictions, the happy news of the Difcovery, and begun Con-Mexicodif- quest of Mexico, and Nueva Elpanna arriv'd; which though worthy a particular Relation, I shall not infert, left I should too much increase the bulk of this History. Though for giving a tast thereunto, I shall not omit to tell my Reader, that Hernando Cortes, undertaker thereof, going with about four hundred Spanish Foot, and fisteen Horfe, and feven little Field-Pieces, into many populous, but divertly affected Kingdoms, did fo dexteroufly behave himfelf, that, playing the part fometimes of an Ambaffador, and fomerimes of a Soldier, he prevail'd himfelf of all. And, in conclusion, notwithstanding the opposition both of his Country-men and Enemies, laid a foundation of a greater Dominion than any Man before him did. Before yet I come to the Actions of the New Emperor, I shall exhibit the Description of Maximilian I have collected out of se-

The Character of an Empemany. He was Crown'd Emperor.

his own

Verfe.

H.:4.

resview

between

veral Authors.

This Maximilian, being King of the Romans, and call'd Emperor, though never Crown'd by that Title, gave much occasion of discourse concerning the reason thereof; some faying, he declin'd the charge and hazzard of going into Italy for receiving the Imperial Crown at the Popes hands; others believing, that according to his often profession, he meant first to be Emperor of Constantinople, which he faid was his most lawful Title. As for his Education, he was a Prince brought up in much Ignorance, yet studious to repair that defect by Conversation with the more learned His bounty was observ'd fuch, that it extended even to the difabling him in the purfuit of his Defigns; wherein he made a Royal vertue Criminal. He had treated with the Princes of his time, with fo ill fuccefs, that he knew not in what posture to keep himself; being in the fame danger for the most part, whether his faith were broken or theirs. This made him devout even to Superflition. For his Enterprifes in the War, as they were many, fo they ended differently, he getting fometimes more by a bad He wrote Peace, than a just War. His spare time he employ d in Poetry, writing the Hiftory of his Life History in in Dutch Verse, which Book by Pedro Mexia is call'd Teur danet, and another call'd Puerto de la Harra. One of his chiefest happinesses was, that his Posterity came to enjoy some of the greatest and best parts of Europe. He was of the Order of the Garter, and his Obfequy was folemnly kept in St. Pauls, by our King and the Knights of that Fellowship.

I must remember now, that at the conclusion of the Treaty with France, October 8. 1518. it was agreed betwixt both Princes, that there should be an Interview in July 1519, which yet took not effect, because of the death of Maximilian, and the occasions ensuing formerly mentioned; fore that the Interview should not be in a Neutral place, therefore it was put off till 1520; both Kings in but that King Henry, his Queen, and the & the mean while agreeing not to cut off their the Kings Beards, till they faw each other. Francis having of England also now a second Son, desir'd our King to give and Frame him his Name; which our King accepted kindly, then that perfect of filling him Hans, (aircrwards King, and fecond filling him Hans, (aircrwards King, and fecond flexible to that name.) Neither did he omit any thing, [fig yet the limits of Guifnes or the English Pales which might argue his respect. Therefore he 1719. follicites our Cardinal (whom he call'd his Father and Coufin) fill with Gifts, fends Pretents to the Princels Mary, and leaves nothing unattempted which might fecure him on that fide, tempted which night better him of this long, knowing well how puilfant an Enemy he had provok'd. Charles on the other fide, confidering Charlesthe how much it concern'd him to keep the Cardinal V. bibes the Cardinal V. at his Devotion, countermines Francis in his own mal. way. On which occasion I shall observe, that, as fince the discoveries of the Indies, Coin hath been much more plentiful, fo greater matters have been done in these later times by Bribes, than by the Sword; those who have Money (that is to fay, a Seed which will fpring any thing in corrupt Minds) finding means, either in the Authors or the Actors in butineffes, to difpose them to their ends, or at least to make advantage of the intelligence they receive from them. Francis suspecting what might follow hereupon, provides betimes to keep the Scots his friends; therefore though it was his motion formerly to comprife the young King and that Nation in general within his League with England, yet now he strives as much to withdraw them: Therefore when our King fent to require their Lege. Oath thereunto, they refus'd; fo that all that bufiness ended in a Truce only for one year. And Who here I must not omit to relate the Cardinal's ex-aims ar himfelf Pope, did ever comply with those, who he thought might be his best Assistance. Therefore now that Charles was grown the more Potent, and that, besides it was manifest, that, to which Party foever our King inclin'd, he would turn the Ballance, he hop'd by favouring Charles to obtain his defire. Neither wanted he continual Prefents on his part equal to, if not exceeding the others; fo that now he rejected the affillance of Francis, though offering him the Voices of fourteen Cardinals (as I find by our Records) and applies himself to Charles; Neverthe- And sides lefs the design for the Interview with Francis con- with tinu'd; which being minuted by our Ambassador Charles Sir Thomas Bolen, was continu'd by his Succef-for in France Sir Richard Wingfield; among whose Difpatches (extant in our Kecords) I find this passage in a Letter to the King, March 16. I have March 16. presented to the French King the Sword, for the nimble handling whereof, he hath nor knoweth no feat, vie handing whereef, he hato nor knoweth no fear, but thength it not maniable: And call d the Admiral to him, and cau's d him to feel the weight thereof, who show'd him that he had feen your Grace weidh one more weighty. But for such promise as he had made your Highnels, he might not discover it; samade to the same that the same had been same to the same to the same had been same to the same had been same to the same had been same to the sa muse four Highests, we might not affected it; fa-ving that it was by means of a Gantlet. The French King defires one of those Gantlets, and he will find your Grace such a pair of Cuirasses, as your Grace buth not feen, the feeret whereof is for the enfichear-ing of fuels weight, as refts upon the Chiralles, which is commonly born by the Shoulders, and in this Cui-rals the Shoulder hears no burden. All which I have fet down, to awaken the industry of these times in fuch Inventions. I will come now to the order of the Interview, remitted both by our King and Francis unto the Cardinal's direction. Who The Inaccordingly, upon the 12th of March 1520, de-tirview clar'd this Order. That, in regard his King was regoes to pass the Seas, to his Danger and Cost, and should March 12, leave his Kingdom, only to do Francis Horour: There-Downger of France | bould come to Guifnes, and the French King, bis Queen, and Madam Louise his Mother to Ardres, before the end of May next; and lair, &cc.

The Or-

April. To be

1520. and there, in fine open place, near the Confines of the What have we to do with this Calais, that lies in the Trouch, (which shall be declared by Deputies on either Continent, and costs us more than it is worth? I would. Trench, (which shall be declared by Departer or either yide) the faid Yrench King parting from Ardres the sime day, and hour, and coming to the fail place (where no Tou was to be pitched blood meet the faid King Henry within his carn Turviviries, and there shall fallete one another, and spak tegether on Horseback, as long as they pleased. This being done, that the French King should return to Ardres, and King Henry to Guisses. The next day that the fail d Kings that he was the fail of Kings to the New to the test to the fail of Kings to the New to the test to the fail of Kings to the New York to th their Deputies; where, after Salutations on both files, King Henry bould go to Ardres to fee and dine with Amy eventy joined go to Medics to fee and aise with the Succe of France, and his Mother, and the French King to Guilnes, to fee and dime with the Lucen of Englands, and Dougger of France. That the faid interview found be celebrated with Tourneys and Jults, and Exercises of Arms, as well on Foot, as on that the fair of the fairness of the fair of the fairness of th Horseback, in some place chosen by the said Deputies, betwint Guisnes and Ardres; which should be ditch'd, betwiest Guilnes and Ardres; which floudd be ditel'd, fortified, and guarded by an equal number of Person to be appointed by the said Kings. And that, during the said Exercise of Arms, the Queen's and their Train might familiarly conveys together, in the Evening still returning to their several Lodgings of Ardres and Guilness. That the boneur and precedence, should be given to them still, who came to see the other. That the number of the Persons and Horses permitted to be this finerwien, should be fight in certain Rolls by the faid Kings, and should not be increased without mu-tual Consent. That two Gentlemen with an equi numher of followers should watch continually upon the High-ways, as well for surety of the said King's Persons, as for the safar conducting the Victuals. And that these over might should give account, to their siveral Kings and Councilors, of their Charge. That the Soldiers of the Garrisons of Boulogne and Calais should not come the Garrions of Doulogue and Landspound on temer, without express license of both Kings. I find also that it was agreed, that the number of frekes at Tourney should be determined by the Ladies; who therefore were required to come thinker from all places, that could furnish Beauty, and worth enough to deserve so much Honour. This being concluded, the Earl of Woreeser, on our Kings part, and Monstean de Chastillon on the part of Francis, laid out the ground for these Triumphs, betwixt Guisnes and Ardres, but within the English Pale. While thefe Magnificences were preparing, much discourse past within the English betwixt both Princes, and the Ambaifadors refident in either Court, concerning the Ancient forms us'd at great Solemnities. Among which it appears, in a dispatch of Wingfield's, that Franeis told him, how he had heard that our Edward, (I think he meant Edward the Third,) was us'd at fuch times to have his meat carry'd up by Cavaliers on Horse-back; But to let these things pass, and come to our History, I find Francis purfu'd still his Point, and is to confident now of the Cardinals favour, that he durst make an o-The Prench Verture to him, for refloring Calair, and all the K. treats other Towns in the English Pale, for a certain with West Sum of Money. Neither was it ill enterctain'd by about by the Cardinal; though the difficulty of effecttion of Ca- ing it did fomewhat deter him. For as the narrow Seas have been (time out of mind) under the Jurisdiction of the English, and that our Ships, in making and keeping the paffage over, were a kind of Bridge, fo it could not but feem strange, to every Man well-affected to his Country, that any Motion should be made, whereby we might loofe the further end thereof, and therein deprive our felves of a Landing-place. There- | fign to break this Interview, as well, as all other fore the Cardinal did not think fit to propose the business at once, nor without discovering hrit, and Francis nad given using its action with the general fort. For cis desir'd to hold the Territory of Milan, and to with the general fort. For cis desir'd to hold the Francis having * once.

Continent, and coffs us more than it is worth? I would we were benefity rid of it. The time now drew near, when, according to the Agreement, the two Kings were to meet betwixt Guifnes and Ardres. This also was feconded much by the Cardinal, who between Pride and Vanity, desir'd to see Preparation on the constitution of t thefe two together; whom he was generally the latersthought to govern. He knew also his Presents view, would not be little; therefore he personaled our King to build fome fuch House near Guefres, as might be worthy the Reception of two fo great Princes. To perform this, two thousand Arti-ficers were appointed. The Model whereof is flill extant in Greenwich, among those many rare Pictures, which the most vertuous Prince, King Charles my good King and Muster hath. The Cardinal also summons the prime Nobility to attend the King this Journey, with that felendor which might become Persons of their Dignicy. Some of the more thrifty fort yet, and especially the Duke of Buckingbam repin'd hereat, laying the fault of this expence on the Cardinal chiefly, who hearing thereof, for this as well as fome other causes, hereafter mention'd, resolv'd his ruine.

Charles the Emperor hearing now of thefe preparations for the Interview, thought fit perfonally to treat with our King, concerning the breaking it off, as well as all other friendship with Francis. For those Ambassadors whom he had fent before to the English Court for this purpofe, had fail'd, our King alledging to them for all other Reasons, his Promise given. Neither could they deny, but the engagement was deep, for a King of Arms had been in the Frglish Court on the part of Francis, with a Proclamation, declaring that, in June next, the two Kings, Henry and Francis, with fourteen Aids, would, in a Camp betwixt Ardres and Gusfus, answer all Comers that were Gentlemen, at Tilt, Tourney, and Barriers. The like Proclamation was made by Ciarenceaux in the French Court. And yet these Defies stope not there, for they were sent by our King to the Low-Countries, Burgundy, German, and by Francis into Spain, and Italy. And now our principal Noblemen had made themselves ready to attend the King. Among whom, none was fo gorgeous as the Duke of Buckingham.; who, finding the King yet not ready to fee forth, went before to fee fome Lands he had in Kent. But his Tenants exclaiming there against one Charles Knewer his Steward or Surveyor, for exacting on them, the Duke discharg'd him. This piece of Justice yet prov'd afterwards the cause of his Overthrow, as shall be declard in his place, fo fatal was it to that House of the * Staf- v.t.Rith.2, fords to fuffer by their Servants. Our King find- v.t.Rith.2, ing now the time of meeting to grow near, comes to Canterbury May 25, intending there to pass his Whitfortide. This while Charles the Em- May 25. peror had fo laid his journey from Spain, that Charleste the day following, himfelf accompany'd with V comes divers, not only Lords but fair Ladies comes un- to Dever, expectedly to Dovar. Our Cardinal hearing this, polled away prefently, to affure him of his wel-May 16, come. Our King allo the next day after, very early, came to Dover Caftle, where the Emperor was lodg'd, who met him on the Stairs, where being faluted by our King, and afterwards conducted to his Chamber, Charles continues his De-Correspondence with Francis: for both Charles business at once, nor without discovering first, and Francis had great designs at that time; Fran-Seres. in his ordinary Speech, and at his Table; when-foever there was question of foreign Business. got under Charles the Eighth, did again fo sud-denly † loose, that it seem'd no place there was † 1:995. Vol. II. F 2 strong them in) besides, he purpos'd to re-establish

Henry d'albret in the Kingdom of Navarre, according to the Treaty of Noyon. Again, the Duke of Gueldres, being taken under his Protection, he could do no less than defend him against Charles, who laboured to bring that Province into subjection : But especially, the right he conceived to have in the Dutchy of Burgundy, he defired to conferve, against the pretences of Charles; who, on the other fide, endeavour'd to oppose him in all thefe Places; and was, befides, offended that Francis, declining an Accord made before in * Francis, had extorted from him new Conditions in the Treaty at † Noyon. There-* 1515. 1 1516. fore, knowing no Prince could fo much help or hinder him in these Assairs, as our King, he offers more advantagious Conditions than Francis did. And to make this the more acceptable yet, he had largely both prefented the Cardinal, and promis'd (if ever occasion happen'd) to make him Pope. And that he might the better in Gifts exceed his Competitor Francis, a great part of the Spoils of Mexico had been brought him. In the first part our King excus'd himself, as being far engag'd in honour to meet Francis; but for the latter, he bid him be confident, as foon as this Interview was paft. From thence then, our King May 27. invited him to Canterbury, where he gladly faw his Aunt Queen Katherine; the Queen Dowager of France also (once proposed for his Wife) feem'd very considerable, as being for her Beauty much celebrated by the English and French Writers. And, if we may believe Polydore, his Paffion in feeing of her was fad, as he could not be perfuaded to dance, and not that Spanish gravity, which, in his Age, and amongst such Company, might well have been laid aside. Therefore, having pass'd over the Whitsonide Holy-Days in those Sports and Entertainments, which * May 20 our King gave him, he * departs to Sandwich, t May 30, whence † taking Ship he arriv'd in his native Country of Flanders, while our King the same May 31. day past to Dover; and thence * with all his Train and Company to Calais. The 4th of June, lune 4. the King, two Queens, and all the reft, who were affign'd in his Roll or Lift, remov'd to his Princely Lodging near Guifnes, being a Square of Timber, whereof every tide contain'd three hundred twenty eight Foot, with a Savage be-K. Henry goes to fore it, carrying a Bow and Arrows, and the the place words Cui adbæreo præest; he governs with whom I side: The parts of which great Building, having of Interbeen artificially framed in England, were now put together, and afterwards taken afunder, and A Defcil brought home. This, again, was most sumptu-ption of unifold, especially the Chappel; from which a private Gallery reached to the strong Castle of Guisnes. The House for Francis (near Ardres) was a Building rather great than coftly, as being erected with fuch Materials, as could be gotten in hafte; his first Intention being to lodge in a rich Pavilion of Cloth of Gold, until the Wind threw it down. Before yet these Kings met together, the Cardinal went to fee Francis, and treat with him concerning fome particulars, about the Marriage betwixt the Dauphin and Prince's Mary: The fubitance whereof was, (as I find by the French Records) That after the Million of Crowns (agreed on in May 1515.) were fatisfied, Francis Thould pay at Calais one hundred thousand Livres Tournois yearly to our King, until the Marriage were solemnized in the face of the Church; and fo, during the life of the faid Henry; after which if the Dauphin should in Right of his Wife, be King of England, to her and her Heirs. But if the Marriage were not accomplished, then the faid payment should

All which were concluded the 6th of June 1520. June 6. The day following the Interview began. The The In-Signal of departing was a warning Piece, to be terview that, when either of the Kings were ready. This Jane 7. being given, they both iflued forth royally at-tended. There was fome flay yet, upon a re-port, that the Numbers exceeded the Lifts agreed on. Francis flopp'd first, and our King after-wards; it being told him by the Lord as bergaveny, the French were twice as many. But the Earl of Strenderry affirming, the French were more afraid of the English, than the English of them, they went on, our King (being thought the goodliest Prince of his time) appearing somewhat before the reft. The French King beholding the demeanour of the English a while, rode himfelf also before his Train, the Duke of Bourbon bearing a naked Sword before him, and his Admiral and Mafter of the Horfe following him. Our King observing this, caus'd the Marquiss Dorset, who bare the Sword of Estate to draw it, and go on likewife. At last coming near, and the Trumpets founding on both fides, they both alighted in the Vailey of 20 2 ..., and faluted each other, paffing from the each arm in Arm to a Tent of Cloth of Gold erested there (the first Agreement concerning these Points, being it feems so much alter'd.) Where, Compliments being pass'd on both fides they took leave, and return'd to their feveral Lodgings. Upon the 9th both Kings came to view the Camp, or June 9. Place of Exercise, being 300 Yards long and 106 broad, well ditch'd and senoid, save at the entries; having on the side Scaffolds creeked for the Beholders. There were also fet up two artificial Trees (the one a Hawthorne for Henry our King, the other a Frambousier or Raspis-bush for Francis) with the Arms of the two Kings and their feveral Aids, on which also the Articles of Just, Tourney and Barriers were faffned. The Aiders The Jufts. on the English side were the Duke of Suffalk, the Marquils Dorfet, Sir William Kingston, Sir Richard Jerningham, Sir Giles Capel, Mr. Nicholas Careur., John Markett Burk Cape, Mr. Nethons Adia 1, 3 and Mr. Anthony Knewt. On the French Party were Monfieur le Due de Vindojne, Mr. de Saint Pol, Mr. de Montmoraney, Mr. de Brucall, and Maister Tabanes.

Messey, Maister de Brucall, and Maister Tabanes. To encounter these again, divers noble Persons, and good Cavaliers came from Foreign Countries; who, prefenting their Arms to the Heralds, were thereupon admitted to the Exercise, being appointed upon Mnday the 11th, when fane tre the Queens on both fides and Ladies coming to the place, the Kings armed themselves, with their Aids, who did wear fuitable Liveries on either fide. I will not here particularly fet down the courses of these Champions, since Hall, who E. Hall. feems to have been an Eye-witness, relates them at large. And less shall I recount their Devices, approaching much to the Rebus of Pivar.he; according (perchance) to the manner of that time. Let it fuffice that, among all, none did better (if fo well) as the two kings, and effecially ours; who disabled Monsteur de Gr. ndeville at the fecond Course to run any more that Day. Monstein de Montanzano, held him yet better to it, yet fo, as to get no advantage. This Exer-June 16. cife continued four Days together: The next Day, the French King came early to Guifnes, with a small Train; our King also (after giving him his bien-venu) departing with the like Equipage to Ardres; so that they pass d that Day with fea-fling and dancing with the Queens, and other Ladies on either side. Only I observe our King's manner was more genteel than that of Francis:

1520. For, coming difguis'd in Masking Clothes, he not only prevented Treachery against his Per-fon, when any was intended, but avoided conteffation for Precedence in his return home, that night, when he met Enneis by the way. On Sunday * they repos'd, for the honour of that June 17. Day; and on Monday for foul Weather. On Tuefday they continued their Courfes with a like honour: On Wednesday, being the twen-June 20 tieth, the Turney began; where with Swords was a rude Chamaillis; yet the Kings and their Aids beat the Counter-party to a difarming: Where our King, particularly, got that honour, that a brave French noble Man with whom he fought, prefented him his Horse as a gage of his being overcome. The next Day our King in Tourny likewife broke the Poldron of Mons. de Flar, over, and made him depart the Camp. But this Sport was fo rough, that four of the Aids being hurt, others were substituted in their places. The June 22. 22d. the Barriers began; and, after it, the caffing of Hand-spears or Darts, with the Target, and fighting with the two-handed Sword. At which Exercife likewife much Commendations was given to either King. For celebrating these Magnificences also, the Cardinal solemnly sung an high M.fs, being attended in the most Pontifical manner. At the close whereof, he dispenced the Treasure of the Roman Church (being the Indulgences granted by Leo X.) unto the two Kings, who that Day din'd together by themfeives, their Queens eating together also in an other Room: This being done, they both turn'd to Barriers, where our King, with a few ftroaks, difarm'd his Adverfary. The next Day our King, with his Sifter Queen Mary, went in Masking Apparel to fee the Franch Queen at Ardres, Francis likewife going to the English Queen. At the return they alighted, and after many Compliments, Embraces, and rich Prefents to each other, bid Adieu the twenty fourth of June. Po-June 24. lydore observes yet, that there was some abruptnass in the furewell; and faith Francis told our King, that our Nation did not well comply with the The two French in their mutual Visits. But our King put-ting this off discreetly, their discourse passed Kings pirt. E Hall. no further. And perchance the occasion of this Mal-entendu, was, that the French gave forth, Calais should be deliver'd up for Money. The next Day the King and all his Train departed to Calay the King and an instrain departed to Landing, giving license unto many there to return unJuly 10. to England. Upon the 10th of July, the Emperor being at Graveling, (with his Aunt the Lady Amgaret) our king (at their Request) adAn Intermits another Interview. To this purpose going view be- towards Graveling, the Emperor met him on the tween V. way, and conducted him thither, giving for the Chinest V. way, and conducted him thither, giving for the Chinest V. way, and conducted him thither, giving for the Chinest V. way, and conducted him thither, giving for the Chinest V. way, and conducted him thickness, given the Chinest V. way, and conducted him thickness, given the Chinest V. way, and conduc Hony. July 11: the Emperor and his Aunt the Lady Margaret went with our King to Calais, where much Maskings, and Magnificences paffing, Bufineffes yet were not forget. For our King (together with Monsteur de-la-Roche, employ'd for Francis) read and offer'd to Charles (now Emperor) the Tripartite League, fign'd betwixt them formerly; requiring him to enter thereunto by the name of Emperor (as I conceive it.) But the Emperor having formerly fignd the League by the name of Grarles, and befides destring mere the accomplishing of his Designs in Italy, and else-where, than to confirm that Agreement, fo deferr'd or avoided this Proposition; that I find not what effect it prefently took. But it is probable he was not willing to engage our King any further in being, the third after his coming; but our King using a courteous kind of violence to make him flay, the rumour went among the Emperor's Servants, that he was detain'd; but the next day clear d this: for the Emperor, being conducted fome part of his way towards Graveling, was courteoully bid farewell, and prefented with a brave Courfer richly trapped. The French King hearing of the learning and property and propositions of the formal forms and propositions. ing of these kind passages, and remembring particulary that Charles, by his first agreement had constituted our King, Arbiter of all emergent differences, took this Interview extreamly ill; and the rather that he heard fome muttering of a Match proposed by the I ady Margaret, betwixt the Emperor and the Princess M. 17, though a Child. Which yet was a missake, it being not treated of feriously (as the s_i with writers have it) till near two Years after; and not before the French had both broken the common Langue, and given new provocations by their practices in Secrland. Our King having now no more to do at returns to Calais, took the first fair wind, and, with all his England. Train, came fafely into England.

I shall return now to the butiness of Luther, Lutho whom Lee cited to Rome, 1518, giving * order Rome. also to Cardinal Cajetan his Legat in Gaman, to *Aug 23. oppose his Doctrine, not emitting Letters to this 1518. purpole, both to Fredericke Duke of Samony, and to the Superior of the angultines in Germany: Whereupon Cajetan, in divers Conferences at the Diet of Augsburg, labours to convert him, but in vain. At last Luther, being threatned by Conjetan in the Pope's name, he appeals to him, in the staid-form usual in these Cases, t.mquam a Pourissee mi- 1818. rus edicto ad eundem recius educendum; from the OR.1 Pope under misinformation, to the same Pope better informed; but defires, withal, he might answer for himself in Germany, and that caution might be given for his fafety; fince what was controverted by him, did not appear as yet to be positively defin d any way by the Church. Lev, this 1518, while, to make good his Authority * grants new * Nov. 11 Indulgences, which no Man should reject unless stead C.l. 1. he would be excommunicate, &c. Luther finding, thus, no hope of alteration, and bendes that he 1618, was branded with the name of Heretick, 7 ap Nov. 28. was branded with the name of Hiratick, * ap- *Nov.8 peals from Les to a General Council; yet writes 1519- to the Pope, (1719) a very fubmilitive Letter, March 3, wherein he protetls, That he was never intended to *table's fall away from the Chirch. That all he filed, was Letter to chiefly intended againft these away for the tropes Indulgences; concerning which therefore he would peak no more, for that his Advoctories were like, with fallowed briefly that he would only working within lenced; briefly, that he would omit nothing, which might concern Peace in Religion.

Maximilian dying about this time, Luther had some respite. Mens Eyes being turned more on him, who was to fucceed Maximilian, than any other Argument. Befides, he feemed now inwilling any longer to dispute the Pope's Autho-glius appeared about this time at Zurich, to con-smiffeland fent with Luther in many things, and that a Letter of Erajmus also, dated 1519, did much encourage him, fo he began to recover force. and Erafe That of Erismus (extint 1.6. Epifol.) telling him, and Er. he had some Envourers in the Low-Countries, but Holland. many in England, and among them divers princi- His Letpal Persons; that yet be should do well to use Mode-ter to sty and Discretion; Christ having thereby both instituted his Doctrine, and his Apostle Paul destroyed the fewish Law, only by referring the Dostrine and Precepts contained therein unto Allegorie. That he should do well to speak against those rather who abuthe affairs, betwixt himself and Francis, as thinking sed the Papal Authority, then against the Pope him-that he was alone too strong for his adversary. He self, In conclusion, that he should take beed of dewould also have gone out of Town that night, ing any thing out of Anger, Hate, or Vain-glay, 1720. Philip M.Canethou alfo, a Learned, Pious, and Cha-1 but rather (if it could be done handfomly) to Philip Me-ritable Man, did many ways fecond Luther. Concerning all whom, and many more famous Schoembraces lars, who liv'd at that time, it may be observ'd, his Opini that had they agreed among themselves, and not ons. embitiously affected Singularity in some one Point or other, they might have found more Their dif followers of their Dectrine, and confequently ferences have oblig'd the Pope either to cut off some among them points as superfluons, or to have recommended selves prethem with more indifferency to the People. indicate Howfoever, all these Persons concurring with Luther in great part, gave him that Courage, mation. that whereas at first he disputed chiefly concerning Sleid. Turgatory, true Penitency, (or Penance) the Office or Charity, and Indulgencies and Pardons, he began now to question the Popes Authority, Images in Churches, the Calibate of Priests, Lutherest and some other points tending hereunto. As ries his this yet got him great same, so it procured opposition him many Linemies; before whom, that he might Church of give an account of his Doctrine, he comes to Conference at Lipfek, 1519, accompany'd with Philip Melanthon, where John Eccins oppos'd him, defiring to begin his Dilputation at the Popes Roms higher. 1519. July 4. Authority; but Luther, conceiving this was to make him odious, labours to decline the Question; for the rest, thinking fit only to send unto the Pope; to whom, about the beginning of April 6 1520, he writes to this effect. That, though be He writes appeal d from him beretofore to a General Council, rime to the it it was not with an ill mind, as having in his conti-nual Prayers folicited the Almighty for him. That he could not dony himself to be sharp and conscrious cnaugh, when offence was given; yet that he ever thought well of his Holiness in particular, only it griev'd bim that he liv'd in so wicked a Court as that of his at Rome, which he faid was now become another Buby lon or Sodom; that he being amidef such People, as a Lumb among the Wolves, it were pitty he should any lenger reside there. That it were better for him therefore to leave all, and descent to some simple. Would have the Parlyange or Living, or otherwise to maintain himself hisThone with what he had gutten already, than to hazzard for a Parlimself to such Pessiliencies and Infestions; That, in this Advice, he did but imitate Bernard, who did deplore the estate of Eugenius, when Rome was far purer that at this day. In conclusion, be recommends to bim bis late Book entituled, De libertate Christiana. But whatfoever Luthers advice was, I cannot believe him fo fimple, as to suppose his words had either the Power or Spells to call the Pope from his Seat, or that tenderness of Conscience to live among wicked Persons, was enough to make him forsake, together with his charge, all his Dignities and Honours; therefore I believe he meant this, as the Pope himself understood it, only for a Pafquil, or Satyr; which made him alfo affemble the Cardinals, and confult with them herein, who all condemn'd Luther; yet not fo, but it was wish'd by some, a Reformation of divers abuses had either preceded Lathers Admonition, or at least accompany'd it at that time, when in humble and modest terms he submitted himself to the Church. That their arrogating supream power in temporal things, had made divers Princes disaffect their Government, who yet embrac'd their Doctrine. That, therefore, it was not fafe to fuffer them to have an Author for deferting the Church, who had already fought occasions for it, in the late Council of Pifa, and Some Car- elfewhere; Neither was it a good Argument, to dinals for fay that Luther was a dangerous Person; since, accommo the more hurt he could do, the lefs he was to be dating quiet him by beftowing feme Ecclesiastical Preferment. But so haughty were the major part for part and part of part of part and part of of the Spirits in this Affembly, that rejecting this gainst it. Politick Advice, they condemn'd Luthers Books June 15. to the Fire; but Luther growing hereupon but more fierce, was at length Excommunicated, and Booksconhis Books burnt. He, on the other fide, ftriving beburnt to revenge this, at Wittenburg in a full Affembly He is Exol Scholars burns * the Book call'd fm Pentificiated cum; warning Men besides to take heed of the Dec. 10, Papal Government, and Doctrines, appealing a- He turns gain to a Council. Charles, understanding these the Book Paffages, was much troubled, as forefeeing the call'd Jun following Diffentions. Nevertheless, he temper'd at Wittur businesses so, as he held the Pope thereby in some burgh. fuspence; therefore he would not precipitate his Interence; therefore ne wound not precupitate his fentence againft Luther, or fo much as centure him, till he were publickly heard. For which purpofe, (after his being * Crown'd folemnly *08. 23 at Aix.) He affembled a Dyet at † Worms, whey then he call'd Luther, giving him a fafe Conduct 1521.

alfo, to go and return. Whereupon Luther * Charlet 1521. alfo, to go and return. Whereupon Luther * Charles came in his Fryers Habit, but refuling to retract V. Sumhis Opinions, he and his favourers were † pro- to a Dyet ferib'd by Decree or Edict. Howbeit, as this at Worms. did rather punish than convince him; our King * Apr. 16. (being at leasure now from Wars, and for the † May 8. reft delighting much in Learning) thought he field could not give better proof either of his Zeal or Education, than to write against Luther. To this K. Henry also he was exasperated, that Luther had often- writes amis of Againe, who yet was fo much in request with the King, and especially the Cardinal, that (as Polydore hath it) he was therefore call'd Thewishing. mifficus. Our King hereupon compiles a Book alla The-mifficus. Our King hereupon compiles a Book alla The-wherein he ftrenuoufly oppoles Luther in the point of Indulgences, number of Sacraments, the for his Ver-Papal Authority, and other particulars, to be feen negation in the his work envised to the Sacraments. a principal Copy whereof, richly bound, being fent to Lee, I remember my felf to have feen in the Vation Library. The manner of delivery whereof, so I fent to Lee, I remember my felf to have feen in the Vation Library. The manner of delivery whereof (so I find it in our * Peccal was about 100 to whereof (as I find it in our * Record) was thus; Odob to Doctor from Clarke Dean of Windfor our Kings The man-Ambassador, appearing in full Consistory, the livering Pope, knowing the glorious Present he brought, K. Henry first gave him his Foot, and then his Cheeks to Book to kifs; then receiving the Book, he promis'd to do the Pope, as much for Approbation thereof to all Christian Princes (which our King much defir'd) as ever was done for Saint Augustin's or Saint Hierom's Works; affuring him withal, that the next Confiftory he would beflow a publick Title on our King: Which having been * heretofore privately debated among the Cardinals, and those of Protector He has the or Defender of the Roman Church, or of the Title of Apostolical Chair; or Apostolical, or Orthodox Definior King. Protettor, or Defensor Romanae Ecclesiee, or Fdat be-Sedis Apostolicae, or Res. Apostolicus, or Orthodoxus, on him. OF THE FAITH. DEFENSOR FIDEI.
A Transcript of which Bull (out of an Original fub Plumbo in our Records) I have here in-1520.

LEO Epifcopus Servens Serverum Dei, Chariffino The Bull in Christo filie, Homico Anglie Regi, Edei De- for it. fenfori, falutem & amplissiman ben. Ex suprane differentiations arbitrio, literia imparibus merita, Universalis Ecclesia Regimini presidentes, ad hoc corda nostri longe lateque diffundimus cogitatus, ut Fides C. tholica, fine qua nemo proficit ad falutem, continuum suscipiat inforc'd to extremities; as having betwixt his Wit crementum; & ut ea, qua pro cohibendis constibus iland Favourers, enough to trouble all things: lam deprimere, out practs mendacibulque comments Briefly, that, to avoid his venemous Doctrine, pervertere & designare molientium, fina Christi side, the best way was not to urge him to cast it forth, lium prasfertim dignitate regali subgentium doctrina matters with La1521. Sunt disposita, continuis proficiant incrementis, partes nofri ministerii & operam impendimus esticaces. Et si-cut alii Romani Pontisices prædecessors nostri Catholi-cos Principes, prout rerum & temporum qualitas exigebat, specialibus favoribus prosequi consueverunt, præsertim qui, procellosis temporibus, & rabida Schif-maticorum & Hæreticorum servente persidia, non solum in fidel ferenitate & devotione illibata, facro-fantie Romane Ecclesie immobiles perstiterunt, verum etiam tanquam issius Ecclesie legitimi stii, ac sortissimi Auoieta Schifmaticorum & Hareticorum infanis furo-piu spiritualiter & temporaliter se oppolierum: Ita sede optime merita est, and cum uxore ac sellis, at etiam us Masselatem tumm propter excels & immo-ommilius qui at e & ab illis nascentur, nostra benedict-talia ejus erga vos & banc santiam sedem, in qua per-missone divina sedemus, opera & gesta condignis & data est, larga & liberali manu benedicentes, Altissi-tammotalibus praeonis & laudibus esterre desideramus, mum illum, qui divit, per me Reves Romana. ac es sibi concedere, Propter quæ invigilare debeat, à grege Dominico Lupos arcere, & putrida membra, quæ mysticum Christi Corpus inficiunt, serro & materiali mysium confus copus injuiums, ferro O materiali gludio abfeindere, O matantium corda fidelium in fidei foliditate confirmare. Sanè cum nuper dilectus filius Johannes Clarke, Majestatis tea apud nos Orator, in Consisterio nostro coram Venerabilibus fratribus nostris Santhe Romanne, Ecolote Condinalibus du Camplusi-Sanctae Romanae Ecclefiae Cardinalibus, & Compluribus aliis Rom.na Curia Praelatis, Librum, quem Ma-jestas Tua Charitate, qua omnia sedulò & nibil per-peram agit, sideique Catholica zelo accensa & devotionis erga nos & banc sanctam sedem fervore inflammata contra erroris diversorum hæreticorum sæpius ab bac sancta sede diminatos, nuperque per Mirtinum Lutherum suscitatos & innovatos tanquam nobile, & satoerum (ujeitates es innovatos tanquim nomes, es ja-luture quoddam Antidotum compoliti, nobis examinan-dum, es deinde authoritate nostra approbandum obtu-lisset, ac luculenta Oratione sua exposusset Mighra-tem tuam paratam ac dispositam esse, sus quemadmo-dum veris rationibus es irrefragabilibus sacre Scripturæ ac Sanctorum Patrum authoritatibus, notorios erture as Sancorum carrum autoritations, nouvois errores ejuldem Metrini Luberi confuerverit, ita citam omnes eos segui & desensare prasumentes totius Regni vivibus & armis persequatur; Nosque ejus libri admirabilem quandam & caelestu gratiae rore conspersam doctrinam diligenter accurateque introspexissemus; Omnipotenti Deo, a quo omne detum optimum & omne donum persectumes, immensione gratiae egimus, qui optimum & do omno house inclinatam mentem tuam irtimam & ad omne bonum inclinatam mentem tuam infirare, eique tamam gratiam supernè infundere digna-tus fuit, ut ea scriberes , quibus sanctam ejus fidem contra novum errorum damnatorum hujusmodi suscitatorem defenderes, ac reliquos Reges & Principes Christi-anos tuo exemplo invoitares, ut ipsi etiam Orthodoxa si-dei & Evangelicæ veritati in periculum & discrimen adducta, omni ope sua adesse opportuneque favere vellent. Aquum autem esse consentente successione lent. Aquum autem esse consensor, qui pre state Christi bujusmodi desensione pios labores susceptuant, omni laude & honore assicere, volentesque non solum ea quæ M jestas tua contra eundem Mirtinum Lutberum absolutissma doctrins nec minori eloquentia scripsit, con-dignu laudibus extollere ac magnisscare, autboritateque nostra approbare & confirmare, sed etiam Mujestatem ipsam tuam tali bonore ac titulo decorare, ut nostris ac perpetuis futuris temporibus Christi sideles omnes intelligant, qu'àm gratum acceptumque nobis fuerit Ms-jestatis ture Munus, hoc præfersim tempore, nobis oblatum : Nos, qui, Petri, quem Christus in Calum ascensurus vicarium suum in Terris reliquit, & cui curam gregis sui commisti, veri Successores sumus, & in bac fancta sede, qua omnes dignitates ac tituli emanant, sedemus, babita super his cum eisdem fratribus nostris matura deliberatione, de eorum unamini consilio & assensus, Majestati tuæ titulum bunc, (viz.) Fidei Defensorem donare decrevimus, prout Te tali titulo per præsentes insignimus; mandantes omnibus Christi sidelibus, ut Majestatem tuam hoc titulo nominent, &, cum ad eam scribent, post dictionem, Regi, adjungant, Fidei Desensori. Et profecto, hujus tituli excellentia & dignitate ac singularibus meritis tuis diligenter perpensis & consideratis, nullum neque dignius neque Majestati tua convenientius nomen excegitare potuissemus : Brethren of the Holy Roman Church, the Cardinals

Quod quoties audies & leges, toties propria virtutis optimique meriti tui recordaberis; nec hujufmodi titulo intumesces vel in superbiam elevaberis, sed solita tua prudentia humilior, & in fide Christi, ac devotione hujus sanctæ sedis d quâ exaltatus fueris, fortior & con-frantior evades, ac in Domino bonorum omnium largitore lætaberis, perpetuum boc & inmortale gloriæ tuæ monumentum posteris tuis relinquese, illique viam osten-dere, ut, si tali titulo ipsi quoque insigniri optabum, ta-liaetiam opera essicere præclaraque Majestatis tuæ visticipes imperant, & in cujus manu cordi sunt Regum, rogamus & obsecramus, ut eam in suo sancto proposito cogamis O conferenciams, si eam in jus jaccio propsino comfirmet, esque de confirmet, esque de confirmet, esque de confirmet, esque esque pro fancia fide gestis ira illustret, ac toti Orbi terrarum comficiam reddat, ui judicium quad de ipsu feriente, cam tam insigni titud decorantes, d nemine falfum aut vasuum judicari possit; demum, Mortalis butanti confirmet. jus vita finito curriculo, sempiternæ illius gloriæ con-fortem atque participem reddat. Dat. Romæ apud Sanctum Petrum, Anno incarnationis Dominicæ Millesimo Quingentesimo Vicesimo Primo. Quinto Id. Octobris, Pontificatus nostri Anno

-[- Ego Leo X. Catholicæ Ecclefiæ Epifco-pus fs. Ego P. tt. S. Eufebii Presb. Cardinalis fs. Ego A. tt. Sunctæ Marix in Transtiberim Presb. Cardinalis Bonon. fs.

Ego lauf. Scop. quatuor Coronatorum Presb. Cardinalis ma. propr. fs. اد (24. alii Cardinales.

LEO Bishop, Servant of the Servants of God, to our most dearly beloved Son in Chrift, Henry King of England, Defender of the Faith, Health and Apolitical Benedition. We, by Divine permission, the chief Overseer for the Government of the Universal the chief Overseer for the Government of the Universal Church, though unsufficient for so great a Work, do pour sorth the cogitations of our Heart, that the Catholick Faith, without which no Man can attain to Salvation, may receive continual Increase, and that those good Laws and Constitutions decreed, by the wisldom and learning of such as are in Authority, especially the faithful in Christ, for restraining the attempts of all that lahout to apprets the same, or by wicked lies all that labour to oppress the same, or by wicked lies and fictions feek to pervert and obscure it, may prosper with perpetual Increase, we do bestow our pains and utmost endeavour in our Ossicc and Ministry. And like as the Roman Bishops our Predecessors were wont to shew especial favour to the Catholick Princes (according as the quality of matters and times requir'd) especially to them that in troublesom times, when the madness and them that in trouble on times, when the mixdues and perfidious dealings of Schifmaticks and Hereticks most of all abound, did abide constant and immoveable not only in the soundness of Faith, and pure Devotion to the boly Roman Church, but also as the most Legitimate Sons and valiant Chimpions of the same, opposide themselves both with Mind and Body against the first vitous madues of Schifmaticks and Hereticks. So also thous manney of con-do we define to extol your Majesty with worthy and immortal Praises, for your high and immortal deserts and labour toward us and this Holy See, wherein by God's permission we sit, to grant unto it those things for which it ought to watch, and drive away the Wolve's from the Lord's Flock, and to cut off with the Material Sword, rotten Members which infect the Mystical Body of Christ, and to confirm the hearts of the faith-ful in soundness of Belief. Now whereas of late our beloved Son John Clerk, your Majestics Orator with us, being in our Consistory before our venerable and many other Prelates of the fame, exhibited a Buch unto us to be examined and allowed of us, which Book your Majefry, (who doth all things with diligence, and nothing amils) enfi-med with Charity and Zeal to the Catholick Faith, and with ardent devotion to-wards us and this Hely Sec, bath composed, as a most werthy and foweraign antidote against the errors of divers Hereticks, eften condemned by this Holy See, and of late stirr dup and brought in by Martin Luther: And your Jaid Orator bath also largely declared unto us, that your Majesty is ready and purposeth, like as you have consuted the notorious Errors of the said Maryou nove conjuct the meterious Errors of the flat Mai-tin, by true Reafin and invincible Authority of facred Scripture and ancient Fathers; so you will punish to the utternsoft of your Pencer all belief of your whole King-dow, that shall presume to follow or defind them: And we have disjuntly and exactly pension and viewed the Annual Designer of the first the second of the admirable Dicirine of your faid Book, watered with the Dew of heavenly Grace, and do heartly thank Almighty God, from whom every good and perfect Gift dith come, who hath venekfafed to inspire your noble Mind, inclined to every good thing, and to endue you with so great Grace from Heaven, as to write these things, wherely you are able to defend his boly Faith, range, a detay in the water of dammed Errors: And again't fuch a new Inswencer of dammed Errors: And allo incite by your Example all orbor Christian Kings and Princes to be willing to favour and to further suith all their best Aids, the Orthodex Faith, and Evangeat ever very what, the Orthonex rains, and Bounge-lical Truth, whenfactor it be brought into danger or doubt. And we think it also meet, that they who have undertaken such godly Labeurs for us, should meet their due and just Commendations: And we are desirous that not only the things thenfolius which your Mijefty hath written, being loth of most found De-crine, and no lefs Eliquence, should be extelled and with a month of the continuous point of the worth of the way of the work of th full A 1100, its that note for our time and ever move view, all Men may perceive how grateful and accepta-ble this Gift of your Majefty's hath been muo m, espe-cially effected unto us at this time. We who be the rue Succeffix of Peter, whom Christ at his essential into Heaven left his Vicar on Earth, and to whom he that the left his Vicar on Earth, and to whom he committed the care of his Flock : We, I fay, who sit in this bely See, from which all Dignities and Titles do flow, upon mature deliberation had with our faid Bretarin about these things, have by the general Agreement and Consort of them decreed to bestow upon your Mijesty this Tule, namely, The Defender of the and accordingly by these Presents do instile you with such a Title; comm.nding all faithful Chriflians that they name your Majelly with this Title; and when they write to you, that after the word King, they adjoyn Defender of the Faith. And truly, we diligently confidering and weighing your singular Merits, were not able to behink us of a Nime more wor-tly and convexion for your Mijefty, than the excellency and dening of this Title; which forten as you shall kear and read, so often you may call to mind this your fingular Vertue and great Defert : Nor may you by this Tule puff up your felf with Pride; but according to your wonsed Prudence become more humble, and be more valiant and confeast in the Faith of Christ, and in Devotion to this holy See, by which you have been exalted, repaying in the Lord the Giver of all good things, leaving this as a perpetual and immortal Monument leaving this as a perpetual and immertal Monment of your givey to your Children, fluching them the way mot the Like z that if they shall defire to be graced also with such as Title, they must labour to do such Works, and to follow the excellent Step of your Mighty, when, accordingly as you have well described of as, and of this said See, together with your Wife and all your Children that shall be born of you or of them, We bestow on you one Benediction with a large and line. Then the wome of line from whom the Power beral Hand, in the name of him from whom the Power

Kings reign and Princes rule, and in whole band are the Hearts of Kings, that he will confirm your Ma-jefty in your boly Purpole, and encreafe your Deveton, and by your worthy Endeavours for the facred Faith, so to illustrate your Renown, and make you glorious through all the World; that this our Testimony which we have given of you, adorning you with so excellent a T.tle, may never be judged by any to be false or vain. Lastly, we defire God, that after this Life ended he would make you Partakers of his eternal Glory.

Given at Rome at St. Peter's, in the Year of the Incarnation of our Lord God, 1521. the fifth of the Ides of October, the ninth Year of our Papacy.

Ego Leo X. Catholica Ecclefia Episcopus fs. &c.

Such was the coverousness of the richer fort at this time in England, that they converted many large Corn-fields into Pasture; hereof ensued a general decay not only of Houses, but of Per-sons, which should do their King and Country fervice. Befides, Sheep, Cattel, and Clothes being thus within the hands of a few, the price was much inhaunfed. To remedy this nufficief, the King caused the ancient Statutes, provided on that behalf, to be looked into. And accordingly directed his Committion to the Justices of Peace, to reftore all the Tillage ground that had been enclosed any time within fifty years last past, and to cause the Houses anciently upon them to be re-edified; yet (as Polydore hath it) divers by compounding fecretly with the Cardinal, exempted themfelves.

About this time Edward Stafford Duke of Buck-Elward ingham, eminent for his high Blood, and large Stafford Revenue, drew on himfelf a dangerous fulpicion; Buckunwhich though it was again formented by the Care glam, dinal, who disaffected him for fome speeches he hated by had caft forth, yet, could not have overthrown the Gar-him, but that fome indifferetion of his own concurred. Besides, he suffered much through the ill offices of Charles Knevet, formely mentioned; who yet durft not appear, till he faw the Duke not only discounterance but weakned in his hat weakned in his Friends and Allies. In a of thefe I find two principally; One, Hem, Percy Earl of Northumberland, whose Daughter the Duke had married; the other Thomas Earl of Surrey, who had married the Dukes Daughter. Against Northumberland, cause was taken for claiming certain Wards; which, after close commitment, yet, he was forced to relinquish. Against Surrey the Cardinal proceeded otherwise: For, though he hated him for drawing his Dagger at him e from execution; yet as the Earl was more wary than to give new Offence, he thought fit to fend him away upon fome honourable Employment for which he found this Overture. Gerald Firz-Gerald, Earl of Kildire, made De- Camp puty in Ireland to Henry Duke of Tork, (now him of King, who at * four Years old was by his Fa-Ireland, ther made Lieutenant of that Country) having done divers good Services againft the Rebels, was made † Knight of the Garter, and enjoy'd that Place till his death; when his Son Gerald being fubflitute therein, so behaved himself, as he likewise got much Credit: Though, as he had the House of Ormond his Enemy, and particularly Sir Pierce Butler Earl of Officy, secret ill offices Compiler, were done him; nor did it avail, that he had given his Sitter in Marriage to the faid Batler, and help'd him to recover the Earldom of O mond, detained wrongfully fince the death of James, by a Bastard of that Family; For it was impossible to oblige him; especially, where he of granting this Bleffing is given unto us, praying and found to advantagious an occasion to differnt. For selecting that Almighty One, who faith, By me as he watch'd over the Earl of Definent, his per-

impri-fon'd for his diffrefpettful C-rriage

asao. April, Beckugham accus'd by his Sar-vant.

gainft him.

* 1512

1521. petual Adversary, since the division of Lancaster and York, (in which his Ancestors were on the fide of Limeaster, and the Kildares and Dismonds on that of York, he discovered more favours done The Earl the prefent Earl of Defmond, (whom he called a of Keldare Traytor) than he thought due to him; Infomuch that he complain d to the Cardinal, who thereupon fent for Kildare. Though Polydore faith, he came voluntarily into England to match with fome English Lady, and there behaved himself so unto the respectfully to the Cardinal, that he was cast into Cardinal. Prison. But whatsoever the cause was, his charge was bestowed on the Earl of Surrey, who going to Iroland in April 1520, reduced the Earl of D. smoul and others to obedience. The Duke of Buckingbam being thus exposed and unfriended, the Cardinal treats fecretly with Kneed, concerning him; who thereupon discovers his late Mafters life; Confessing that the Duke, by way of difcourie, was accustomed to fay, how he meant to to use the matter, that, if King Henry died without Issue, he would attain the Crown, and that he would punish the Cardinal. Belides, that he had fpoken hereof unto George Nevill Lord Abergavenny, who married the fuld Dukes Daughter. By what means yet the Duke intended particularly to effect these Designs, I do not find exactly for down by Charles Knewer. Neither do the Authors, who write hereof relate his Pedegree. Only our Heralds fay, he was descended from Anne Plantagener, Daughter of Thomas of Woodstock, Son to King Edward the Third. How far this yet might entitle him to the Crown in case King Henry should have no issue, I have neither leifure nor disposition to examine. I shall only therefore, for fatisfaction of the Reader, felect some principal points out of his Indict-The Arment; leaving the Reader, for the rest, unto the fearch of the Record: In which, the points that in my opinion made most against the Duke, were; First, That at * feveral times he had fint to one Hopkins, a Mank, in the Priory of Henton, to April 24 & July . 2 & 1513 be informed by him, concerning the matters Le imagine. $\frac{8}{1913}$ and tost the Abouk bould return anjuver. The Duke $\frac{8}{2}\text{1513}$ and tost the Abouk bould return anjuver. The Duke $\frac{8}{2}\text{1517}$ bould bette all; and therefore found lebour to preture $\frac{1}{2}\text{1517}$ broke of the People. 2. That the Duke $\frac{1}{2}\text{1615}$ around found go in perfor to the faild Hopkins, who April 16. confirmed the faild prediction, adding, that he knew it $\frac{1}{2}\text{15}$ by Recordation. Whereupon the faild Duke flould $\frac{1}{2}\text{162}$ broads found found to $\frac{1}{2}\text{161}$ broads for $\frac{1}{2}\text{161}$ broads law) that, if ought but good come to the King, the Duke of Buckingham should be next in blood to the Crown, the King having as yet no iffue. That, to comply herewith, he did many things which argued Ambition, and defire to make himself popular. That be † Feb. 20. † faid to one Gilbert, his Chancellor, that what foewer your does by the Kings Father, was done by wrong; murmuning withil against the present Government.

A zind to the said Charles Knevet, that if he had been committed to the Tower, (whereof he was in danger upon occusion of one Sir William Bulmer) he would have so wrought, that the principal doers thereof should not have easile of great resorcing. For he would have plaid the part which his Father intended to have put in practice against King Richard the Third at Salisbury, who made earnest fuit to come into the presence of the said King; which suit if he might have obtained, he Jana King, a wood jini, if it might also continues, or baving a Knife feeresty about bim, would have thrust it into the body of King Richard, as he had made femblance to kneel down before him. And that, in Speaking these words, be maliciously laid hands on his Spearing toge worns, we manetough that minus on ms Dagger; fuverning, that, if he were so evil us'd, he would do his helt to accomplish his intended purpose. 5. That * being in speech with Sir George Nevill Knight, Lord Abergavenny, he said, that if the King died, he would have the Rule of the Realm, in spight of whosever said the contrary; swearing, that Sept. 10.

if the Lord Abergavenny reveald this he would fight 1521 with him. This I conceive to be the fubflance of the most special Articles in the Evidence; which the Courteous Reader yet may do well to confider more at large, as they are extant on Record. How far yet these particulars were proved, and in what fort, my Authors deliver not. Only I find (out of our Records) that the Duke of Buckingham being committed to the Tower, April 16. did under his own hand declare to Sir Thom is Lovell, Constable of the Tower, the April 16 passages betwixt him and Hopkins, in this manner: That is to fay, that the Summer before our King made Wer in France, Hopkins fent for him; but, not being able to go, be commanded one Delacour, his Chip Lim, to repair thither; bowbeit, that Hopkins jaid nought to bim; yet that himfelf came the next * Lost; Wa Co-King should win great bonour in his journey to France; tening of and that if the King of Scots came to England then, the Town be should never go home again. Lind that, when he 1513 asked Hopkins how he knew this, he fail ex deo haboo: It is reveal d to me of God. And that Hopkins demanding afterward, what Children the King had had, domaiding ofterwird, what Chitaken the King hast has, the tall the number; and that Hopkins hould fay thereif a, I pray God his illue continue; for that he faired God was not contented, because he main in re-fittin ion according to his Father's Will, charging the Dake further to advise the King's Camel't or make re-fittinion. Further, That he tall his Chineel'er those words, and at his return our of France, convect Hop-kins again. and lidd, he had tall him true: Allo. kins again, and faid, he had told him true: Allo, that (another time) became to Hopkins, together with his Son Stafford, and the Earl of Wellmorland; and that Hapkins asked who be was, and thereuven should fay, that some of his Blood or Name should prove Great Men. zind that, after this, Hopkins should fend to the Luke, to pray him, according to his Premife, to help their House (being at Henton in Somerfetshire) to make their Conduit; the ten Pounds, formerly given by him, being spent. And more than this he confelled not. Notwithstanding which, when the bdictment was openly read, the Duke faid it was falfe, untrue, confpired, and forged, to bring him to H19 his death; alledging (as he was an elequent H194 Person) many Reasons to fallitie the Indistruent : Il-The King's Attorney on the other fide, producing The King's Attorney on the other meaproaneing the Examination, Configuration in Proof of W building.

The Duke hereupon defired the Witneffer, which were Knewet, Gilbert, Delacem, and Hakira, to be brought forth. Their confirming their Deponitions, the Duke was tried by his Peers, (being a He is Duke, a Marquifs, feven Earls, and twelve Da- nydby rons) before the Duke of Norfolk, who was for his Petrithe time made Lord High Steward of England. May 15-They condemning him, the Duke of Norfalk de-Heir liver'd his Sentence, not without Tears: To which demod liver d his sentence, nor without 1 ears: 10 which demaid he reply d, Aff Lord of Norfolk, you have fail at His a Traytor fheald be fail unto, but I was never one. Specific and my Lords, I mething malign for what you have done to me, but the eternal Golf (rigive you my death), and I do. I shall never fue to the King for Life: Harris. beit, be its gracious Prince, and more Grace may come from him, than I define. 2nd fo I defire you, no Lords, and all my Fellows, to pray for me. Where upon he was brought back to the Toure. Where all the favour he received was a Meffage from the King, declaring his Sentence was mitigated fo far, that, instead of receiving the death of a Traitor, he fhould have only his Head * cut off. Thus ended the Duke of Enclingham, May 17. much lamented by the People, (who libell'd Heisberger) the Cardinal for it, calling him Carnificis filium, headed Son of a Butcher,) as being thought rather Crimi-nal through folly and rath words, than any intention declar'd by Overt Act against the King's Perfon; and therefore not uncapable of his Mercy; which also it was thought would not have Vol. II.

1521. been denv'd, had he fu'd for it in fitting terms. But fince at his Arraignment, he did, as it were, difclaim his Life, he would not obtrude it; and therefore only caus'd a Letter of comfort to be written to the Dutcheis, and Lord Stafford. Yet the Tragedy ended not fo ; for though George Lord Abergavenny, after a few Months Imprisonment, was, through the Kings favour, deliver'd; yet Hokins, after a ferious Repentance that he had been an Author of fo much mischief, dy'd of And here I must observe that together with this Duke, that great place of High-Conflable of England remains extinguish'd, unless fome extraordinary occasion revive it. I shall return here to speak of Charles the Fifth, who having, as is faid, kept a Diet at Wirming, did now levy Forces. And the rather, that he heard War was intended against him by Solyman; who, being a Martial Prince, and Crown'd the very fame day at Constantineple, that Charles was at Aix, feem'd to have fomewhat of the same Ascendant; however they differ'd in their Interests. Besides, it was observ'd, that as Charles the Fifth was the eleventh Emperor from Albertus, in whose time the House of the Octomens began; fo Sueliman (or Solyman) was the eleventh Prince of his Race. Howfoever, on their occation much of their Subjects blood was spitt, and more would have been, had not Francis turn A the Therete Arms of Charles upon himself. The causes of ine Wars, Diffenrich betwixt Charles and Francis, were, first, that Claude eldest Daughter of Louis the Twelfth, that Claime of Bretagne having by a folemn * Treaand Frame ty been accorded to Charles, Francis yet † ob-May 12. Empire. Thirdly, ill Offices done by their Courteigne. Secondly, their mutual ambition for the tiers betwixt them. Fourthly, but chiefly, the incompatibility of their demands for their ancient Right; whereof I find thefe most urg'd. Homage for Flanders, and Artois, requir'd by Francis, as being held anciently of the Crown of France; which Charles yet refus'd, faying, that, fince that Etlate was devolv'd to an Emperor, it was in a higher Lignity, than could be submitted to any Inferior. But to this again Francis reply'd, that it derogated from no body to give what was due. Befides, that the Title of a King was greater and more August than that of an Emperor; both as the power is more absolute in it self, and that it depends not on the Election of others; for which purpose a passage was alledg'd out of Matth. Paris, when the Empire having been of-fer'd to Robert, Brother of Saint Louis, the Council of State refusd it, for this reason; saying surther, it was enough that Robert was Brother to so great a King. For which cause also, the Franch observe, that none ever aspir'd to it of the Line of the Caper's, but Francis. Again, they dif-fer'd about Milan, of which Loüis the Twelfth having getten the * Investiture, Francis did in purfuic of his Right, expel Maximilian Sforza; whose Brother and Successor yet was protected by Charles, and reinplac'd. Moreover the Dutchy of Burgindy was question'd by Charles. For though Louis the Eleventh had united it to his Crown, and that, for Title thereunto, it was alledgd, that John King of France had given it to his younger Son Philip, to hold to him and his Heirs Males only; and that Charles last Duke of Burgundy, having but one only Daughter, it therefore reverted; yet Charles understanding the business otherwise, claim'd it by a long succession of his Ancestors in Burgundy. There so many pretences on either side engagd the two Princes into perpetual Wars, which began this year. For Francis, insisting cover Navarre; and to this he thought the Commu- 1521. nidadoes or Insurrections in Spain (begun 1519, and continued fill) would conduce. For as the People held their Junta or Affembly for redrefs of their Grievances, he conceiv'd fome might be drawn to his Party. But he was deceiv'd; for they mutined not for his fake, but their own, as appear'd; pretending for their chief grievances only, that their King liv'd in foreign parts, and transported their Money for his occasions there, and bestow'd divers great Places in Spain on Strangers. So that, though they continu'd their demands with much infolency and boldness, they persisted nevertheless in their love to their Prince and Country, without admitting a Treaty with Francis. All which yet could not preferve them. For, though they proceeded with more Sobriety and Correspondence, than hath been observed in any popular Insurrections, (as Sandoval relates it at large) they were divided at laft, and overthrown by the name of Rebels; their Actions being fo bad and dangerous, as their Intentions could not excuse them. Howfoever, Francis thought fit to make use of this occasion, and therefore, before their defeat, he levy'd Forces; and, not long after, fent sindre de Foix, Seigneur de Asperrant, and Brother of the as rows, Sugraer as Appersant, and Brother of the famous Lamrech, to Novarre. Where a War be-March, gan, that, in divers places, lafted 38 years fol-The War lowing (as Sandew.l observes it) and coft the breaks on lives of above five hundred thousand Men; the in which Fronds speak of a far greater number. Their first Men led? Progress was happy; for, in less than 15 days, their they took Navarre. But as they would go far-Lives. ther to Catalonia, and befiege Logranno (or Groyne,) the Spanish Commanders, attended now with many of the Communidadoes, gave Battel and overthrew them, taking de Foix Prisoner; whereupon also Navarre was regain'd in less time than it was left, and Pamplona thenceforth better fortify'd. But not on this part only did the French shew their Mal-Talent, but discover'd it on this occasion also towards another Coast. The Prince of Chimay contesting in Law with the Seioneur d Appeares concerning a Caftle or Town in the Forest of Ardomer, and County of Luxenburg, call'd Hierge, gain'd his cause by the judgment of the Peers of the Dutchy of Besiller, who determin'd bufineffes in chief; and accordingly enjoy'd possession thereof, for many years. Howbeit Agmeries (being not contented herewith appeal'd to the Chancellor of Brabant, and prevail'd fo far, that the Heirs of Chimay were fummon'd to give accompt of their Title unto the Emperor. But, because the Soveraignty of Roberi de la Mark Duc de Poüillon was moit concern'd herein, they, for their best refuge, made com-plaint to him; he again addresseth himself to the Emperor, and remonstrates his Right: yet, finding the cause of Aymeries likely to prevail, secretly treats with Francis, for Assistance and Protection. Being affur'd hereof, he (though a being then at the Diet in Wormer. The Lings of Souther the Souther than the Diet in Wormer this couldn't define the ror, judging quickly from whence this audaci-Emperor outness proceeded, prepares for Hist. Neither classact wanted he a feeming occasion. For though he ever fuspected that Robert de la Mork, (as one who had ferv'd heretofore the French in Italy, had his chief dependance on Francis) yet new being inform'd that Fluranges (Son unto the faid Robert de la Mark) having rais'd in France about three thousand Foot and four hundred Horse, (all Voluntiers) had befieg'd Foetos, a little place in Luxemburg, appertaining to the Emperor; he nothing doubted, but that the French had affifted him herein. Howbeit, Francis, confidering it fill upon the Treaty of Noyon, prepar'd to re- was not convenient to begin a War so near home, 1500.

1516.

K. Henry that Francis I. broke the Peace. Octob. 2. 1518.

fer'd to Woolfey.

Aug. 2.

the Peace, signifies his dislike to Fleuranges, who thereupon * dismis'd his Forces. Notwithstand-*Mar. 22. ing which, Cherles commands Henry Count of Naffan to go with an Army against Robert de la Mark, not omitting withal to dispatch an Ambaffador to Francis, with Instructions, to protest, that Francis had first broken the Treaty of 1518, by aiding Robert de l.z Mark. He fent word to our King also of this proceeding. Who taking the matter into Consideration, pronounc'd fentence against Francis, as the first Infractor of their Tripartite League: Which being maturely ponder'd by Francis, (who knew well, how much it concern'd him not to provoke our King, who (by an express Article of the faid Treaty) was to fall on the first that contraven'd) made him afterwards excuse the matter, and undertake that Robert should desist from Hostility. This was not yet fo accepted by Charles, as to delay the fending of his Army, under Homy of Noffew (and not Francisco Sichino as Jovins hath it to seize on the Dominions of Robert, who accordingly took divers places. But Robert going to the Emperor Leaves to According to the Emperor hereupon, obtain'd a Truce for fix Weeks, Henry of Nassaw in the mean time putting Garrisons in the places he had won. The Emperor yet, not dismissing his Forces, but proceeding hostilely, our King takes notice hereof, and offers Woolfey, as his Lieutenant, to compose their Differences. For Francis had now arm d; as finding that, un-Record. der colour of private Quarrels, Tournaifis was invaded; howbeit, Woolfey was not thought by Francis a competent Judge; both as some jealoude Serres. fies had past formerly betwixt our King and him (as is above related) and that he knew Woolfey The differd depended wholly upon Charles for the Papacy.

rencereferd to.

Therefore he not only declin'd (as much as he ferd to. could the Arbitrement of Woolfey, but shortly after dispatch'd the Duke of Albany into Scotland. Howfoever, Woolfey came 2 August 1521. to Calais, and treated of an Accommodation; not neglecting together to write of Charles, to make no Peace with Francis during the Treaty. And I doubt not but our King did gladly arbitrate this butiness; both as it argued his Authority, and gave him means to choose his friend, when otherwise he could not reconcile them. Upon the part of Francis came the Chancellor of France (Antoine du Prat) Jehn de Selves, and Monfieur de Paliffe Margfehrl of France, with four hundred Horic. The Emperor net failing on his part likewise to send proper Agents, being Mercurinus Conde de Gattinara his Chancellor, and Monsieur de Berghes, and others. The Pope had likewise a particular and conceal'd Nuntio there, being Hieronymo de Ghimuciis Bilhop of Asceli; though, A Meet- as he pretended to be without Authority, his buing to ad-finess it seem'd was for the present rather to espy vance the Peace, as did appear afterwards. Many things were represented to the Cardinal on both fides. The Emperor demanded, among other things, Restitution of the Dutchy of Burgundy, and abolition of the homage he ow'd to the Crown of France for the Low-Countries. Fran-just them and opferve the proceedings there, than to adcis again not only relus'd this, but requir'd that Navarre might be reftor'd to Honry Son of King John; and a Pension of one hundred thousand John; and a Pennon of the Mandet Ducats paid him for the Kingdom of Naples, according to the former Contract at Noyon. to this again Charles his Minority was alledg'd as an excuse; though a weak one in Princes; they being not confider'd under the notion of their

1521. and besides, being advised by our King to keep his Claim; and for Nevarre, it was too commethe Peace, signifies his dislike to Fleuranges, who dious for him to leave it; especially when he thought Francis did no less in with-holding Burgundy. Howfoever, that Francis himself had first broken the faid Treaty of Novon, by protecting Emphise. the Duke of Gueldres, an Ancient Enemy of the House of Flanders. And for the abolition of Homage, the French Chancellor on the other side, particularly faid, it was not the work of a Treaty, but a Petition, and therefore not to be handled at this time, when there was question of right only. Befides this, the Dutchy of Milan bred no little contest among them. In conclusion, their demands were so obstinate, and minds so everse from Peace on either fide, that the Cardinal could Proves inor would do no good. Hereunto, also, did con-ellettual cur a close and private Convention betwint Lee and Charles, mediated by the Nantio; and a confidence that Charles had, by the Cardinal's means) that, in case of Rupture our King would incline to him, as having more pretence to his ancient Dominions of France, than to any thing in the Low-Countries. Again, Charles renew'd his promise to give him his best affistance to be elected Pope, when Leo should dye; which prevail'd more than any other gift. Although (to use Polydore's words) speaking of both Princes, at this time, Uterque ejus favorem certatim largitioni-bus queritabat, Both fought to obtain his favour by Presents. This hope of the Papacy therefore comforted our Cardinal, now it was likely he should lose one of his Customers. § The King of Hungary at this time, finding that Solyman (who inherited his Father's Malice) did much gain upon Christendom (as having lately gotten Belgrade in Hungary) and knowing there was no way to defend himself, without an Union betwixt Christian Princes, sends an Ambassador, so opportunely, as to find our Cardinal at Calais, treating of this Universal Peace. But such was the animosity of these two great Princes, that the pious consideration of repelling the Turk could not prevail with them. So that the Cardinal, by this rime, finding fmall hope of Reconciliation, advertis'd our King thereof, and crav'd his Refolution ; unto which he much prepar'd him by giving intelligence of what had past. To gain this space also, he told the French, he would go in Person to Bruges, and Negotiate by word of mouth with the Emperor. Our Cordinal depart- Aug. ing hereupon, the Emperor met him by the way, (a mile out of Town,) accompanying this Honour with all other Demonstrations of fection to him and our Nation. After thirteen days Treaty, and agreement what was to be done in case of Rupture, (which our Cardinal perceiv'd now could not be avoided,) he returns to Calais, where the French Ambassadors impatiently attended him, he doth not yet discover his despair of Success to them, and much less discloseth his private Treaty with the Emperor, but mediates still a Peace, yet so, as to promise less hope of it than before, fince matters were come to fuch extremities on both fides. For not only le Seigneur de Liques, a Subject of the Emperors, upon private quarrel with the Cardinal of Bourbon, had now surpris'd Amand and Mor-Sept. tagne in Picardy, and the Bourgonians Ardres, (which they raz'd,) but the Count of Nassaw taken Mouzon, and besieg d Mezietes; which yet Anne de Montmorency, and Pierce de Terrail, commonly call'd le Chevalier Bayard, desended, until Francis Octob. coming with a great Army, the Imperialists retir'd, and Mouzon was retaken, while the Empe-Age but Dignity. Furthermore, Charles grounded his Title to Maples by his Mother Queen

Jam, Daughter and Heir of Ferdinand, fo that
to have paid this Money would have weaken'd

James and Money would have weaken'd

James and Money would have weaken'd

James and Money was related to the was a Valenciennes kept himfelf more covert than was expected; fince Francis proceedform, Daughter and Heir of Ferdinand, fo that to have paid this Money would have weaken'd

James and Money was related to the control of the process of the control of the process of the process of the control of the process of the

Vol. II.

1521. thought to have the leading of the Avantguard within a Month. Neither shall one make any Agreent- 1521. (rather than the Duke de Almzon, Brother-in-Law to the King) an Error was committed which coft him dear, as shall be told in its place. Notwithstanding which, Woolfey, that he might leave nothing unattempted, fends to the Emperor, the Lord of Saint Fohrs, and Sir The. Boless, and to the Franc's King (lying then with a great Army near Combray) the Earl of Werester, and Bishop Biller of Ely; by whom he obtain'd that the Emperor should raise the Siege of Tournay, before which his Forces now were, and that he should recall his Army in the Milimese, and that Francis should likewife revire his, and the rest should be referr'd to our King. But the taking of Feuenterable by Basivet intervening, Franciscefus'd to render it, and to the Treaty brake off. Whereupon our Cardiand (who new had heard from our King) gives a kind of fenrence, in the business. The effect hereof was, that the French King being guilty of the first breach, our King was bound by the Common Treaty to assist the Emperor; to which also he was the more dispos'd that the secret practices of the French in Southand had difoblig'd him, fome hopes of Accommodation yet were reprefented, in case the Emperor and Francis might be reconcil'd; but fmall appearance hereof being given, the Cardinal concluded a Treaty with the Emperor and Pope against the French, the the Emperor and Pope against the French, the Pope entring it on condition that the Emperor rank thould reflore to him Parma and Piacenza, and aid effect of the Treaty was this. Fecause the Expedition against the Turk cannot be redaye in Explainin againgt in the Erench be fuppieff it; therefore between the Pope, Emperor, and King of England, by their feveral Amboffadors, thefe Ning of Leighting, or their feeth among the fi-ciliaring Articles are concluded.

I. This Treaty shall not designet from any former, and it shall extend not only to the preferst possibles of and it shall extend not only to the prefer projections of the Contrabents, but their future despitions.

II. Test, when the Emperor shall pels over into Spain to provide himself of Men and Mency, and quitalist People (which shall be the next Spring) the Fing of England (upon a month's warning) shall care bim a Convoy of Ships through the Chambel, with at least three theusend fighting-men, with Artillery, &c. inguese with leave to limit at Dover, or Sandwich; and after bosomable Entertainment, Ball conduct him himself to Falmouth, or some other such place. In regard whereof, if the King of England shall have occision to pass over to France, the Emperor shall do the like for him, till the charge be equal on both

HI. The Contrabents shall declare themselves Ene-nies to the French in March 1523, and by May the libe in Arms, (viz.) The Pope in Italy, with a ing Army; without Italy, Censuris Ecclesiastics. Secondly, the Emperor with ten thousand Horse, and thirty thousand Foot, or more, on the Confines of Spain; at which time the Low-Countries and other Dominion of the Emperor, shall declare themselves Encourses to the French, and Commerce cease. Thirds, the King of England shall pass the Sea, with tendents and thirty thousand Foot or more, to in-France on the Coafts next to him. And he bath iberty given to hire Horse-men out of Germany, and Foot (if he will) of the Emperor's Subjects. And, if the King of England, upon a Battle to be fought, shall the King of Lingsiants, upon a partie to be joingus, juint band in need of sid, the Europero's Lieutenant, being suffern d of it, fload (if it be possible) belp him.

1V. That, before the Month of Matrch abovefuld, the King of England, and the Europero [ball by Sea saylef the French, each with three thousand fighting. men, and other Provisions proportionable; juyning their Forces upon occasion, and not recalling their Fleets, but within a Month. Neither final one make any servan-ment, or Treaty, or Truce, with the commin Enemy, but tythe confent of the other. V. That, if, by the end of this prefent November, there be no Peace made, between the Pope, Emperor and King of France, or that the French King field a fresh begin the War: Then the King of England shall, at the coming of the Emperor into England, become himself Finance to the French, and within a declare himself Enemy to the Trench, and within a Mouth after certifie it to the French King. In which case the Fleet prepar'd by the King of England, for the Convey of the Emperor, after his landing in Spain, shall, together with the Emperor's Fleet, turn the michous against the French, so insessing him by Sex. Ziso by land each Prince shall have Forces against all soveby that each trince pair have evenes again, as and from both of the French, and other Princes; wherein they fluid sid one another.

VI. To ficellante thefe defigues, as for as even the War fluid be began against to French, the Pope fluid find and his Confirms against him, fulficiting all his Dominions to the Interdick; and calling the Secul, r Arm against him, shall warn the Emperor (as the Pre-tector and Advocate of the Church) and also the King of England to war against him, as Energy of the

VII. That the Emperor and King of England take on them the Protection of the Pope, and Family of Medicis, against all whatseever. And, on the other side, that the Pope undertake the Protection of them with their Confederates. So that it be not permitted that one of them shall name for his Considerates the Enemy of the other.

YHI. The Swifs are nam'd Considerates on all sides, and are to be disposed either to enter this Langue, or hall themselves Neutral.

IX. That the Emperer and King of England shall in their Dominions, as they have begun, proceed ag. infer Dominans, is user more eigen, presenting g. infer those, qui de fide Catholica male fentire videntur, who differ in their Opinions from the Catholick Faith; or that feek to wrong the southeority of the specialist See and that, in the Links and Pelisifions which the Emperor, and King of England fluid gain front the French, the Pepe fluid copy all Priviledges, Rights, and Autority, due to the See

X. That, after the War with the French they fluill invade the Turk.

XI. They shall not treat from this time apart with any Prince in prejudice of this League. XII. That, notwithstanding the Emperor buth egreed M.1. Ton's noruntationing the imperor with egreet Marriege with the King of France's Daughter; and the Daughtin with the King of England's, art, for the publick good of Christianism, the Emperor may many the Princip Mary; to which call the Popular John disputes feeing they are Confin-Germans, their Mothers being two Sifters.

XIII. That this Convention shall be kept migh feeres, until it be published by common confent.

XIV. That the Contractors are to give their Letters Patents in confirmation of this Treety, within three Mouthe.

XV. That this Agreement shell not derogate from any Treaty that bath been between the King of England and the Empiror; fo they be not contrary to this

Thus was Him refelved against France, to be- War regin at the appointed time. In the mean white, folved agin at the appointed time. In the mean winte, now infining in the narrow Seas, and use of English 808 Ports was allowed the Franch till February follows—Franch ing. While these great affairs were in agitation, our Chronicless observes, that the Great Seal of Engage Laboratory with the Carlind on Carl is prompt 5. land being with the Cardinal at Callis, many Englifb repair'd to him to receive their Dispatches, and at home the conflictuting of Sheriffs was fulpended, &c. which I remember the rather, that it was afterwards urg'd against him. And now) common confoir; which if they chame to be im- all foreign businesses being done, the Cardinal action of the by light, or foul Weather, they are to repair * returns to England. Where, to m guille his Store.

Mer sa A Frenc or sucland him, afterwards, against the Duke of Ferrara. The of his Title of Defenfor Fidei, which the Pope had put into his hands, together with a f con-† Aug. tinuation of his Legantine Power, only to gratifie him for his affidance against Francis; the King

"Nov. 13 on the other fide * bestowing on him the Abbacy of Saint Albans, towards his charges in this Journey. The Har thus continued the Emperor Dec. 19 took Townsy, to the no little feandal of Francis, who was yet oblig'd to continue his payments for it to our King. On the other fide, Francis prepares an Army for Italy; for though the Ma-refehal Tamas de Foix (Seigneur de Lefein, and Brother to Od.t d. Foix Seigneur de Lutreeb) had now for some time commanded Allm; yet as he grew odious, through his manifold Oppressions, the People fought occasion to revolt. Which the Imperialists under Ferdinand d'Avalos Marquils of Pefeara understanding, requir'd the Popes Millance; who, in conformity to his League, The War Sent Forces, whereof Prop ro Colonia was chief. His first action was the besieging of Parma, which Lessandesended, until his Brother Lautrech comin Day. ing with an Army of twenty thousand Swiji, feven or eight thousand Tenetians, besides French, to relieve him; the Army of the League role, and retir'd. But Lautreeb afterwards remaining ide for fome few days, fixteen hundred of the Swifs being not well paid; and for the rest gain'd by the Cardinal de Medicis to the contrary Party, forfook him and ferv'd Colonna, (who there-Nov. 23 upon marching to Milan (whether Lautrech had retin'd himself) took it easily, the Castle yet helding out; I howbeit, Lautrech escaping to Como with four thousand Swis, and some Venetions, and from thence to the Territories of the Republick; whereupon Pavia and Parma yielded, and Cremena, all fave the Castle. When the Venetians, fearing the Storm might fall on themfelves, defir'd Lautrech to depart; who being al-fo for faken of his four thousand Swis, got into the Cassle of Cremona, and fent his King word of the ill Success. Which the Pope also hearing, and being affur'd together that Sforza should be reftor d to Afrian, was fo overjoy'd, that he * dy'd thereof: fo can every Passion in his turn kill though some suspected he might die of Poy-

I will conclude this year with the invention of Muskets; which Bellay faith were first us'd

Oftob

· Dic r.

dies of

Musker

fiell us'd

Nai.

€ardin.d

N 04.5

pacv.

The Cardinal of York finding occasion now fair, fends Doctor Richard Pace, Dean of St. Paul's, to Rome, to essay if by any means it were possible to make him Pope. He writes also to Charles, to the Paremembring him first of his promise; next it was represented how unjust it would be in him, openly to have a Pope of his own nominating; there being fo many businesses of his to be determin'd in the Confiftory; that the particular utility which would redound to him thereby, englit not to be lay'd in ballance against the univerfal dishonour that both he and the whole Christian Church would fuffer in fuch a factious and feandalous Election: especially, when his bufinels might be done in a more decent and fafe way. For if the Papacy were conferr'd on him, hi-Imperial Majesty might be confident he should and the fame faithfulness he had experience of in the laft Treaty. Since therefore this was the best expedient for giving himself Reputation, and fecuring his Affairs, that he should not full herein. For as it was the place of Henry the Eighth to be Arbiter of Christendom, it would his to be the chief Instrument thereof. For which purpose also, he should be ready ever to Negotiation, he prefeats our King with the Buil think that being Pope, he would alter this Lanof his Title of Defollow Fidei, which the Pope had put into his hands, together with a f continuation of his Legantine Power, only to gradient of the Authority of Charles in Italy, was the only to the Authority of Charles in Italy, was the only to the Authority of Charles in Italy, was the only to the Authority of Charles in Italy, which our King him for his affiliance against Francu; the King desired. 1521 fird to featter amongst the Cordina's at Rome, to whom he was charged to represent how much occasion of Calamny, the Lutherns and other Enemies of their Religion would find, if an unfitting choice were made at this time. That this must follow if any belonging either to Charle or Francis were elected; belides that it would make their differences in sconcileable. Or when otherwise the Papacy sel, i. . the hands of one who could not uphold and intain the Authority of the See, as an Italian of fome other not firongly supported Person; count then it must become a prey to the strongest. That the fole way to remedy these Inconveniencies was to choose him, who had a King able and well affected to maintain Religion and Peace in thefe dangerous times. Our Cardinal also did not forget Francis; to whom, if not favour, yet at least indifferency was promis'd, in case he were Pope; and that this was more than he could hope for any other way. But before Pace could come to And is Reme, Adrian Cardinal of Tortofa, heretofore Tutor to Charles, and for the prefer refiding in Pointed.

Spain, (where he had the quality of Governador (Spans, (Where he had the quants of information of the Capitalla) was * chosen Pepe, though not with Jan 9-fuch an universal consent; but that (as I find by Arran our Records) our Cardinal had sometimes nine, the Vale and forectines twelve, and femetines nineteen Precentor Voices. Guiceardine feems much to wonder at choice this Election, feurrilously terming him not only Pape. Fentifice Barbero, because he was a Fleming, but alledging divers other incapacities in him for that place. But the wifer fort did not think fo : Charles having given those testimonics of his good affection to the Peace of Italy (especially by his generous refloring of Milan to Francisco Sforzi) that they nothing doubted but he would prove their best Patron and Help for the expulsion of all Strangers. Howfoever, that Advien, being of a moderate and calm Disposition, would prove no Incendiary. Pace, though he heard by the way that adrian was chosen, yet holds on his Journey, as having fecond Instructions to countenance his Imployment, when the first succeeded not; therefore, departing from Rome to . ?nice about July this year, he mediated a Pence July betwirt Charles and the Vinctions, (who had his therto held with the French, remonstrating to them the many Reasons which they had to join with the Emperor and King of England against Francis, who had first broken the common Peace made 1518, wherein the faid State of Tenice was compris'd, and thereby bound to fall on the Infractor thereof, &c. But the Venetians being engag'd to Francis, took time only to advise there-

Adrian being thus chefen, Julio Cardinal de Medicis, who aspir'd to the Papacy, was highly discontented; infomuch that for aking the Imperial Party, he joyn'd himfelf with three thousand Foot, and two hundred Horfe, to the French. Francisco Matia also, who (upon Leo's Death) had recover'd Urbin, adhering to them; fo that, with the addition of fixteen thousand Swifs newly levy'd, and fome Troops Lautrech the Marefchal de Foix brought, the French had a confiderable Army, with which he belieg'd P. via. But Prespero Column coming with the Imperial Forces Battel; which yet the Imperial its would not accept. This while Montmoreney having taken ditpole King Henry to hold good Correspondence Novara, return'd; so that the French new pursuanth his Imperial Majesty. Neither must be ing their Point, the Imperialists were forc'd to get themselves within a strong Retrenchment at | Biccoca. And here either fide attended their Adranage, the Franch hoping to drive the Imperalitis away by Famine, and they again, that the Smift for want of pay would defert the Franch. That of the Smift inceeded first; for demanding either to have their Pay, or leave to depart, or at least order to fight, the French, who wanted Money, chose this latter, as the less inconveni"April-2, ence, and so gave "on. But being repuls'd with great loss, the next day the Swifs return'd, and the rest of the Army retir'd towards Lodi and Cremona, and laftly to the Venetian Territories; while the Imperialists, making use of their Victory, got both these places, the Castle of Cre-wing only excepted, which held out for the space of one whole year, though the Castle of Milan The French yielded prefently. Lautrechthus finding all things unfortu- desperate, retires to France, laying the fault up on his not receiving pay for his Soldiers; which yet, the Fronch fay, was not for want of order from the King, but through the coverousness of his Mother Lalisse, or the default of some Officers. And now the Imperialists, losing no time, march'd to Geneua; in which were two Factions, those of the Family of the Fieschi, Adorni, and Spinola, being Imperialifts, and those of the *May 30. vern'd now. Howfoever the Imperialists * en-The In. ter'd and fack'd that rich City; which yet they perialist quitted, when they had depos'd the Fregoff, and tale Gan. fet up the Adorni. Francisco Sforza was reflor'd alio to that of Millan, the Emperor not referving to himself fo much as one place in that Country. And so Coloma concluded the War for this year of 1522. Nevertheless the Treaties with the Venetians proceeded, which at last took effect, as shall be more particularly related.

The proceedings betwixt our King and Charles were not kept fo fecret, but that they became fufficiently known to Francis, who would not yet inflantly take notice of them, as being more unprovided than fuddenly to bring matters to extremity. Therefore he continu'd a while his smooth Letters to the Cardinal. At last, betwixt impatience, and the order he hop'd to give in Scotland and Ireland, to find our King e-nough to do, he began to declare himfelf. Therefore, his Subjects having made fome Depredations on the English Merchants, and farisfaction thereupon being required, he delay'd if not de-These particular Offences ny'd Reparation. were accompany'd with a main breach of Treaty, as curking conceiv'd. For the Duke of Alnow after five years absence, return'd to his charge of Scotland, as shall be told more largely hereafter. Our English foreseeing thus a storm likely to enfue, rethe themselves betimes from Fr. ne; the Merchants withdrawing their Goods from the Port-Towns, and the Scholars their Persons and Studies from Paris. Anne Bolen also Stip in that Court ever fince she † came over with our Kings Sifter until this rime) quitted it now, and return'd to England; where the did partake not, afterwards more good and ill fortune than flee Esplant, to Princis tharply, telling him that howfoever be excused himfelf for fending ever the Duke of Alba-EN; jet that be knew well, nothing was done therein without his Direction; and that it was the manner of his Cranes, allud clam molini, allud specie finu-ations offentare, to lock one may and row and-rice, as helder hath it) reproceing bin allo with leaves of his Outh. Fancis much moved with this rough Expollutation, objecteth to King Henry t e foret brenty at Bonges with the Emperor

1521, requiring King Henry to declare himseli. 1522 Besides, he caused all the English Mens Goods that ARup-remain'd to be seiz'd on, through his Kingdom, ture beand especially those at Bourdeaux; which seem'd tween and epeciany those at Numeranxy, which reem to ween for much the unjuffer, that divers of our Mer-Extends chants had not only bought Wines there with Fante, ready Money, but paid Cuffom for it. Our King hearing this, confined the French Ambaffador to his House, feifeth on all other French and Seats here, and commits the better Persons for a time, or until they had paid a pecuniary Mulct, the poorer fort being exempt yet upon ten Days imprisonment. The Vice-Admiral Sir William Fitz-Williams (being in January last recall'd from his Ambassage in France, and Sir Thomas Cheney fent in his place) also was commanded to Sea with a strong Fleet, to secure our Mer-April. chants and take what French he could. Moreover, because the French denied the rest of the Money due, and detain'd the French Queens Dower, our King caufed the French Hoftages to be kept under an honourable, yet fomewhat ftricter Guard, than before, without using further Rigour. And, whereas Francis had desir'd him to declare himself, King Henry sent over Clarenceaux his Herald, in the end of March, with March. his Declaration; whereby it was shew'd, that because Francis was the Infractor of the common Peace, the King of England must take the Emperor's part against him. Upon this, Ambassadors were recall'd on both fides, and War ex- May. pected. Howbeit, as the Lord Brook, Sir Edward Populars, Sir John Peacly, and Sir Edward Belknap, all brave Captains, di'd about this time, (not of Poison given at * Ardres (when the Interview * 1520. was) as some would have it; but of a Pestilential Air, as Hall relates;) fo our King left those whose Service he now most needed.

And because King Henry meant to put to Sea a Royal Fleet, the Earl of Surrey (as being Admiral of England) was recall'd from his Charge Jun. In Iteland; where having, among other Services, repressed the Irruptions of the O-Neale's and O-Carrol's, he so govern'd the Land, that he both did his Prince an acceptable Service, and gain'd the love of the civil People of that Country, leaving (after a Parliament he held there from June 1521, to the end of March 1522, Pierce Butler Lord Deputy, who yet kept not long possession of this Honour, as shall be shew'd in its due

nlace

The Cardinal about this time, whether for oftentation of his Power, or redeeming the Peoples favour, caus'd the Preachers at St. Paul's Crofs in London to publish, that all those who would eat White-meats that Lent ensuing, should without paying any thing, be exempt from Punishment and Sin. But the People unwilling to be caught by those Baits, so contemptuously rejected this offer, that the Cardinal might eafily judge how ungracious he was with them. But as the manner of the most subtile fort of Favourites hath been not to fludy fo much good as great Acti- Card, Weetons, as hoping thereby to amuse and entertain Jy's Fotheir Princes; so this Cardinal, by the perpetual liev. variation (he feem'd to cause) in the Affairs of Christendom, held not only the Minds of the People in attention and fuspence, but made his Counfels more confiderable to the King, than if he had purfued any one way. The last change, whereof he was Author, had its chief Overture at Bruges, where, among other things, the Emperor refolv'd to repair to England to fpeak with our King more particularly, concerning the general Affairs of Christendom, and to treat of a Match betwixt himfelf and the Princess Mary, Daughter to our King. And finally (which our King took for a fingular honour) to be inflalled per-1522. fonally of the Order of the Garter at Windfor, while himself sate there as Chief. For after his * retaining Maximilian the Emperor in pay, the 1413. next great testimony of respect this World could give him (he thought) was, that so brave and great an Emperor as Charles, should, in so busie and difficult Times undertake a Voyage, to be admitted into that most noble Fellowship. Into which also Ferdinand his Brother, afterwards Em-Hall. peror, was elected the last St. George's Day, viz.)

April 23, 1522, and had the Order and Hibits
fent him to Noremberg, where, being the Emperor's Lieutenant, he he'd a Dict that Year. And now, for the more magnificent reception of the Emperor, the Marquis Dorfet was fent to C .:-Cirolo V. lais, and the Cardinal to Dover; whither, upon cones in the 26th of Man, 1722, (being about the time to 80g, his Forces enter'd and fick'd General) the Emburg.

May 26 peror arriv'd. The Cardinal first assured that the first state of the cardinal first assured to the first state of the f

*May 28, his welcome; which our King following * prefently afterwards, confirm'd. From hence the Hune 2. King conducted him to † Greenwich, where the Queen (his Aunt) with much Joy attended him. Hence again the King, riding in great pomp through London, conducted him to his Lodging in Black-Fryers: His Train being plac'd in the † 7. Spoot pew beautified Paluce at Brid. well. To relate in Ed. VI. the Juffs and other Solemnities on this occasion, or to tell how often Dukes, Earls, and Lords gave Water to the Cardinal at an high Mass in June 8. Woolfey's Paul's, (where the Princes were on Whitfunday) is not my intention. Only for the rarity I cannot omit that on June 19. the Emperor wearing Charlesin not one that on June 19, the Emperor Wearing fall'd Kt. the Robes of the Order, and fitting in his Stall of the at Windfor, accompanied the other Knights in all Garterat Windfor.

his Ceremonies and Rites usual at that time: Which being done, both he and our King receiv'd the Sacrament together, and fwore upon the Holy Evangelists to observe the League concluded betwixt them, which was to this effect, as appears by an Original, subscrib'd and feal'd by Charles.

The Treaty of Wandfor.

Record.

1418.

Whereas there was lately War begun betwint us Charles, and the King of France, and (by Virtue of a League concluded between us and King Henry, and the faid King of France) both we and Francis, by our Letters, required Aid of the faid King Henry, one against the other; and the faid King of England in the biginning of this War, to compile these Differences, font to Caldist the most Reverend Father in God Thomas Cardinal of York, as his Lieutenant, before whom when many Disputes had been on both fides, who first began the War, and it was found that the fault was in the French King, and that he first began with us, not in Luxemburgh only, by Robert dela March, Suborn'd by bim, but by his Captains also in Navarre, and bir'd Foreign Soldiers which were not his Subjects to break the publick Peace, contrary to the Treaty of London; wherefore, when the most Reverend Fa-ther aforesaid could not effect at Calais either Peace or Truce under any honourable Conditions, the faid King of England understanding, as well by the relation of the said most Reverend Father, as by the Letter of Francis fold most Reverent retwee, as of the Letter of France, written to his Orators and Captains (which were showed to the said King of England) that the said Francis had broken both the Treaty of London, and all other Treaties and Agreements of Affinity don, and all other Treaties and Agreements of Affinity concluded between them and every serious of Albany into Scotland (which was againft bits of Albany into Scotland (which was againft the bindred on his part. In like manner the King Oath given) but also denying the King of England bits Penform, and violating bits Subjects againft the England bits Penform, and violating bits Subjects againft the the England bits Penform, and violating bits Subjects againft the trimony bound by the Treaty of England hits resolved the trimony bound by the Treaty of London. And therefore upon between the England bits Penform and the faild King Henry, as also of a Marriage (and the Consequence of the Conseq the French) have concluded both League and Alliance 1522. in manner following:

I. The faid Emperor shall not contract any Marriage with any Woman, while the faid Prinocts Mary is under Age, but shall tarry for her, and when she is ripe marry her; as foon as she is twelve Years old, he shall send a Proxy to contract with her a Marriage per works to epreciate, and she shall send a Proxy to him to the same purpofe.

II. The King of England during this time shall not give her to any elfe.

III. As foon as this League is published, both Princes shall (at common costs) fend Orators to the Pope, and obtain of him a Dispensation fufficient for the performance of the faid Marriage in its due time; notwithstanding that they are in the feeend degree of Confanguinity and Affinity; fo that the fifue may be legitimate.

IV. The Princess shall be transported at the King of England's charge, with all Equipage and Furniture fitting her Dignity, within four Months next following the Contract per werbs de professi abovefaid. And the shall be transported to Bruges, if Charles be in the Low-Countries; if in Spain, then to the Town of Bilboa; whom within four Days next enfuing, Charles shall marry publickly in the face of the Church; and, till that time, the shall remain in the hands of the Commissioners of King Henry, who transport

V. Her Dowry, which King Henry shall give with her, shall be 400000 Crowns; whereof shall be paid the first half the Day of Marriage, or within eight Days after; and the other half within a Year following, Charles giving Acquirtances. Yet, if the faid Princels (for want of Iffue Male left by King Henry) shall succeed in the Kingdom of England, then nothing shall be paid for Dowry with her; and whatfoever shall have been paid, shall be restored to the Executors of the King of England. It is also agreed, that out of the fecond payment of the latter Moyety (as above-faid) of the Dowry, the King of England may deduct all Monies which are due to him, and formerly borrowed of him by the faid now Emperor or his Grand-Father Maximilian, if they shall not be paid before. And the said King of England shall restore to the said Emperor the Deeds of Obligation, and the Pledges for the fame. But if the King of England have a Son, then the whole Dowry (above-affign'd) shall be paid, and shall be increas'd to a Million of Crowns, by the addition of 600000; which 600000 shall be paid (after the 400000 are paid) yearly by 200000 Crowns per Amum. For her Jointure, the Emperor shall assign her in Lands and Cities 50000 Crowns of yearly Rent clear; and parti-cularly for a part thereof, fuch Towns as the late Lady Margaret of England had for Jointure in the Low-Countries, the relt in Spain, to enjoy as long as she lives. If she die before the Emperor her Husband without Children, then all her Jewels, &c. shall remain to the Émperor.

VI. The Emperor binds himfelf, his Heirs, and his Dominions, unto the King of England, his The Trea-his Dominions, unto the King of England, his The Trea-Crowns, that this Treaty of Marriage shall not peace and be hindred on his part. In like manner the King Confede-of England binds himself.

1322. mies, &c. And, when one is invaded, the other land, or the Guetares the A fhall aid him totis wiribus, as he would defend the cach fhall give Aid to other. himfelf.

111. And because the King of England hath entertain'd the Emperor, and given him leave to pass through his Country into Spain, to provide the better for recovery of his Rights against his ach, and hath transported him over into Eighad by a Fleet of 3000 Men; therefore, in requiral, the Emperor, when King Henry shall pass ove to Casals, or any other Port, in expedition against the Banch, will provide and lend him at his own cost a number of Ships or Vessels to transport his Soldiers, Horse, and Munition, till the Charge Equal the Cotts which King Henry bestow'd on the Emperor in this kind.

IV. To recover fuch Lands as the French King detains from both, each Prince, before the end of ALT 1524. or fooner, shall levy Armies thus; is. I the Emperor in Person with ten thousand Horfe, and thirty thousand Foot or more, with competent Ammunition, shall invade France on the Coast of Spain. And, at the same time, all the Dominions' of the Emperor shat, declare and wage War against Francis. Also, the King of England by the fame time (Miy 1524. ' shall pass the Sea in Person, and, with ten thousand Horse and thirty thousand Foot, or more, and Ammunition, &c. shall fall on France, on what part he shall see most convenient. And because the King of England hath not of his own fo many Horfe, the Emperor will provide him Horse (so he nev them) and Foot (if he need.) If the King If England be coming to Battel with the Enemy, and fend to the Emperor's Forces, being near at friend, to affift him, they shall come and aid him, unless there be a just Impediment.

War shall be made by Sea, (viz.) the Emperor his Navy shall furnish three thousand fighting Men: the King of England so many likewise to height Francis's Dominions severally, or jointly. They shall not revoke or diminish their cet without confent, but reinforce it, if imired.

VI. Neither shall desist from Hostility without confent of the other.

VII. Each shall give the other free passage through his Country.

VIII The King of England shall maintain and keep two thousand Soldiers in the Borders of Calais, and the Emperor as many in Artois, which shall make Inroads into France, and repel the Invasions of the French, either singly or jointly.

IX. Because the French use much the German Soldiers, therefore each Prince, to divert them from the French, shall entertain as many German Foot as he can; and within two Months next following, the Emperor shall renew and publish the Imperial Edicts, whereby all Germans are (under pain of being accounted Rebels, and confif-cation of their Goods) forbidden to ferve under the Fiench. And the Duke of Lorrain shall be admonth à not to fuster any Germans to pass through his Country to aid the King of France; if he do, then these two Princes will account him their Lucmy.

X. If either of the two, recover from France Places belonging to the other, he shall, upon remission, restore them, within a Month: And, prevent Ambiguities and Quarrels, each Prince ciore May 1524. thall declare his Pretences.

XI. Also, if either Prince have an intention Al. Allo, it either remore have an intention a recover any other Rights, againft other with holders, as it the King of England will fushed watern anno the Kingdom of England, or reduce helmid to due Obedience; or the Emperor secover Gueldres or Frise, or punish any Rebel;

And, when one is invaded, the other land, or the Gueldres the Dominions of Charles; 1522

XII. To confirm this Treaty; It is agreed, there shall be mutual Intelligence between the two Princes, and all things done by common Confent; fo that neither shall Treat with Francis or any other Prince, without the knowledge and confent of the other, to the prejudice of this Treaty. And, if any former Treaty made, be prejudicial to this, they shall be counted or less value and force than this.

XIII. Both Princes, appearing before the Cardinal of Tork as Judge, in what place he shall chuse, shall voluntarily submit to his Jurisdiction as Legate, and confessing themselves to be bound to observe this Treaty, shall require the said Legate to pronounce the Sentence of Excommunication against them, if they violate the Articles thereof.

XIV. If the Princess Mary die, and so this Marriage take no effect, and it happen that the King of Engl. nd have a Son, and the Emperor by some other Wife have a Paughter, and it Conwords; then Affinity shall be contracted by means of those two.

XV. This Treaty, till it take its effect, and be put in execution, shall be kept secret from the French.

It was agreed also, that this Treaty shall be fignified to the Pope Adrian VI. and he be intreated to enter into it, and held as a principal Contrahent, if he accept it within three Months. The Fenetians, if they will accept this Treaty 1512, within three Months, fo, as (according as they ought by the Treaty of London) they will forfake the French, and declare themfelves against him, fhall be comprehended. The Swifs shall have this Treaty figrified to them, and be practifed to renounce the French, or, at leaft, to be Neutral. None shall be comprised in this Treaty, which is Enemy to either of the two principal Contrahents: For the reft, each may name his Friends.

The fame day that this Treaty was fivorn, Charles gave his Oath also to another Agreement, call'd June 19 the Indomnity; which was an Obligation, whereby he bound himself to Jave King Henry harmless for all the Sums of Money and Pensions, which were or should be due to King Henry from Francis, (upon former Agreements betwint them) and now were or should be with-beld by the faid Francis, upon denunciation of War against him.

This was fworn in the prefence of, Thomas Cardinalis Eberac. Legate and Chancellor of England. Mercurinus Comes Gattinicie. Baro Gaane & Terrugie. Petrus de Meca Episcopus Palentin. Johannes Aleman. Thomas Bishop of Darwine.

Lord Privy-Seal. Cuthbert Tinstall Doctor of both Laws, elect Bishop of London, Vice-Chancellor of England.

Laftly, Charles wanting Money for his prefent Occasions, our King supplied him abundantly, upon assurance given him of repayment. Charles having difpatch'd his Affairs here, and commanded his Fleet, confifting of 180 Sail, to meet him at Southampton is * accompani'd by our King to *June 12. Winchester. Before, yet, they departed, it was refolv'd betwixt them, to make use of some Venetian Gallies (then riding in our Ports) upon pretence of conveying the Emperor to Spain. Which proceeding yet, left it should be thought abrupt, and prejudicial to our League with that State, was by Instructions from hence to Pace (his Majesty's Ambassador resident there) excufed in great part, by alledging, that if they if either the Scots trouble and invade Eng- would make good the Confederacy enter'd into, lies were imploy'd against the French, as the first Violaters and Disturbers of the publick Peace. And when they would not join, it was but a just Punishment for their falling off. Which yet was not to be understood in that Rigour, but they thould be reftor'd in due time; as in effect I find they were shortly after. This being done, Charles

* July 1. having taken * leave of our King, goes to Southbampton, and attends a Wind and the Convoy of our Admiral, who for better complying with the common Cause, according to the League 1518, was likewise constituted his; the Patent whereof for the rareness as well as honour of the Perfon, I have caus'd to be fet down.

1522. 1518, they must not take it ill, that their Gal-

The Earl of Surres

AROLUS Quintus, Divina favente Clementia electus Romanorum Imperator, femper Augustus, ac Germania, Hispaniarum, Emperor's Utriusque Sicilia, Jerusalem, Hungaria, Dalmatia, Croatia, &c. Rex, Archidux Austria, Dux Burgundia, Brabantia, Comes Habspurgi, Flandriae, Tirolis, &c. Cum ita sit quod Sere-nissimus & potentissimus Princeps Henricus Octavus Angliæ & Franciæ Rex, Frater, Avunculus, & Confæderatus noster charittimus, pro ejus Jure Fæderis quod cum co nobis inter-cedebat, nuper Francisco Francorum Regi, tanquam Fæderum quæ cum nobis am-Lobus habebat violatori, Bellum justè indixerit, caufamque fuam cum nostra, qui ab eodem Rege Gallo invasi suimus, conjunxerit, Classemque ob id maritimam inter cateros Belli apparatus instruxerit, cui præfecit Illuilrissimum Consanguineum nostrum charistimum Thomam Comitem Surrium, Ordinis tui Garterii Militem, Admiraldum Angliæ, Walliæ, Hiberniæ, Normaniæ, Vasconiæ, & Aquitania; nosque pariter eundem communem hoslem Gallum armis etiam maritimis urgere (ut par est) decreverimus, juncta ipfa nostra cum præfati Serenissimi Avunculi nostri Classe, reputantesque tum jam dicti ejus Admiraldi infignem Bello peritiam, fortitudinem, atque alias fingulares virtutes, cui merito multa majora onera committi possent, tum quæ Conjunctis viribus armifque geruntur multo meliùs uno duce, uno Capite regi qu'am pluribus: Eaproprer non abs re duximus, fi & nostræ ipsius Classis onus, Bellique maritimi provinciam eidem Angliæ Admiraldo deftinaremus. Itaque in vim præfentium Literarum nostrarum, prædicto Illustrissimo Thomæ Comiti & Admiraldo, ac Classis prædicti Regis Avunculi nostri Capitaneo Generali eandem damus & concedimus authoritatem, plenamque & omnimodam potestatem super Classem nostram maritimam, omnesque ejus Capitaneos, Milites, & Classiarios, cujusque Tituli funt gradusve & conditionis, quam ipse Admiraldus super Regis sui Classem habet, tam in honorandis Militibus, Equestrique dignitate quos dignos censuerit intigniendis, è contra verò malefactoribus puniendis, quas eis voluerit legibus statuendis, eorumque Causis cognoscendis, quam in cæteris omnibus & fingulis faciendis & executioni mandandis, juxta authoritatem eidem à prædicto Rege suo concessam, ac quemadmodum aliàs spectar ad officium unius maritimæ Classis Capitanei seu Generalis præfecti, ipfiúsve prædicti Admiraldi fingulari prudentiæ convenire in omni- 1522. bus vifum fuerit, atque expedire. Mandantes ob id, atque expresse committentes universis & singulis Capitancis, Vice-Capitancis, Locumtenentibus, Baronibus, Nobilibus, Mili-tibus, Magistris, Naviculatoribus, Classiaris, exterisque Militibus omnibus tain equitibus quàm peditibus, in Classe ipsa nostra existentibus, aut futuris, quòd eidem Comiti Admiraldo & Capitaneo generali ac ejus in hac parte sufficienter Deputato intendentes, auxiliantes, & obedientes fint, in omnibus prout decet, contrafacientibus debità pænà non carituris. Harum Testimonio Literarum manu nostrà subscriptarum, nostrique Sigilli appensione munitarum. Dat. in Urbe Londinensi. Die VIII. Menfis Junii, Anno Domini Millefimo Quingentefimo Vicefimo Secundo, Regnorum nostrorum, Romani tertio, Caterorum verò omnium Septimo.

Per Imperatorem

CHARLES.

J. ALEMAND.

HARLES V. by the Divine Favour and Cle-CHARLES V. og the Enterior Liberton and St. mency elected, most August Emperor of the Romans; King of Germany, Spain, both Sicilies, Jerufalem, Hungary, Dalmaria, Croaria, &c. Archelles, Charles and Company, Brahaman, Control of the Programmy Republication of the Programmy Programm Duke of Austria, Duke of Burgundy, Brabant, Earl of Habsperg, Flanders, Tirol, &c. Since it is so that the most seven and powerful Prince Henry the Eighth, King of England and France, our most dear Brother, Uncle and Confederate, according to the Tenor of the League enter'd into with us, bath most justly proclaimed IVar against Francis King of France juftly proclaimed Wer against Francis King of Francis, for his breach and violation of the Treaty concluded with either of us 3 joining herein with us who have been invaded by the Jaid King of France: and to carry this on more effectually, bath enough other verifike Proparations sitted on a Fleet, which he hath put under the Command of the most Illustrious Thomas Earl of Surry, our most dear Coussin, Kinght of the most Noble Owler of the Gester Lord Hish Admits of Fineland. Order of the Gerter, Lord High Admiral of England, Wales, Ireland, Normandy, Gascogne and Aquitain: We likewife with the same reason have decreed to infest and invade the said common Enemy the King of France with our Forces at Sea, by joining our Flect with that of our aforesaid most screne Uncle, both in consideration of the Valour, Skill and Courage, and other singular Vertues of the said Admiral, whereby he is rendered capable not only of this but even of a greater Trust, as also because whatsoever is undertaken by Confederate Forces and united Arms may be better executed by being under the Conduct of one Captain-General than many: Therefore we judged it not unfit likewise to place the charge of our Fleet, and the con-duct of this War by Sea under the Command of the faid Admiral of England. By thefe therefore our Letters Patents We grant and give to the faid most Illu-frious Thomas Earl of Surry, Lord High Admiral and Captain-General of the Navy of the aforefaid King our most firme Uncle, the same Authority, full and plenary Power over Our Royal Navy, the Captains, Soldiers and Seamen thereof, of what Degree, Title or Rank foever, which the faid Admiral hath in the King his Master's Fleet: Both in promoting the Officers, in conferring the Honour of Knighthood on Persons of Merrit, in punishing Malefactors, in giving out fitting Orders, judging and trying all Causes, as also in executing and appointing all and every thing under his Command, according to the Authority by the afovefait King to him granted, and as the fingular Skill and Psudence of him, as Captain-General and Commander in Chief of the Fleet, shall on all Occasions judge needful or expedient July r.

raken by the Eng-

Pscardy.

1522. to be done. To this end hereby strictly commanding and cujoining all our Flags, Captains, Lieutenants, Barons, Noble-Alen, Officers, Mafters, Pilots, Seamen and all our Soldiers, both Horse and Foot, that either now are or finall be in our Fleet; that they pay all Obedi-erce, Duty and Refrect to the faid Earl their Admird and Ceptain-General, or to any Perfen by him harfully deputed, in all things as is fitting, as they finall at the Payl perfect the contrast. In nitrole undressed this Peril answer the contrary. In witness whereof
We have subscribed this our Commission with our own

Hand, and thereto affixed our Seal. Given in London, June 8. 1522. in the third Year of our Reign over the Romans, and seventh over the rest of our Dominions.

By the Emperor

CHARLES.

I. ALEMAND.

The Earl, having accepted hereof by our June 13. King's confent, did, upon June 13. land his Men In Normandy near Cherbourg, and after having deflectly deflect adjoining Country, (fparing only Religious Houses) he return'd to Portland, whence fetting fail again, he lands, July 1, at a place near Marlais in Bretaigns, and with seven thousand Men marcheth thither; where our Master-Gunner having discharg'd a Piece so fortunately, that he broke the Wicket, fome of our Men enter'd in the Smoak and open'd the Gate; whereupon the rest following, the Town was quickly sack'd, and burnt, and a rich Booty carrid to our Navy. After which the Earl com-manded fixteen or feventeen French Ships (he found on that Couft) to be burnt: And fo, leaving his Vice-Admiral to fcowie the Seas, he made certain Knights for their good Service, and The Fmreturn'd to Southampton, whence he conducted the peror fails Emperor to Spain, who taking Ship July 6. arri-to Spain.

July 16. ved July 16. at Saint-Ander. The English Garison, this while, in Collais and Guisses, and the French in Andres and Boulegne were not idle, but took many occasions of invading each others Frontiers, among which one, related by Hall and Hellinshead, seems so memorable, that I have thought fit to infert it. Three hundred French math be-tween the Horfe lying in Ambufcade near Guifnes, and fend-Eween the ing fome Horse before to draw out the English:
Frank in A little Eand of eight Archers issued forth, and maintain d a Skirmish; at last twelve Demy-Lances (which Hall saith were all Welch-men) came to their refeue; the French perceiving this, iffue forth with all their Horse; but our Demy-Lances charg'd them with that Courage, that, killing and hurting divers, they open'd their way to the Town: I These so many occasions of making War, enforc'd the King to make use of his Subjects Affections; whereof that he might A seneral taske the better notice, he caus'd a general Multer Multer in or Defeription to be made (this Summer) of England all his Kingdom, commanding (as Storn hath it 'alma'? out of a *Warrant directed to a Contlable of a Hundred) that they should certifie the Names of all above fixteen Years old; and that they fhould repair to a certain place affign'd, with their Arms, and declare what their Names are, and to whom they belong, and who is Lord of every Town or Hamlet, and who be Stewards, as also who be Parsons of the Town, and what their Benefice is worth, and who be Owners of every parcel of Land within the faid Precincts, and what is the yearly value of every Man's Land, as also the Stock on the Lands, and who is Owner thereof; also, what Strangers dwell there, and of what Occupation they are; also the value and fubstance of every Person being above fixteen Years old, as well Spiritual as Temporal; also, what Pensions go thence to Religious or Spiritual Mon. Which being certified a-1722. gain, the King (as Polydore faith) rejoye'd, as finding his Kingdom fo Wealthy: Howbeit, as " Mayhe was not ready yet for a Parliament, he *borrow'd of the Citizens of London twenty thousand Pound, and fent Privy-Seals to divers other rich Persons of the Kingdom; in sequence whereof, he demanded a Loan (as I take it) of the tenth of the Timporality, according to the true value of their Effates, to be employed in the Wore, and a fourth of the Spirituality. But as this caused much grudging, for the Landauers (particularly) al. High ledged fo many Reasons why they could not, Aug 20upon Oath, give account of their Goods, and Wealth, especially as long as so much of their Stock was in other Mens Hands, that the Cardinal at last accepted their valuation of themselves, upon their fimple Honeslies. All which extraerdinary ways of furnishing the prefent Necesfities yet ended in a Parliament the next Year, as shall be told in its place. The King having thus yet gotten some Money, denounc'd open War to Francis, unlefs he made Peace with the Pope and Emperor. In fequence thereof commanding the Earl of Surrey (and not the Duke of Suffolk, as the French have it) after his attempts by Sca, to go over to Calais, and with convenient Forces to join with Horence d'Egmond, Count de Bure, General of the Emperor's Troops. These meeting together betwixt Ardres (lately demolish'd) and St. Omar, spoil'd and burnt all the Villages in Augtheir way till they came to Heldin, in which An Expeodant Segmen de Blez, with a firing Garifon, commanded. But Autumn being now far come on, and the Weather very unfeafonable, they could only take the Town, the Castle being stronger, than that it was thought fit to attempt They march'd therefore towards Dourlans, which they took, and burnt, with all the adjoining Villages. The Seafon continuing flill very foul, and our Men falling generally fick, the Army feparated, and the rather, that the two Generals could not agree about their Defigns. Before yet the Earl of Surrey departed, he burnt Marquife, and fome other places near the English Pale; which being done, he came home, and gave our King account of his Journey. Whereupon also Sir Thomas Bolen, and Richard Sampson Doctor of Law were fent to Charles in Spain, to advise what further was to be done.

The Duke of Albany, whom we left in France, The Scote was now recall'd by more than one Voice. For Affairs. he was not only fent for by the vote of the No-1521 bility and People of Scotland, but Queen Margaret her felf invited him. Besides, it is probable, that Francis did not unwillingly connive at his departure, as hoping he would find our King enough to do at home. The cause why the State defir'd his return was, that their King was fo young, and fome of their Affairs were difcompos'd. But Queen Mirgaret had also her Reason: For being offended with the Earl of Anguis for forfaking her at Harbottle 15:6, and feandaliz'd much at the love he now bore to a certain Scotch Lady, she had endeavour'd, by the Duke of Albany's means, to procure a Divorce at Rome, alledging, among other Caufer, that she heard, her Husband James the Youtch was living three years after Floddonfield, and therefore not dead when the marry'd him, (to much did that report prevail.) But because our King dad that report prevail.) But because our King again oppos'd this, (as I find by our Records, whence I have the whole passage) nothing was presently done, though afterwards, new Motives appearing, she was divorcid from him, as will appear in its place. The Duke, being new generally * welcom'd, banish'd the Earl of the control of the c guis with his Brother George into France, and caus'd Oftob. 19.

Feb.

1922. his Uncle Gamin the Learned Bishop of Dunkel-- den to be cited to Reme, for the rest summoning a Parliament to begin 1522, whether our King fent Clarenceaux Herald, to require and command The King the Duke to avoid the Realm, and if he would fends Carnot, not, to defie him. And that he might have Kar Arms just cause to use this Language, he was to alinto steet ledge unto the Duke, that he had broken an land to de-land to de-fig the express Article of the Treaty in coming over; Duke of neither could be pretend to have any Commif-Dukey in fion from Francis; who in a Letter to our King, full Parlishad dislayow'd this Action fo far, as he profess d to be neither privy nor confenting to his Journey. Besides, that there was danger of his aspiring to the Crown, and that the Divorce he procur'd for Queen Mirgard, was not without defign to obtain her for himself. And this is the substance of that wherewith Chrenceaux was to charge him (as I gather out of feveral Collections;) howfoever, our Records tell us, that the Duke of zilbany reply'd, that, fince his Recall came from the Nobility and States of the Land, he would retain it against all Kings. As for his being suspected of Ambition to the Crown, he answer'd, that he had rather enjoy his Means in France, than pretend to that Regality. And for Queen Marg ret, he faid he had indeed negotiated a Divorce in Reme, but with no intention to marry her himself, when he could; as having a Wife of his own. Letters also were fent by our King to the Parliament, whereby he perfwaded them to reject the Duke. But they answer'd that they would defend him against all. Laftly I find, by an Original of Queen Margaret, that our King writ to her also; for the there expossuletes sharply with him, for believing those reports concerning the Duke of Albam and her; defending nevertheless the said Duke's being in Scotland; adding, that, if he had not been an unkind Brother, the fhould not have needed to provide for her felf, by the Duke of $2\pi lb$. π_j 's affifance.

Our King finding this took no effect, in February fent the Lord Dacres, Warden of the West-Marches, into Sectland, with about five hundred Men, to Proclaim that the Scots should come in to the King's Peace by the first of March following, or to stand to their Perils, which the Duke of Albany suspecting would prove a War, had provided by this time a great Army in the Borders; unwilling yet to do more than to shew his power to offend. For, besides that many of the better fort judg'd wifely, that if matters succeeded ill, they might be call'd in question, when their King came to full Age: they were not ignorant, how puiffant an Enemy they provok'd; especially, at a time, when their Confederates the French had fo much to do effewhere. Therefore, although the Lord Decres made fome Inroads into Scotland, and burnt divers Villages, * July 30. joyning himfelf with the Earl of Shrewsburn, Constituted Lieutenant General for the North Parts; and that the Duke of Albany himfelf was advanced for far as Carlifle, yet he retir'd; the intercession of Queen Margaret prevailing for a quieted, whereof the Lord Dacres was glad, as being formwhat furpris'd at that time. This *Sept.11. Conference yet brought forth a * Truce only, for a few Days, upon condition that the Scott should send Ambassadors into England, to defire a Peace. But when they requir'd the French their Carnal Liberty. Nevertheless that for Moa Peace. But when they require the Frency in might be comprehended, King Henry would not mey this reflatin might be dispended with confent, howbeit, the Truce was protogu'd:

HI. That Indulgences (call'd there being func) and pardon for xins, not only path but future, Nobility unwilling to invade England on the fed dicaufe all Impiery and Wickedness, while they breight the things of the second of the conference of the cause all the second of the Conference to be had betwixt the Duke and the Lord Ducres, wherein, all for the prefent was of Francis, the event whereof we shall fee the 1522. next year.

But while these Christian Princes were in War thus one againft the other, the Turk who had now long experience what haim the knights of Saint John of Jordalom had done him in the Archipeligo, thought fit to invade the Ide of Rhodes, (their chief Strength and Fortref, arthut time.) Hereunco concurred a requell which some lim upon his Death-bed made unto his Son Solve man, wherein he not only exhorted him to revenge the Affront his Grandfather Alabama fuffer'd, when he was repuls'd thence, but even as a pious and devout Act recommended this Enterprife to him. Such mifehiefs hath Religion, Abrulke-(which should be a new bond of Peace) mathoriz'd unto Mankind, in more than one Age or Country. It was not yet without much danger that Solyman made this Attempt. For as he brought near two hundred thousand Men into a little and barren Island, so, if ever his Shipping had through firing or ill weather been call away or deltroy'd, he must have perish'd there before the Town could be forc'd. But such was the difunion of the Christian Princes, that they Hold their fair occasion; thus, upon Saint John Baptiff's * day (the more to descript the English) June 24; this great Army enter'd the Island, (the Tink himfelf following in Perfon a Month after, and Decease continuing the Siege till Christmer, upon which takehar day Solyman with great pemp enter d Rhad, s, be-from the ing yielded upon competition by Philip de Ville Engleseers a French-man, Great Mailer of that Religion. Solima. Shortly after which, he, tegether with those Knights that remain'd, fail'd towards Ring, and other parts of Italy, where comfortless and errant they continued, till by the intercession of Clement the Seventh (femetimes Knight of that Clement the Seventh (Iemetimes Knight of that Order) and the favour of Charles, they * obtain d *1555.

Melangive

In November this year, a Diet being held at Novemb. Novemberg, Addian fends to the Princes of German, 1821 requiring them passionately to suppress Lutber, according to the Decree at Worms; confessing nevertheless many abuses in Ecclesiastical Government, infomuch, that he doubted not to give ment, interment, that he doubted not to give Chengri his Nuncio Influctions to fay, in his A fee-land, feel alignot jum simis makes aleminants fails, Contains In these later years many aleminable things his contains into the Church, which he therefore promised, by degrees to redrefs. But the meffige pleas'd neither fide: The Cardinals at Rome diffiking Alriai's free Declaration; and the Princes there, as little approving the flow and indirect Courses tihere approving the now and interfect Charles 11-ken for reforming the many Enermides then us'd in the Roman Church, as may appear by their Commo Gravamina; the particulars of which hum.

The lun-dred Grisvances, I have thought fit to infert, net ing my Intentions, the Reader may find briefly a the Pope true Hiftory of the times.

Milta, where they now relide.

The Substance of the Centum Grave min -, of Gran fer'd to Pope Advisor by the Germans, was to this be re-

That the Church bath both commanded and forbilden divers things the Scripture did not: As certain Obflacles of Marriage, Differences of Ment, &c. all yetto be redeem d for Money.

II. That People, who etherwise might juilly Marry, were yet forbidden it at certain times, when yet both Ecclefiallics and Layics took then

Vol. II. 112

Octob.

1522. Money in their Hands, they shall have perfect free-

Abuses in dom from all. IV. That the Money for Indulgences, &c. was not employ'd the way it was promis'd, that Church is to fay against the Turk, but towards their Friends and Kindreds Expence and Luxury. V. That yet the Pope, Bishops, and other principal Persons of the Clergy reserved some cases to themselves, which none other can dis-pence with, and that this again cost them much.

VI. That the pardon of Sins for future times, brought in all mischief, as Perjury, Homicide, Adultery, and the like.

VII. That certain Preachers (call'd Stationarii) went up and down the Country, preaching the Lives of some holy Men or Saints, as Valentine Hubert, &c. promiting the simple People, that if they vow'd themselves to those Saints, and pay'd fuch an yearly Tribute, they should be free from fuch Diseases, as they nam'd.

VIII. That the Fratres Mendicantes, call'd Terminarii, confum'd the Alms that the poor should

IX. That, at the inflance of Ecclefiaftical Perfons, divers Layies were cited to Rome, to anfiver concerning businesses not belonging to that Court, as namely matters of Inheritance, Gages, and Pawns, &c.

X. That even Layies, upon their Oath that they cannot hope for Juffice in Garmany before their ordinary Judge, might bring their Cause to Rome, though otherwise it were provid that Ju-flice were done, and the Party perjur'd.

NI. That certain Judges call'd Conferentores, which were appointed by the Pope to determine the Caules of certain Ecclefiaflies, did under colour thereof trouble all other places of Judica-ture, and derogate from the Temporal Authority, Excommunicating all that would not obey them.

MI. That certain Delegates and Commissaries of the Pope were often appointed to determine the fecular Caufes of any Perion whatfoever, and to denounce Excommunication if they difobey'd.

XIII. That the Pope, by exempting certain Monafteries from the jurifdiction of their Bithops and Ordinaries, went about to draw an immediate dependance upon the Church of Rome, to the diminution of the Imperial Power.

XIV. That the right of Patronage belonging to divers Lay and Ecclefiaffical Persons was (under colour of prevention) usurp'd by the Pope and his Legats, when Benefices were vacant, and that they did confer them ufually upon Courtiers and their Favourites

XV. That these Men either dying at Rome, or in their way thither, their Offices and Benefices were confer'd ufually by the Pope, to the detriment of the true Patrons.

XVI. That divers undue means were practis'd to prove Men amply benefic'd to be Courtiers, and dependants on Cardinals.

XVII. The great Benefices or Ecclefiaffical Promotions could not be confer'd on able Perfons, unless Pensions were first given out of them to the Courtiers and Officers of the Pope.

XVIII. That, under pretences of making Benefices litigious, the faid Courtiers and Officers drew thence great Pensions; and if the ordinary Statutes of Chancery ferv'd not, they form'd and reform'd them as they pleas'd; also the Incumbent dying during this pretended Controverly, the faid Pretenders invaded the Benefice, to the wrong of the Patron.

XIX. That the Collation of Deaneries, and other Ecclefiaftical Promotions was often taken from the right Patrons by the Pope, efpecially ti the former possetsfors were Courtiers.

XX. That in granting Benefices they us'd ma- 1522. ny Arts to get Money, under the names of Refervations, Permutations, Surrogations, &c. to the damage of the Patron.

XXI. That Courtiers often having Benefices in Germany confer'd on them, farm'd them out to Strangers who cannot fpeak the Language.

XXII. That Archbishops and Bishops were bound by their Chapters to bestow the best vacant Benefices, with Cure or without it, among themselves only, to the frustrating of many able Perfons.

XXIII. That the Houses belonging to such Benefices were fuffer'd to fall, and the People untaught, and the Statutes of Founders not ob-

XXIV. That divers Abbeys, and Religious Houses, being deliver'd in commendam to Cardinals, and Bishops, did not feed now above five or fix Perfons, whereas heretofore they nourish'd forty or fifty.

XXV. That, whereas there were divers Collegiate Churches in Germany, into which none but Princes, Earls, Barons, or at least Gentlemen ought to be admitted; that now Courtiers, though inferior Perfons, were receiv'd into them for Money

XXVI. That, whereas in the bestowing of Benefices divers ancient Priviledges and Immunities belong'd both to Ecclefiaftical and Lay Perfons, they were now by the policy of the Roman

See, eluded or infring d.

XXVII. That, whereas Annats were paid to the Pope by Ecclefiaftics, and whereas the Princes of Germany did also pay them for divers years, upon condition the Money might be imploy'd in War against the Turk; now because they understood the Money was otherwise dispos'd of, they defir'd henceforth to be eas'd of this great burden.

XXVIII, XXIX, XXX. That Ecclefiaftics do not pay their due parts, either for a War against the Tink, or other publick Affairs; whereas having to great a portion of Revenue in Germany, they should furnish their reasonable fhare; and in this case the Church-Ornaments and Treasure are not ro be spar'd, lest they come all together into the hands of the Turk.

XXXI. That, whereas Ecclefiaffical Persons, being by taking Orders exempt from fecular Juflice; do thereupon take more freedom to commit Adultery, Murders, Rapine, and even Coin-ing Moneys, to the no little feandal of Religion, and derogation of the fecular Authority; and that their Superiors likewise never punish them, but being first degraded, (to which yet much Ceremony and Time is required,) and that the faid Superiors by their Chapters, are bound not to punish them otherwise.

XXXIL And whereas the leaving thefe Crimes unpunished, may cause Sedition and Tumult in the Laity, as finding the Ecclesiastics have not parity of punishment with them:

XXXII. Therefore, they defir d that Ecclesaftics and Layies may equally fuffer for crimes of the fame nature; and that no Order may priviledge them from the Magistrate.

XXXIV. That whereas Banns and Excommunications ought to be us'd only when Men are convicted of Herefy; that yet Layies incurr'd this punishment for small faults, and so were driv'n to desperation, and excluded from Divine Service

XXXV. That divers also, who were not properly interess'd in the Crime of the Excommunicated Perfon, did yet fuffer as Complices; and all this only that more Money might be gotten.

XXXVI. That when the Priest or Luclesiastical Perfon was kill'd by chance, the whole Town 1722. or Village was interdicted, till compensation were made, and no regard taken of the occasion the Roman Chuich. given.

XXXVII. That Holidays were in fuch number in Harvest-time, that People could not get in their Corn in due feafon; whereas, yet in-numerable mischies were then done, rather than Gods Service frequented according to the first Institution.

XXXVIII. That the Revenues of the Knights of the Teutonic Order, destin'd for War against the Turk, were apply'd to Cardinals, Archbishops, and Bishops, which were neither Germans, nor of the faid Order, contrary to the first Instirution.

XXXIX. That Arch-Bishops, Bishops, and other Prelats obtain'd from Rome Contervators and Delegates, whence fo many grievances follow to the Layies.

XL. That Layies Goods and Inheritance might come to Ecclefiaftical hands by purchase, or otherwise; but that Ecclefiastical Goods and Inheritance might never return to the Layies.

XLI. That when Ecclefiaftical Persons, having Inheritance descended upon them, did die Intestate, divers Bishops did claim that Inheritance themselves, to the prejudice of the next right Heirs.

XLII. That, whereas the profits of certain Lands and Possessins Temporal, were sometimes cafually transferr'd by Layics to Ecclefical Persons, they labour'd to retain the said Lands as their own for ever, by submitting them to Ecclefiaftical Jurisdiction.

XLIII. That Bishops would not confirm the Foundations of Ecclesiastical Benefices, unless the Founders gave them the first bestowing there-

XLIV. That they were forc'd to purchase the confirmation of them for great Sums of Mo-

XLV. That, when by a Lay Perfon any Man were presented to a Benefice, he could not be invested therein, till he had paid as much as a years Profit, or two, to the Bishop and his Officers.

XLVI. That Bishops raise extraordinary Subfidies on the Prieft under them, fo that they cannot live unless they get Money again from the People. Infomuch that they will administer no Sacrament unless some Money be given.

XLVII. That many are made Priefts who have not means to maintain the Charge, to the derogation of their Dignity, while they exercise some fordid Trades; and that they who can get fix Voices for a Certificate, obtain Orders, when yet those Attestations were corruptly gotten.

XLVIII, XLIX. That more is exacted from the People for the Confecration of Churches than is needful; and that, though Layics bestow divers Gifts on the Church, as Altar-pieces, &c. yet Money is requir'd for their Confectation.

L. That if two or more fight in the Churchyard with their Fists, to the drawing of never to little Blood, the Town must pay for the new Confecrating thereof.

LI. That Suffragans us'd to baptize Bells, under pretence of driving away Devils and Tempefts; and, for this purpofe, did invite many rich Godfathers, who were to touch the Rope while the Bell was exorcis'd, and its name invoked (unto which all the People must answer.) And that a Banquet was us'd to be made hereupon, at the cost of the Layies, amounting in little Towns to a hundred Florens, whither the Godfathers were to come and bring great Gifts, &c. whereas they defir'd that the faid Bells might be baptiz'd, not only by Suffragans, but by any

Prieft, with Holy-water, Salt, and Herbs, without fuch Cofts

LII. That, if in any Diocess a Solemnity for a new Saint were frequented, the Bishop us'd to take to himfelf a third or fourth part of the Offering, which yet ought to have been employ'd in War against the Turk.

LIII. That whereas fome Nunnerics were govern'd by Provofts, the Bishops refus'd to accept the faid Provofts till the Nuns had given them Money.

LIV. That when any Abbot or Abbess was chosen, they must be Consecrated anew by the Suffragans, (though otherwise they were capable of the charge) and Feafts made, and great Sums paid. That also many Offices were invented in the Court of Rome, fo that Bishops could not enter their charge without paying great Fees, which again they were forc'd to get of the People as they could.

LV. That Ecclefiastical Judges commonly were Persons of an idle Life, and intentive wholly to Gain.

LVI. That though the Plaintiff be Ecclefiastic, and the Defendant Layic, and that by the Law, Actor Rei Forum sequi debet, the Cause is to be heard in the Defendants Court, yet the Cause was revok'd still to the Ecclesiastical Court.

LVII. That though Justice be neither delay'd nor deny'd in Civil Courts, yet the Ecclesiastical Persons drew matters of debt into their Courts. and oppress'd Men by their rigid Censures.

LVIII. That, whereas Citations and Monitories are granted against Layies, in many cases, which are known not to belong to Ecclefiastical Jurisdiction, yet that the Persons so cited, either can get no remedy herein, or that, before the Civil Magistrate can avoke the cause, so much Time and Money is fpent, as is intolerable to the poor Suitor.

LIX. That Ecclefiaffical Judges drew many causes to their Court, which belong'd not to it, as Ravishments of Virgins, some cates concerning Baftardy, &c. which yet they could not be drawn to remit to the ordinary jurisdiction.

LX. That, when a Man were wrongfully call'd before the Ecclefiaftical Judges, and at laft, after much charges difmifs d, yet unlefs his Adverfaries Proctor were fatisfi'd to the full, he ran the danger of Excommunication.

LXI. That Layies, though by long prescription they paid neither great nor fmall Tenths, out of certain of their Lands, yet receiv'd Citations from Ecclefiaftical Judges, and were conftrain'd to pay, under the penalty of Excommunication; not daring to appeal to Rome, for fear of more exceffive charges, LXII. That all belonging to Ecclefiaftical Perfons labour'd also to take the advantage of the Ecclefiaftical Courts, when they had any Suit against Layies.

LXIII. That, on occasion of injurious words only, Ecclefiaftical Perfonsdrew the Suit to their Courts, and fuffer'd not the lawful Judge to determine it.

LXIV. That in all Causes where Ouths are interpos'd, Ecclefiaftical Judges us'd to avoke them, upon pretence that matter of Oaths were not otherwise to be decided: which at last yet would wholly frustrate Secular Courts; there being to many Cafes wherein Oaths intervene.

LXV. That, when their Judgments concern'd their Ecclefiaftical Superiors, they dare not exercife it, but only let them run against the poorer LXVI. That they have invented many Reformations, Ordinances, Laws, and Statutes wholly differing from the ufual and Common Law; Church.

1522, which yet tend not fo much to the good of the little hope of Affiftance, when the Caufe any People, as their own private gain.

LXVII. That, it being agreed by the Canons Abutes in of the Fathers, that Spiritual Punishments should be inflicted for Spiritual and manifest Sins, Ecclefiaffical Judges and Officers yet did extend and aggravate these punishments so far, that Layies were forc'd to redeem them with Money.

LXVIII. That Men and Women, being fally accus'd, yet upon their purgation, they were fo far from receiving fatisfaction, that they were forc'd to pay for Letters of Absolution; and Oaths, belides, taken of malicious and wicked Wemen, upon words spoken when they revile each other; which made them often incur Perjury, and occasion d much Offence.

LXIX. That, when business of Matrimony bath proceeded fo far, that one of the Parties pretended a Contract, which the other deny'd, and that fome Gifts, as Earnests of Marriage had pass'd betwixt them, the Ecclesiastical Judges yet separating the Parties, keep the Gifts for themselves, as forfeit or escheated.

LXX. That, whereas there are certain Caufes fo belonging to both Jurildictions, as they are determinable by that Court which first questions them (as manifest Perjuries, Adulteries, &c.) yet the Ecclesiastical Judges forbad the Civil to meddle herein.

LXXI That, upon pretences of Layics, that they cannot obtain of the Secular Magistrate execution of Justice, Citations were usually granted from the Ecclefiastical Court, or Breves to the Secular Judges, warning them in the space of a Month to end the faid Caufe, or otherwise that they would take Order; when, yet, the Cause being brought before them, depended often the space of three years, without that they would grant the like power to Secular Judges.

LXXII. That Ecclesiastical Judges, under colour of prescription, arrogated much to themfelves, when as yet no prescription can avail a-gainft the Pope and Emperor.

LXXIII. That Offenders, after private Confession on, being requir'd to do publick Penance before all the People, are compell'd alfo to pay Money to Ecclefiaffical Officers.

LXXIV. That, inflead of forbidding Ufury, they permit it for Money given them; and that for an Annual Revenue paid, they permit Clerk, Religious and Secular Perfors to live publickly with their Harlots and get Children.

IXXV. That, if one of the Marry'd Couple take a Journey either to the Wars, or to perform a Vow, to a far Countrey, they permit the party remaining at Home, if the other stay long away, upon a Sum of Money pay'd, to cohabit with another, not examining lufficiently whether the abfent Farty were dead.

LXXVI, LXXVII. That Synodal Judges, going to poor Towns and Villages every where, draw Annual Tribute thence or Excommunicate them, when they cannot pay: And that they draw Money weekly in many places, from Bakers, Brokers, Butchers, & . under the fame penalty.

LXXVIII, LXXIX. That they fend That they fend Inhibitory Letters to I ayies, forbidding them to proceed in their Suit, before the Secular Judge; whereby they are forced to fubmit to the Ecclefiastical Court. or otherwise to appeal to Rome.

1 XXX. That many, not being able to endure the charges of Law in thele kinds, are forc'd to make some bad bargain and composition, being gitimate, to the no little wrong of the right Heirs.

nor ob e to fland cur.

by going Caths to the Advocates and Proctors er also to legitimate and admit Bast urds to Sucattenting in their Courts, did make them obnox- custion; and to make Notaries, when yet fome ious, it was manifest their Clients could have of them are so ignorant, at they know not way concern'd the faid Judges or their Superi-Neither was there any remedy for this, but by their admission of foreign Advocates, to whom yet fo short a time was allow'd for bringing them to the Bar as they could not easily come LXXXII. That the poorer fort, being not able to pay their Duties to the Parson, were often deny'd the Communion.

LXXXIII. That Labourers in time of Vintage were Excommunicated, unless they took fuch Seafons as the Ecclefiaftics prefcrib'd, upon pretence that their Tenths might fuffer damage thereby LXXXIV. That Synodal Judges, going Progress yearly under pretext of Visitation, and inflicting punishment on Offenders, took only occafion to exact Money.

LXXXV. That the Canons of the Cathedral and Collegiate Churches, who had power to choose a Prelate or Superior, would not elect him, until he first promis d and bound himself not to contradict them in any business, (how foul soever, and dishonest) and that if they of-fended, he should not punish them.

LXXXVI. That Livings belonging to Bishops, Monasteries, &c. were set forth to Vicars, at fo dear rates, that they were forc'd to get Money again from the poor for Confessions, Anni-verfairs, Obits, &c. LXXXVIII. That, though Priefls by their Foundation ought to fing fuch a Mafs on fuch a day, yet they will have Money therefore. Befides, with one Mafs they think to ferve divers Benefices.

LXXXVIII. That if any of their Parishioners, for Marriage or other occasion quitted his House or Dwening, he must pay so much to the Priest for Testimonials, or be Excommunicated.

LXXXIX. That whereas, by the Popes Canons, they only are deny'd Christian Burial, who without taking the Communion, died in any notorious and mortal Sin, yet their Ecclefialties extended the Law further, and deny'd burial t Men deceas'd by chance, as drown'd or kill'd, until fuch Money were paid. XC. That many Priefts, and other Ecclefiaftical Perfons mixt themselves with the Multitude, dancing and difguifing themfelves, wearing 5 words, with which they made (uarrels, and hurt Pco-ple, and yet conflrain'd them to pay.

XCI. That in most places, Bilhops, and their Officials not only tolerated Concubinage, upon paying Money in the more diffolute fort of Monks, but exacted it also in the more continent; faying, it was now at their choice whether they would have Concubines or no.

XCXII. That at the Dedications of Churches, permiffion was given to the Chaplains and Priests to fit up Taverns, Dice, Cards, &c.

XCIII. That, at the point of Death, they perfunded Men by flattery and fictions, to give their Goods from their Children unto them.

XCIV. That Mendicant Friers, drew many Causes to Rome unjustly, to the grievance of the Layies, getting also to much Money, that they had lately bought three Cardinals Hatts for their Generals at a huge rate, and that they much molefted Nunneries

XCV. That the Legats and Orators of Popes made Baftards, and others born ex dominato ceitu, from Marriages within the degrees forbidden, to be le-

XCVI. And that they made also certain Vis-IND Mi. That whereas Ecclefiaftical Judges, count Palatines as their Subflitutes, having pow-

v. Befides, the Legats go about to absolve Men from their Oaths, Pacts, and Obligations, with permission to treat de novo; than which nothing yet was more contrary to Equity and Justice.

XCVII. Fesides, that they endeavour'd to take

Livings from the true Patrons, and bestow them as they pleas'd. because Religious Persons facceeded Secular Men in their Inheritance, and not wice works; there could be no equality, un-less that before any enter'd into a Religious Life, they renounc'd their Succeffion in Temporal Eftates.

XCIX. That the chief part of these Grievances having been represented in the late Diet at Worms, to the Emperor by the Lay-States, a-gainft Arch-Bishops, Bishops, and other Ecclesiaftical Persons, that yet no remedy ensu'd. And that therefore all the Secular States of the Ro-Pope, that his Holiness would reform these A-

C. That there are many Grievances more intolerable than these, which the taid Secular States of the Roman Empire could fliew, but (for brevity) did forbear, as hoping that when those were taken away, the rest would follow.

Wherefore, by way of final Petition, the faid Secular States of the Roman Empire, both of the higher and lower fort, did befeech his Holiness to take away, amend and abrogate the faid Grievances; or otherwife that themfelves would take fuch course as should be expedient for the remedy thereof.

While, that his Holiness might take the better notice thereof, they thought fit to digeft their Grievances into these Heads, and send them to his Holiness.

These Abuses and Grievances (which, as much as through the obscurity of some terms us'd there, was possible, I have endeavour'd saithfulby to abbreviate) being publish'd; Luber became more obstinate, repeating now his Submission at Werms; infomuch that at Wittenberg, he doubted not to abolish the old Mass, and to frame a new Liturgy, &c. Of which more hereafter.

in the Friars.

Our King finding now his extraordinary ways April 15- for levying Money to fail, or at least having re-Regn. 14 folv'd to determine them in a Parliament, fumment held mon'd it to be held in the Black-Friars in London upon the fifteenth of April, in the fourteenth year of his Reign. And here the Cardinal took order that the Spirituality should lead. The business of Subfidy, therefore, being brought into the Convocation-House, found a fair way for the most part. Yet Richard Fex Billiop of Winchester, and John Fisher Billiop of Rechester, and one Philips opposed it. But the Cardinal, filencing some, and caufing others to ablent themselves, prevail'd at lait. Infomuch that one half of the Revenues Spiritual for one year, was granted payable in five years following. Hence the Cardinal went to the House of Commons, where in an elegant April 29. Oration, breach of Faith was laid to the charge of Francis the First, upon the League sworn for the general Peace of Christendom. Besides, defull of payment for Tournay, and other things were objected; to that the King could do no lefs in this publick Caufe, than joyn in War with Charles the Emperor against him. And be-next day Sir Thomas More, (Speaker of the House) 1523. inforc'd this demand, demonstrating how it was Sir To man not much on this occasion, to pry four shillings in the Manchese pound. But the House of Commons answerd, ker of the panna. But the riothe of Continous antwer a, see or its that though some were well Aliney'd, ye in general the Hotel of fifth part of Mins Goods was not in Plate or Alony, and but in Stock or Cattel. And that to pay army all their Coin, would alter the whole forme, and intercomple of climar. For it Tarinta arms to my their their count, would after the whole frame, and inter-counse of things. For, if Tomans come to pay their Heiman-Landlords in Corn and Cattel only; and the Land-twerta, lord again cuid not put them off for these things he had need of, there would be a step in all Traffick and Mirchandize, and consequently the Shirting of the Kingdom must decay; and the Nation it fell for ment of Money, grow in a fort barbarous and ignoble. To this was answer'd.

Cardinal Woolley de- cause the charge thereof was cast up to Eight hundred thousand pounds, it was requir'd, that the apounds of foresaid Sum might be rais'd out of the fifth part the French of every Mans Goods and Lands to be paid in sour War.

That the Money demanded ought not to be accounted Argu-ar loff, or taken away, but only to be transfer if the mores to others hands of their Kindeed or Nation; become there the Tax, fore, that no more was done, than that me fee ordinafore, that no more was done, than that me fee ordina-vily in Minkets; where, sthough the Money charge This Me-Massers, yet every one is accommodated. However, a you'd that no Main ought to refuse unto him that fighted to the st for the honour and safety of his Country, so much as well maintain him; since he denies it not even to his Labourer. That those who are imployed, must have That safe the Country of the safety been fed when they staid idle at home, and yet that as serve they ask'd no more now, to give the uttermelt proof of the line they ask a no more non, we gove the accomplete 9 aughter well-defiving Patriots. Hambit, you may reels, be yeal, this will exhault the Coin from the power for; but, to avoid this Objection, let the richer go themselves. Let them show, in definding their Country, that they morit the better and greater parts thereof. Our King ment the better and gratter parts thereof. Our King will not deep them this Honour. Or, when they would ThatG adefive to be exempt, and hy the burthus and have not them on gradle yet the giving fo per mounts to a Stipend, as some of their Servaints, at home, would feareely take to stand have besided to them. Neither are they to value themselves more than others, because they have larger Possessiums, unless they implay it to the publick Good; fince, in ancient times, and even true Reason of State, they deserved not so much, who till'd and manuf d. Country, as they who defended it. Not Curving is it well fail of you, when you object that this will one of early the Money out of England, and leave it in Money in France; for deth it not carry the Money of the Money on of England, and leave it in Money in the France; for deth it not carry the Mon too, and fo in white exeffect prove but the Jame Expense? Notwithstanding, and Join Marse if sould be solftinates, as to believe that misking War in a Country brings Money to it, do but covering a mille, that, the French had invaded us, mails the Marse the Ma the Miney they brought over, think you, enrich our Country? Should any of us be the better for it? Let us therefore lay eside those poor Scruyles, and do what nary be worthy the Dignity and Honour of our Mattern.
When you did conceive the worst that can fell our, you should get eat your Beef and Mutton here, and wear your Country Cloth; while others, upon a short ween your commy Civity; where others, upon a flowt allowance, fought only that you might only your Fix-milles and Liberty. But I say confidently you need not fear this penury or scarceness of Money; the intercourse of things being so established throughout the whole World, the three is a general. of things being foe feabilit d throughout the whole (Forl.), that there is a perpetual Circulation of all that can be necessary to Almkind. Thus your Commodities will ever find out Money; while, not to go far, I field produce our own Alrechauts cally, who, (it me assure you,) will be always as glad of your Con and Gattel, as you can be of any thing they bring you. Let us therefore (in God's Name) do what becomes us, can't be the well-assure in God on Online of Soldie. tuergyre (in you i Name) do mont become in, and for the reft, entertain fo good an Opinion of our Soldiers, as to believe, that in fread of leaving our Country bare, they will add now Previnces to it, or, at leaf, bring rich Spoils and Triumpls bome.

At laft, after fome debute and contention, it was agreed by the Commons, that every Man of The Comrefaid Sum night be rais'd out of the fifth part every Mans Goods and Lands to be paid in four pay two libillings in the pound; and from twenty pound greats a great a year downward to farty fillings, one failting in the surply pound; and under forty fillings every Head of factors.

1523. years old er more should pay four pence, in two years.

The Cardinal hearing no more intended, seem'd much troubled, and therefore, coming to the Warnet Lower House of Parliament, He told them, that he de fir d to reason with these who apposed his Demands; because he defind to reason with these who apposed his Demands; had not but being answer'd, that it was the Order of that what was Haufe to hear, and not to reason, but among themselves, the Cardinal departed. Yet by the liberal motien of some of the Lower House, those of fifty ke in pound Land and upwards, were induced to give the House one shilling more, (being three shillings in the pound) for three years to come, which at length in the being continu'd to the fourth year, and extended to those who were worth five pound in Goods, transed. was all that could be obtain'd.

The more famous Statutes enacted this Parliament, fourteen, and fifteen Reg. Henry the Eighth, were thefe.

That our Merchants might have eight days Laws paft in this preference before Strangers, for buying of broad Parlia white-woollen Cloths, brought to Blockmell-Hall boutbled; in London; unlefs in Fairs, Ports, Creeks, &c. and Hall That Strangers using a Handy-Craft, should take Market in no Apprentices, nor above two Journey-Men, unless they were the King's Subjects. That they Denitons thould be under the fearch and reformation of the Wardens and Fellowship of Handy-Crafts, ing Alens and one Subflantial Stranger, to be chosen by the faid Wardens. That they should cause a Mark to be put on the Wares, and Workman-thip, to be known thereby. That, if they were fallely and deceifully made, they should be for-feit. That this Provision should extend to Strangers, living in other Towns than London. That, if Strangers were wrong'd, they might feek their remedy from the Lord-Chancellor and Treafurer of England, or the Juffices of Affize in the Counties where they liv'd. That, during this Parliament, their Apprentices or Journey-Men might continue as before, and so to endure till the last day of the next Parliament. This Act yet was not to extend to Strangers of Oxford, Cambridge, and the Sanctuary of Saint Martins le Grand in London. That, if the Officers refus'd to put a Mark on the Wares, or Workmanship of Joyners, Black-Smiths, &c. being Strangers; that then it was lawful for the Strangers to fell them without the faid Mark. That Lords and others the Kings Subjects of an hundred pounds yearly might take and retain Strangers being Joyners, and Glafiers, for their private Service, this Act notwithflanding. That English-Men living under Foreign men living Princes, and being fworn to them, should pay under Fo fuch Custom to our King, Subsidy and Toll, as Princes to other Strangers of those parts do. And that the Governor of the Merchant Adventurers, or the King's Ambassadors in Foreign Countries, shall certifie their Names to the Chancery, to the intent that Order may be given therein to the Kings Officers in Havens, Ports, and Creeks. Yet if any fuch English-man, did return to inhabit here, that then he should be restor'd to all liberties of a Subject.

pay as Aliens,

A Colledge of English-

A Colledge of Physicians (among whom was ledge of that famous and learned Linacer, chief Physician Physicians to the King) was erected, and certain Authorities and Priviledges granted to them.

Moreover the Statute of 6 Hen. VIII. 13. for shooting in Cross-Bows, or Hand-Guns was dispenc'd with in Men of one hundred pound to the Mint, shall have the tenth part thereof in That this yet shall -Half-pence and Farthings. not extend to the Mint-mafters of Tork, Durham, or Canterbury. Concerning which I aw, it is The Moworth the noting, that though it was for the be-ney worth the noting, that though it was for the benoting of the Subjects, to have fo much of the fund internoting that though it was for the benoting that the befinallest fort of Coin, yet by reason of their lit-pieces, it tleness, it is all worn out. loon wore

That they which be in the Kings Service in out. Wars may aliene their Lands, for performance of their Wills, without any fine for Alienation.

And, if any of them die in the Kings Service in Priviledge War, his Peoffees or Executors shall have the exto Sol Wardship of his Heir and Lands.

I find also in this Parliament, an A& for Attainder of the Duke of Buckingham. And an o-M. s. ther for the reflicution of Hamy Lord Stafford, Son to the faid Duke.

Alfo an Act pass'd that the King shall, for his The King life have Authority by his Letters Patents at his has Autopleafure to Reverfe, Repeal, and Annul, all athis life to tainders of High Treaton, and to reftore their Repeal. Heirs, &c.

While these Affairs at home were in agitation, all Acts of the Cardinal * fending Thomas Anniball (Doctor of Ms. Law) to Pope Adrian then in Spain, obtain'd Mar. 9. the continuance of his Legantine Power for five Mar. 223 years more, which yet (faith Polydore) he made Pon Virg. fo venal, as if, to recompence the heavy Loans and Payments he had impost on the People, he would take order to discharge them of their Sins at an eafie rate.

The King having fent divers times into Scotland, to require that his Nephew James, might have exercife of that Regal Authority which was due unto him, and the Duke of Albany difcharg'd from his place of Vice-Roy, receiv'd fo uncertain and dilatory Answers, that he thought fit to defift a while from his defigns in France, and to pursue this. Therefore he makes a particular dispatch to Sir Thomas Bolen, Treasurer of his Houshold, and Mr. Richard Sampson Dean of his Chappel, resident then in Spain, requiring them to excuse him, if he did not proceed fo roundly to the execution of the Treaty at Windfor, (formerly mention'd) fince, for defence of his Nephew, he was conftrain'd to take in hand the business of Scotland; yet that he would, in good time, perform all that could be required on his part. Together with which they were on its part. Together what which they were charged, to intimate fome jealoulies he had of a near Alliance proposed betwixt Charles and Francis; whereof he would gladly be clear'd. Prefently after which, he fent the Earl of Surry (Lieutenant of the Borders) commanding him March. to join with Marquis Derfet, (Warden of the Laft and middle Marches) and Lord Daeres Warden of the Weft Borders of Seotland. These April. Lords, having gather'd together convenient For-Awar ces, took fedworth; and, making frequent In-tund. curfions, did great harm to that Country; without other intention yet (as the Scots have it) than to reduce that Nation to a better intelligence with England. Hereupon, the Duke of Albany, who was in France, prepares to return to Scot-land. Our King, advertis'd hereof, fends out his Navy to intercept him. Sir William Fitzwilliams with 36 great Ships, cruizing on the Coasts of France, and Anthony Points with a convenient Navy, gnarding the Western Seas. While Fitzwilliams attended this occasion, he discover'd for Abnum. That Coiners who make Money in williams attended this occasion, he discovered any Mint in England, should coin of every huntwelve French Ships, in which the Arch-Bishop of dred pounds of Gold, twenty pound into half Angels defers and divers others of quality were, whom About the orpicces of xl. pence, and of every hundred pounds the Duke of Albany had fent before him into worth of Bullion, Plate or Silver, a certain portion Scotland. Giving Chafe to thefe, two of them into Groats, Two-pences, Pence, Half-pence, were caft away near the Havens of Diepe and and Farthings (the Farthings to have a Mark Boulogne. After which, Firzwilliams, leaving part different from the Half-pence.) That they who of his Fleet to shut up the French Ships, (which bring less then 100 pounds in Bullion or Plate along the French Coafts, landing in divers places and wasting the Country; till at last he came to Treport, a Town strongly situated and Garrifon'd with three thousand Men; which Fortifications our Men (though a far less number) gain'd, together with divers pieces of Ordnance, chasing the French that remain'd to the Town, yet finding it was not their business to lay a Siege at this time, they only burnt the Suburbs, and the Ships they met in the Haven, and so return'd. The Duke of Albany, knowing how harrowly he was watch'd by the English, had caus'd all provision for his return unto Scotland to be conceal'd, and made it to be rumor'd abroad, that he had no purpose to stir out of France this year: Which our King understanding, call'd home his Fleet. But it was no fooner in Harbour, than Albany hasting together his Men and Ships, fet fail at Brest; and, passing along the West Coast of England, landed in the Island of Arrain Sept. 24. to the great joy of the Scots, Sept. 24.

and with him came Richard de la Pole, and three thousand French. When Albany came, the minds of the Nobility were divided, some favour'd the Burla English, some the French: It being disputed much before the coming of the Governor, to whether fide it were best to adhere.

The favourers of the English Party, which were guments many, alledg'd the conformity in Person, Man-of the Barry ners, Language, and Laws betwixt the two Nain Scotland tions; their Living and Neighbourhood within the same Island; the Power the English had, not League only to do more good or hurt, but fooner than with Eng the French could prevent them: That the English were Mafters of the Seas, and thereby, able to flop, and interclude all fuccour that could come to them from any other place. Laftly, divers Letters were produc'd, written from our King to the Nobility of Scotland, wherein he did offer both to maintain Peace there, and to confirm it, by giving the Princess Mary his Daughter in Marriage unto James his Nephew, since he had vehement fuspitions that Charles intended a Match elfewhere.

Those who favour'd the French (whereof ma-Bach

Parties

Ruch

Answer.

The Ar-lish Party

for a League

The French ny (faith the fame Author) were gain'd with large Gifts, and Pensions, or were such, as, being of mean Fortune, desir'd to make their advantage in the publick Troubles) reply'd hereunto, That credit was not easily to be given to the specious pretext of a new Allyance, the former having fucceeded no better; especially, when all things in England were order'd chiefly Ex Arbitrio Thomae Woolfei Cardinalis pravi & ambirupi Cardinal Woolfey, (as Buchanan hath it.) That, the occasions of falling out betwixt potent Neighbours, being frequent; friends were to be fought out in any other place. Howsoever, their ancient Ally, (the French) was to be acquainted herewith, and no time to be loft for preparations to defend themselves.

These, though but cavils of the more tumultuous fort, being join'd to the rancor of others, prevail'd fo with the heady Multitude, that, in the Parliament which the Governor fummon'd as foon as he came to Scotland, it was prefently refolv'd, that he should raise a puissant Army. Octob. 21. These being gather'd, march to a Wooden Bridge over Twede, near Mul-Rolle, which leads to England; here the Duke pass dover the greatest part of his Forces, intending the rest should follow; but because divers muttered against the causelefnefs and danger of this Attempt, he thought it his best Course, presently to bring them back it his beft Courte, presently to oring the state of taking all places. Paffing thence, he commanded Siege to taking all places be laid to the Castle of Worke, lately fortified At * latt Flav Vol. II.

were fled into those Havens) proceeded himself by the Earl of Surrey. Some French here, that, fery'd on the Scotch fide, found means to enter the outer Court, in which the Cattel and Corn of the Neighbour-hood in dangerous times were usually kept. But the English, using no other manner of Repulse, set fire only to the Hay and Straw there, and fmoak'd out the French: Hereupon a Battery was planted against the Walls, and a fufficient breach made; wherewith an Alfault was given by the French and others, but being beaten back with the loss of many, and the Larl of Surrey being with a great Army not Nov. 11. far off, the Duke defitted and retir'd, doing no more with his Army for that year, thortly after which by the mediation of Queen Margaret, a Truce was concluded. And thus our King quit. A Truce ted himfelf of the troubles which Francis flirr'd between the two against him, in Scotland. Let us now look on Nations. Ireland, for there also Francis had his Projects. Tillis.

And Tillet sets down a Treaty between Francis and James, Earl of Defmond in June 1523. But, Juneas it took no effect, by reason of Francis his buliness in other parts, 10 it halftend the second troubles of the Earl of Kildare, who though he had freed himself of his Imprisonment in England, by the favour he got upon his Match with Elizabeth Gray, Sifter to the Marquifs Derfet, and Cambion fo was remitted home to his former charge, Hift. fl. (Pierce Butler being upon fome Accusations put out) yet, being Kinsman to Desmond, he could not so behave himself, but that his Enemies found Arguments to traduce him; but of this in its place.

While these things were doing, the Kingdom Sield Com. of Denmark fuffer'd a great change. For Christierne the Second fucceeding his Father John, Anno 1514. the Swedes not long after rebell'd, main Battel, and the Swedes overcome, Christierne recove commands his Body to be taken up and burnt; their Li-which with other Cruelties, made the Swedes bertytake Arms again, under Gustavus Erinon, whom they made their King, and separated themselves wholly, from the Crown of Denmark: Christierne having thus loft Sweden, and incurr'd the hate of the Danes by his Tyrannical Government, fearing Confpiracy at home, and War from a-broad, left his Kingdom to be invaded and taken by his Uncle Frederick, Duke of Holly; Christians; (whom the Lubeckers aided in the Enterprize) K of Dezand, flying together with Isabell, Sifter to Charles driven out the Emperor and his three Children, (one Son of both and two Daughters) as voluntary Exiles from the King-their own Country, went first to Flanders, and dense of from Flanders with a * small Train came hither. Dimmak. This Misfortune yet did not hinder them from 'June 15. finding a reception worthy their Degree; our Queen, being Aunt to his, taking particular compassion on them. After all manner of Royal Enter- Comes intainment, therefore, for the space of about three to Ergland. Weeks that they stay'd, and divers rich Presents bestow'd upon them, they thought fit, upon some hopes given them of recovering their Kingdom, to depart hence again into Flanders.

The Duke of Suffolk, being attended by the The Duke Lord Montacute, Lord Herbert, Lord Ferrers, Lord of Suffolk Morney, Lord Sands, Lord Berkley, Lord Powys, to Calais and divers other Knights and Gentlemen, and with an an Army of fix hundred Demilances, two hun- Army. dred Archers on Horseback, three thousand Ar- Aug. 24. chers on Foot, and five thousand Bill-men, befides two thousand and fix hundred Prisoners came to Calais. To these again the Duke added one thousand and seven hundred more, taken out of the Garrisons thereabouts. With this little Army he march'd into the Enemies Country, taking all places that resisted him by the way.

At * last Florence d' Egmond Count de Bure General * Sept. 20.

1523. to the Emperor, joyn'd his Forces; fo that in fes, that made him defift from any other Enter-all they made about twenty thousand Men, yet prize this year, wherewith therefore the King as it was now about the latter end of September, and the weather prov'd very unfeafonable, it was difficult to perform any great Action. King Henry yet would have them begin with Boulegne; but the Imperialitis faid it was impregnable, and that for entring France, it were better to coaff the River of Seam, which they did, their defign being to come to a Battel, as being advertis'd that the French had long fince accended their coming. But finding no Forces in the Field, Odob. 20, they befieg'd Bray on the River Soam. In this Town, Monsieur Antoine de Crequi, Seigneur de Pont-

Dormy commanded, with a strong Garrison; but a breach being made by our Men, and violently affaulted, Antoine de Crequi, having fet fire on the Town, fled over the Bridge, with the Men that remain'd, drawing some Boards after him; but our Men laying on other Planks, and geting over, chas'd him, and kill'd divers of his Men. When they return'd, they found little Aren. when they return a, they found little fav'd from the Fire, but fome Cellars of Wine, which, in that cold and wet time, was a great Relief. From hence, paffing over Soam, they march'd towards Roje, taking by the way fome leffer places. This Town being funmon'd, and promiting to yield, Sir Richard Cornwall with four hundred Men was fent to take possession of Thence the Army march'd towards Montdidier, where by the way Monsteur de Pont-Dormy meeting with fome of our Horfe fcatter'd, put them to the worst. But at last, more of our Men coming, his Horfe was kill'd under him, and he, mounting on an other, was conftrain'd to flie. Monsteur de Barniculles and de-Canaples yet stood the Shock, to favour the retreat of the rest; which part while they perform'd bravely, our Men overthrew and took them Prisoners, with fome others of Note. From hence then they went to Montdidier, in which Monsieur de Rochebaron, with about 1200 Men, commanded. But, after fome four hours battery of our Cannon, 15 within they capitulated and yielded. The Duke with 11 Leigues his Army had now pass'd the River of Oyle, and of Paris. was come within eleven Leagues of Paris, without that he met with any notable Encounter. The Parifians hereupon were much troubled. Neither could the coming of Monsieur de Vendosme, with fome Forces, exempt them altogether from fear. But the time of year being far fpent, and the weather falling out to be fo extream cold, that almost all the Corn in France was frozen and spoil'd that year, (as the French confess,) our Men were forcid to return. Besides, the Lady Regent in the Low-Countries withdrew pay from her Soldiers, and let all the charge fall upon our King Henry.

It was not therefore mildoubt of any attempt of the French, (whatfoever they brag) they having no Army in the Field, but only the cause formerly alledged that made them retire. They took yet the Caffle of Bonchain near the Emperor's Territories, before they departed, which yet together with the other places, was prefently recover'd by the French. Our King, hearing now the Armies were diffoly'd, feem'd to be much incens'd: His intention being to keep and fortifie the places that were taken. Therefore he had commanded the Lord Montjoy with fix thousand Men to reinforce the Troops. But, before the Kings pleasure could be certified to France, the Duke (who by reason of the soul ways lest his great Ordnance in the Town of Valeuciumes) was come, with the reft of his Army, to Calais; where he thought good to ftay, till the Kings Anger were appeared, by the re-prize this year, wherewith therefore the King at last being intirely satisfied, he was receiv'd into his former grace and favour

Francis finding now two of his Armies diffolv'd and ruin'd, refolves in Person to bring a third. For as he found his Auxiliaries more than the French Forces could command, and that, together, they had not their pay in due time, he intended now to remedy these faults. But this Voyage succeeded worst of all. So little can intervening Accidents, but especially those of War, be prevented by Human Wisdom. Being on his way now as far as Lyons, he hears three Armies were preparing against him; one on the part of our King, for Picardy; an other on the Emperors part, for Burgundy and Champaigne; and a third on the Spanish side for Fuentarable. That on the English side yet astonish'd him most, as fuspecting he had given our King enough to do in Scotland and Ireland. Therefore, he stay's at Lyons, and sends Bonivet before with the greatest part of his Forces, confifting of the flower of the Nobility of France; in which also Richard de la Pole (return'd now from Scotland) was; and referves the rest for the most urgent occasions. Only, he wanted Charles Duke of Bourbon, whom Charles D. I find fo confiderable a Person at this time, both of Bourbon with our King and the Emperor, as I have thought defers to fit to fpeak of him, with much particularity. The causes of Discontentment (as the French Writers have it) were many.

That, being of great Blood and excellent Dupleix Parts, he was excluded from the Kings fecter The Cau-Counfel.

That, having done ill Offices to Francis in the time of Louis XII. Francis challeng'd him to a Duel, (which unkindness yet, Francis coming to the Crown effaced by giving him the Place of Conftable.)

That he was deny'd to have Renee, Sifter to Queen Claude, when yet she desir'd to marry

That (as is before mention'd) the King gave the Vantguard from him, being Conflable, to the Duke of Alancon.

That having lay'd out much Money for the Wars of Italy out of his purfe, the King not only refus'd to pay him, but detain'd fome Pensions and Rents, which were due to him for divers years.

That a Process or Law-Suit was brought against him, about the Dutchy of Bourbon, being inheritance devolv'd to him, in right of Susan his Wife lately dead.

That Louise the Kings Mother, persecuted him, because he refus'd to marry her, and was a Suitor to Renee.

That the Chancellor and others oppos'd him, for the fake of Louise, who was in greatest Au-

These again being industriously fomented by Adrian de Croy, Seigneur de Beaurain, on the Emperors part, and William Knight, Doctor of the Law, Refident for our King with the Lady Mar-Man, garet, and laftly by Sir John Ruffell, who in difguis'd Habit often treated with him, (as I find by our Records) made him finally Revolt. Neither did our King make difficulty to appear herein. Francis having not only supported Richard de la Pole, but treated with Defmond; fo that finally, Conditions were agreed on with Bourbon, to this effect;

That he should marry Leonóra, Sifter to the Em- The Artiperor, and Wife to Emanuel King of Portugal lately cles bedead.

Emperor

till the Kings Anger were appeared, by the re-presenting of those important and necessary Can-allow as Francis was outed.

Billing. His Retreat.

1523.

This the Emperor (hould be ve Burgundy , and Artois, and our King Normandy and Guyenne, and the Title of King or France; and that, befides, be flould renounce all the Chim the French pretend to Italy.

This yet was not kept fo close, but some no-FrancisVi- tice of it came to Francis, who thereupon with a fingular freedom, did visit him, at Molins, faining then to be Siek, and difeover'd the Intelligence given him; promifing yet that all flould be forgotten upon his Confession, and affurance to serve him fathfully in his Wars; giving surthermore his Royal Word, that the Inheritance now in question should be restor'd, when it were by Law evicted. Bourbon thus furpris'd, and counterfeiting his weakness still, confess'd he was indeed fought to, but would never condef-cend to any Dilloyalty. The Kinghereupon de-parted well fatish'd in appearance; but as the Process or Law-suit went on, and some secret He makes Guards were put on him; Bourbon, offended, his Escape. escapes in a disguis'd Habit to Genoua: Whither Decen.b. the Seigneur de Beaurain came from the Emperor to offer him his choice, whether he would command the Imperial Army in Italy, or come to pain (where Charles had newly extinguish'd a Rebellion in Majorca, and given order to befiege Fuentarable.) But Bourbon chose to command the Army, both as it was more generous, and as he did thereby comply best with both Princes; to whom he was oblig'd (as I find by our Records,) the French, they eafily abandoned Francis. Whereupon a League was enter'd into, betwixt the Pope, the Emperor, Ferdinand, Fran-eisco Sforza, Julio de Medicis, the Florentines, those of Siona, Lucca, and Geneur; and the Fen-tians; place being lette also for our King; by which it was concluded, among other things, A League that the Venetians should furnish six thousand Foot, and one thousand two hundred Horse, when Francisco Sforza in Milan, or the Emperor in Nato furnish five hundred Men at Arms, and ten thousand Foot, for performing the Agreement betwint them. But Francis had also other strong oppositions; for though he labour'd to retain the Venetians; yet as that State consider'd Italy would be quieter when Francisco Sforza held Mi-lan, than if it came under the domination of ples, were invaded.

That the Emperor should do as much for them, in the like cafe. Aug. 11.

Aug.3-

France.

All parts thus tending to War, Bonivet using much ditigence, march d strait to Milan, where Celoma had retir'd himself; the Army of the Leogue being not yet joyn'd. But Galeazao Vijcount of Milin, meeting and defiring him to flay, till he had rais'd a Tumult in the City (whereof he affur'd him in two or three days) Bonivet loft his opportunity; Coloma uling that space to oput the Town in such defence, as Boniva retir'd. Yet so, as he forgot not to relieve the Castle of Cremon, the Garrison whereof was admid only to sight. reduc'd only to eight Perfons. Neither did he more of Importance (though Coloma now dy'd) but attended fix thousand Grifons, and eight thoufand Swiffes; but as the Grifons, finding their paffage leiz'd on, return'd; fo the Swiffes, because they wanted only four hundred Horse to convoy them, according to the Agreement made) refus'd to come to the French, when the Imperial Army, now united, was approaching. This made the French wade through the Water, to joyn with them. But Bourbon, and the Imperialists passing also, charg'd the French so, as Boni-The French Poll and Bayard fuffain'd the Shock. When Bayare beaten, and having received a Mortal hurt, (whereof he dy'd, leaning on a Tree, with his face turn'd to the Enemy) all the Army was routed, and the Ordnance and Baggage taken. Whereupon also Ordinance and baggage taken. Whiteupon and Aleflandris, Rhodes, and other places were rendered. At Fuenturalis, Francis had no better fortune. For Franger Governor thereof, being defirous to fave his Goods, yielded the place with out much confirmint, towards the end of Sept. 1523. for which he was degraded upon a Scuffold at Lyons publickly.

Notwithstanding all these Oppositions, yet Francis loft not his Native Courage, but proceeded in his defign for Italy. For as he knew the Army of the League had different defigns, he hop'd fome occasion or other would difunite them; neither did it trouble him that Sfirza was put in the possession of Milan: For he knew the Imperialitis would hold a hand high and hard enough to difoblige him. Befides, he found that a defign the Emperor had on Burgundy, fail'd, for want of Money to pay certain Lonfquenets, who thereupon were drawn to his Ser-

Adrian's Death this while intervening, through Sept. 14.
Poyfon, (as fome have it,) Cardinal Israelics Andies, hearing thereof, by a Letter dated 30 September fuppes, 41 1523, advertiseth the King hereof; adding fur- to be pos ther, that his not being at Rome, was the only fould obstacle that could hinder him from obtaining Sept. 30. that Dignity. Yet, that he thought none there present would be Elected, by reason of the Faction among them. Therefore he humbly intreated his Highness, that, fince heretofore he thought him worthy of that Charge, he would now affift him. This Letter also was seconded by an other, dated October the first, defiring the Octob. 1. King to write with his own Hand to the Emperor, to this purpose. Notwithstanding all which Woolfer difendeavours, he being, about two Months after, of the Painform! A pulle de Medici was made Pope, by pays a fe the name of Clement the Seventh, thought fit, condume, for juffification of his Merit, to write again to Nov. 19. our King, that the business was not yet so clear-ly carry d, but that many of the Cardinals concurr'd on him; though, by reason of his Abfence, and the dangerous flate of Italy, (which requir'd prefent remedies,) they infifted on the other. Whereupon it was thought fit by the King and Cardinal to fend to John Clerk, now Bithop of Bath, Secretary Pace, and Thomas zinnibal, Decemb. Doctor of Law, and Master of the Rolls then Resident at Rome, a dispatch, requiring them to congratulate his Election, and together intreat him, not only to continue the disaffection he had ever flew'd to the French, but to give publick Testimonies thereof according to the greatnefs of that power which now was in him. Cardinal, alfo by a particular difpatch, defin'd Richard Pace to procure, that his Legantine Power might be amplified; protefling that, by reafon of the Kings Prerogative, and other Caufes, it was not a thousand Ducats yearly to him: Yet, Moolley if that his Authority and Faculties might be en-made Lelarg'd, that it should be thankfully acknowledg'd fate for five years to five years; was now (by a new example) given him for term of Life, Jan. 9.

Thus had Woolfey (to comfort him for his repulse in Rome,) a kind of Papal Authority in England; whereof, also, he made the uttermost use. Though, while amongst other Visitations, he would needs visit the Frees Observants, he found himfelf relifted; which yet he could not take ill, the Pope having defir'd him particularly Aug. 37. to spare them.

Vol. II.

1 2

All which Clement condescended unto, and the March 22,

Legantine Power, which Adrian granted only from 1522

While

1523

1523. and Scot-Hall.

While thefe greater Exploits in France and Scotland pass'd thus, many brave Actions with small es in France numbers were perform'd in the Confines of the English and French Pale, infomuch that a compamy of Adventurers there, nick-nam'd the Cra-kers, grew very famous thereby; till, being at laft opprefs'd by the Count Dan-Danstrine, who with one thousand five hundred Horse and eight hundred Foot, affail'd them, being only one hundred teventy five Foot, and twenty five Horfe, they took their end: which happen'd not yet till they had fought it out, to the laft Man. The like feats allo were done, between the Borders of England and Scotland on either fide, fome of Decemb. which our Chroniclers particularly relate. But as these Wars in several Countries, drave the King to an excessive charge, so, in October this year, it was requir'd, from all Men worth forty pound, that the whole Subfidy, granted in Parliament, and payable in four years, should be anticipated, and brought to the King in one en-

> This the Commons imputed to the Cardinal, but he apprehended it not, as thinking his Ecclefiastical Dignity would ever prove a sufficient protection for him against the hate of the People. Therefore, he doubted not to be the Au-thor of many rash Counsels, upon pretence only of furnishing the Kings Necessities; neither did he believe, that, when he had precipitated the Royal Authority to violent and dangerous Courfes, himfelf should fall: As thinking his place in the Church fo high, as would give him leave ever to look fecurely upon any ruin, some Arguments whereof appear'd in his design to build two Colledges, one at Oxford, the other at Ipswich (where he was born) at the price of throwing down certain Monasteries, and appropriating the Revenues thereof to this use. The delign for the Colledge of Infwich, was to erect only a Grammar School, to train up the youth till they were ready for the University; but that in Oxford (call'd first Cardinal's, then King's Colledge, now Christ's Church) was no-bler; for the building was intended most ample and magnificent, (as the Foundations and first Lines demonstrate,) the number of Students, Pro-builds a Colledge and Christ's Oxford.

Wooller

The Num Decanus. ber of Subdecanus.

tire payment.

Students and Pro-

4 dors

Sexuginta Canonici primi Ordinis.—— Omnes Studiis Quadraginta Canonici fecundi Ordinis— incibituri. Tresdecim Presbyteri Conductitii. Omnes Divinorum Ce-Duodecim Clerici Conductitii. | Omnes Divinorum Ce-Sexdecim Clorista. | lebrationi quotidie inscruituri.

fessors, &c. great; as appears by a Catalogue found among our Records, and inferted here.

Professores Collegii & Academia publici. SacraTheologia. ---- Medicina. Juris Canonici.——Artium Liberalium. Juris Civilis. ——Humaniorum Literarum.

Professores Privati & Domestici. Philosophia.——Sophistria.
Logices. ——Humaniorum Literarum. Confores Morum & Eruditionis, Quatnor. Præfecti Erarii, Vacantes colligendis Redditibus, Quatuor. Ministri Communes Collegii, l'iginti, in re. Occonomică prædictis subservituri.

Summa totius numeri, Clxxxvi.

Assignantur item annuatum non mediocres pecuniarum Summe, Partim in excipiendis Convivio extraneis injumendæ; Partim in Eleemofynas fingulis necellinia.

The Dean. Subdean. Sixty Superior Canons. } all to refide at their Studies. Thirteen Chaplains Twelve Singing-Men. for the Chappel Service.
Sixteen Charifers. Sixteen Choristers.

Publick Professors of the College and University. Civil Law. - Critical Learning.

Private Lecturers and Tutors to read Philosophy.————Sophistry.
Logick. ——Critical Learning. Four Cenfors to inquire into the Students Manners and Three Burfers.

Four Rent-Gatherers. Twenty Inferior Officers and College Servants.

Befides whose Salaries, a considerable Sum of Mo-ney was yearly to be allowed, partly for keeping Hospitality, and entertaining Strangers; party for Charity to be quarterly distributed: As also for Horses, Tra-velling Charges, and other Necessaries, which in so large a Family, cannot but be very many every day.

I find alfo, that about 1524, he fought in Ita-ly and elfewhere, for able Men to be his Readers. Among whom at this time the Excellent folm Ludevicus Vives (a Spaniard) was fent to him to be Profession of Eloquence in Oxford. And, for Books, he sent to have the rarer sort copy'd out of the Popes Library.

These so great Preparations, made the Cardinal Hermins use many rigorous means of getting Monies, as several results. by visitation of Religious Houses, &c. and at Houses to last by the ruin of divers. To perform this yet, answer he was to obtain the consent of the Pope and his the Ex-The Reasons represented to the Pope, pence. were I suppose of this nature.

That his Holiness could not be ignorant what The Readivers effects this new Invention of Printing had fons he produc'd. For as it had brought in and re-Pope for produced. For as it had brought in and re-pope for flor'd Books and Learning, fo rogether it hath it. been the occasion of those Sectis and Schiffer Printing which daily appear'd in the World, but chiefly the occusion of more many; where Men began now to call in Schiffen question the present Faith and Tenents of the Church, and to examine how far Religion is departed from its Primitive Institution. And, that He lawhich particularly was most to be lamented, mentstate they had exhorted Lay and Ordinary Men to read the Scriptures, and to pray in their vulgar exhorted. That, if this were fuffer'd, befides all to read the scriptures, the convention of the Particular of the part other Dangers, the common People at last might Scripture come to believe that there was not fo much use of the Clergy. For if Men were perfwaded once they could make their own way to God, and that Prayers in their Native and Ordinary Language might pierce Heaven, as well as Latin; how much would the Authority of the Mass fall? How prejudicial might this prove unto all our Ecclesiastical Orders?

That there were many things to be look'd to An Inin these Imovators, but nothing so much as this; france of fince it was clear, that the keeping of the My-Craft. fteries of Religion in the hands of Priefts, had been a principal means in all Ages, of making the Priefthood Sacred and Venerable. That these Mysteries and Rites therefore, as the greatest Secret and Arcanum of Church-Government, Religion neis injumendæ; Partin in Etermolynas janguais tett seeret and arrennum of Chatter-Gordinamin, rengont anni quoriti coggando. Protest fumpius equitit, ac a-liverum, que in tanta familia in-dies occurrant, & funt rather fly to Tropes and Allegories, if not to flety Cabill.

Cabala it felf, than permit that all the parts of | Religious Worship, though so obvious, as to fall eafily within common understandings, should be without their Explication; fince it might be well question'd, whether the Essence of Religion, (consisting in the Doctrine of good Life and Repentance) might be held fufficient alone to exercife even the most vulgar Capacities; unless frequent Traditions concerning former times, and fuch obscure passages as need Interpretation, did concur. In which state of things therefore, nothing remain'd fo much to be done, as to prevent further Apostacy. For this purpose, fince Printing could not be put down, it were best to set up Learning against Learning; and, by introducing able Persons to dispute, to suspend the Layiry, betwixt Fear and Controverfies. This, at worst yet, would make them attentive to their Superiors and Teachers. All which being maturely weigh'd by his Holiness, it was not doubted but he would advise, and commend to all Christian Princes, the erecting of new Colledges and Seminaries for the advancement of Learning; and here in England particularly, where many favourers of Luthers Sect, but especially of Zuinglius, did appear. Yet becaufe his Holiness by our Ambassadors at Rome, had divers times been inform'd of the great expences of his King in the Wars he had made with France and Scotland, he did not think it the best course to desire any Money out of his Purse. That therefore he had thought of another expedient; which he humbly offer'd to his Holiness; which was, that in regard the number of Mo-nafteries was greater in this Kingdom, than that there could be found Learned Men to supply them; that it were not amiss to diminish the one a little, to increase the other. That as this would take away the objection of Ignorance, wherewith the new Sectaries in Germany had so much branded the Clergy, fo it would furnish able Perfons to refift their Doctrine, and uphold the Credit and Reputation of the Roman Church. Therefore he would be an humble suppliant to his Holiness, to give him leave to throw down a few Superfluous Monasteries, and to imploy the Re-venues of them to the building of two Colledges; one at Oxford, th' other at Ipswich; and to believe, that all things being rightly confidered, the fall of those few, might be a means to keep up the rest, especially since, in this Kingdom the number of them was thought exceffive.

Reasons for fup-preffing the King

To the King; as he needed not to use those Motives, fo he differently conceal'd fuch a might different the fecrets of Ecclefiaflical Government. For certainly, what fault foever might be objected to the Cardinal, he feem'd still a devout Servant to his Religion, as afpiring thereby unto the Papacy. Therefore, he faid little more unto the King, than that it was fit fo learned a Prince thould advance Learning, and maintain that Exitb, whereof the Pope had made him the *De*fender. For this purpose, he should advise him to found more Colledges. Yet because his Wars and other Occasions had so exhausted his Treafury, he would ask no more, than that the care thereof should be committed to him; who, if his Highnel's fo thought fit, would only supprets some little and unnecessary Monasteries, and imploy the Revenues to this use. King Henry also conof it as a good Ex. were necessificated at any time to seize on the ample for other Religious Houses, he might this way difcover how the People would take it, grants his Request. Our King this concurring with the Viceroy of Noples was thought, besides, to be Pope, who, in savour of the Cardinal gave way willing that Bourbon should be repuls'd, as one to this Suppression, that Overture was first made, whom he envy'd for teing made Lieutenant in which being purfu'd afterwards by the Kings fole Authority, became the final ruin of all Monasteries.

Clement the Seventh hearing of the prepara-tions of these great Princes, had fent in the beginning of this year an express Legat, which was an Archbishop of Capua, with Instructions to procure an Union betwixt them against the Turk. He had already been with Francis and the March. Emperor, without effecting any thing; and was now come to our King; but finding the fame difficulties, he was forc'd to return, without other fatisfaction, than a particular of the De-mands by our King made, and the Reasons of them; which our Cardinal promis'd also to certifie unto the Pope. Therefore, in a particular dispatch to Rome, he wish'd our Agents there, to flew an inclination to Peace; referving, neverthelefs, one ear open to the exploits of Bourbon; whose prosperous success in France (he said) might be fuch as to alter the cafe. Howfoever, that the place of the Treaty might be Calais, whither himfelf offered to come in Person.

This while (in the beginning of this year) the Jan Princes of Germany held a Diet at Novemberg, whit- Pope Chi ther Clement (the new Pope) fent as Legare Car-mon VII. dinal Campegius; much complaining of their Po-Articles of fulata or Gravamina the last year, fince many Grievan-Points in it smelt of Herefy. About April also eas feat the Emperor from Spain sends to the Princes at manysmel the Diet, defiring them to fee the Decree made of Herefy. at Worms against Luther (1521.) to be observ'd. April. (Thus to comply with the Pope it feems, whom May 8. he desir'd to retain on his side against Francis.) The Princes nevertheless at the conclusion of this Diet, made a Decree, that as foon as might be, April 18. the Pope by the confent of the Emperor should man Diet call a Council in Germany; and, in the mean decree time, things to be ripen'd for a peace in Religi-that a on, &c. This fecond urging of a Council (for Council it was prefs'd also the last year to Advisar) provok'd can'd. much Pope Clement; who, knewing our Kings zeal to the Roman See, and particular hate of Luther, fent a Letter to King Henry, complaining May 16. of this behaviour of the Princes of Germany; and to win our King the more, he fent him a Rose of Gold, (consecrated and curiously wrought) May 19. by Thomas Hannibal, (who now return'd) as also a Bull, seal'd with Gold (Dat. tertio Non. Martii)

In the mean time, by frequent dispatches, the Bourbon Cardinal, in our Kings Name, urg'd Bourbon to ownsk undertake his Expedition into France; to which be King purpose our King was to allow him an hundred of France thousand Crowns a Month. Bourbon, on the o-ther fide, requir'd that our King, or his Lieutenant, should at the same time enter Picardy with an Army; which was promis'd. When having June 24. giv'n Oath to acknowledge Henry the Eighth King of France) he advanceth towards Provence, June 24. (on the Emperors part Monsieur de Beaurain attending him; and on our Kings, Richard Pace;) and in the beginning of July enters ly enters July : France; where, proclaiming liberty to the Common People who willingly came in, he took didom. vers Towns. Nevertheless, his course was staid. For, although he had a Fleet of the Emperors to fecond him, coasting along the Shoar, to bring Victuals to the Army: Yet the French Navy being too firong, kept them off, and so in-tercepted their Provision. The supplies also of Money to be fent him by the Emperor and King of England were flackned; for each of these Princes fear'd lest the other should reap the fruit of this Expedition; and Charles de la Noy the

for Confirmation of his Title of Defenfer Fidei.

confents to it.

1524. his place. Yet, for all this, Beurben lays fiege to Almfeilles, but in vain; for it being floutly defended by Renzo de Ceri, and Philip Chabot, Francis also with a great power coming to relieve it, at the same time Bourbons Soldiers mutined

Heretics for want of pay, (although Sir John Ruffel had newly brought twenty thousand pound Sterling Sept. 27. from our King;) the Siege broke up, and the Duke embarking his Cannon, retir'd to Geneila with fome lofs, the Prince of Aurange being taken Prifoner there.

It was now mid-Osteler, and a feafon, in all probability, not to begin any great Enterprize. Nevertherefs Francis who had left Claude his Wife Oftob July.

in July last, and lest Louise his Mother Regent of France during his absence, pursu'd his design to conquer Milim; contrary to the advice of the Pope (who perswaded Peace) and of his Coun-fellors; (who at least advised him not to go in Francis I. Perfen.) Charles de la Noy hearing this, puts sim-his kept tonio de Leyva in Pavia, with twelve thouland Spa-droon in nicrds, and fix thouland Lafqueners; and with the rolt of his Army haltens to Milan. But as he found the Citizens there not much affection'd to him, and fome of the French Vantguard was approuch'd, he left the Town, and together with the Duke of Bourbon and Ferdinand d' Avalos Marquils of Pefeara, with their Forces, retir'd to Ladi. Whereupon Alichael Antoine Marquifs of · Her Ali-Sainces, and Louis Seigneur de Trimoüille enter'd Milan. Fr. neis being prefently inform'd hereof, advances his Army; yet fo, as according to an ancient Military Rule, he would not leave fo transition at place as Pawia behind him. But the ob-Francisboferving hereof cost him dear. While he laid reges siege to Pavia; the Imperialists were but in an ill Estate; the Pope at most standing as Neuter; the Elerentines friends but in appearance only; the Venctions excusing themselves, as suspecting the Emperor, in that he would not sign the Investiture of Milan to Francisco Sforza; and our King, instead of giving more Money, requiring that which was due to him, (being 133000 Crowns yearly, in regard of the Pention withheld by Francis,) which yet being refus'd by Charles made him averse. Besides, he consider'd the defigns of the Emperor were only on Italy Francis on the other fide had a flourishing Army, confifting of about thirty thousand, whereof yet the most part were Mercenaries and Voluntiers; and therefore particularly mention'd by me, as not remembring to have read in any gular and properly under no command) should be admitted to the hazard of difordering a whole Army. And for the other part, being Mercenaries, he had found them flow, wilfull, of fmall trust, and oftentimes venal; though it cannot be deny'd, that those whom Francis in particular now us'd, have been reputed in all times a History, that so many of this kind (being irrevaliant conftant Nation. All which I have the rather observ'd, that the success which Francis had not long after, might feem less strange unto the Reader. The Nobility that came with him were indeed principal Persons, Henry d' Albret, (the Titular King of Navarre) the Dukes of Lorain, Longue-ville, Alancon and Albanie, (who, the Spring before had left Scotland, upon promife made him by the Nobility, that nothing should be innovated there, till his return) The Counts of St. Paul, Vaudement, L'aval, the Marthals of Fein, Chahanes, and Mentmerency, the Admiral de Benivet (chief Author of this Counfel) le Seigneur de Fleuranges, le Vidame de Chartres, Buissy d' Ambois, Richard de la Pole, and many other brave Gentlemen.

Novem.

with the Scafon, (being now Winter) and the advantage he had over the Imperialifts, who were neither in number nor vertue sufficient to repel him. This leasure the Pope made use of to mediate a Peace, by the means of the Bi-shop of Verona, and (when that could not be floop of Ferona, and (when that come not bedone) to keep Francis yet in good terms with him, promiting him, therefore indifferency at leaft, both as he was Communis Pater, and as the conceived him the ffronger. But, finding Fire Pope that the Treaty of Accord took no effect, was five productions of the conceived with the fronger of the production of th perswaded by the French Ambassadors (Resident the French. with him) to make a League with Francis. The Decempersivations the French us'd, were Promises, and certain Propositions of Peace, upon such Conditions as should be very advantagious to both. And thus at last the Pope by the secret intervention of Jo. Matthei the Bishop of Virona, made Peace with the French, encouraging them together (faith Belley) to attempt Neples, which yet the Pope diffembled ftrenuously, both with our Kings and the Emperors Agents; though, when he could hide it no longer, he pretended he was forc'd to it by the French. Yet, it may be the Janiszs. Pope was not a little inclin'd hereunto by a Mestage which came from England; for I find in our Records, that not long after the time that Francis passed into Italy, there came from France into England, on Louise the Regents part, one John Foachin, a Genousse, whose coming (as things then flood) was much suspected by the Imperialists. And the more, that he kept himself Hall. close, and repair'd every day to the Cardinal, and confulted with him only; but fo much was difcover'd as the Popes Agent here, by a Letter, advis'd his Holiness to make Peace with Francis in time; which the Pope did (although to his lofs, as will appear in its place.) And now Francis, not fearing the Imperialists, fends the Duke of Albany, with Renzo de Ceri, and about twelve thousand Men, against them of Lucer and Siens, for the Popes Service; and after, to artempt Neples, where all the places were unprovided of fufficient Garrison. Besides, he had fent the Marquis de Saluces with four thousand Men to Savona, from thence to attempt Genoui.a. Again, three thousand Italians (their Commander Genevanni de Medicis being hurt) disbanded, and fix thousand Grisons, hearing of some troubles in their Country, return'd; fo that his Forces were much weaken'd. Which Charles de la

During these passages in Italy, the assairs The Af-of Sectland seem'd to change form; for the firs of Duke of Albany being now to far distant from Scotland, then, the prime Nobility of Scotland (notwithflanding the promise exacted of them by the said Duke, when he departed, (which was in ALIV 1524,) promifing to return in September next) Mayinclin'd to the Queen's fide. So that prefently after they began to confult of making peace with England; which because they knew King Hony would never grant, as long as they acknowledg'd the Duke of Albany Governor, for fo he had lately intimated) they agreed to abrogate his Authority, and to inveil the young king in the exercise of his Regal Power. To this purpose, the Queen of Sats wrote to her Brother King Hony to affist his Nephew herein;

Nor understanding, took the less care to defend

Naples; as believing the French unable to fecond the Duke of Albany. And, therefore, gave order only to the Duke of Trajetto to defend the Coun-and rais'd twelve thousand Men.

who fent to the Borders his Lieutenant, Thomas
The manner which Francis us'd in befieging late Earl of Surrey, now (fince his Fathers * Death May. Pavia, feem'd to take up more time than itood much lamented, for his great Vertue) Dake of stone try the best he could; while Bourbon, pawning his Jewels to the Duke of Saron, went to Germany, Norfolk, and the Treasurer of England, to pro-cure the liberty of the young King. Hereup-on the Queen, affished by the Earls of Arran, Lenox, and divers of the chief Nobility, brought the young King from Sterling (where the Governor had appointed him to reside till his return) to Edenburgh, where he undertook the Admini-July 29. thration of the Kingdom, July 29. whereupon Aug. 20. Allegiance was fworn to him, and the Duke of Albany was Exauctorate; yet not with so general a Vote, but that the two Bishops of St. Andrews and Aberdeen dislik'd it; alledging both the Non-age of the King, and the Promife of the Nobility to the Governor, of not Innovating till September. Upon this they are both confined, Sept. but shortly restor'd to their Liberty. Our King foon after fent Ambassadors, Thomas Magnus (a Civil Lawyer and a Priest,) and Ratteliffe (a Gentleman) to refide in Scotland; commanding from thenceforth all Hoffility to ceaue. Where a Truce was taken, during which the Scotch Ambassackors were to be fent into England, and the second for the second secon establishing the young King's Power) he offer'd to maintain (a while) a Guard for him of two hundred Perfons. But this good Correspondence was a little clouded; for while these things were in hand, the Earl of Anguis and his Brother George Douglass formerly Banish'd (as we have shew'd) into France, found means to escape into Joly. England. The Earl defir'd our Kings aid, for his Restitution; but the Queen of Scots, who retain'd her old grudge to him, and (perchance) had newly cast an eye on Henry Stewart, (whom afterwards fhe marry'd) labour'd the contrary; remonstrating to our King, by divers Letters, that his coming to Seotland at this time would trouble the State. For the Earl of Arran, whose Power and Reputation was great, being Enemy Power and Keputation was great, being Lienly to the faid Anguis, the faid would oppole him; but our King fuspecting by some Actions that Octob. 4 Arran was French, suffered about October the Earl to enter Scotland, to counterposite him; taking the content of th of him at his departure, a Promise or Obligation; r. To procure and maintain the young Kings Authority, to the exclusion of the Duke Allany. 2. To feek to be reconcil'd to the Queen with all Humility. 3. To make friend-flip with Arran, as long as he maintains the the young King, and averts him from France; whereupon also our King promis'd, that if he did contrary, he would maintain Anguis against The Scott the said Arran, &c. Thus was Anguis restord to defire the his Country for a while; but the Queen took it ill that he was come, and the Ambassadors ap-pointed to be sent to King Henry for Peace, were Princels Marriage in danger to be flaid; yet I find that December 19. they came, being Gilbert Kenneth Earl of Caffifor their King. Dec. 19. lis, &c. and intreated Peace, and the Princess Dec. 23. Mary as Wife for their King. Our King gave hope of both; (for I find that both the Emperor and Francis made overtures of Matches for On whit King James at this time.) Howbeit, when our Conduri-Commissioners in private conference treated of ens to be Peace, and the Princefs, it was upon these Conditions, 1. That they flouid rememee the League with France, and instead thereof make the like with England. 2. That the young King till be be ripe for Marriage, shall be brought up in England. It feets yet the Scotch Ambassadors Commission was not L_{γ} Dec 30. large enough to treat these Points; so Decemb. Mirch 19. 30. Cassilis (leaving his fellows here) goes to Scot-King Henry with the refolution of the Nobility, and Letters from Queen Margaret, shewing, that the Lords of Scotland will be content to relinquish the Promife, whereby she was engag'd to the 1524. Emperor, be first discharged. Our King hearing this, said be would confer with the Emperor about three it; and so nothing being concluded, but a Truce years. for three years and a half, the Scoreh Ambassadors departed in April.

The Emperor hearing of this Treaty, dif-March. patch'd hither Adolpho de Borgona, Senior de Beures 1525. Adm. of Flanders, with the Prelid of Malmes to roteling require that the Princess Mary might be deliver- the Prined to him, promifing hereupon to declare her ces blar). Empress, and make her Governess of the Lew Countries; her Dower also was requir'd to be paid presently, and that our King in Person would the next year invade France. But before our King could give a perfect Answer to these Particulars News was brought of the Battel of Pavia, and the taking of Francis Prifoner, the manner whereof was thus.

Paria was a place easie enough to take, had TheBartle either the French press'd it roundly, or a less va- of Parallant Captain than Antonio de Legva desended it. Jan. But while Francis, as being confident he was Mafter of the Field, drew the Siege out in length, he gave not only time to the Imperialifts to join an Army, but at laft fail'd miserably in his Enterprize. The Advice he approv'd, after a Breach and Affault made in vain, was to open a way to the Town, on the one fide of the Tesin; for, as that River divided it felf into two Channels, whereof one pass'd by the Walls, (which had no defence on that part, but the River, being not fordable) his intention was to divert this Current, and fo to leave the Walls barc. But one rainy Night alone fo fwell'd the River, that all the Damms and Works which the French had rais'd, were carry'd away by the violence of the Stream. His ablest Counsellors hereupon wish'd him to raise the Siege, and give place to the Seafon. Besides, as the Imperialists, with a great Army, were now marching towards him, they thought it not fit he should be enclos'd betwixt the Town, (wherein was a frong Garrison,) and the Forces now approaching. It was the even of Saint Matthias in February 1525, (being Feb. 24. the day of the Emperor's Nativity) when the Marquis de Guasto leading the Vantguard, the Marquis of Pescara the Battail, and Charles de la Noy, accompany'd with Bourbon, the Rereward, came in good order near the French Army. Their Refolution was to weary the French all Night with Alarms and Skirmithes, and towards Morning to fall on them with the whole Army; fo that nothing of Importance was intended till full Day-light; when Francis, pointing his Ord-nance against them, so pierc'd their Squadrons, that they were forc'd to retire to a more covert place. Francis, thinking this was a Flight, draws his Army out of his strong Intrenchments into an open place, with intention to purfue them. The Commanders of the Imperialifts having thus obtain'd what they defir'd (for they wanted both Money and Victuals to subfift any long time,) encourag'd their Soldiers to fight, telling them, that though a King was present, there was not there- Bellay. fore more danger, but more Howairs and Riches pro-pos'd to them. That they should but follow their Com-manders, who would lead them to an assist'd Victory. The Soldiers hereupon (being not ignorant of the necessity they were in,) resolutely promised to go on. The Marquis of Pescara having advanc'd a little to difcover the Enemy, return'd; and, with a chearful Countenance, turning to-wards the Spaniards, told them that he must not conceal from them the cruel command the French the French, so that the Match with the Princess King had given, that no Spaniard should be received Many may be made sure; but they required that into mercy. This being a meer Invention of requir'd the Signal, promifing for the reft, to fell their Lives as dear as they could. Herewith then a furious Battel began; in which yet because the Mercenaries, and especially the Swife, did not shew their accustom'd Valour, all the charge fell on the few French that were prefent. None yet fought more bravely among Bravery. them, than the King; infomuch that with his own hand (as his Enemies did afterwards confess) he kill'd the Marquis of Civita de St. Angelo; which Example fo encourag'd the rest of his Nobility, as they omitted nothing that could be done in so little number. During this brunt, Antonio de Leyva, throwing down fome part of the Walls of Pavia, iffued forth with the best of his Garrison, and fell on the backs of the French then fighting. This wholly routed the Army, infomuch that all now began to fly. The King had his Horse kill'd under him, whose fall so engag'd his Leg, that he could not recover himfeli. In this posture one Juan de Urbieta, a Gui-puscoan, seiz'd on him. But the King declaring himself, and saying he rielded to the Emperor, Urthen Pris bieta without offering any Violence, receiv'd him toner.

as his Prifoner. The Kings Leg yet lay under his Horfe; U-bieta thinking by this means he was fure from escaping, runs to succour his Alferes, who was then in danger of being kill'd, desiring the King only to take notice that he wanted two Teeth before, and that he would remember it as a mark that he took him first. With that one Diego de Avila came, to whom the King also naming himself, and faying he was already yielded to the Emperor, Diego demanded, whether he had given any Gage thereof? The King faying, None was required, Diego laid hold on his Sword, (which was bloody) and his Gauntlet, and therewithal deliver'd him from his Horse, by the help of one Pita, who for his pains took his Order of St. Michael from him. This fo much troubled the King, that, not knowing how to help himfelf, he offer'd a great reward to the Soldier to let it alone, which yet the Soldier deny'd, faying be would carry it to the Emperor. The King being now on foot, divers Soldiers came in, and as they observ'd some Contention among those that took him, would without further enquiry who he was, have kill'd him. But one Monsieur de la Motte (or Pomperante, as the French have it, a French-man) coming by chance thither, kneel'd to him, and kiffing his Hand with all Reverence made them know how rich a prize they had got amongst them; the King yet caus'd him to rise, saying only, that he should behave himself like that Man he had ever esteem'd him. Herewith, a great concourse flocking in, the King was per-Twaded to take off his Helmet, which was no fooner done, but every one took a part of a great Pennache (or Feather) he wore thereon; others more prefumptuoully, cut pieces out of a Coat of Arms or Subraveffe he wore over his Harnels. At all which this magnanimous King thew'd no other Countenance, than that of Scorn, or knowing official the light of Scorn, as knowing fufficiently, that in despight of For-tune, his Valour had made him comply withhis Dignity. The chance of those who deserted the King was various; many were kill'd, others, thinking to pass the Tifin, were drown'd, among whom fix thousand Mercenaries (the most part Swifs) are accounted. Henry de Albret, thinking to fave himfelf by Flight, was taken. And now the report being general that the King was made Prisoner, divers French, who might have escap'd, out of a singular piety to their King, returned, one of a inigular piety to their King, returned, and yielded themselves, saying, they would not hood, he deliberated with his Council what was next to be done. Whereupon it was thought sit Ambass-ten the first of the chief Commanders that came in, to fend immediately Ambassadors into Spain, to Spain.

1525. the Marquils to kindled their Courage that they was the Marquils de Pefeara; after him, Guafte, 1525. and others; at last Bourben being Arm'd Cap a Pe, and with his Sword all bloody in his Hand, comes towards the King, who hereupon demanded his Name: Being told, he flept (if one may Sandov. believe the Spaniard my Author) a little behind the Marquifs de Pescara. He also perceiving the King troubled, goes to Bourbon, and (after he had told him that the King was there) demanded had told him that the King was there) demanded his Sword; which Bombon without more adde Eurike rendred, and thereupon, running to the King, waits on and lifting up his Beaver, call himfelf on his bim. Knees, and humbly demanded his Royal Hand to kifs; which yet the King refus'd. Hereupon the control of t On Bourbon, with tears in his Eyes, faid, Sir, if you would have followed my Council, you found not have needed to be in this Effate, nor fo much blood of the French Nobility fled as stains the Filds of Italy. The King hereupon turning his eyes to Heaven, now reply'd only, Patience, fince Fertune bath fail'd me. Further Discourse was hinthe bath fail a me. Future Discourse was min-dred by the Marquis of Pefeara, who, defining the King to mount on Horfe-back, conducted him towards Pavia. But the King intreating he might not be kept Prifoner in a Town before which he had lately fo putiflant Army, they brought him to a Monastery adjoyning. Henry de Albret, the Comte of St. Paul, and divers other Prisoners being deliver'd to several Custodies. From hence the King was remov'd to a ftrong Caftle call'd Piciquiton, and there kept with a great Guard of Spaniards under Hernando de Alancon, till other order came from Charles; to whom, immediately after this Victory, a Messenger was fent, to acquaint him with the Success. In the mean time Francis was us'd with all refpect. For more oftentation whereof, Charles de la Noy brought (before Supper) the Bason, the Marguis of Guaffo the Ewer, and Barrbon the Tow-el; which courtesse he required, by inviting them to sit at the Table with him. After which, requiring some Money might be furnished to him for play, he pased away the time the most chearfully he could.

Charles was at Madrid when this great News March 12 came to him. The fence he shew'd of it, was Charles's fuch as became a wife Prince, and one that was Behaviour not himself exempted from a Quartan. He com-par'd the afflictions of Fortune with those of Nature, and found the difference fo little, that he thought himself to want even the advantages of Liberty as much as a Prisoner. For, if he confider'd Francis as in the custody of his Guards, he lookt upon himself as in the custody of his Physicians, and confin'd to his Chamber by a stronger hand than that which held Francis. Moreover, he said, it was not for Christians to re-joice for their Victories against each other, but only against Infidels.

Our King was not advertis'd hereof fooner March 9: than the Ninth of March. When a Messenger How it from the Princes Margarite, Governess of the ceiv'd in Low-Countries, inform'd him of all the Partice-England. lars. Charles de la Noy not omitting also to * Feb. 24 write to him thereof (as I find by our Records.) This being brought to Council, it was thought fit the King should comply with his Confederate Charles, in giving some publick Demonstration of Joy. Therefore the King going to St. March 22

Pauls, and causing a Mass to be sung in a more folemn manner than ordinary, feem'd to celebrate the Victory, though inwardly not fo well fatisfy'd thereof. For, as he confider d Chulls grown now to more Greatnefs than flood either with reason of State, or due terms of Neighbour-

Record.

March

with charge to represent unto the Emperor, how ready begun for the ransoming of Francis. that this War being made at a Common charge, Record it was reasonable the fruit should redound to His Inhe-both. That the part his Highness pretended to, runace in was Inheritance in France, which he defird (up-France de an on fome fitting Treaty with Francis) might be reftor'd. To which his Highner doubted not but the Emperor would afford his best Assistance; as well because it was just in it felf, as that it was according to their late Treaty. Or, if this could not be obtain'd by fair means, to require the Emperor, by vertue of the faid Treaty, to proceed in levying Forces to make War in France, wherein his Highness would likewise concur. Neither could his Highness doubt that the Emperor would refuse to embrace this Motion, fince the benefit hereof would finally accrue to him; for as his Highness was purposed to ratifie and make good the intended Match betwixt the faid Emperor and the Princess Mary, who was Heir not only to the Crown of England, but to his Titles in France, so all at last would devolve on him; which therefore might be thought fo beneficial and advantageous, as he ought not to think it much to deliver up Francis to his Highnefshands,upon configning of the faid Princels to his. Especially, since by an express Article of the forefaid Treaty, they were bound mutually to deliver all Ufurpers upon each others Right. All which being founded upon a folemn Agreement, confirm'd by Oath, could not feem Infolent, what Indisposition soever might be found in the Emperor to accomplish it. Notwithstanding which, if (as it was most likely) this Propolition should take no effect, and that the Emperor would derive the total benefit of his prize upon himfelf; that his Highness yet might make 10 much use thereof, as with more justification to take that order which pertain'd to his present occasions, and the peace of Christendom. Advice being approv'd by all, a Dispatch was raade, and given to Cuthbert Tonftal (Bishop of London, and Lord Privy Seal) and Sir Richard Wingfield Knight, fent then to Spain; wherein also an Interview betwixt our King and the Emperor was propos'd. In which further it was offer'd, that the Princess Mary should be given into the Emperors hands upon fitting Conditions. Many other Particularities conducing to the ends above-mentioned were specified therein; though for the rest it seem'd not probable to fome of our Councellors, that the Emperor would accept them, as being refolv'd (what Promise or Advantages soever was presented to him) to fuffer none elfe to partake of the Profit or Honour he had acquir'd in his Victory. This Proposition finding no reception But with- ry. out effect. in Spain, but what was before imagin'd, our King returns to that brave and wife Refolution he had formerly taken, to make himfelf Arbiter of Christendom, and to fall on him who interrupted the publick Peace. Many reasons also of great moment concurr'd to this Refolution. For the Lady Margarite (Regent of Flanders) who ought by the late League to have rais'd Forces against the French, began already to treat with them concerning an Accommodation. Besides, the Flemings being grown strong by Sea, had not only very infolently treated with divers of our Merchants, but, contrary to a Remonstrance made in that behalf, had rais'd the value of our Coin, and thereby fecretly deriv'd great Sums into their Country. Again, when demand was made only for re-payment of that Money which was lent to the Emperor in his greatest necessi-of a Match purpo 'd with Donna If bella of Portugal; which reflected on his Daughters Reputation. Laftly, the Popes Breve, reprefering the danger of Chriftendom through the projecticy of the Tirk, (who had now taken Belgrade, and Rhodes, and thereby open'd feveral ways to Italy K. Imary and Germany) and, together, exhorting all Christoners of flian Princes to join against the Common Line teranum. my, had fo prevail'd with our King, that he vertal thought fit to lay afide all Ambition to recover Peace his Inheritance in France, and to endeavour an Universal Peace. In the furtherance of which good defire, as the remembrance of the kind Interview betwixt him and Francis did operate not a little, fo the Reputation that Francis had gotten by his courage shew'd in this late Action, had kindled in the mind of our generous King a compassionate zeal for his Delivery. Therefore, at the request of the Kings Mother of France (who by the mediation of Giovanni Joakim had much dispos'd our King to return to his ancimuch authors our King to return to his ancient friendhip with Francis) he fent to Cubbert Ender-Tonfial Bilhop of London, and Sir Richard Wing-vours to feld Knight, his Ambashadors in Spain, to interfece feed for the delivery of Francis; who had be-very of gun the way already in a particular Letter to Francisch Mental Cubber 1 and 1 a Charles; where, after an excuse of his not foon-Charles; where, after an excule of this not confine Writing, because they who had charge of him, would not permit it, he faid, that the Found greatest Comfort he found in this his miscroble Conda Kings greatest Confine that he had fallen into the hands of fo generous a Prince, who therefore would not force him. to any thing, which might be unjult to require orim p-flible to perform. That he look of therefore sufficient security would be accepted for his Delivery, since thereby, instead of detaining an unusselful Prisoner, he should make a King bis Slave. Houssever, that is was more profit to hove bin a faithful friend, than to suffer bim to die desperate. None yet was so vigilant and intentive either for his Delivery, or the general good of the Kingdom, as Madam Louise his Mother (Regent of France) who, by many forcible and reiterated Ambaffies and Treaties, drew most of the Christian Potentates, and Republicks to favour the deliverance of her Son. Thro' her care also Andrea Doria (General of the French King's Galleys) re-conducted the Duke of Albany, who, though far ingag'd in the Enemies Country, did yet, without any confiderable loss of his Men, return to Minsvilles,

April 25.

The Emperor now finding that all the chief Princes and Estates in Christendom would puilfantly labour for the delivery of Francis, fent Adrian de Croy Seigneur de Beaurain, with certain Charles Propositions dated March 25, 1525, unto him. Proposition Whereof this is the Sum. That an univerfal Peace and League should be con-Sanders cluded betwixt all Christian Princes, and security on every side be given, for the continuence thereof.

That either of them two, with twenty thousand Foot, and sive thousand Horse should invade the

That, for further feathly, the Dauphin fitted marry with the Primeli Maria (Doughter to the King of Portugal and the Queen Leonora, and the Dawry flould be a mutual difflaim in each others inhi-

That the King of France should restore and leave the Dutchy of Burgundy in that effate and manner as it was in the time of Charles the luft Duke there-of; and Therouene, Hefdin, and all that was usure? in Actois (bould be re-deliver'd.

That Charles Duke of Bourbon should be restor'd was tent to the Emperor in its greater necessity, nothing yet was return'd but a dilatory and to bit former Effate; and (particularly) have the frivolous excuse. Neither was our King ignorant of the Treaty which the Emperor had all bould hold inder the Title of King thereof.

Vol. II.

Take Vol. II.

i 525.

That the King of England should have all re-accomplish'd, in such manner that the Emperor might for'd that appertain'd to him, or etherwise was agreed be altogether discharg'd, and free thereof.

That he would refere to the Duke of Bourbon, all

That all followers of the Duke of Bourbon should be reintegrated in their former possessions.

That the Prince of Aurange, Don Hugo de Moncada, the Seigneur de Bonze, and d' Antroy, should be fet at liberty, and all restord to the Prince of Aurange, which was taken from him in the Wars of Bretaigne. That Madam Margarite, Aunt to the Emperor, and La Reyna Germana, fecond Wife to Ferdinand of Spain, with divers other Princes and great Persons, (particularly nominated in the said Articles) should be righted in their just demands, for restitution in all things taken fince the War.

That all Commerce betwixt the Subjects should be renew'd bereupon.

That the chief Parliaments of Paris and elsewhere in France, should ratisse the Agreement.

That be King himself, being at liberty, should with all due Solemnity, confirm it, as also the Dauphin as soon as be came to the age of fourteen.

Greatly When these Articles were presented a faid distribution of them so displeas'd him, that he is said When these Articles were presented to Francis, in a fury to have drawn his Dagger, and spoken these words, It is better for a King of France to die after this manner. Infomuch that Hernando de Alancon who was present, hastily took it from him. Yet, to gratifie the Emperor, he gave order that the Prince of Aurange, and Don Hugo de Moncada should be set at liberty. Moncada coming to Court, brought two Letters, one from the King, the other from Madam Louife, his Mother, by which (as also by the intervention of the Arch-Bishop of Embrun, and Philip Chabot Seigneur de Brion, and others who were deputed Ambaffadors upon this occasion) these Conditions following were offer'd.

That Donna Leonora (Sifter to the Emperor, and Rolist to the late King of Portugal) bould not be given in Marriage to Bourbon, (bowfoever promis'd him) but to the King of France, and the Infanta Donna Maria, her Daughter, unto the Dauphin.

That the Dukedom of Burgundy fhould be held by Francis, as the Doury to the Queen Leonora, and should be left to the Heirs Males betwint them. flootid ve left to the Herri Males verwins were. If we find thing very floot of bippen, that the Dukedom flootid then descend to the second Son of the said Emperor; if the Emperor flould have no Sons, but Daughters, that then the second Son of the King of France should marry one of the said Daughters, and have Burgundy for her Portion.

That Francis would renounce all the Right and In-terest he had in Milan, Genoua, and Naples, to-gether with all Debts and Pensions that could be demanded on that occasion.

That he would release the Superiority and Dominion that he pretended over Flanders, and Artois, and for this purpose would obtain the consent of all the Estates of France.

That he would reftore Hefdin and Tournay.

That, for the Lands be beld near the River of Soam, he would pay the Emperor a just price.

That, when the Emperor hould go to his Coronation into Italy; or otherwise, that if he or his Brother Verdinand should make War, he would pay half the charges of his Army, and go along in Person

That, if the Emperor would pass into Italy by Sea, he would command all his Galleys and other Shipping to attend bim at Barcellona.

That, if the Emperor would make War against the Insidels in Africa, or Greece, he would pay half the charges of the Army, and attend the Emperor in Perfon.

That all the Emperor had Capitulated with the King of England, and all that was due by way of borrowing or Pension to the said King, should be paid and bis Estate, and pay him bis Pensions, and moreover give his Daughter in Marriage to him, together with Juch a Portion as was fitting her Degree and Quality, and that when any Army flould be rais'd by him for the Emperors Service, the said Dukeshould be General, in case the King went not himself in Person, and that all former disservices, and unkindnesses should be forgotten.

That sufficient security by the Parliament of Paris should be given of these Particularities.

Upon mature Deliberation taken concerning these Propositions, the Emperor reply'd, that the The Em-Dutchy of Burgundy was his Inheritance, and there- perors Anfore not to be dispos'd of, or alienated according to any iwer. Mans fancy or abitrement. Concerning the Marriage proposed between Francis and Leonora his Sifter; that he could resolve nothing without the consent of Bourbon, to whom she was promis'd. That for the businesses of Italy, he would innovate nothing, but rather keep all quiet. As for Naples, fince Francis had no right thereunto, there was no occasion to make use of his disclaim. That it would content him much to have Burgundy restor'd in the same manner that his great Grand-Father Charles enjoy'd it. And that he accepted well of his Shipping, when he would think fit to go and receive his Crown in Italy. The French on the other fide instead of Burgundy, offer'd great Sums of Money; but Charles infifting still great Sums of Money; but Chartes miniming that upon Burgundy, nothing was concluded. So that, Infanta of leaving Madrid, the Emperor went to hold his Portugal Cortes (or Parliament) at Toledo; where, among propos'd other things, it was pertition'd by the Effacts of Cortes of the English and the the Emperor being row of 280 Switch of the Cortes of the affembled, that the Emperor, being now of age Spain to to marry, should take to Wife Donna Isabella In-Charles. Kings Daughter.

While affairs pass'd thus betwixt Charles and March. Francis, our King, who knew he might have use of Money on these occasions, and (howfoever) did well understand that the maintaining of a fure Peace at home, was almost as costly as the making of a War abroad, advis'd with his Council how to provide himfelf. Yet as the Cardinal had undertaken the King should never want, as long as he might manage the publick Affairs; fo they gladly discharg'd themselves on him. But Princes ought to take heed, in whole hands they commit their extraordinary Power, lest it hazard their ordinary, it being the Clue of that Labyrinth of State, which ought not rashly to be my into anothers hand. Neither figural they in the complete that the complete them. put into anothers hand. Neither should they inforce any thus violently; when bufiness may be done in a calm and gentle manner. The har-mony of Government confifting in fuch a delicate proportion, that no one part can fafely be ftrain'd higher, unless the rest may well be tun'd and accorded thereunto. This appear'd in the Actions of this year, (being the feven-teenth of the Reign of our King,) when, Com-millions being granted forth into all the Coun-Committies of England, for the levying the fixth part of fions for every Lay-mans Goods, and the fourth of the Money. Clergies; the People in general took it so ill, that it was like to have grown to a Rebellion; alledging, First, that these Commissions were against the Law. Secondly, their own Poverty, and that the King, fince the fourteenth of his Reign, had of them twenty Fifteens. But as this Hak. feem'd to be done, without that the King was fully inform'd thereof, fo when the fequence appear'd, it was refolv'd to difavow the whole appear of it was related to the whole proceeding. Our King therefore, by Letters Pretended fent through all the Counties of England, de toberaid clar'd, he would have subing of them but by way only by of benevolence: This got the Cardinal many tree gift.

Curfe,

Conditions of Peace offer'd by Francis.

Sandov

Curse, and the King as many Bleffings. Notwithstanding, under this Title of Benevolence, he requir'd great Sums of all his Subjects, and par-May 8. ticularly of the Citizens of London. But one of their Lawyers answer'd, that by the Statute, primo Ric. tertii, Cap. secundo, such Benevolences were forbidden. But it was reply'd, That Laws made by Usurpers oblige not Legitimate Princes, that made of Ganger conge not Legisian Armet, and Mur-Richard the Third, was not only a Tyrant, but a Mur-therer of his own Nephews, and therein more fit to fuffer by the Law, than to make any. Therefore his fuffer by the Law, than to make any. Therefore his intentious were, only by popular and licentious ways, to obtain the fixueur of the Commonalty, as having no other means to fishfift. That our King, being the true and mediuted Heir of the Crown, could be tyed bereby no further than it pleased himfelf; it being abfurd to think, that a Statute invented by a factious selfembly, and approved no otherwise than by a Criminal in the highly degree, should bind an abfolute and lawful March a whorehe is there had no heter once. lawful Monarch; wherefore if they had no better eva-fion, it were not fit to mention this, Thereupon the Cardinal promifing to examine them one by one, concerning what they would give, he begins with the Lord Mayor: But the Mayor defiring leave not to declare himfelf fully, till he had fpcken with the Common-Council of the City, the Cardinal wifht him and the reft of the Aldermen to come to him privately, and give what An Infur-they would. In the Country yet, (where they rection. feem'd more obstinate,) fome Ring-Leaders of the People (who had taken Arms) upon the persuation of the Dukes of Norfolk and Suffolk submitted themselves, and were brought to London, and there imprison'd. The King yet, persist-17.11

casion, (as being advertis'd that the common fort of his Subjects excus'd themselves by their want of Means, and not of Affection, to supply his Majesties Occasions) brought the matter to the The Car-Council-Table, where the Cardinal, by way of dinal excufes this Apology, faid, that he had dene nothing herein, Practice.

Had. pofitively, the King might lawfully demand any Sum by Commission, and that the Council of State confirm'd this court. Reserved.

ing in his Intention not to punish any on this oc-

And the this course. But the King faying that he was made believe, his Subjects were richer than indeed he found them by this Commission, all the fault was laid on the falle Informers, and Pardon given to all those who had deny d the former Benevolence. Hereupon the Offenders were brought to the Star-Chamber; where after a fharp charge laid against them by the King's Council-Learned, the

The Rio Cardinal faid, That, notwithstanding their grievous
tets parOffences, the King, in consideration of their Powerty, bud granted them his gracious Pardon, upon Condition, that they would give in survise for their good Beha-viour beneeforth. But they replying, that they had none; the Cardinal first, and after him the Duke of Norfolk, faid they would stand bound for them, wherewith they were discharg'd.

The Cardinal, who by a Concurrence of the Papal and Regal Authority, had fupprefs'd divers Monasteries, and given that Terror to the rest, that he drew large Sums from them, would not yet defift fo, but continued still his purpofes of converting the profits of all those, which by any colour might be reputed Supernumerary, unto other ules; among which while he reduc'd the Monaftery of Beggam in Ellics, a dif-guis'd Company, in firange Vifors, taking the Canons along with them, reimplac'd them, and fo departed; promiting, at the ringing of their Abbey-Bell, to come at all times to their Succours. But these Apparitions did not long haunt the House; for the King's Council, understand-ing hereof, so examin'd the Canons, that they at laft confess'd the Authors, who therefore were nal thus every way establishing his Authority, 1525, was thought by this time, between Visitations, The Carwas thought by this time, between Vilitations, The Camaking of Abbots, Problas of Teftaments, grant-dinalsing of Faculties, Licenses, Dispensations, and great many other ways, besides the great Pensions he whald from Foreign Princes, to have made his Treasury equal to the Kings (notwithstanding the Sums he often transmitted to Rome;) in which way of inriching himself, one John Allen Doctor of Law, his Chaplain, accompany'd with a great Train and tiding from one Religi. with a great Train, and riding from one Religious House to another, in a kind of perpetual Progress, or Visitation, did the Cardinal no little Service. But as this at laft became a publick Grievance, fo the King took notice of it, in fo fharp a manner, that the Cardinal was enforc'd, not only to excuse himself with much submission, but to promife never to do fo any more; protesting withal, that he had made a last Will or Testament, wherein he had left a great part of his Estate unto his Highness. Upon which submission of the Cardinals (as I take it) the King fent him this Letter, written all with his own hand, as we find it in our Records.

As touching the matter of Wilton, seeing it is in Thekings no other strain than you write of, and you being also the Cardinastical with the falling sick of your Servants) nalafraid, and troubled; I marvel not that it overslipped you as it did. But it is no great matter, standing the see in the total services of the see in the see in the second services. the case as it doth; for it is yet in my hand, as I perceive by your Letter, and your default was not so great, seeing the Election was but Conditional. Whereon, and though the cafe were much more heinous, I can be content for to remit it, being right glad, that, according to mine intent, my Monitions and Warnings have been benignly and lovingly accepted on your be-balf, promiting you, that the very affection I bear po-cau'd methus to do. As touching the help of Relicauid me thus to do. As tauching the help of Reli-gious Houffest to the building of your College, I would it were more, so it be lawfully; for my intent is none, but that it bould so appear to all the World, and the occasion of all their mumbling might be seeduded and put away; for, surely, there is great murmaring of it, throughout all the Realm, both good and had. They say not that all that is ill gotten is bestowd upon the College, but that the College is the Cloak for covering all milishirs. This crivered me, I allier you to hove Conege, our time the Conege is the Clone for covering all mijchiefs. This grievesh me, I affure you, to hear it spoken by him, which I so intirely love. Wherefore, me-thought I could do no less, than thus friendly own Letter, which a little me-thinketh toucheth Con-ficience, and that is, that you have received Money of teenet, and that, it can you have receive a name; of the Exempts for having of their old Tiftors. Surely, this can hardly be with good Confeience. For, and they were good, why floudd you take Money? And if they were ill, it were a finful AE. Howbeit your Legacy were it; it were a justified the theorem is the control of the con

HENRY R.

One of the liberties which our King took at his fpare time, was to love. For, as all recom-mendable parts concurr'd in his Perfon, and they, tent for, and gricvoully punish'd, The Cardi- again, were exalted in his high Dignity and Valour, tangle the same; and, in so doing, we will sing, Te Laudant Angeli atque Archangeli, Te Lau-dat Omnis Spiritus. And thus an end I make of this; though rude, yet leving Letter, defining you as hene-volently to take it, as I do mean it, for I ensure you, (and I pray you think it so) that there remainsth, as this hour, no spark of displeasine towards you in my Heart. And thus fare you well, and he no more per-plext. Written with the band of your lowing Sovereign and Friend,

King.

 $H_3\mathbb{Z}$

fair Ladies, which liv'd in his Court, he both gave and receiv'd Temptation. Among whom, because Mittress Elizabeth Blunt, Daughter to Sir 11-2. John Blum Knight, was thought, for the time. The King naments of Nature, and Education, to be the has a Soni by Mrs Beauty and Mistress-piece of her time, that intire affection past betwixt them, as at last she bore him a Son. The Child, proving fo equally like to both his Parents, that he became the first Emblem of their mutual Affection, was call'd Hony Fitz-Roj by the King, and so much avow'd by him, that having now attain'd the Age of six years, he was made Knight publickly, and the same day created Earl of Nottingham, Duke

June 18. of Richmond and Somofer, and Lieutenant Gene-ral beyond Trent, and Warden General of the *July 19 borders of Scotland, and * fhortly after Admiral of England. After which he was first bred up June 18. tegether with Henry Earl of Surrey, in the Castle of Windfor (which the Earl elegantly describes in a Sonnet extant in his Works) from whence (Nevember 1532.) they went both together to Study at Paris, which acquaintance and friend-Novemb. ship was indear'd again by a Match of the said Duke with Mary the Earls Sister; by whom yet His Chahe had no Issue. Howbeit, I find, he was very personable and of great expectation, infomuch that he was thought, not only for hability of Body but Mind, to be one of the rarest of his time, for which reason also he was much cherish'd by our King, as also because he had no issue Male by his Queen, nor did, perchance, expect any

The Car-

The Cardinal had now built his fair Palace at dinal builds Hampton-Court. But as he wifely confider'd, that that the would but add unto that envy for which he court and had already fuffer'd to much, he gave it the gives it to King, who, in exchange, permitted him to live the King in Richmond House.

The Credit that Luther, at this time, had gotten among those Germans, who were either weary of their obedience to the stricter parts of Ecclefiaftical Government, or defirous to reform the Errours and Abuses of it, (now so general, as even Pope Adrian himself confess d that many were crept into Rome) had prevail'd far. Yet as others examin'd which way he took to make his Reformation, fo they thought Religion yet not so exactly form'd, but that it might be cast in a better Mold. Therefore not only Huldrieus Zuinglius, at Zurich, began a Reformation fomewhat varying from that of Lutber; but one Muncer in the confines of Turingia, having invented a Doctrine, opposite enough to the Church of Rome, yet differing from the other Reformers in many things, publish'd it with much applause of the inferior fort. For, as he fain'd he had power from God to depose Princes, and substitute others, and that, again, he taught, all Goods should be Common; and divers other Articles tending to Popularity, he was follow'd by huge Multitudes. To temper yet this licentious Doctrine, he preach'd Austerity of Life; counselling Men to Prayers, Fastings, and all other Devotions, which might argue, his Intention was not fo much to invade other Men's Pofferfions, as to establish a moderate Equality. Thus did he feafon Falshoods with Truths, and Ill with Good, while the vulgar fort, who could not ditlinguish betwixt them, admir'd, and follow'd all. To remedy these so dangerous Assemblies and Opinions, the chief Neighbouring Princes rais'd some Forces; and prevail'd fo far, that, at last, they diffipated, and kill'd their whole Ardefence, finging only a Pfalm, (whereby they band, the Duke of Alancon. As for the right of invoked the Holy Ghoft) while Muncer (who it Burgundy, the defir'd it might be determin'd by seems trusted least to his own Doctrine) fled a- 1525. way; yet being purfu'd and taken, together with his Companion Phifer, they fhortly after lost and Be, their Heads. His Seft yet took not its end fo; headed as being reviv'd again, in part, not many years after, by John of Leyden and Knipperdeling, who, the solution of t of People, being born upon Mens Shoulders, hc my. would breath on them, and bid them receive the Holy Ghost.

Such was the generous Disposition of our King, that not only for Francis then a Prisoner, but the expulsed King of Denmark, Christiern, he interceded with his best Offices. Therefore, this year, he fent Henry Standish Bishop of Saint Asfaph, and Sir Henry Baker Knight, to perswade his Subjects to recall him home; whence yet nothing had chased him so much as the guilt and horror of fhedding fo much blood there (fo great a perfecutor is Cruelty of it felf:) But the angry Danes obstinately deny'd. The next Instance then was, that at least his Son (who was Nephew to Charles) might fucceed. But this also was refus'd; they alledging they durft not commit the Supream Power over themselves, into the hands of one, who, they thought would imitate and revenge his Father.

The French King being weary of his reftraint Emicis I in Italy, had desir'd he might be remov'd into defires to be re-Spain; both as he hop'd the Emperor might be mov'd to perswaded to come to speech with him there, Spains and as he reputed change of Prifon to be a fecond Liberty. Charles de la Noy also concurrd in this request, as fearing he might be taken out of his hand. Having obtain'd this favour, he June 7. found not yet the Emperor fufficiently difpos'd to fee him, though otherwife he could not complain of being either debar'd the pleasure of hunting, or any other reasonable Exercise. Find-His Sicking yet still that the Emperor did estrange him-nets. felf so much, as not to vouchfase him one Vifit, he fell Sick; for he did not think that his Misfortunes had made him forfeit his Dignity; or that, for being a Prisoner of War, he had extinguish'd his Title to be a King. Charles un-Charles viderstanding this, whether out of Compassion, or fits him. fear of lofing Francis, refolves to go to him at the Aleazar de Madrid, where, coming to his Chamber he embrac'd Francis, who faid prefently, Monsieur, vers aqui vuestro esclavo; the Emperor answerd again, No Sino, buen bernamo, s amigo libre. The King reply'd, No Sino, vuestro esclavo. The Emperor answer'd again, No Sino, Sino, libre amigo, y buen barmano; and thereupon wisht him to have a care of his Health, which he much defir'd, and that his businesses would succeed well. The Emperor not thinking this courtesie sufficient, returns to see him the next day again; which so comforted Francis, that he amended fuddenly. Whereupon the Emperor refolv'd to return to his businesses at Toledo. But Sept. Madam Margarite Dutchess of Alancon, Sister to Dutchess Francis, hearing of his Sickness, made hast to see his Sister him. Whom therefore the Emperor courteously visits him entertain'd, and accompany'd to her Brothers Lodging; where, after many affectionate Prote-flations, he left them together, and fo held on his Journey to Toledo, whither Madam de Alancon, not many days after, followed him, mediating ftill the delivery of her Brother, to whom the defir'd the Emperor to give his Sifter Leonora, upon the conditions above-mentioned; and that the King, her Brother, would provide for Bour-bon a Match equal to this; wherein the was Disors, thought to have intimated her felf, as being my. Neither was it difficult, they, for their best newly made Widow by the death of her Hu:-

new Religion.

And is

Difcover'd to

was contented that learned Perfons in the Law on both fides should treat hereof, and that the Pope should be Umpire; but Madame also did The French Writers add, that not approve this. promise was made by Francis at this time also, that the King of England should receive intire Satisfaction. Madame de Alancon, finding at last how little her intreaties prevail'd, defir'd leave to return, and by the way to fee her Brother, And con- which was granted. Here then was propos'd how he might escape; which was at an record, means for by changing Cloaths with a Norre, who carry'd hos Ecape wood and Coals to the King's Chamber, and blacking his face with Cole-dutt. Which Inventional the analysis to be a Lady's, and some he might escape; which was at last resolv'd. tion as it is like enough to be a Lady's, and fomewhat better than the lending him her Mask, I have thought fit to give her the honour of. This Plot was kept fecret, only betwixt the King, his Sifter, one Clement Chappion his Chamberlain, and another Treasurer. But Monsieur de la Roche-pot striking this Chappion on some occasion, he, as being difcontented and without remedy, flies to the Emperor, and discovers all. The Emperor yet would not fuddenly believe it, nor without better enquiry into the business; as not thinking (if one may believe the Spaniard my Author) that the King of France would, in fuch an undecent and unworthy manner, procure his Liberty. Therefore, in favour of this conceit of the Emperor's, he fo represents the Crime, as if Francis ought to believe, that it was more Honourable for him to flay in Prifon, than escape it; howsoever it feems his ancient Courage was fo far from being abated, as it increas'd rather by his close keeping. Therefore he fent Monfieur de Montmorency to tell Charles, that he was refolu'd to endure any thing fooner than to reftore Burgundy, or yield through constraint that which did not become him, so that he confraint tota which did not vectome him, to that he diffiel only to know the place of his Impriforment, and number of his Attendants. The Emperor antword, that he was content to appoint him a place, and to neminate these that should guard him; for the rest, protesting that it grieved him much that Francis should result to do that for the Ranson of his Pentan which he was hound to do for the Ohe of Suffice. fon, which he was bound to do, for the fake of Justice only. But ample Commission and confent being come from Madame the Regent and Parliament of Paris to transact a further Agreement, Francis demanded that he might have Donna Leonora, and, for her Portion, the Counties of Mascon and Auxerre, promising, in consideration thereof, to restore Burgundy. But to this demand of Leonora, Charles answer'd again, that being obliged to the Duke of Bourbon, he could do nothing therein without acquainting him first: Yet, to satisfie the King, he fent to Bourbon, to let him know how much it concern'd him, that Francis might have Leonora. But Bourbon (it is doubtful whether out of his former contumacy and stubbornness, or out of a violent affection to the Lady) answer'd, that he had loft great possessions in France, only to have the Honour to match in that Bourbon nearness of blood to the Emperor. This feem'd made Dof much to trouble Charles: At last, fending for Bourbon, he offer'd him, in recompence of Leanora, the Inveftiture of Milan, which Bourbon ac-

1525. way of Justice before the 12 Peers of France;

but the Emperor diflik'd this, faying, that he fhould pay him twelve hundred thouland Crowns towards his charges, and that the faid Investigure should remain in the hands of la No, till the War of Italy were ended. But Sforza finding this too hard, joyn'd with the adverse Party, and gave occasion to the Emperor to bestow the Investiture on Bourbon. And he had reason to be content herewith; for Donna Leonora, hearing of this competition about her, decided the controverse in favour of Francis; sending word to the Emperor, that she had rather be a Queen of France than Wife to Bourbon.

This while, the Pope, the Venetians, and Prin-League ces of Italy on the one fide, leagu'd together against for the defence of Italy against the Emperor, in Charles in Italy. viting also our King into the Treaty; our King on the other, mediated for Francis; neither did it diminish the suspicion entertain'd by them that Charles pretended to an universal Monarchy in Charles's Christendom, because, presently upon the ma-Ambuti-king of Francis Prisoner at Pavia, he had writ-onten to our King, as well as to all other the faid principal Persons, that he should take it well if they did not meddle with the Dominions and Estates of Francis, since, being his Prisoner, he could do no less than protect him against all others. While these Treaties proceed, Henry de Albret, King of Navarre, found a more compendious way to his Liberty, by corrupting his Guards. The Count de Saim Paul also devis d means to efcape without paying any Ranfom.

Madame Louise the French Regent continuing her Meffages and Ambaffades, follicites our King affiftance for the redeeming of her Son. To Aug. 30. which purpose a Treaty was concluded at Moore, August 30. 1525. in this manner, as our Records have it.

That all Injuries, done and receiv'd in the late Treaty be-War between England and France, shall be forgot-tween England

That confederation for mutual aid and interceurse of Merchandise shall be established, together with free passage of Subjects through each others Dominions, so that they exceed not a hundred arm'd Men.

That all Taxes and Impolitions laid by each of the Kings upon the Subjects or Merchants of the other, within these last 50 years, shall be extinct, and noncuones impos'd.

That one shall not protect the disobedient Subjects of the other, nor entertain Rebels, Traytors, or Fugitives : but, within twenty days after due requisition made, shall deliver them up.

That no Letters of Reprifal (or Merk) shall be granted

That no Letters of Keprijas (or Neeres yous vegrantes on either fide, but only against the principal Delinquents, and that but in case of denial of Justice.

That, if the Subjects of the one or the other offend against this Treaty, they shall be punished, without that the Treaty shall, any way therefore, be instringed.

That, presently upon the Ratification of this Treaty, in the Control of th

the Prisoners of War on the one and the other side shall be releas'd, as also the French Hostages.

That, in this Treaty shall be comprehended the Friends Ton, in this I reary justile comprehended the Friends and Allies of each Prince. That is to [ay, on the King of France bis part, the Pope, the Kings of Scandand, Hungary, Navatree, and Portugal; the State of Venice; the Dukes of Savoy, Lorain, Gueldres, Ferrara; the Swifs, the Marquifs of Margings of Savoy. Montferrat and Saluzzo. On the King of Engmora, the Invefiture of Milan, which Baurban accepted; the Writings or Patent for which my Author faith he saw in Simanea, not expressing in the mean while, how this concurr'd with the Investiture, which, a little before, he saith, the Emperor gave to Francisco Sforza. To reconcile which difficulty, I shall produce (out of a dispatch extant in our Records) the reason, as I conceive it; for though Charles had (together with the Possessing granted Sforza the Investiture of Alilan, yet it was upon condition, that Sforza ensuring whose violating of the League yet should not seen that the state of the signer of the signer of the League yet should not seen the signer of the Emperor archeology.

Milan

Sandov.

1525. not be understood as a Breach betwixt the principal Con-

That yet this Treaty shall not extend to the maintaining of any received into it, so, as it should binder the principal Contractors to recover their Right and Lands what foever, with-held by any, since the Treaty of

The King of England shall do his best Endeavour to procure, as soon as may be, the Liberty of Francis, and to induce the Emperor to accept reasonable Conditions.

That this Treaty shall be fign'd and sworn to by Francis, within three Months, if he get his Liberty so soon; or otherwise he shall consirm it by his Letters, written with his own hand, and written to King Henry VIII. And that Madame la Regente shall rencunce all Exceptions, which in Law (as by Senatus-Consultum Velleianum, &c.) may be taken against

That the Cardinal of Bourbon, Duke of Ventous toe Caramas of Dourbon, Duke of Vendofine, Duke of Longueville, Comte Saint Paul, Mr. de Lautrech, Mr. de Montmorency, Mr. de Press, Comte de Maleuse, and Comte de Bryan, as also the principal Cities, Paris, Lyons, Orleans, Tolofo, Ambure Raison, Ambure Laute, All Marines, Paris, Lyons, Orleans, Tolofa, Amiens, Rouen, &c. shall, under the Obligation and Forfeit of all their Goods, fivear bereunto, to observe this Treaty, within three Months after the date berrof, (in which also their Heirs and Successors shall be comprehended) giving, for this purpose, a Bond with their Seal annexed, to be sent to the King of England, within three Months. Moreover, certain Bonds were given for the Debts and Moneys hereafter Specified, viz. Two Millions of Crowns, at the payment of Fifty thousand Crowns at a time in Calais. The first Payment to begin within forty days after the Treaty. The ment to begin within forty and state the Triany's feed the first of Movember next ensuing. The next the first of May following, and so from Term to Term, and Tear to Year, till the whole be satisfy'd to King Henry or his Successors. After the Payment of which, the said King Henry shall, during his Life (and no lenger) receive yearly the Sum of an Hundred thousand Crowns.

This Treaty was concluded Aug. 30. by the Commissioners on both sides, viz. For our King, Aug. 30.

ilis Ebor Thomas Duke of Norfolk, Harry Marquis of Exon, Charles Earl of Worcester, Nicholas Bishop of Ely, and Sir Thomas More. For the Regent of France were John Brinon Premier President de Rouen, and Giovanni Joachim Seigneur de Vaulx, Mr. de "Sept 8 Hoffel to Louife. And was * proclaim'd in Sep-Octob. Law, and Sir William Fitz-William were sent into France, to take the Regents Oath. By another Treaty this Year at Lyons, I find the Regent obliged her felf to pay all the Arrears due to Mary our King's Sifter out of France, by reason of her Marriage with Louis XII. as also to suffer her to enjoy the Profits and Rents of all the Lands left her in Jointure, according to the Treaty Octob. 8.

William Archbishop of Canterbury Thomas Cardina

Octob. 8. 1514.

Francisco Sforza being inform'd now that a strong League was intended by the Pope, Venetians, and divers others, against the Emperor, was persuaded to enter into it, upon pretence that by their Affiftance he might fufficiently defend his Country. But this was his Ruin; for the Marquis of Pescara understanding hereos, or (as others say) supposing it only, questions him: But Sforza de-nying constantly that ever he gave his Consent thereto, the Marquis demanded the Caftle of Milan and Cremona for fecurity. But Sforza utterry refusing this, the Marquis of Peleara took ALiam, and laid fiege to the Cattle (which only remain'd to Sfore.a.) and after Pefcara's Death (which happen d by Sickness) the Duke of Bourand fo retir'd at length to the Army, rais'd by 1525. the League against Charles the Year following.

The Emperor, who had now treated of Marriage in many places, * concluded it at last with * Novem his Niece, Donna Ifabella the Infanta of Portugal, and Daughter of Manuel and Maria, Infanta of Ca-file, whom yet he married not till January 2. Charles 1526. alledging for his Excuse to our King, marries that at the Request and Petition of his Cortes ta of Poror States affembled at Toledo, he had preferr'd ingal. this Lady before our Princels Mary, which therefore he defir'd might be understood for no Breach of Friendship. Our King also considering the tender Age of his Daughter, not yet fit for Marriage; and that it was an Incongruity to ally himfelf with a Prince against whom he might have fo foon occasion to draw his Sword, (as may appear by the League above-mention'd) feem'd very well content to relinquish the Match, upon this mutual Consent. After which time the Friendship betwixt them grew so remis, that ar last it disfolv'd wholly; infomuch that the Am-Rupture baffadors of both fides were recalled home, and between Charles, who before was accustom'd to sign his Charles. Letters to King Henry always Tuus Filius & Cogna- Sandou. tus, from henceforth subscrib'd only Carlos.

But I the less wonder that the Emperor now began to take State upon him, fince a richer Booty than that of Francis fell into his hands, that is to fay Peru, where the Mines of Potofi (and many others, which for want of Labourers remain to this day buried and unuseful) were first discovered. Which began in this manner.

Vlasco Numez having first * discover'd from a * 1513, high Rock near Davien, the Mer del zar, † Her-† 1520. nando de Magellanes (a Portugueze, but set forth Peru difby Charles V.) afterwards found out the Streights covered. that bear his Name, and pass'd through them with two Ships to the lile of Zebut, and others in that Sea; but *dying in the Voyage, his Companions *1521. when to no Borneo and the † Molinecaes, and many Aprillother places, whence one of the Ships * return d * 1621. to Spain by Capo de Buena Esperanca, and so first sep 6. compassed the Globe, Juan Sebastian de Cano, a The Biskainer, being Pilot. The other Ship was ta-Globe ken by the Portugueze. Yet, as the Continent to-first fail'd wards that Sea was unknown still, Francisco Picar- round. ro, a Spaniard living at Panama, (being the furtheft part of Land, where it is narrowest, betwirt the North-Ocean and the Mer del Zur) first attempted the * Discovery of that Coast, bending at last to * 1525. Peru, which atterwards he † ransack'd; for land + 1533ing his Men at a time when there was Dissention betwixt Guancar the lawful Heir, and Atabaliva his younger Brother, he made his Advantage thereof, to the Overthrow of both, and of Atabaliva first, in this Pretext. Picarro having his Endea-Forces in a readiness, sent a Dominican Fryer, vours to with a Cross in one hand, and a Breviary in anomake the ther, who (as the Spanish Writers have it) told of Perna Atabaliwa (then in the Head of his Army) That Christian. God was Three, and yet One, and that he made sandov. the World of nothing, and that he fent his Son down to be born of a Virgin, and to die for our Sins upon a Cross, like that he bore; and that he rose the Third Day, and left St. Peter his Vicar, and the Pope his Successor, who had given the Emperor that Country; if he wou'd nor believe this, commanding him also to make War, and deftroy him and his Religion. Atabaliva, who though full of superstitious Worship, did yet venerate a Supreme Deity (confessed in these Parts by the Name of Viracocha, or Baracocha, as in Mexico by that of Teuth, and in Guatimala by that of Cabovit, in Nueva Espanna by that of Tocabuvaguamaorocoti) and together acknowledged Virtue bon. The conclusion hereof was, that Sforza (by and Vice, Reward and Punishment, after this confirmint) yielded the Castle upon Conditions, Life, as believing the Soul immortal, found this Ambaffage

1514

July 24.

1525. Emperor of Peru's Answer-los Incas,

Vega.

Ambassage strange, and said, He believ'd no Power formance (what Security soever were given) he thought on Earth was superior to himself, yet that he would be it best either to let him go freely, and therein put a perglad to hold Friendship with the Emperor; and for the petual Obligation upon him, or to keep him still where Pope, he wondred at him, because he gave that which the was. This was a wise Advice. The Emperor on Earth was superior to himself, yet that he would be glad to hold Friendship with the Emperor; and for the Pope, be wondred at him, because he gave that which was none of his. As for his Religion, he would not dispute it, since it was so ancient, and received in his Country. And, for worshipping Christ that died, he faid, he thought he had done better in worshipping the Sun and Moon that never died, as believing (which Historia de I find by the History of the Incas, written by one of that Blood Royal) that the Sun did go about the by Garci-World on God's Errand. Laftly, he demanded, Who told him that God had made the World on that fashion? To which the Dominican answering, The Breviary, and together putting it into his Hands; Atabaliva turning over a few Leaves (as if he expected some such Expression from thence) but finding he understood nothing, threw it away, wherewith the Dominican exclaiming that the Gospel was on the Ground, and demanding Vengeance, Picarro discharg'd some great Ordnance, and his Small-shot against him, wherewith the terrified Indians sled, and Atabaliva was taken Prisoner. Atabaliva hereupon offers for his Ranfom as much Gold and Silver as would fill a great Sala or Room where they were, which being accorded and almost perform'd in effect, Picarro upon false Pretences most cruelly put him to death, tho' bap-

tiz'd; for which also the Conspirators and Picarro himseif at last came to ill Deaths, as the Spanish

Writers observe. However, for the present, the Spaniards proceeded in their Cruelty to others, of all forts, especially of the Blood-Royal, and got infinite Treasure, their Temples being planked with Gold, and their Graves full of Treasure

I doubt I have infifted too long upon these Bar-and Riches, which were buried with them.

Picarro's Cruelty and Treachery.

1526. Confultaberty.

barifins. The Year of our Lord 1526 was now entred, when Charles required his Council to advise him whether it were best to deliver Francis; and if so, tions a pour what Terms? Charles de la Ney Viceroy of ting Fran. Naples did not think fit the Emperor should lose si at 1i the Benefit of such a Prize; therefore, though he persuaded the delivery of Francis, yet he wish'd that the most advantageous Conditions that could be made thereof, should be taken suddenly, and before the League, which was now forming a-gainft him, could be concluded. That, this being done, the Emperor was more free to provide for the Business of Germany, to resist the Turk, and to surpress Barbarossa and other Pyrates that and to surpress Barbarossia and other Pyrates that insessed his Seas. Others, and among them Guartinara the Chancellor, said, that there was less dinger of Francis being in Prison than abroad; especially, since it did not appear sufficiently, the new League would be broken off, when Francis bad his Liberty, but rather strongthend and constroid, as being not directed so much for the delivery of Francis, as opposed to the Greatness of Charles. That many things might be some while Francis was unsested, which would take no effect when he were restord to his formigus ve aone wone traines was univira, would would take no effect when he were reflord to his former Effate. Therefore, his best course were to find other means to have the Children of his Prisoner, and other Assarias in France, within his Power, that he nothing with intermed his Palman, all and the his and the his him. might interrupt his Designs elsewhere. And that him-self should undertake his Journey to Italy, before he les go so dangerous an Enemy, who if once loose, would rather make War for redeeming his Losses, than imrather make that yet reaccoming wis Logies, soan improve them by fanding to any ferville Conditions. Laftly, That his Imperial Majelfy ought to believe, that if Francis being in Prifen would not make reflictation of Burgundy, he would much lefs do it when he were free. Hernando de Vega said, that Francis was very well in Madrid. To which Guartinary reply'd refolutely, There might be use both of detaining and letting him go; only, fince he fam fo little bope of per-yet chose rather to adhere to them who counselled him to prevail himself of the occasion. There-fore, considering Francis offered his two Sons for Hostages, while himself going to France, mediated with the Estates for restoring Burgundy; and that, without this perfonal Interceffion there was little hope of any Satisfaction or Peace; he thought it best to deliver Francis, as that which Francis deat least would declare to the Christian World, livered. that he defir'd the Quierness thereof. So that upon the fourteenth of January a Treaty (called Jan 14. the Concord of Madrid) was concluded, the Tenor whereof according to the most substantial Articles is here fet down.

Charles the Emperor, and on his part Charles de Treaty of la Noy Viceroy of Naples, Hugo de Moncada, and Madrid. Juan Aleman: And Francis le Roy Tres-Christien, and on his part Francis Archbishop of Embrun, and Jean de Selue Premier President du Parliament de Paris, and Philip Chabot, having Commission from Madam Louise Regent of France, in Vertue of the Power given her by Francis, before his Imprison-ment (thought therefore authentick) did upon the Day and Year above written, Treat, Accord, and Conclude these Articles following:

1. That there shall be a good and secure Peace and Confederacy established between the two Princes, fo that they shall be Friends to the Friends, and Enemies to the Enemies of each other, for the mutual Defence of their Estates and Kingdoms.

2. That Traffick and Commerce shall be renew'd betwixt their Subjects on either fide, upon payment only of their ancient Customs; and that the Sea shall be secur'd from Pyrates.

3. That the Dutchy of Burgundy, together with all the Rights, Members and Dependences, shall in the name of him, his Heirs, and Successors, be restor'd within the space of fix Weeks after the delivery of Francis, notwithstanding any Decrees of Parliaments, Pretence of the Salick Law, or other Claim whatfoever.

4. Because yet, for better performance of these things which are requir'd, the French King alledgeth it is necessary that he should presently repair home; it is therefore concluded, that upon the tenth of March next, the faid French King shall be set free in that part of France which adjoins to Fuentarabie; upon condition nevertheless, that at the fame Hour and Instant (the number of Attendants on both fides being equal) the Dauphin his eldest Son, and Duke of Orleans his fecond Son, or (instead of the said Duke) Mon-seur de Vendosme, John Duke of Albany, Monsseur de St. Pol, Monsieur de Guise, Monsieur de Lautrech, Monsieur de la Val, the Marquis de Saluzzo, Mon-sieur de Rieux, the Great Seneschal of Normandy, the Mareschal de Montmorency, Monsseur de Brion, and Monsseur de Aubigny, should be deliver'd to Charles as Hoftages, till all Conditions were perform'd; which being done, that within the space of four Weeks a Ratification by the Parliament of Paris, and all the other Parliaments of the faid Kingdom, shall be deliver'd unto Charles; whereupon the faid Charles doth swear and promise upon the Faith of a Prince, to return the faid Hostages, upon condition yet that the third Son of Francis, being Duke de Angoulesme, should at the fame time be given to Charles, to be kept and brought up in his Court, and with him. And the French King doth furthermore promife, in case these things were not performed (that is to say, the restitution of Burgundy, and the rest in six Weeks, and the Ratification in four more entirely than the same says that the same says the same says that the same says the same says that the same says the same says that the same says that the same says the sam 1526. fuing) to return Prisoner to Charles. And, for this purpose, as he had sworn already, so when he is at liberty, he shall renew and confirm the faid Oath, before fuch Commissioners as Charles shall appoint. And that upon his faid return to Charles, his Hoftages should be deliver'd.

5. That Francis for Himfelf, his Heirs, and Succeffors, shall renounce his whole Right, Claim, and Interest, in all the Kingdoms, Estates, Lands, and Seigneuries, which are now in the possession of Charles, and especially in the Kingdom of Naples, as well for all Propriety therein, as any Penfion or Payment demanded for the fame. And that the Investiture thereof, given by the Apostolick Sec to his Ancestors or him, as also all Capitulations made to this effect heretofore, shall not be available for the faid Kingdom of Naples, or for the Estates of Milan, Gencia, Afti, and their Dependencies. And that the Grants or Writing to this purpole, whether Pontifical or Imperial, or only between him and Fruncifo Sforza, should be deliver'd to Charles. And that France shall, for Him, his Heirs, and Successors, renounce all his Demand or Claim to Flanders, and to all other Places thereabouts, now in Possession of Charles, together with all Superiority over them. In lieu whereof the faid Charles promifeth to relinquish his Title to Perone, Montdidier, the Counties of Boulogne, Guifnes, Pontbicu, as also the Cities, Towns, Seigneuries on both sides of the River of Soum, now in the possession of Francis, referving only the Counties of Masconois, Auxerrois, and Bar sur la Scine, which shall be disposed of particularly hereafter. And that all other Lands, Towns, and Seigneuries not mention'd in these Presents, shall be reftor'd to the Estate in which they were before the Wars.

6. That, in performance of the League defended that the control of the league defended that the control of the league defended that the league defended the league defended that the league defended that the league defended the league defended that the league defended that the league defended the league defended that the league defended that the league defended that the league defended the league defended the league defended that the league defended th five betwixt both Princes, they shall suffer no hostile Forces to pass through either of their Countries, to the Hurt or Prejudice of the other; and that either Prince being invaded, may have of the other five hundred Horse, and ten thousand Foot, with convenient Artillery (or any less number) at the Charges of the Demandant; and, for the Offensive League, that it shall extend no further than to their joint Enemies, and by the mutual Advice and Confent of both.

7. That a Marriage shall be had and made betwixt Francis and Leonora, a Dispensation for that purpose being first obtain'd; and that she shall be deliver d to Francis at the same time that the Hostages shall be restor'd by Charles.

8. That her Dowry shall be Two hundred thousand Crowns de Soleil, besides her Arras (i.e. a Pledge given in Spain where Marriages are recorded) which did appertain to her upon her first Mar-

9. That, besides the aforesaid Sum, the Emperor out of his abundant Love to his Sister Leonora, shall bestow the Counties of Muserois, Auxerrois and the Seigneury of Bar fur la Seine, on her, and her Heirs Male only.

10. That the Queen Leonora shall renounce all Rights of Goods, or Heritage, that might defcend to her from the part of her Grandfather Maximilian, her Father King Philip, or Queen Joan her Mother, fave only the Collateral Succession, in case the said Charles or his Brother Ferdinand should die without Issue.

11. That the faid Queen Leonora fhall receive from Francis Jewels to the value of Fifty thoufand Crowns, to remain to her, her Heirs, and

12. That if the faid Francis and Leonora shall have Islue Male betwixt them, the eldest Son shall be Duke of Alancon, and have in possession by, all the said Money remains in Arrear: And the Dutchy thereof, conferr'd on him by Francis, and on his Mother's part the above-mentioned Counties of Masconois, Auxerrois, and Bar sur la Seine, and that his other Sons shall be provided for according to their degree, referving fill the Right belonging to the Dauphin. And that the Daughters shall have such Portions as the Kings of France usually give.

13. That, in case Francis die before Leonora, the shall have for Arras fixty thousand Livres Tour nois of Rent, yearly to continue, during her life only.

14. That, in case Leonora survive Francis, it may be lawful for her to return to Spain, Flanders, or Burgundy, and carry with her all her Goods and Jewels; and that before the Solemnity of the faid Marriage, the Seal of the faid King and Dauphin, and of the Estates and prin-cipal Places of the faid Kingdom of France, together with due Acknowledgments and Obligations shall be given, to the intent they may be forc'd to the Accomplishment thereof, both by way of Excommunication, and also by Arrests, and detaining of all Persons of the faid Kingdom, of what quality foever.

15. That a Marriage shall be solemniz'd between Francis the Dauphin, Son and Heir to Francis, and Donna Maria Daugher to Leonora and her first Husband Manuel, in Words de futuro, when the faid Lady shall attain to seven Years of Age, and by Words de pressenti when she shall be twelve. And that her Brother Don Juan King of Portugal shall give his consent thereunto, with fufficient Provision for her Dowry.

16. That the faid Infanta Maria shall at twelve Years of Age be conducted to France, and confign'd to Francis.

17. That Francis shall use his best means to dispose Henry d' Albret, rogether with his Brothers and Sifters, to renounce their Title to Navarre, or when they could not procure any fuch Disclaim, not to affift him or them in their Pretences. That Francis likewife shall use his best means to dispose the Duke of Gueldres to leave (after his life) the Dutchy of Gueldres and County of Zutphen to Charles; or when he could not procure this, to affift Charles with Three hundred Horse, and Four thousand Foot, to recover it.

18. That Francis shall not give affishance to Duke Ulricke of Wittenberg, nor to Robert de la Mark, or his Sons, against the said Charles, but rather help him to repress them, nor interpose himfelf by way of Treaty in favour of any Potentate of Italy.

19. That when Charles shall pass in Person to Italy, Francis shall lend the said Charles his Fleet in the Mediterranean Sea, being well equipped, for the space of three Months, and no longer. And, whereas Francis promifed to affist Charles, both with Men and Artillery for his Voyage, he should in lieu thereof, pay in Money Two hundred thousand Crowns, giving him good fecunity for it; yet, if the Emperor demanded Five hundred great Horse, together with sufficient Artillery, Francis should surnish them at his own proper coli.

proper costs.
20. That because Charles, for the better drawing Henry King of England to his Party against Francis, had promised to pay unto the said Henry the Sum of One hundred thirty three thousand three hundred and five Crowns yearly, in lieu of those Pensions and Rents which the said Francis was bound to pay to Henry, and during fuch Terms as was agreed betwixt them; (as by a Treaty concluded at Windfor, June 19, 1522, more at large appeareth) and because, fince that time until a late League betwixt Francis and Henbecause

1526. because Trancis saith, he hath taken order with Service of the Emperor. And that, for perform-Harry for the payment of the entire Sum; therefore it is agreed, that Francis shall fave harmless the faid Charles from all demands on the part of Henry; and furthermore, shall give an Authentick Copy of the said late Agreement betwixt him and Henry, fometime before the end of four Months next enfuing the date hereof; as alfo of the Acquittances he shall receive from Herry upon payment of the faid Sums, which shall be such, as Charles, his Heirs and Successors may remain indemnify'd and difcharg'd thereof for ever. So that, if Charles should be call'd upon for fatisfaction in these Particulars, Francis shall take the business on himself, and defend it as his own, without that Charles shall be any way mo-lefted herein. 21. That, because this particular Treaty is made in the way of a General League, intended to be agreed on and concluded hereafter against Turks, Infidels, and Hereticks; therefore, that fupplication should be made in both their Names unto his Holiness, that he would write unto all Christian Princes and Estates to joyn herein; as also to authorize a Cruzada for the said Enterprife; to endure at least for three years next prile; to endure at least for three years next ensuring, not exempting Ecclefialtical Persons from it. And, if need be that Charles and Francis should go in Person to this Holy War by Sea, that then they shall join and unite their Forces together with those of the great Master of the Knights of Saint John of Jerusalem, and the Genousle; or, if the danger appear nor so to require their professer in the fold great, as to require their presence in the said War, that then a General for conducting the said Forces, shall be appointed by Charles; or, if otherwise it should be thought necessary themfelves should go in Person, that then Ambassadors and Commissioners should be appointed to reside in each others Dominions, for the deter-mining of all Differences that should arise in their

22. That, because Charles Duke of Bourbon, to-gether with divers of his Friends, Allies, and Servants, did for a while abfent themselves from France, and the Service of Francis, and that for this cause the Dutchies of Bourbon, Auvergne, Chasteleraut, the Counties of Clermont, &c. had been taken away from them, it is agreed, that Francis presently, or at farthest fix Weeks after his Delivery, shall restore unto the said Duke of Bourbon, as well as to all the reft of his Friends, Allies, and Servants, (whether Ecclefiaftical or Secular) their former Pofferfions, together with the just value of all the Goods that have been taken from them, as also the Writings or Deeds by which the faid Possessions were formerly held. and also the true profit of the said Lands and Possessions, during their absence, and to stay all Suits and Proceedings againft them on this occasion. Furthermore, That the faid Duke shall not be constrained personally to appear in the French Court, but that he may Administer, and dispose of all his Estate and Possessions, by sufficient Deputies and Officers appointed thereunto, and receive the Revenues thereof, in such place as himself shall chuse, when it were out of France, and that the said Officers shall not be molested in execution of their Charge. And, as for the Right the faid Duke of Bourbon pretends to the County of Provence, and the Dependencies thereof, it is agreed that a just and equal hearing and decision thereof, shall be permitted and given before competent Judges, whensoever the said Duke shall re-commence his former Suit and the competent Judges, whenfoever the faid Duke shall re-commence his former Suit therein; and that the said Duke, his Friends, and Servants, may without prejudice to their Rights or Possessions stay or continue in the

ing of all these particulars above mention'd, Francis shall give good and sufficient warrant and affurance, according to form of Law, and the terms usual in this case.

23. That, before the fifteenth of February next, all Prifoners on both fides, and particularly Phi-libert Prince of Aurange shall (without paying any Ranfom) be fet free, and return to their feveral Countries, unless their Sovereigns by mutual confent do otherwise determin.

24. That all Rebels and Fugitives on either fide shall be remanded, (only those in the Dutchy of Milan, Genoua, and County of Afti excepted) who shall be freely pardon'd, and within fix Months reftor'd to their former Estates. As for those who are charg'd with heinous of that Nature, as they cannot be return'd home, without Scandal and Inconvenience, it is agreed, that upon a Months warning they shall depart from those places to which they are retir'd, upon the penalty of being apprehen-ded, and fent to their lawful Sovereign or Superior.

25. That all Prelates and Ecclefiaftical Perfons, as also all Subjects, of what condition foever, shall on either side return to their former Places, Estates, and Possessions, notwithstanding any Consiscation, Gift, or Alienation thereof whatfoever.

26. That, because in the Courts of Castilla, the Consuls and University of Burges had complain'd of divers losses they had receiv'd, contrary to some ancient Privileges, (both before and fince these Wars) which they pretend to hold from the Ancestors of the most Christian King as Duke of Bretaigne, it is therefore a-greed, that upon verification of the Particulars, the faid Priviledges shall be confirm'd, and a friendly end made, or otherwife Justice done on the Offenders.

27. That, because the Cloths made in Catalonia, Roufillon, Cerdema, and other places of the Crown of Arragon, are not permitted to be carry'd through the Territories of France into other Countries without danger of Confifcation; it is therefore agreed, that paying their ancient Customs, they shall have a free way of Passage, both by Sea and Land, along all the French Do-

28. Because Madam Margarite, Aunt to Charles, hath much mediated this Peace; and because a certain Neutrality, by the confent of Charles, was accorded betwixt her and Francis, for the Countries in her possession, during their late Wars, according to which she ought to enjoy the County of Carlois, and certain Granaries of Salt, &c. notwithstanding which, they have by force been taken from her; it is agreed therefore, that they, together with the profits in arrear, shall be reftor d to her, during her life only. And, that afterwards they shall descend on Charles and his Heirs.

29. That, because the Queen Donna Germana de Foix, Widow of Arragon, faith, she had re-ceiv'd a definitive Sentence in the Parliament of Paris, by which the Towns and Lands of Marceni, Tursen, Gavierdey, and Gavaret are adjudg'd to her; it is agreed, that Francis shall see the said Sentence executed by ftrong hand, if need be.

30. Item, Because Philibert de Chadon, Prince of Aurange, fince his Service of the Emperor, hath had divers Places and Rights in Dauphine been taken from him; it is agreed he shall be refter'd to them, and Justice done him in his other Demands.

Vol. II. gr. Item, i 126.

32. Item, Because the Princess of Chimay pretends to certain Goods and Inheritance descended to her, as in the Right of the Seigneur de la Brit her Father, as also to some Goods of her Mother and Brethren; it is agreed that good and fpeedy Justice be done her.

33. Item, That Henry Count of Nassaw shall have right done him by Francis for part of the Dowry of his Wife.

34. Item, That Adolpho of Burgundy, Seigneur de Beures, Admiral of Flanders, shall be reitor'd to his right of the Castle and Lands of Crevecaus en Cambreis, in the manner he held it before the

35. Item, That Monsieur Charles de Pompet, Camarcro to the Emperor, shall have the Money restor'd him, which contrary to the Priviledges of the University of Paris, he was constrain'd to pay for the Ranfom of his Children, Students there, when the late War began.

36. Item, That Guillaume de Vergi shall have right done him for the Seigneury of San-de sier en Perchois.

37. Item, That the Seigneurs de Frenes, Conde d. Gaures, Monsieur Audriano de Croy, de Reula, de Meleny, Conte de Spinay, and Sieur de Reulx, shall have the Goods reftor'd which they enjoy'd before thefe late Wars.

28. Item, That the Marquis Antonio de Saluzzo his Mother and Sifters, as also Frederico de Baugy shall have those Goods restor'd, which were taken in these late Wars, and Justice done them.

39. Item, That the Seigneur de Monego Bishop of Grafo shall be replac'd in his Bishoprick, and Juflice done to him, and against those who kill'd his Brother.

40. Item, That the Seigneur de Luz shall be reftor'd to his Possessions which he enjoy'd before he entred the Emperors Service; and good and speedy Justice done in certain Lands he pretends descended to him from his Ancestors during those

41. Item, That the Pope, the King of England, Hargary, Poland, Danmark, Portugal, and Scotland, Dan Fordinando Brotherto Charles, (and his Lieutenant-General of the Empire) Midam Mirgo-rite Aunt to the Emperor, the Electors and other Princes of the Empire, (who are obedient to the Emperor) the Seigneurs of the Ancient Leagues and Cantons of Hya-Germany, may upon notification of their defire to be admitted into this League, (and not otherwise) be receiv'd there into at any time within the space of fix Months next enfuing.

42. Item, That Francis being fet at liberty, shall in the first Town he shall come to within his Kingdom, give Letters Patents for the ratification of this Accord, and fend them to Charles. And that the Dauphin, when he shall attain the age of fourteen, shall likewife ratific them with a folemn Oath, in which he shall renounce all Auvantages, which by Minority of Age he might take hereafter to infringe the faid Oath.

43. Itim, That both Charles and Francis shall ratifie this prefent Capitulation and Agreement, and all that is contain'd therein (each for his part) before Ambaffadors appointed for this purpole; and especially Francis, when he is free in his Lingdom, shall swear solemnly upon the Evangeriffs in the prefence of the true Crofs, to

31. Item, Because Philip de Croy Marquis of diction and Censure, even to the Invocation of 1526. Arefore, pretends to divers Lands, and other the Secular Power to confirm them; and that Rights in France, which fince these Wars have they shall appoint their several Process to appear for them in the Court of Rome, and before the Pope, where they shall voluntarily accept the Condition and Fulmination of the faid Cenfures, in case of Contravention; and that neither of them shall demand or sue for absolution of this Oath or Cenfure; or if they do, that it shall not be available without the confent of the other.

> 44. Item, Because no Man may pretend Ignorance, it is agreed that this Peace shall be publish'd before the fifteenth of February next, both in the Dominions of Charles and Francis, and efpecially in the Frontiers, and fuch other places as have been accustom'd in the like cafe.

> > This was Signed: Francois, Charles de la Noy, Don Hugo de Moncada, Francois Archevefque de Ambrun, Jean de Selue,

The Treaty betwixt them being concluded in the manner above-mention'd, the Archbishop of Ambrun, for the last Seal and Solemnization there-Sandov. to the Alear, and putting his right hand upon the Book of the Evangelifts, (which the faid Archbishop held) did fwear by the Secrement, and the Holy Evangelifts and the Holy Evangelifts and the Holy Evangelifts. and the Holy Evangelists, not to break this Capitulation all the days of his Life, nor to give Counsel or Favour that any other should break The like Oath was taken by the Vice-Roy of Naples, Don Hugo de Mucada, and the Secretary Aleman in the Emperors Name. (For the Emperor in Person did not think fit to balance his free Oath, with that of Francis, then in reftraint.) This being perform'd on both fides, the Vice-Roy took the Faith and Pleyto cmenaie being a kind of homage) of Francis, who as a Francis Prince and the most Christian King, promis'd fivens to and gave his Fidelity and Royal word to return into Spain a Princer within the space of fix Months, in case he did not accomplish all that was there capitulated betwixt them, giving his hands thereupon to be held betwixt those of Charles de la Noy. This being ended with much feeming content on all parts, the Emperors Commissioners went to Toledo; where, upon relation to the Emperor of what was done, it was thought fit to fend the Seigneur de Prace, Chevalier of the Toilen d'Or, who had been in England, and was now his Ambassador in France, to meet with the French King at Bayonne, and there to require of him, according to the Articles, a new and more ample Ratification of his Oath.

Some few days after this Treaty (commonly call'd Concordia de M. dvid) Charles de la Noy having Power and Commission from the Queen Denna Lec- Saudove nera, privately contracted a Marriage with Francis in her name, and then having Commission from him again, went to the Queen Leonora and contracted a Marriage with her in the name of Francis, After Emperor which time the Emperor treated no more with Fran- with great cis as a Prifoner, but a near Ally; infomuch that Affection at the next Vilit, he offer'd him the right Hand. I observe yet the Emperor would not permit Francis to enjoy Leonora his Sifler, till he had fully accomplish'd the Concord betwixt them. Neither did he, in his last words to Francis, (being then licens'd to depart) feem fo fenfible of any thing, as of her Honour. At which time also (for further obligation of Francis unto this Agreement) I find by Sandoval, he demanded of keep and hold all that is contained in the faid Femilis, whether be remembred well all that was ca-Communication; and that both of them shall sub-pitulated between them? Francis answer'd, Te; for mit themselves herein to the Ecclesiastical Juris-turber confirmation repeating the most particular Articles. Charles then demanded, Are you willing to perform them? Francis answer'd again, 1526. lar Articles. Yes; adding, be knew no Man in his Kingdom would hinder him. And, when you find that I do not keep my word with you, I wish and consent that you hold me for Lasche & Mcschant, a Knave and a Vime for Laiche & Meichant, a nurve laim. Charles reply'd, and I will you to fay the like of me if I do not give you liberty. Where-upon they lovingly bid each other a long fare-wall. This being done, Charles return'd. There well. This being done, Charles return'd. was much difficulty yet about the exchange be-twixt Francis and his two Sons, neither could they (almost) devise how to secure it from jealousie on either side. At last these Articles

The manner how Francis was to be deliver'd.

Feb. 26.

1. That no Man at Arms, or other Soldier, might within ten days before or after the exchange and deli-very be permitted to come within twenty Leagues of the place; and that those who were come already should

2. That no Gentleman of the French Kings Houshold should pass Bayonne, till the King were come to were agreed.

St. Juan de Luz.

3. That the number of Foot-Garrisons in either Fron-tier should not exceed a thousand. And that when Madam Louise the Regent had declar d whether she would give the two eldest Sons of Francis in Hostage, or the Dauphin only with the twelve others above mention'd, that then it should be advis'd whether the number were to be increas'd.

4. That at the day of the delivery neither Min nor Woman, Neighbour nor Stranger should be near the place.

5. That fix days before the delivery, Charles should appoint twelve Persons to wifit the Coast, on that side where the River of Fuenterable joins with France: And that some Persons appointed by Machan 20116. When the house some property of Machanille words to house some year re-Louise, should be ready there to do what soever was requir'd for performance of these Articles. And that for this purpose Madam Louise might also appoint touckue on the other side of the River, whom four on Charles his part should likewife attend.

6. That neither on one or other fide of the said River (passing near Fuentarabie) there should be any Boats or Pinaces, but two (which must be of the same higness) to pas Francis to the one, and the Hostages to the other side, and that the twelve Deputies on either part should take order herein.

7. That there should be no Gally, Ship, or Pinace March 15, in the Sea within five Leagues of the place appointed for the Delivery.

In sequence of which Capitulation, it was further agreed, that Charles de la Noy, with twenty five arm'd Men, with Swords and Daggers only, for guarding of the French King, and as many with Monfieur de Lautrech, in like manner weapon'd, for conducting the two Hostages, should come to the fides of the above-mention'd River; in the middle of which a little Bridge, upon a Bark faftned with Anchors, should be built, on which yet no body should stand; and that two Boats of equal bigness, fitted for twenty Oars apiece, should be ready there, of which Francis should chuse one; which being done, twenty Rowers, all French and unarm'd, should enter his Boat, and bring it to the fide of Spain, at the fame time that the other with twenty Spaniards unarm'd likewise, should be brought to the French Coast. That thereupon Charles de la Noy conducting the King, and taking ten Per-fons only with him, should pass to one side of the faid Bridge, at the fame time that Monsieur de Lautrech with the Hostages, and ten Persons, thould likewife come to the other. That none of the faid Perfons yet should put themselves uptrech with the two Hoflages, and Madam de Brifac and Chauvigny. That thereupon the exchange should be made in one instant. Before yet any thing was done the fame day, that a Boat with four Rowers Spanish, and four French, and a Gentleman of either Nation, should visit the Coast on both fides, and take order that every thing should be prepar'd. For fear yet lest some sup-positious Children should be tendred instead of the Dauphin and his Brother, it was agreed further, that the Seigneur de Praet, the Emperors Ambassador, should come along with them, while another Frenchman was allow'd to attend Francis.

Thus upon the eighteenth of March 1526. af ter one whole year and fome days Imprifonment, was Francis deliver'd to his Boat, and by mutual confent at the same time accompanied with twelve Spaniards (whereof Charles de la Noy and Hernando de Alancon his Guardian were two) to the French shoar, while the Hostages, accompany'd with the like number, came to the Spinill Coast; neither was there any thing more that might be thought remarkable in the performance of all this, but that a flay was made while the two Children kiss'd their Fathers Hand, and that his last words to la Noy confirm'd again his promife to the Emperor. As foon as Francis came to his own ground, he got hastily upon a Turkish and swift Horse, and suddenly putting Spurs to him (if we may believe Sandoval) and Francis's cafting one of his Arms over his Head, and cry- joy on his ing Je Juis le Roy, Je Juis le Roy, posted to St. E. ance. Juan de Luz, and the next day to Bayonne, where the Lady his Mother, and many other principal Perfons with much anxiety attended him.

these Passages, both as the Example is rare, and as it leads to the understanding of that which followeth in our History; and the ra ther, for that it was the Subject that chiefly took up the time, and thoughts of our King, whenfoever his Profpect was turn'd on Foreign Affairs; infomuch that he might be truly faid a principal Actor in them. And now he held it his part to relieve Francis. Therefore as he had sent Cuthbert Tonstal Bishop of London, and Sir Richard Wingsfield, long since into Spain to mediate his delivery with the Emperor, so now hear-ing he was in his way homewards, he dispatches Sir Thomas Cheyney to congratulate his fafe return, and to take his Oath to the Treaty of Moore abovemention'd, which Francis accepting, fent a Messen owns his gerimmediately to advertise our King of the Con-liberty ditions of his Delivery, and to acknowledge that due to King he ow'd him chiefly his liberty, as both Sandovs! Honry relates it, and our Records, under his own hand, confirm; which fair Terms produc'd, afterwards, a more firm Correspondency betwixt them.

I am the more particular in the Relation of Charles de la Noy & Hernando de Alancon having in vain follicited Francis, at Bayonne, to accounplish that part of the late Concord and Agreement he was bound to there, feem'd yet to receive fome fatisfaction, that they were referr'd until their coming to Paris. (The King pretending he could do nothing, effectually, till he had spoken with the principal Persons of the Estate and Parliament.) Here again they press d Francis unto the performance of that he was bound to by fo many Oaths and Promifes. But May Francis, for a Conclusion, positively answer'd, fuses to that it was not in his power to distinenther any confirm part from the Kingdom, without confent both of the Trees the fame part, and the whole Kingdom; and tytherefore, with many loving words, defir'd that his Ranfom might be chang'd to fome equivalent on the Bridge, but Charles de la Noy with the fum of Money. But Charles would by no means French King and one other, and Monfieur de Lau-hearken thereunto. Therefore, as he had by Vol. II.

I. 2

1526. Treaty happily detain'd the Cheen Leonora from passing into France, so he determin'd rather (at what price soever) to take off the Pope, Venetions, and Francisco Sforza, and the Florentines, from a League they were entring into with England and Francis against him, than to decline any way the least Article of the late Concord and Agreement.

This League (call'd Clementina & Sanctissima) was begun (as the French have it) by the infligation of our King, during the Imprisonment of Francis, but not perfectly concluded, till a-The Pope bout two Months after his delivery. To give abidives this a more aufpicate beginning, the Pope (as him from the Spanish History hath it) fent to the French May 22. King a Relaxation of the Oath he made to ob-sandout ferve the Concord and Treaty of Madrid, upon pretext alledg'd by Francis, that those of Burgundy would not confent, by any means, to be ali-enated from the French Crown. Charles de la Noy & Hernando de Alancon finding matters thus diffemper'd, and unlike to fort to any good end, defir d leave to return, which Francis granted, tpen condition that they would go to Spain immediately, and not to Italy, whither (in regard of his Government) la Noy desir'd much to pass through the French Territories. Though others write, and our Records confirm it, that they departed not till the following Treaty was fworn, at Caignac, in their Presence. Which that they might make more specious to the Emperor, they cutter'd him place to enter into it, upon certain Conditions. This Treaty, concluded between Pope Climent VII, Francis the French King, the Vinctions, Francisco Sforza, and the Florentines, was to this effect.

1. That the Contractors of this League and May 22. Concord shall be Friends of the Friends, and E-The Arti-clesof it. That this Clause yet shall not extend to the Dominions held by the Pope and Venctions, out of Italy. And that the faid Contractors (hall, particularly defend the Person and Dignity of the Pope against all his Adverfaries.

2. That place shall be left for the Emperor Charles to enter hereinto, if he defire it, and for Henry King of England, not only as a Contractor but Protector of this most Holy League and Concord, as also for Don Hernando, Arch-Duke of zinfria, and the rest of the Kings, Princes, and Potentates of Christendom, provided yet, that the faid Charles shall not be admitted hereunto, but upon thefe enfuing Conditions. is to fay, unless he first restore the two Sons of Francis, which he detains as Hoftages, and take in lieu of them, fome reasonable and fitting Recompence and Satisfaction. As also unless he leave the Dutchy of Milan freely unto Francisco Sforza, and the rest of the Estates and Dominions in Italy, in the form and manner they were before the late War; and unless, when he enters Italy, to be Crown'd there, he bring with him fuch Family and Train only, as the Pope and Penetians shall think fit; which yet is intended thall be fuch, as may take away fulpition of violent Attempt, and preferve together the Imperial Dignity; and unless within three Months, after the conclusion of the faid Treaty, (the King of England entering into it) he pay unto the faid King all the Money due to him.

2. That an Army fhall be rais'd by the faid Confederates, which shall consist of thirty thoufand Foct, two thousand five hundred Men of Arms, and three thousand Light Horse, together with the Artiliery and Municion sitting thereunto. Whereof, the Pope should furnish right hundred Men at Arms, and seven hundred Light Fiorfe, and eight thousand Foot; The French King forty thousand Crowns the Month 1526. in Money, and five hundred Men at Arms (call'd -Maistres) comprehending one thousand light Horse: The Vinetians eight hundred Men at Arms, and one thousand Light Horse, and eight thousand Foot; Francisco Sforza, the Duke of Milan, four hundred Men at Arms, three hundred Light Horse, and sour thousand Foot. That certain Swifs should be rais'd for the faid League, at the charge of the French King; who, besides the above mention'd, shall have a powerful Army to hinder the paffage of any confiderable Forces into Italy. All which, are to be imploy'd against the Perturbators of the Peace of Italy, until they be reduc'd to the Estate of not being able to keep the Field.

4. That, when this Treaty shall be ratified by all the Confederates, they fhall joyntly defire Charles the Emperor to reftore the two Sons of the French King, and, in case he resuse, shall denounce War against him, till he restore them. For the execution whereof (the War of Italy being ended) the Confederates shall furnish to the said French King ten thousand Foot, one thoufand Men at Arms, and a thousand Light-Horse, or Money for the railing and payment of

5. That the Confederates shall defend each others Estate against all Invasion; In which case those of Italy shall furnish ten thousand Foot, and two thousand Horse to the French King, and he as many to them again.

6. That the Confederates shall have an Armado of twenty eight Gallies at least, whereof the French King shall furnish twelve, the Pope three, and the Venetians thirteen, to be imploy'd in this War, unless the French King have particular use of his part.

7. That, for removing all fuspition of Attempt upon the Dutchy of Milan, the French King shall not only permit the present Duke to enjoy it, but shall defend him against all Adversaries, with the proportion of Forces above-mentioned, he paying, in confideration of the Claim and Expence of the French King, fuch a Pension (at Lyons in France) as the Pope and Venetians shall ordain; which yet shall not be less than five hundred thousand Ducats yearly.

8. That, because this Peace may be universal over Italy, all Goods taken away in these late occasions, shall be restored, and all Men re-inplac'd in their former Poffeffions.

9. That the French King shall give some Lady of the Blood-Royal of France, (by the nomination of the Pope) for Wife to the Duke of Milan, and shall procure the Swift to defend his State on all occasions, as they were formerly accustom'd. That the Concado de Asti, as being di-Rinet from Allan, and anciently pertaining to the House of Orleans, shall be restored to the French King, or at least the Government thereof, to be administred by the Duke of Orleans, second Son to the French King, or his Deputy.

10. That Antonio Adorno shall remain Duke of Genoua, if either he enter into this League, or, otherwise, alter the form of the City Govern-ment, in such fort as may be thought most for the fecurity and quiet of Italy, referving yet to the French King his Title and Right of Superiority, in the manner he held it when he was in possession of the faid City.

11. That, if the Emperor deny or delay to perform what is requir'd in the second Article, that then prefently after ending the War for the Pacification of Italy, the Confederates shall invade the Kingdom of Naples; and, if the Emperor be expulsed thence, that then it shall remain at the disposition of the Pope, as being heads a gainft

cles of it.

1526. held in feud of the Church; and that, in recompence of the pretence which the French King hath to it, the Pope, with confent of all the Cardinals, shall bind himself and Successors to pay yearly to the King of France a convenient Pension, which shall not be less than sixty sive thousand Crowns de Soleil.

12. That in Cafe any of the Confederates should die or fail, yet the League should continue firm among the rest, and that the Successors of the dead may enter into his place.

13. That all the Confederates shall take upon them the defence and protection of the House of Medicis, even to the reflicution of them to their former Greatness and Dignity.

14. And because the most serene and power-Will Pro- ful King of England, Defender of the Faith, hath always affected Peace, as appears by the good it, with an Offices done to the French King, and hath always imploy'd his Forces in fervice of the Catholick Docars Church, as his Father did before him; and beper Annum. cause no Authority, superior to his, can be in-terpos'd either for the conservation of good Men in Peace or repreffing of those who are ill: Therefore, it is agreed, that his Majesty shall be Protector of the most Holy League and Concord. For which purpose, the said Confederates do offer to him and his Heirs an Effate in the Kingdom of Naples, with the Title of Duke or Prince, not less worth than the yearly Rent of The Car- thirty thousand Ducats. And to the Cardinal of York, for his great pains and service in this Bu-ICOUD finels, they offer another Estate in Italy worth ten

> 15. That the Confederates shall make no Treaty with others than these who are mentioned in this present Concord: And that, if, before this time, they have made any, it be reputed as of no force and value.

thousand Ducats yearly.

16. That, before the ratification of this Concord, every one, who is contain'd in it, shall name his Friends, provided, that they be not Subjects, nor Vassals, or Enemies of the greater part. And fo the Pope nominated the King of England, and the Marquis of Mantua, referving the naming of the rest within the time appointed. The King of France naming the King of England, Scotland, Navarre, Portugal, Polonia, Hungaria, the Dukes of Savoy, Lorain, and Gueldres, and the thirteen Cantons of the Swifs. The Venetians no-minated the King of England, referving the naming of the rest within the time appointed.

17. That the French King fend his Moneys within the fpace of a Month to Rome, or confign them to Venice or Florence, and give fecurity for payment to the Bankers fix days before every Month.

18. That all, who enter the League, shall, in the space of one Month, approve and confirm it. And if the Duke of Milan, because he is straitly belieg'd, cannot perform his part, that then the Pope and Venetians shall sign it for him.

And thus far I have follow'd the Spanish Relation. By the French I find only fuch a League was fign'd at Coignac in France, the two and twentieth of May 1526.

Our King finding himfelf thus chofen Protector of the I cague, advises what to do; which being accordingly debated by his Council, it was refolv'd, most prudently, that he should not be a Party, where he might be a Judge.

The Emperor allo, inform d hereof, protefted against Clement VII, as an ungrateful Person; he having been by his favour first made Cardinal, and after Pope, in despite of Cardinal So-both Standard and proportion with those, with vubous derino's Allegation, that he was a Bastard, and, we Traffick, there would be loss. That the crastry therefore, uncapable of either of the said Dig-Flemings, therefore, when they desir'd to raise nities: Neither had he other evafion to clear himfelf, but that he produc'd Witneffes, how his Father, ulian de Medicis, before his Death, (which he receiv'd by a stab as the Priest list up the Host had at length marry'd his Mother. Against the French King he exclaim'd, as perjur'd and faise, and againft the Venezians, as unconflant. Howfoever, his greatest care was how to divide them. Therefore, though in Italy, upon publishing of the League (July 8.) folemnly, by the Pope, July 8. they levy'd their appointed numbers, yet Francis, being put in hope of the restitution of his Children, delay'd fo much on his part, that, at last, the Imperial Army constrain'd Sforza to yield Milan, referving yet the Revenues thereof to fully 24. his use, as hoping thereby to content him. Eut the despited and distrustful Duke, not fatisfied herewith, fled to the Forces, which the League had then on Foot, in Italy, of which the Duke of Urbiu was made General. This while the Emperor was advertis'd, how, in fequence of the Pope's Relaxation of Francis his Oath, the Parliament of Paris and Kings Council had difannull'd and annihilated the Concord of Madrid, as being Concord concluded by a Person who was constrain'd, and in Prison. To colour yet this refusal, Francis Null. fent Ambaffadors to Granada, (where the Emperor was) to tell him again, Burgundy could not be alienated from the French Crown; and that, if he would return his Sons at a reasonable Ransom, (which I find by the French was two Millions of Crowns) be would take his Sifter Leonora for his Queen; if Francis's not, that he would recover them by force. The feveral Ambassadors also of the Consederates, which were in his Court at that time, (and particularly the English) concurr'd herein; requiring further, that he should recal the Spaniards out of Lombardy, and restore Francisco Sforza; leave his pretence to Naples, and not go to Italy with an Army; and that he should pay the King of Eng Aftiny; and that he mount pay the Aring of Long, land, all the Contractors of the League, in cale of refufal, denouncing War. The Emperoran-Chinle's fwer'd, That the French King should do ill, not to Answer, keep bis Onto and Promise. Neither could be excuse. keep ois 0.110 and cromije. Neitwer coma ne excuje bimless sussicionily by laging the fault on his Paulia-ment or Kingdom, they being privy and consenting to it, that he would detain the Hostages; and, for the Queen Leonora, she was not demanded in such terms as it was sit to send here. For Francisco Storza, that he would chastise him as his Vassal. That he would hold his right in Naples. That he would go to Italy, when and how he lifted. And that, if all made Wer againgt him, he would, by the help of his good Subjects, defend himself against them all, and that he would pay the King of England with French Money. I must return now a while to speak of home

Businesses, that the Reader may see wherefore our active King prevail'd himfelf no more not otherwise of these great occasions. It was only for want of Money; the fcarcity whereof also was the excuse his People made, for not furnishing those Contributions he demanded. Hereupon our King inquires into the Caufes: Among which because secret transportation of Money was thought one of the greatest, he advises con-cerning the remedy. All his Counsellors yet did not concur in the fame opinion; for fome affirm'd, no Merchant would carry away Coin unless he found gain by it; and that this, returning home again, inrich'd the Country. Others faid, there were Reasons Subtleties yet, which, if order were not taken, would against drain away our Monies insensibly; it being manifest exporting to all, that would take the pains to consider it, that, unless the Commodities and Coin of our Country kept 1526. the Price of their Commodities, inhanc'd likewife the Value of our Money, especially Gold; left our Merchants should be discouraged to buy, when they find the Price of the Commodity to much rais'd. The confequence whereof was, that as our Merchants defird, by Stealth, to convey over their Money in Specie, as having, thereby, the benefit of the inhancing; whereas if they receiv'd it in the Low-Countries by Bill of Credit or Exchange, they should not only lose this benefit, but pay somewhat to those who furnished them. Again, that when our Merchants had occasion to return from the Low-Countries, they were not fuffer'd to carry back their Monies in Specie, but were forc'd to take Letters of Exchange for them in England, by which they loft again. Thus, notwithftanding all Prohibitions and Searches, great Sums were convey'd over, to the impoverishing of the Kingdom. The on-Iy Remedy whereof therefore was, to cry up our Money at home, to the fame rate that it paffeth at abroad, which will both keep our Money from transporting, and make the Exchange without lofs: Neither was there other means to prevent these Inconveniencies; which had now extended to far, that our Gold was as frequent and current among our Neighbours, almost, as at home; whereas yet, little, or none of their Gold was to be found in our ordinary Payments. Be-fides, they made another advantage hereof: For as their Standard was bafer than ours, fo they coin'd our Gold again, and made no little pro-fit that way. Thus did our Neighbours many ways procure the Wealth of their Country, and Damage of ours; and would do more, when timely Order were not taken. Which our Historians have thought worth the fetting down, and my felf have the more infifted on, both to shew the rate of Gold and Silver in those times, and to help the Reader to understand the second enhancing under this King, Anno 1544. Therefore thus I collect. The Angel-Noble of Gold was hitherto in weight; of an Ounce, in eftimation fix Shillings eight Pence of Silver, which Silver was two Ounces. Thus the Proportion of Gold to Silver was Twelve to One. Again, an Ounce of Silver (or Half-angel) pass'd for three Shillings four Pence; fo twelve Ounces (or a Pound) was just forty Shillings, which is two Pound, as we commonly count our Money.

But Henry VIII. now, by Proclamation, advancing the Value of both (one tenth part) the Angel was raifed to feven Shillings four Pence (which was the rate at which it pass'd in the Low-Countries.) And, confequently, an Ounce of Gold estimated at Forty four Shillings, and an Ounce of Silver three Shillings eight Pence, and a Pound Weight at Forty four Shillings, the proportion being (ut fupra) twelve to one. The fudden Benefit of this appear'd fuch, that, in Novemb. November following, there was another enhancing of one Forty fourth Part. So that the Angel was feven Shillings fix Pence, the Ounce of Gold Forty five Shillings, and the Ounce of Silver three Shillings nine Pence. And, by thefe means, much of cur Gold (as our Hittorians observe) was brought back again. But, Anno 1544, these Metals were again enhanced one fifteenth part. So Gold came (from Forty five Shillings) to Forty eight Shillings an Ounce; and Silver (from three Shillings nine Pence an Ounce) to four Shillings; and a Pound Weight of Silver was Forty eight Shillings.

This while Solyman brought Two hundred The Turks beat the thousand Men into Hungary, with which (near Hungary Buda) he wholly defeated the Army of Louis King having his Leg engag'd, he was drown'd in less than a span-deep of Water and Mud, so that it concern'd all Christian Princes to make Peace, but chiefly the Emperor, whose Sifter King Louis had matried; and whose Brother Ferdinand; in the Right of his Wise Anne, Sister and Heir to the faid King of Hungary and Bohemia, claim'd to fucceed in both Kingdoms. Francis, being not ignorant hereof, thought fit to prevail himfelf of the occasion: Therefore he fent in September, 1526, the Archbishop of Bourdeaux (with Sept. whom also the Nuntio and Venetian Ambassadors Francis's join'd Offices) to defire the Emperor to fend fecond back his Children, and to accept fome honeft Meffage Ranfom in Money; promifing, withal, his Love to Charles and Friendship. But Charles, now incensed, told charles's the Archbishop, that, if he would have his Chil-Answer. dren, he must according to his Oath and Promife, return Prisoner himself; (adding, that his Kingdom could not hinder him herein, however he pretended they wou'd not confent to the re-flitution of Burgundy.) Wherein yet, he should but imitate the Example of King John his Predecessor; who, being Prisoner in England, and permitted to go home upon the like Terms, did (when he was not able to pay his Ranfom) most faithfully return again, and yield his Body unto Cuftody, where he dy'd. Then, taking the Ambafflador afide, (as Sandorul hath it) he bid Sandev. him tell the French King his Mafter, that he had done Laschement and Meschamment, in breaking the Concord of Madrid, and that, if he deny d it, he would make it good in Person against him. But Francis wanted not Courage to reply in the fame Language, as will appear afterwards.

In the mean time, as he thought it concern'd him to defend his Reputation in any probable way, rather than to confess in himself to notable a Falshood, he caus'd an Apology (penn'd by the Chancellor of France) to be published, and fent to all Christian Princes, the Effect whereof was.

That the Emperor had first broke the Confederation * 1516.
of * Noyon, in denying the Tribute due for the King-Francis's dom of Naples, the restitution of Navarre, and di-Apology. were other Rights. Befides, that be had made War in Milan, which was his by loberitance, the Concession of Popes, and Donation in Feud by Maximilian the Emperor. And, which was worst of all, had enticed his Vaffal the Duke of Bourbon, to rebel against him, and invade Provence. That, thereupon, he had indeed, drawn his Sword, and chafed the Imperial Army from before Marfeilles, and follow'd it to Italy, where he was unfortunately taken Prisoner; yes that he had protested to those who kept him there, that, if be bad proteffed to thefe who kept him there, that, if the Emperor requir'd myinf or impossible things, be would not perform them, but rather that he would reverge himself, when he was free. That, as he doubted left through his absence, fome Troubles might had arife at home, he had precur'd his Liberty the heft way he could. In the whole Frame whereof, if any thing were to be distilled, it must be rather imputed to the Emperor, who demanded intregloundle Conditions, then to him we had no release to the Conditions. ror, who dimanded intrediginate Conditions, than is bin who found no other means to elegine. Naturith-flanding, that, at his return, he had for the fattifaction of his Honour, requir'd of his chief Nobility and Compellers, what he ought to do, both according so Equity, and the maintenance of his Reyal Dignity, who spon mature Deliberation, answer'd: That infolent Pactions and Contracts, which comprchend in them notable Damage and Detriment to the Contractor, as being imposid on him from one more powerful, ought to be held as violent, and involuntary, and therefore in themselves void. Besides, that, when he was facred at Rheims, he was then sworn not to alienate any Patrimony of the Buda's he wholly defeated the Army of Loias King Crown, from which Outh therefore, as being formerly made, and more obligatory, he could by no means dehim to fly away; till, by the fall of his Horfe, part; effectally, when the Inhabitants of Burgundy tion of Gold to Silver.

> Value of Coin rais'd.

1526. (which was the Country demanded) would not confent * thereunto. Wherefore, if the Emperor pressed him to any thing contrary to these Duties and Obligations, be must think it was not without a special Providence from above, that he recover'd his Liberty. For how could the Emperor be ignorant, that, he was ty'd by the greated Band of Religion not to violate the Right of his Crown? Or how could be believe, that the Presidents of the Parliaments of France would consent hereunto, when they had taken their Oaths to the con-trary? Howsover, that none could think him false or perjur'd as long as the Hest. ges (as the Counter-va-lue of all that was capitul.t.d) had been deliver'd to the Emperor. Neither was it enough to fay, that, in demanding Burgundy, the Emperor did but require his own; fince that Dutchy was (long fince) annexed to Normandy, and incorporated into the Crown of France by King John, and consequently govern'd by the same Lines; among which the Salick being principal, the Emperor's Title, as being claim'd from a Daughter, was excluded. Furthermore, that this Affair had been communicated to some out of this Kingdon, who understood well what was to be done in such Cafes, and that he had receiv'd much Comfort. In conelifion, as there remain'd nathing else for him to do, fo he had offer'd a condign Ransom in Money, and other good Conditions, which might both redeem his dear Children, and teftify the Defive he had to recover his lately married Wife, who was also detain d from him; get that he was shill refus d. All which Premises being duly confider'd, he appeal'd to ail Christian Princes and Potentates, as his Judges and Protectors, whether the Fault was his, and not rather the Emperors, who, by his injurious and impossible Demands, had frustrated

> Thus (as many thought) did Francis strive to elude his Oath with Reason of State; and to cover the Breach of his Faith under a Pretext of Impoffibility; without making any good Excuse at all (that is extant) for his not returning, (tho more easily palliated than the rest;) both as sufpicion of ill Usage might be held a kind of natural Defence and Evation in this kind, and as his Kingdom would lefs confent hereunto, than to any other Condition. And certainly, had the Emperor sufficiently consider'd all these Circumflances, he would have follow'd their Counfel, who advis'd him, either to detain Francis till he had made fome Advantage thereof, or elfe have let him go freely. Neither should the Clementine League (begun during the Imprisonment of Frencis) have deterr'd him; as being not con-cluded fo much in favour of Francis, as directed against him, whose Greatness did then many ways appear. So that to let Francis go, was but to fortifie his Adversaries against himself. He thought fit yet to command an Answer to this Apology; wherein the Title, by which he claim'd all his soubtful Possessions, (especially that of Naples and Provence) is set down, and the Fault laid on Francis, with as much Bitterness as the Cause requir'd; all which is fet down by San-

Francis, finding now there was no other way to recover his Children, but by Force, makes all the Friends he can: Wherefore, about the end July, fending fome Ambaffadors to our King, a League was concluded the eighth of August, Anno 1526, By which both Kings did oblige them-Heavy flower recipiocally, not to Treat or Agree aport, or fek H mort parately with the faid Emperor, concerning the refitured from tion of the two Children of Francis (when yet they were freely offer d) nor the Men'y due from the Emperor to our King; but jointly and together. And, as for all other Enfineffes, they fosuld pass without Dero-gation er Projudice to their former Treaties, which were understood to remain entire. And that neither of the faid Kings should, in any kind, assist the Emperor, when be were invaled by the other.

The Perfons who chiefly procur'd this Treaty, were Giovanni Joachim (now ftil'd Manfieur de Vaula) and Jean Brinon the Fremier President of Vauks) and Jean Brinen the Fromer Prendent of Robin; who, being (as is before faild) diffracted by Francis, came to King Honry, April 28, and, April 28, being admitted, the Prefident, in an eloquent Oration in Latine, before our King, fet in his Throne, and attended by the Ambalfadors of the Pope, the Emperor, Vinice and Florence, (who at this time labour'd to draw him into the League of Italy,) profesfed publickly, that it was the King's Goodness meerly that made him abstain from Trance Goodness marry that made tim adjust your form at this feefon, the eccasion of invading it being so fair, during the loopiforment of the King bis M-stee. This being ended, Sir Thomas More, in the same Landens and the same Landens and the same state. guage, wittily answer'd him; concluding at last, that since they acknowledg'd this Goodness in the King, it should be an Obligation on him to continue it; wherewith the Ambassadors departed, much satisfy'd. Our King also, considering the Difficulties he found to procure Money, divided his time, betwixt Businesses at home and his Pleasures, not neglecting yet the Publick Weal of Christendom; for which purpose, he tent Sir John Wallop, not only to the Princes of Germany, exhorting them to join against the Turk, but to Mary Queen of Hungary, to comfort her for the loss of her Hufband, adding withal fuch a supply of Money as might testify his Zeal to that Cause, was greater than theirs, who by Kindred and Neighbourhood to the Danger were more concern'd herein.

The Army of the late League having now be-Pope's gun a War, with fome doubtful fuccels, in Indip, Lener to the Pope, for his Juffification, thought fit to the Emwire unto the Emperor, June 23, 1726, a kind peter. of Apology for his taking Arms, a alledging, that, June 23. as he was Pater Communis, be thought himfelf bound, by all the ways he could, to procure a General Good be-fore any Particular, exhorting him for the rest, to Pardon to Francisco Sforza Duke of Milan, and Contentment to all the Confederates in their just Demends. To which Charles sharply answerd, (by Empiror's Letter dated the seventeenth of September follow-Reply. ing) laying the fault of that Diffention among Chri-Sept. 17. finn Princes (which had given occasion to the Turk to conquer so much in Hungary) from himself, and on the Pope chiefly; telling him, among other things, that, regularly, he ought not to draw his Sword, when even it were against the Enemies of our Faith. Then, taxing him, as if he were imprateful, fulle, and an Incendiary, he declares how much he had done for the Peace of Italy, and the Christian World, and among others, for Francisco Sforza, proceeding thence to a bitter Expostulation with the Pope, as is more at large fer down by Sandoval; by Sandov, or whom also I find, that Charles follicited all the Stead. Gardinals, openly, to call a General Council for the good of Christendum, (as of themselves) when, otherwise, the Pope would not consent thereto.

This while Don Hugo de Moncada coming into The Colora Italy to offer fome Conditions of Peace unto the nefitake Pope, and finding they took no effect, treated fe-Rome, cretly with Pompeo, Cardinal de Colonna, and others of that Family; who fuddenly, with three thousand Men only, or as others say, fix thousand, enter'd Rome, facking part of it, and cau-Sept 201 fing that Terror to the Pope, that he fled to the Caftle of St. Angelo: Neither could he free himfelf, till he had agreed with Moncada for a Truce of four Months with the Emperor, and the withdrawing his Forces out of Lombardy, and a Pardon to all the Colonness. Whereupon Montada also withdrew his Forces out of Rome.

Our King, being not yet inform'd hereof, had fent to Charles to offer his best Endeavours to the mediating of a Peace betwixt all Parties, protest-

1526.

antwers

Santos.

Aug. 8. Treaty

1526. ing, that if he accepted his Good-will herein, Charles had deny'd him Leonora;) and, befides, he would disclaim all Interest in the Clementine offers to enter an Offensive League with him. Confederates were, at that inflant, in his Court, the recovery of his Children, and for fufficiently authorifed to induce him into it. Emperor to reasonable Conditions. The Emperor hereupon fends Instructions to his Ambaffadors refident in England, to treat accordingly of an end; to which purpose also he dispatches Don Hugo de Mindoza, who came to Hollinshead, our Court January 14, to treat hereof. How-Jan 14 beit, as matters were likely to be spun out into a 1527. greater length than flood with his Master's occafions, he shortly after broke off the Treaty. One Article whereof concerning the Spiceries of the

Eaft-Indies, I have thought fit to mention with particularity. For whereas by the decision of Pope Alexander VI. 1493, the East-Indies were given to the Portugals, and the Western to the Spa-Limits of niards, fo that the first Bound was a Line drawn from North to South, distant from the Islands of Capo Verde the space of four hundred Miles Westgnest and ward, (all on this fide being allotted to the Por-Dominions in the tugal, the other fide being permitted to the Spa-E and W. niard) this Line yet in favour of the Portugals

(who by their Riches, Power at Sea, and Conquests in Africa, had made themselves much redoubted) was afterwards extended to eight hundred eighty eight Miles Westward; whereby betwixt thefe two neighbour Princes alone, a new World, with the immense Wealth belonging to it, was divided; yet with this Honour to the Portugal, that his Discoveries and Possessions gave denomination to both, the River Indus having occasion'd anciently the calling these Parts after its Name, and the New Conquests on the Spanish part, though hugely diftant, following the Stile. Notwithstanding which large Empire, able to fatisfy any exorbitant Ambition, there wanted not Emulation betwixt those Princes, infomuch, that neither Alliance, Neighbourhood, nor the Danger they should incur, if other Princes pre-vail'd themselves of their Diffentions, could keep them in good Terms. Therefore I find by a Letter from Edward Lee, our King's Almoner, and now Ambassiador in Spain, dat. at Medins del Cam-po, the twenty first of January, 1527, the Em-peror laid claim to some Spiceries in the Eastern Parts, which I find, by Sandoval, to have been the Molucca's, lately discovered (as we have shew'd) by the Companions of Magellanes, to the no little prejudice of the Portugal, who, to buy out the King of Spain, offer'd two Millions of Ducats; which yet the Emperor accepted not for the present, but chose rather to offer a Treaty concerning them to our King; and, thereby, either to draw a great Sum of Money from him, and, together, to engage us in a Quarrel against the Portugals, while himself continued his Navigation fecurely to the West-Indies; or, at least, to detain him a while from a League he was now entring into with Francis. I do not find yet what Answer our King return'd thereto: But as no effect follow'd, I believe the Offer, though advantageous, was (out of ill Information concerning these Parts) rejected.

by Treaty, and understanding, besides, what and that the said War were not made against rough Usage the Pope had receiv'd from Mon-Charles, that then this Treaty of a more strait Alacada, resolves, according to his former League, liance should be void. Notwithstanding which to join against that Prince which appear'd most if the said Alternative Marriage were broken off refractory. Therefore, conceiving the Fault to by the common Confent of both Kings, they be in Charles, he enter'd presently into a strict should yet be oblig'd reciprocally unto the said League with Francis, chusing rather to concur War. Upon condition still, that Francis should with him particularly, than to embrace the Cle-mentine Accord, as containing many Articles in it, to King Henry the Expences he should be at; and, he would disclaim all interest in the Gementine ones to enter all Olicinive League with him League, although that Ambassadors from all the (such as his Consederates in Italy had made) for Francis in the recovery of his Children, and forcing the Marriage. Francis, 1527. gladly accepting this Motion, demands the Prin-Jancels Maria's Picture, which, together with our King's, is granted, and the Match treated in France by our Agents, the Bishop of Bath, and Fitz-Williams. The French King, if he marry'd her, requir'd she should be presently given up into his hands: But our King not agreeing thereunto, (by reason his Daughter was yet but eleven Years old) March the fecond, the Bishop March 2. Vefey, the Viscount of Thurenne, and Antoine Treaties Vefey, the President of Paris, came into England; between where on the last of April (as I find by the French Henry and where, on the last of April (as I find by the French, Fra: and our Records) three Treaties were conclu- March 30. ed, in which these are the most remarkable Articles.

I.

In the first the preceding Treaty betwixt them Aug. 8. was confirm'd. Besides, it was agreed, that the faid Kings fhould fend their feveral Ambaffadors to the Emperor, with Instructions conformable to each other, (so that their Language might be the fame) as well concerning a Ranfom of the Dauphin, and the Duke of Orleans (then Hoftages with Charles) as Payment of the Debts due from him unto Henry, and other fatisfaction for his Rights.

II.

That they should propose also, in name of the faid King, fuch decent Conditions and Offers, which should be by them advis'd, and pursue them instantly with the said Charles. And, if either he refus'd, or made no Answer within twenty days next following, or otherwife, detain'd or excluded the faid Ambaffadors from coming to his Presence; that then, by their Heralds (or Kings of Arms) they should denounce War against him, in such Form, Manner, and Order, as should be declar'd in the second Treaty.

Furthermore, it was concluded, that an Alternative Marriage (for fo the French and our Records call it) should be made, betwixt Mary Daughter of the faid King of England, and the faid Francis, or the Duke of Orleans his Son; and that the determination of the Alternative Marriage should be referv'd to the Interview of both Kings, in the Town of Calais, (at a moderate Expence) which should be declar'd presently after the resusal of Charles: In which case Henry should send unto Francis some faithful Person, to advise concerning the Particularities thereof. Also, the Articles of the said Alternative Marriage were remitted until the aforefaid time. Howfoever, it was prefently nefe Parts) rejected.

And now our King sinding no good to be done liste did not succeed to the Crown of England, Princes over Sir William Fitz-Williams, he proposes to las he liv'd, yearly, of the Salt of Broage, the starppre-Francis the Princes Mary in Marriage, (since value of fifteen thousand Crowns. But if the 1527. Jan. 21.

1527. faid Marriage were hindred on the part of Henry, the faid Francis should not be bound to pay the aforefaid Expences of the War. On the other fide, that he should pay them double, if the impediment proceeded from him.

2. By the fecond Treaty it was agreed, that presently after the refusal, delay, or non-admittance of their Ambassadors, the Intercourse, Commerce, and Traffick between their Subjects and those of the Emperor should be forbidden. Nevertheless, that, by their Ambassadors, they should offer the respite of forty days, to the intent that the Goods of their faid Subjects, might be reciprocally withdrawn, if the faid Emperor accepted it. That, for the making an actual War against him in the Low-Countries, an Army should be levy'd of thirty thousand Foot, and one thoufand five hundred Men of Arms, à la Francoife a Band of Artillery (fo term'd then) and neceffary Ammunition: Whereof Francis should fur-nish the aforesaid one thousand five hundred Men at Arms, and twenty thousand Foot; and Henry ten thousand Archers or Halberdiers, whom five hundred of the faid Men at Arms should accompany and convey, whenfoever, by the command of the faid King, or their Generals, they should be divided from the Body of the Army. And that Victuals and other Provision should be deliver'd to them, at the same price that other Foot-men had it. That, for better keeping of the Narrow Seas, as well as for hindring all Intercourse and Traffick into the faid Low-Countries, a Navy should be equipp'd of sifteen thousand Men, besides Mariners and Seamen. Whereof Francis should furnish ten thou-fand, and Henry sive thousand, each of them at their proper cost and charges That at Calais, Abbeville, or other the most commodious Towns, under the Obedience of the faid Kings, certain Priviledg'd Marts or Fairs should be appointed; and that those Merchants which usually frequented the Low-Countries, should be drawn and invited thither, by all means possible. That the number of their faid Armies, both by Sea and Land, should be kept intire, and that the Towns, and firong Places, which were conquer'd, and Prisoners taken, should be equally divided be-twixt the faid Kings. And that the Spices and other Merchandize of the Portugal Ships, paffing by the narrow Seas, should not be permitted to be fold in the Low-Countries; but only in France and England, while the faid War continued, according to the proportion of that use and necessity, that either of the faid King-doms should have thereof; Provided yet, that if the King of Portugal did declare himself in favour of Charles, that, in this case, he should be held as their common Enemy, and his Goods and Subjects adjudg'd as good Prize. And that the like course thould be held with all others who fuccour'd the Emperor in his faid Wars; which neither of the faid Kings should abandon or leave off, or otherwise treat of any Peace, Truce or other Ceffation of Arms, without mutual confent. That place should be referv'd for the Pope, Venetians, and Francisco Sforza, to be comprised in the faid Confederation; upon condition yet, they should continue the War begun by themin Italy, as long as the faid Kings proceeded in their Wars in the Low-Countries. That the faid Francis should dispose Henry de Albret King of Navarre, as also the Duke of Gueldres, and Robert de la March, Sieur de Sedan, to make War, on their part, upon the Countries of Charles next adjoining to them. That if John Sepule, yet allied himfelt with the Turk, and that the faid King of Bobenia did any way affift the Emperor against the said Kings; that then, by their joint Letters, they should animate and comfort the faid John Sepuse to the defence of his Caufe, to the end he might both abstain from any dependency on the Turk, and that he might divert the Succour of the faid King of Behemia. That also, by their joint Letters, they should signifie to the Princes of Germany this Confederation, together with the causes thereof, to the end they might forbear giving affiftance to the Emperor, and be excited to bring the faid Emperor unto Reafon, which whenfoever the faid Emperor would accept, Francis should condescend thereunto, by the Intervention of Henry

3. By the third Treaty, true, folid, firm, per-perual, and inviolable Peace, Amity, Union, Confederation, League, Intelligence, and Con-cord between the faid Kings, and their Pofterity, even to the end of the World, wasaccorded, by Decree, and Law, obliging them, and all Kings their Successors, no less than the Oaths they take at their Sacrings and Coronations. According whereunto, they did respectively promise and agree, that the said Kings and their Successors, should never be inquieted or molestcd, by them or any of their Succeffors, being Kings, in the Lands, Countries and Seigneuries, which either of them held for the prefent; which therefore they and their Heirs should quietly possess for ever. In consideration whereof, the said Francis did bind himself, and his Successors, Kings of France, to pay, every year, at two fe-veral terms, after the decease of the said King Henry, to all the Kings of England his Successors, forty fix thousand Crowns de Soleil, and twenty four Sols Tournois, without deduction or prejudice of the Sum of 1800736. Crowns de xxxii. Sols, due to the faid Herry, by Obligation, and Treaty of the xxx. August 1525. or of that which should remain to be paid after his Decease; moreover the said Francis bound himfelf, and his Successors, Kings of France, to give of the Salt of Brounge yearly, as well to the faid Henry, as to his Successors, to the value of 15000 Crowns, as is above mentioned. Furthermore, it was agreed, that, if any thing were attempted by any Subject or Ally of the faid Kings contrary to this third Treaty, that their Peace and Amity should not yet be broken, but that the Offenders and Delinquents only should be punish'd. And in every one of the said three Treaties, an express Article was inserted, that the precedent Treaty of Lingust 30. 1525, should be by them confirm'd, and no ways infing'd, or diminish'd. Lastly, by Letter or Agreement apart, bearing Date likewife 1527. the faid Kings declar'd, that they would have themselves held, understood, and reputed as one and the fame. and that either of them should be still concern'd in the other. These Treaties being concluded May s. and sworn, (yet so as the Bishop of Tarbe made Ambassa december 1) and fworn, (yet so as the Bishop of Tarbe made Ambasianot a few doubts concerning the Princess Market briefs Legitimation, which we shall find afterward jeeks to occasion'd the Divorce,) they were dismist, and the Legihonourably rewarded, and afterwards (as I find) timacy of fent by Francis to Spain.

While these things pas'd, the Pope, assoon as the Imperialists had quitted Rome, and left him at his liberty, fends to our King a Letter, Septemb. 24. complaining of the Indignities offer'd to his Person by Moncada, and the Colonness, defiring his Grace to set his hand to the revenge of it, and defence of the Apostolick See. More-Vayoud of Transstormia, (precending to the King-dom of Hungary against Ferdinand King of Bobe-mia, and Brother of the said Charles) have not ragement (he saith,) he enter'd this Labyrinth, Vol. II.

1527. will yet effectually affift him, and the French dred thousand Ducats should be paid to the Aras he did before, notwithstanding his late agree-ment with Moneada, to which he holds himself not bound, because he was forc'd to it. Where-Novemburghood our King in November, sent him about thirty thousand Ducats for a Present. The Pope being thus heartned, cites the Cardinal Colonna to appear at Rome upon pain of Deprivation of his Dignity: He, on the other fide, threatning to call a Council against him, and depose him Pope robe de-pos'd for as a Simoniac; the Pope hereupon gathers an Army, and with about ten thousand Men, led Simony, by the Comte de Vaudemont, Brother to the Duke of Lorain (to whom the Pope now pretended to give Noples as the right of his Family,) enters the Kingdom of Naples, takes divers places belonging to the Colonness, and approacheth the very Gates of Naples. But now new Succours coming from Spain, the Pope was diffrefs'd and glad to treat again with la Noy the Vice-Roy, and Mir. 20. to give the Imperialists fixty thousand Ducats; whereupon also it was agreed, that the Armies should retire on either side, and a Cessation of War should be accorded, for eight Months. But the Pope finding this accord also too disadvan-tageous (as having disarm'd himself thereby, and discontented both the French and our King,) intends to difavow it, and to provide himfelf of Money by creating 14 Cardinals, for which he had three hundred thousand Ducats; but Bour-Record bon prevented his Attempts. For being actually General of the Imperiatifts (who for want of belieges Rome pay, were to be maintain'd with Pillage,) he takes a pretext to invade Rome it felf; for (as the intelligence in our Records hath it) coming May 5. near that City, May 5. he fent to the Pope for leave to pass through it, and his Territories in-4. 18. to the Realm of Naples, and to have Victuals for his Money; but the Pope denying it, Bourbon refolves to affault Rome, which Renzo de Ceri, an old Commander, defended. But Bourbon having an Army of thirty thousand Men, upon May 6. 1527. marches directly to the Walls ; May 6. where carrying a Ladder before the rest of the Soldiers, with which he meant to Scale the Town, a fhot kill'd him: Which kind of Death, Is kill'd. fome Writers fay, he call'd upon himfelf by a kind of Imprecation, when the last year, being at Milan, he made the Citizens buy their quiet at a great price; wishing he might be shot to death the first time he went to the Field, if they should be oppress'd any more by such Payments, which yet he forc'd them unto foon after. Bourbon being thus dead, Philibert de Chaalon, Prince of Aurange, threw a Cloak over his Bo-B.4.1y dy, as fearing it might discourage his Soldiers. But they, whether out of Indignation for this lofs, or greedinefs to fack the Town, enter'd Prince of takesRome. it with fury; killing in the way divers Bishops, and furprizing fome Cardinals that were flying to the Caftle Saint Angelo; the Pope and Renzo de Ceri being already retir'd thither with fevenceen Cardinals, and the Ambassadors of England, France, Venice, and Florence, and about five hundred Soldiers. The Prince of Liaringe (who now took upon him the charge of General) did all that was possible to restrain the Soldiers from And an their frequent Murthers and Pillage. Notwithflanding which, their impetuofity was fuch, that without making difference, betwirt Holy places and Prophane) they ranfack'd the City for the space of fix or seven days, killing above five thousand Men. Not content with this yet, they hid Siege to the Caltle, and brought the Pope to such necessity, that to free himself from

- King amend his former flackness, &c. he will do my within two Months, and the Castle of Saint Angelo, together with those of Oftia, and Civita Hill. Rom Angelo, together with those of Offin, and Crivita His, Ram, Vecchia, and other places, should be delivered in disper, to the hands of the Imperialists. That the Pope Guiciand, with the faid Cardinals should remain in the 1 18. Castlet, till part of the Money were paid, and June 5, good Hostages given for the rest. Which being Guiteiand. done, that he should go to Cajeta, or some other l. 18. place in the Kingdom of Naples, there to expect the Emperors pleafure.

Hereupon the Guard and Service of the Popes Pope ta-Person was committed to Hernando de Alanzon, and ken Priso-Victuals put into the Castle; (where the Pope ner. remain'd under some restraint, not free from danger, though otherwise reverenc'd in all appearance, according to his Dignity.) Andnow the Cardinal Colonna, and others that fided with the Emperor began to treat concerning a Ge-Sandov. neral Council, conformable to a late Bull of Pope Julius II, by which it was declar'd, that a Pope might be depriv'd from his Place, and another fubflituted, when there were cause for it; (and they pretended to prove this Pope a Simoniac.)

It was now the beginning of June, 1527, June, when the Emperor being at Valledolid took no-Sandaval. tice of this Success, divulg'd already over all Christendom. Nevertheless he shew'd not any other fense thereof, than such as might be expected from one to whose Ambition and Power nothing could feem either great or new. Yet as he knew that all Christian Princes must needs be highly intereffed in the Imprisonment of the Head of their Church, fo he thought fit to fatisfie them herein. Among all which none feem'd fo confiderable as our King. To whom there- Emperor's fore in a Letter dated from Valledolid, Aug. 2. Apology 1527. he made a kind of Apology for these proceedproceedings; beginning first with giving an ac-ing-count thereof, then demanding our Kings Advice; thereupon declaring also the causes why his Army could not be withheld from invading of Rome. Yet fo, as he disclaim'd any part, either the counselling or authorising thereof. Notwithflanding which (as God could draw good out of evil) fo he hop'd a benefit might redound to Christendom thereby. Wherefore, that he should intreat him again, as his good Uncle and Brother, that he would fend his Opinion what further was to be done in this cafe. And particularly, that he would affift him against the Enemies of our Faith; againft whom, when their intestine Wars were compos'd, he resolv'd to imploy his Blood and Life. He forgot not also, July 20. upon the inftance of ours and the French Am- Aug. 2. upon the internet of our and the control of the Popes liberty, to write gently unto his Holinefs, offering his Love and Friendfhip in cafe he defir'd it. But to the chief Offiship in case he desir'd it. But to the chief Officers of his Army, by his Agents Antonio Veyeley, and Francisco de les Angeles, General of the Franciscons, he fent Instructions, which for some space amus'd them. For he commanded to fet the Pope at liberty, yet fo, as together they should provide, that from a Friend he should not become an Enemy. The Prince of Aurange, Hernando Osto). de Alanzon, and fome other principal Communders met hereupon; where, after a long Confultation, how to reconcile and interpret this Riddle, they refolv'd at last, that to despoil the Pope first of his Money, and then to deliver him, was the best way to comply with their Instructions. After therefore having extorted great Sums, not only for the Emperors Occasions, but their own; and forcing him to give Hostages Pepe to such necessity, that to free himself from for Security, he was dismissed out of the Ca-further danger, he and thirteen Cardinals, that the of St. Angelo, as shall be told in its place. now remain'd with him, agreed, that four hun- | Yet fo, as they fuffer'd him not to depart out i527. of their reach; neither indeed did he think fit to do otherwise; fo that although by the former Convention he was to be remov'd to Cajeta, ten Convention he was to be removd to Cajeta, ten Miles diffant thence; or fome other place belonging to the Kingdom of Naples, (whether not only the burning of his Palace, Library and Records did feem to compel him, but the Peftilence then raging in that City; whereof allo Charles de la Noy Viceroy of Naples died; into whose charge therefore Hugo de Moncada, much against the Popes will, succeeded; yet, saith Guicardine, with much Diligence, Intreaty, and Art, he procur'd to ftay in Rome. From whence upon the first surrender of the Castle he complain'd (as I find by our Records) to our King June 6. and Cardinal; protefling, that all the Help and Succour he could expect in this extremity, was from hence, and therefore implor'd his Affistance. Clement Which Petition therefore he caus'd to be fe-conded by the thirteen Cardinals then with implores him, and to be dispatch'd hither by Gregory de stance of K. Henry. Cafalis, our Kings Agent in Rome, and now returning to England.

This while the Ambaffadors of our King in Spain, mediated potently for delivery of the Hoflages upon more reasonable terms than had been hereunto propos'd; and in conclusion fo prevail'd, that (as Sandoval hath it) Charles proteited to our Ambaffadors, that for his fake only he would relinquish his demand for the restitution of Burgundy, in which the difficulty of the Peace confifted. Adding further, that for the fame reason, he would accept, as well for the Ransom of the two Sons of Francis, as for the Recompence of the great expences he was at for breach of the Concord of Madrid, the Sum only which Francis had offer'd voluntarily long before to Charles de la Noy (which were 2000000 Crowns;) upon Condition yet that Francis should observe the rest of the Articles in the said Concord. But all this again was interrupted by the continual intelligence of the Pope's Imprisonment, which fo incens'd our King, that he would not fo much as vouchfafe an answer to the arefuses to bove-mention'd Letter of Charles, but prepar'd to joyn in a firicter League with Francis, as judging that Charles would never in fo infolent a manner have captivated the Pope, had he not pretended to Universal Monarchy.

This while Ferdinand King of Hungary and Bobemia, fent Ambaffadors hither to invite our Kingto joyn against the Turk. Notwithstanding which, as John Sepuse, Vayvod of Transylvania, pretending he was chosen King of Hungary by the greater part of the Nobility, had lately complain'd of Ferdinand's Usurpation to divers Christian Princes, and particularly to our King; fo no other fatisfaction was return'd, but a Protestation made by Sir Thomas Alore, that the fault was not our Kings if more were not done therein. All these miseries which he so much lamented, being occasion'd by the Ambition of Charles the Emperor, his Brother, who (notwithflanding his Mediation) could not be induc'd to accept the Overtures generally propos'd him for a Peace. And that till this were done, the Turk must needs prevail. Whereupon the Ambaffadors were ho-nourably rewarded and difmiss'd.

Our King at this time intended to proceed according to his Treaty with Francis; but as he now heard that Rome was fack'd, he made, My 29. a new Confederacy with him, by which they agreed mutually to design from their Wer in the Low-Countries, and to transport it into Italy; according to which, Francis oblig'd bimself to send an Monthly 32222 Crowns de Soleil, to be deducted out numary 32222 crown at South, to be accurate and of the Money which the full Francis ow'd him; and that this Convibution (bould be understood to be in lieu of those Forces which by the late Trenty be flould have furnished for the Wars in the Low-Countries. And that therefore all the after Articles of the Countries. And that therefore all the after Articles of the Said Treaty should remain in full effect and virtue. It was agreed also that Henry might feal a Com-millary which sheald wift the Army in Italy, and advertise him of all Palfages. For the better ac-complishment of which Treaties, Sir Thomas Bolen, Knight, lately * made Viscount Rochfort, + June 18 and Sir Anthony Brown, being joyn'd in Commisfion with the Bishop of Bath, (then Resident at Paris,) were commanded to see Francis sworn thereunto, which accordingly was perform'd. Sir Francis Pointz, Knight allo, upon the tenth of May, 1527. was sent to Spain, where Doctor May to.

Edward Lee, and Hierome Bishop of Worcester, An Em(lately come from Rome, and dispatch'd to the busy from Emperor,) were Resident on the part of our K Harry to King. To accompany him in which Journey Charles V and Negotiation, Clarenceaux King of Arms was fent to act his part, when the gentle perfuasi-ons of our Ambassadors could not prevail. The Proposition on their part to be made, was briefly this. That in regard our King was at half the charge of the War, Charles should fend him half the Prive and Booty taken at Pavia, and one of the two History. ges; and that if he deny'd, Clarenceaux should de-nounce him War. To this rough Message Charles Emperor's answer'd with much Gravity; That the Proposition answer to made was of great moment on either part. So that Honry's whether he accepted or refus'd it, it was fit he took Demands. time to advise with himself, both that his good will to our King might be conserved, and Francis might to our King migns vecousire as and Lances migns be used according to bis demerits, who had so perfidiously behaved himself, that he had broke his promise almost before he made it. Therefore that he would deamaje vejore ve maae st. Devejore that he would ac-clare his refolution by Letters unto Henry; and that, till then, he would make them no abfolute Answer. All which was done purposely by Charles, that he might gain time. Our King and Fran-eis being advertis'd of this dilatory Reply, and together of the Popes diffress, would no longer intermit to give order for their own, as well as the general Affairs of Christendom. Therefore our Cardinal was commanded to France, both for concluding the Marriage of our Princess Mary, either with Francis or the Duke of Orleance his Son, (as is before mention'd) as also for other occasions, which shall be hereafter declar'd. Though whatfoever they treated concerning her Marriage in fo many places, and with Perfons of fo different Ages, her Husband Philip the Second, was now but newly born at Valledolid, May 21. 1527. The Cardinal having kift the Kings Hand, July and receiv'd his Instructions, arriv'd at Calai and received his Inftructions, arrived at Calais with a Noble Equipage, being near a thousand Horse, the eleventh of July, 1527, departing July 11 thence toward Boulogne, (leaving yet the Great July 122. Seal behind him in Calais with Doctor Taylor Steme Master of the Rolls;) where he was met by find Annalmoster de Byron with a thousand Horse, and busided to after by fobn Cardinal of Lorain, and the Chan-France. cellor of Alanzon, who accompany d him in his way to Monstreil, and afterwards to Abberelle, July 13. Evence in the mean time aftering him by Ler. July 14. Frances in the mean time affuring him by Let-July 24. ter, that Himfelf and Madame Louisse his Mother would meet him at Amiens, alsoon as he had confiscated the Lands of Bourbon, and extinguish'd his Title and Dignity. This occasion'd the Cardinals stay for some days, yet so as he cording to which, Francis chig d himself to fine and francis had given him, wheretoever ne went to aims of 30000 Foot, and 10000 great Hongs, to form with the Venetians, and others of the Clementien feelase all those Prisoners he thought capable of Mercy. While he staid thus at Abbeville, the Vol. II. M 2 Bithop wanted not a just exercise for that power which

K. Hanry rhe Emperor's Let-

Mar. 14.

H 17. May 3

> New League between Hony and

1527. Bishop of Wercester, and Edward Lee, our Kings Ambassadors in Sp in, sent him the Emperor's Demands, in case the restitution of Francis his Children were proposed; which, though high, were to be qualified by our King, if his Highness fo thought fitting, hereof therefore, by a July 29. Letter dated the twenty ninth of July, 1527. he advertis'd our King, adding moreover, that though the Emperor were determin'd to train the Pope to Spain, (to which also he heard the Pope was inclin'd) yet that the Project was fo dangerous, as it was not by any means to be fuffer'd; fince thereby Charles might both establish the Imperial Authority in Rome, and feife on the Patrimony of the Church, or at least constrain him to furnish what Money he would, and together compel him to make fo many Cardinals of the Sparish Faction, as when the Pope died, would enable him to elect what Successor he pleas'd. Neither did he fee how this could be avoided, unless Andrea Doria were commanded to of the Pepe; who, what shew foever he made of willingness to come to the Emperor, complain'd yet of his Captivity, as by a Letter writ-France 6 ten by the Popes own Hand in Ciphers, to his Highness, and convey'd by Gregory de Casalis, might appear; which also was confirm'd by divers Cardinals then attending him. Besides, that it were convenient, that the Forces his Highness was bound to furnish for the Wars of Italy, should be joyn'd with Lautreeb, (who was now design'd by Francis to pursue the War there) and imploy'd to hinder the Popes paffage; in which affair also, some Princes of Italy might be drawn to concur, when his Highness would write to them; all which was the rather to be speeded, for that the Bishop of Worcester had written from Spain, that the Emperor went to fow division be-rwixt him and Francis. This Letter was secon-ded by another of the same date, which yet contain'd only an overture for a meeting bebetwixt Madame Louise and himself, on the one part, and the Emperor on the other at Perpignan; wherein all these difficulties should be resolv'd. Moreover, by a Letter dated from Abbreville the July 31. thirty first of July, he certifies the King, how Monfieur de Bouclans had propos'd on the Emperors part, a Match betwixt the Duke of Richmond, natural Son to our King, and the Daughter of Portugal, with Milan for Dowry; which yet (as being colourable only) he thought fit fhould not be much infifted on. Only, because it was necessary to keep good correspondence with the Emperor, he thought it not amifs to entertain speech thereof. And together, (by a Letter the first of August,) to desire our Ambas-Aug. 1. fadors in Spain, to quench all Rumours concerning a Divorce bruited now betwixt our King and the Queen; and to affure the Emperor, that the first Original thereof arose only from the objection which the Bishop of Tarbe (when he was lately in England) made, concerning the Legitimation of the Princels Mary. At latt, Francis, gitimation of the Princes Mary. At latt, Francis,

And finally, that neither Prince might demand of the together with Madame Leisse his Mother, complete with Madame Leisse his Mother, complete to Arrivers, the Cardinal with all his Train petual Peace was conserved. Aug. t. fets forth from Abbeville; whereof notice being Aug. 4. given, Francis being Royally attended, meets him a Mile and half out of the Town; and after Protestations that he ow'd his Liberty chiefly to our King, conducted him to his Lodging. Shortly after which, the Cardinal obtaining Audience, declar'd his business, consisting principally in three Points.

First, To require the Resolution of Francis consurning this Alternative of the Marriage a little be-

Secondly, To advise concerning the means of ma- 1527 king Peace with the Emperor, upon such terms as the restitution of Francis his Children might be procur'd.

Thirdly, To determine how the Pope might be de-liver'd out of Captivity; (for which purpose our Historians say, that the Cardinal carry'd over Hollingtend, with him 240000 l. of our Kings Treasure. To the first, it was answer'd, That the Duke of Orleans (as more fuiting in years) should be recom-mended to the Princess Mary.

To the fecond, That Francis for re-obtaining of his Children, would, among other things, renounce his claim in Milan. To the third, little more was faid, than That the Pope (as soon as possible) should be set free, by Mediation, or Force.

Besides which Points, an Interview was propos'd on our Kings part, betwixt him and Fran-cis; but Francis excusing himself by reason of the great Charges he must be at till his Children were redeem'd, the motion was urg'd no farther.

After this, Francis brought our Cardinal to Compeigne; from whence he wrote to the King, that howfoever Francis did promise to renounce Milan, yet, that it was best nor overstrictly to tie him to it, until his Highness discover'd whether the Emperor would really confer it in Dowry upon the Match formerly intimated. The King receiving thus much satisfaction by the Cardi-Three o. nals Negotiation, writ a Letter with his own ther Frea-Hand, acknowledging therein the good Service cluded be-cluded behe had done him and the Kingdom divers ways; tween and particularly in three Treaties, concluded, England Aug. 18. 1527. which, by the French and our and France. Aug. 18. Records, I find thus related.

1. The first Treaty was concerning the Princess Ma-Ty; who (according to the Reference formerly made,) was to marry the Duke of Orleans, referving not-withfanding unto a further time, the particularities of her Date, Donry, Transportation of the faid Duke into England, the Obserges of his Family, and the like. Furthermore it was declard, that if the faid Marriage, either by Death, or consent of both Kings, or any other Accident, took no effect, That yet the other Treaties between the faid Kings (being of the thirtieth of August, 1525. and of the last of April 1527. Should remain in full force. The Interview of the two Kings, which (the last of April) was agreed to be at Calais, was remitted to a further time. The Contribution, to which the said Henry oblig'd himself for the War of Italy, was expected to be twenty thousand Escus de Soleil for June, and for July thirty thad, and for every of the Months of August. September, October, thirty two thousand two hundred twenty two troums. Upon Condition yet, that the faid Contribu-tion should be abated proportion bly, if the number of Soldiers implyed in the faid War were diminish'd. That, after the faid Month of October, Henry Should contribute no more; and that, if Peace were made fooner, be should be discharg'd of the said Contribution.

2. By the fecond Treaty it was agreed, that the faild Henry fould not charge himfelf with the Pra-tellion and Affinance of the Peace, whenfeever it fhould be concluded between Trancis and Charles; but in case only, that the said Peace could not otherwise be made, which therefore so happing, the faid Francis did agree, that he should take the said Protection and Warranty upon him. On condition yet, that nothing should be attempted by him by reason thereof, either against him, bis Kingdom, or Subjects. Moreover, the faid Henry confessed, that, for the good of the intended Peace, agreed on hereafter.

3. By the third Treaty it was concluded, betwist the faid Kings, that no Council-General's summon'd by top: hould take effect; and, that for this purple they should take effect; and, that for this purple they should cause their Clergy on either side, by sublick and solemn Protestations to renounce and detest all such Convocation. They are Commented to the side of the Convocation. That any Commandment, Sentence, Bull, Convocation. Dut any commandent, Sectione, But, Letter, or Breve proceeding from the still Pope, being in Captivity, and tending to the damage of the said Kings or Subjects, and especially to the prejudice of the Legation of the Cardinal of York, should neither be obey'd by them, nor suffer to be obey'd; but that they should be declar'd as of no effect, and the bringthey should be declar'd as of no effect, and the bing-ers of them punish'd. That during the fid Captivity of the Pers, whatsever by the Cardund of York, (af-sighted by the Prelates of England assembled and call'd regether by the Authority of the said Kirge should be determind cencerning the Administration of England, and other Countries being in the Dominion of the said Henry, should (the consent of the said King being fight bad,) be decreed and observ'd. (To conservations Power, the Pope sent him a Bull, to be Vicar-General throughout all the Kings Dominions.) It was also agreed, that Francis and his Clergy should have the like power in France, and other his Dominions, du-ring the Captivity of the Pope. And here certainbegan the tafte that our King took of governments ing (in chief) the Clergy; of which therefore, preteness as well as the diffolution of Monafteries, it feems the first Arguments and Impressions were deriv'd from the Cardinal: who having now in a Conference with certain Cardinals at Compeigne, refolv'd that the aforefaid Order for the Government of the Church was in these times requi-site, took on him the charge of our Ecclesiastical Affairs (though Guiccardine writes that he fent for a Bull to be the Legate in England, France, and Germany, and the Imperialists gave out that he attempted to make himself Pope of the English above-mentioned being certified to Rome, September 16. Woelfey prepar'd to return. Where-upon Francis not only richly presented him, but conducted him through the Town, and upon his way about a Mile, being accompany'd with the Titular King of Navarre, the Popes Legate, and his prime Nobility. The Cardinal now hasting he nieward, came to Calais, where having eftablish'd a Mart, he arriv'd at Court toward the end of September, where much Demonstration of inexorable. Affection was given him by our King. To correspond with this Ambassade, Francis sent Ame de Mantmurncy Grand Maistre, Jebin du Bellay Bishop of Bayenne, Jebin Brinon the Premier President de Rosen, and le Seigneur de Humieres, as his Ambassaders to ratifie the said League here. These, with divers other Cavaliers, (being in all about Army of twenty six thousand Foot, and two

the Marriage betweet Francis and Leonora Sister to fix hundred Horse) were conducted to Ludon, 1527 Charles, should be validated and confirm'd; upon Candition yet, that thereby no pejudice should follow to the Treaties concluded between them. That if any Peace were made with Chauci, by which Prancisco our King at Greenwich with a Feath, (the most confirmed with the property of the pr Peace were made with Chances, by which Prancifed Storza should enjoy Milan, it was declar'd by the fail Kings, that they shad not in-read to renounce certain the pension assigned to either of some, upon the fail Dutchy, by the League of Italy, when Prancise should refuse the with a Comedy, in which his Daughter the Princise was an Actor. On this day also story the Princise was an Actor. On this day also story the Princise was an Actor. On this day also story the Princise was an Actor. On this day also story the Princise was an Actor. On this day also story the Princise was an Actor. On this day also story the Princise was an Actor. On this day also story the Princise was an Actor. On this day also story the Princise was an Actor. On this day also story the Princise was an Actor. On this day also story the Princise was an Actor. On this day also story the Princise was an Actor. On this day also story, by the Princise was an Actor. On this day also story the Princise was an Actor. On this day also story the Princise was an Actor. On this day also story, the Princise was an Actor. On this day also story, the Princise was an Actor. On this day also story, the Princise was an Actor. On this day also story, the Princise was an Actor. On this day also story, the Princise was an Actor. On this day also story, the Princise was an Actor. On this day also story, the Princise was an Actor. On this day also story, the Princise was an Actor. On this day also story, the Princise was an Actor. On this day also story, the Princise was an Actor. On this day also story, the Princise was an Actor. On this day also story, the Princise was an Actor. On this day also story, the Princise was an Actor. On this day also story, the Princise was an Actor. On this day also story, the Princise was an Actor. On this day also story, the Princise was an Actor. On this day also story, the Princise was an Actor. On this day, and the Island, which was in Other was an Actor. On the Sunday and the Island, and the princise was an Actor. On this day, their Oath and Seal (which was in Gold) for the Ratification of the late Treaty.

> Charles, being not ignorant of thefe Treaties, Charles thinks fit to prevent the execution of them, by makes O a timely confent unto all that could in reason for be expected from him. Therefore at Palentin, Perce. September 15. he offer'd this Agreement unto the Son French, English, and other Ambassadors residing in sand, his Court; which also for the present they seem'd to accept. That the Article for the restitution of Burgandy, should be ras'd out of the Concord of Madrid, referving still to the Emperor his Right. That Francis should pay for the Ransom of his Sons, the two Millions of Crowns which were offer'd. And that out of them so much fhould be allow'd as would pay our King. Furthermore, that Francis should take upon him to latisfie Harry, as well as to keep Charles indem-nified from the Obligation, by which he ty'd himself in Landon by particular Treaty; which was, that he should pay unto Harry the ancient Pention which Francis paid him together with any other Sum that Francis should refute to pay only because the said Henry had de, and himself his Enemy. That the French should oblige themfelves to reftore Genous, and all the rest that they had taken in Lombardy, before the Holiages were rendred. That in the particular of the Duke of Milan, Charles should nominate and appoint certain Judges, who should determine the cause betwixt them. And that if he were not found culpable, then his Estate should be restor'd to him, and the Investiture given him; otherwise, that the Emperor should dispose thereof as Lord of the Feud. That, in all the reft, the Concord of Madrid should be observ'd, faving in some few points of fmall Importance.

wanted fufficient Authority from their King to fign them, which yet they promis'd to fend for, and procure. And fo the conclusion of Peace and French Church, by a Schilm from the See and procure. And fo the conclusion of Peace of Rome.) The Passages betwire the Cardinals at this time was deferred on their part. Charles not much troubled herewith, returns to his former Arts of dividing our King from Francis.

Therefore he fends privately to the Cardinal, And application returned from Frances) offering him, befides pies to his ordinary Ponfion, large Sums for this pur-the Cardinole. Norwithflanding which (faith Polydore) benald cause he had deny'd him the Archbishoprick of tel thing. Toledo, to which (if we may believe the fame Without Author) he vehemently afpir'd, he was found effect.

When these Articles were approv'd on both fides, the Ambaffadors of France fail, that they

This year our King fent out two fair Ships to May 20. discover new Regions, then daily found our by H. d.

Sept. 16.

Tillet.

Ha?

premacy.

Embaffy from

B. Hay

1527. thousand Horse, for the Affairs of Italy; and, about July, passed the Alps. Wherewith the Clementine League (whose Forces were eleven thou-fand Foot, and about one thousand fix hundred Horse) being much encourag'd, an Answer was fent to the Propositions made by the Emperor, to the Ambassadors of the League, at Palentia. For which purpose a Secretary of Francis came the Dec. 1:. twelfth of December 1527, to Bruges, (where Charles then was) publishing by the way that he brought a final Refolution of Peace; when yet indeed he brought Order only to defie Charles, as will appear afterwards. Yet, to shew some defire of Accommodation, the Ambaffadors of England and France defir'd two Points of the Treaty of Palentia should be alter'd in this manner. Proposis The first was, That Francisco Storza should be remade to the Emition the concerning the Complaints made against bim. The from the works That the Hostages should be remanded, bery and fore Francis should deliver up Genotia or Afti, or withdraw his Army out of Italy. And to induce Francis. Charles hereunto, it was offer'd by the French, to put security into the hands of our King, for the payment of three hundred thousand Ducats to Charles, in case of three hundred thousand. Dueats to Charles, in case of net rendring the said Towns, and withdrawing his zirmy. Charles reply d, That tho all this was Innevation upon the Treaty of Palentia; yet, to shew his desire of Peece, he would put seering for payment of much Money into the hunds of our King, in case the Irench would agree to perform that which was concluded on their part. But the French Ambassador Swing. He had no Order to make and and all the control of the said of the sai Charles Reply. faying, He had no Order to made any other end, than arbat was proposed, this great Affair remain'd fufrended. Our Ambaffador perceiving this, proceeds upon his Instructions, and makes four Demands.

1. Englijb make De-The first was, That without any delay, Charles should pay to the King his Muster all that was lent him beretofore. mands of

The next was, That be should pay him a Penalty of Five hundred thousand Ducats, because he did not marry the Princess Mary, as was agreed.

The third was, That he should fatisfie for the Indennity he undertook to discharge, upon the Declara-tion that our King made of War against Francis, (whereof mention is made formerly) which from the time it was due, was four Years and four Months.

Fourthly, That he should deliver the Pope; and make him satisfaction for the Loss and Damage he had listain'd.

His Anfiver.

4.

Lim.

η.

To which Charles answer'd: That he marvell'd To Which Coartes inhiver (1. That we marriest a roby the King [bendle prefs him so much, free he never den,'d the Doht; and that, if they requir'd from him the Aboney, they should give him the Security he enter'd into for the psyment thereof. But our Ambassach alysing, That they were kept among the Archives and Records of England; and that, for the rest, they were sufficiently authorized to give him an Acquitance: Charles knew not well how to argue the matter further. As for the Penalty of Marriage and Indemnity, he faid be would fend an express Messenger into England, to acquaint our King with the Rea-jons, why he did not held hinself bound to give any fuch fatisfaction. And for the delivering of the Pope, he faid. Order was, and should be given. And indeed, I find that about this very time, the Pope recover'd his liberty. Which because it was occasion'd by the proceeding of the French in Italy, let us look back a while on those Af-

The Army of the League formerly mention'd, being commanded by Odet de Foix Seigneur de Lautreeb, (an able General) great hope was cen-ceiv'd; both as he was fupported by our King, Charge, (whereof our King's part, according to the French Hiftory, was 60000 Angelots the Month) and as the Imperial Army, which fack'd Rome, was much confum'd with the Plague. By Sea B.U. also, Andrea Doria of Genoiia, who had the Command of the French King's Gallics, a brave Commander, was appointed with a strong Flect to sccond him; who, accordingly, so sour'd all the Coast of Genoïa, that no Shipping on those Quarters durst appear. This caused great scarcity of Victuals there; which being advertis'd to Doria, and afterwards to Lautrech, he fends Cafar Fregolo with 2000 Men thither; who, together with Doria, fo prest that City on both sides, that, at last, it yielded; whereupon Theodoro de Trivulci was it yielded; whereupon Inevano at Institute made Governor of it, on the behalf of the French King. After this, Lautrech took (in the Succeffer name of Sforza, and for his use) Alexandria, the of the Country of Landine, the Cities of Vigueva, Bia Italy. gras, and Novarra, and besieged Pavia, to the great displeasure of Antonio de Leyva (then Governor of Milan) who wanting Soldiers for him-felf, would yet spare some for defence of that Town. This did not hinder Lautrech yet to make a Breach and enter it, at the fecond Affault; where, in revenge of the King his Master's Misfortunes, he permitted his Army to exercise all manner of licentious Cruelty: And now Milan it felf which remain'd only to make an entire Conquest of those Parts) began to shake; neither could it have resisted long, but that a Mystery of State preferv'd it. For, as Lautrech's chief Design was on Naples, to which he knew yet Sforza and the Venetians would not eafily concur) so he thought fit to leave this strong place entire, as well to keep them in exercise, as to draw from them a greater dependance on the King his Master. For he understood well, that when he had put a Garrison in it in the Name of Sforza, that he and the Venetians would sooner have excluded him from his further paffage to Naples, than given him any affiftance; which would have frustrated both his chief Defigns, fince Francis pretended a like Title to Milan and Naples. Befides, the more moderate fort approv'd this course; for when the event of War had been improsperous or doubtful, it left a way open for Peace; while each Party having fomewhat to require, better Overtures might be given for a general Accommodation. Lastly, these Intentions of Lautrech were much facilitated by the Intreaty of the Pope; who folicited him to expel the Remnant of the Imperial Army from the Patrimony of the Church. Lautreeb hereupon marches forwards; Octob. 18. whereof Antonio de Leyva being inform'd, fallies forth of Milan, and with his small Forces takes Biagras, and holds it, until Lautrech fending Octob.18. Pietro de Novarra back with 6000 Men, wan it Bell. again, and fetled Sforza in the possession thereof. Lautrech continuing thus his March, finds the Duke of Ferrara, and Marquis of Mantua, ready to join him. The manner of weaker and inferior fort of Princes being ever to comply with the more puissant and victorious Army. The Since-rity yet of the Duke of Ferrara feem'd questionable; both as he had just cause to be offended with the Pope, and as he had, a good while fince, rang'd himfelf with the Imperialits; nevertheless, upon the Treaty of a Match betwixt his eldeft Son, and Rince Daughter of Louis XII. all was compos'd, and he receiv'd into the Confederacy. But among all, none was fo much perplex'd as the Pope; who being not yet de-liver'd from his Guards, knew not whether were better for him, to trust to the fair Words of Charles (whose Agents now treated with him) or to the affiftance of the League. Neither could and Francis, and the Fenetians, at a common he (when this latter part was refolv'd) determine concerning the Army of Lautrech at a diffance, had been to leave himfelf in restraint still; so, to invite him to his Territories, had been to expose his Subjects to the Rapines of both Armies. Therefore he varied strangely in his private Advices, Answers, and Negotiations; infomuch that Lautrech, at laft, was neither fcandaliz'd with his Denials, nor confirm'd with his Promifes. Howfoever, Laurech thought fit to purfue his point; where-The Pope of Christ being advertis'd, refolv'd, by a timely fetat li-berty by fon, to prevent compulsion. Therefore he fends Charlesthe a particular Dispatch to Don Hugo de Moncada, to 1527. concerning the Seat of War. For as, to keep

Lifth s Order O3tob 31.

dirions.

Dec 14

1528.

Jan. 10. Ha/I

Prayers

Order'd

berry by Charle

while he

Prifoner.

fet him free upon these Conditions: That the Pepe fluil not oppose Charles in the Assairs of Milan and Naples. That he should grant him a Croifade in Spain, and a Tenth of all Ecclessissimal Livings in all his Kingdoms. That Othia and Civita Gues 1.28. On Con-Vecchia should remain in the bands of Charles, for receins penuareman in too somes of Charles, joi fecurity beyes? That he speculad confign to him la Civi-ta Castellana, and the Castle of Furli, giving He-frages till it were done. That he should pay prefently to the Almains 77000 Ducats, and to the Spaniard 35000; and that fifteen Days after his departure out of Rome, he should pay as much again to the Almains, and within three Months after give the rest, being in all about 300000 Ducats; and to deliver Heftages for Octob 31. performance bereof. Upon which Conditions he was to be fet at liberty, December 10. But the Makes his Pope prevented this, by escaping in the Habit of a Merchant to Monte Fiascone, and thence to Orvieto, the Night before they promis'd to deliver him. His Hoftages yet, the Cardinals of Coffis and Orfino, remain'd till the Money was paid; for obtaining of which, he was forc'd to have re-Guice.1.18. course to undecent ways, making (as Guiccardine hath it) divers Cardinals for Money, which, o-therwise, deserv'd not that honour. He also gave the Spaniards licence for the alienating of Ecclefiaffical Goods and Poffessions, (and particularly in the Kingdom of Noples, to the value of 600000 Crowns, as our Records say;) giving therein a beginning (as some observe) to that Liberty which was afterwards taken in divers places. But Necessity is a violent Counsellor. Howsoever, the Pope was glad now, not only to find his Perfon free from Guards, but fafe from Attempts. The Cardinal Colonna (as a latter Author affirms) having labour'd much with Hernando de Alanzon privately to make him away. Thus did the Pope enter, by Night, and without other Taveagno a company but that of Louis de Gonzaga, (the Com-plice of his escape) to a Town, unable any way to relieve or protect him. From whence yet though despoiled of all his Money, he found means, within a few Months, to return to his former Greatness and Authority. Being now at Dec. 18. liberty, he fends word thereof to Cardinal Woolfey, acknowledging him a great Instrument thereof; and, withal, certifies our King of his Estate, desiring him to continue his protection of the See of Rome. Our Cardinal also (who the last Year had caus'd the Litany to be thus fung, Sancta Maria cra pro Clemente Papa, Sancte Petre, &c. as Charles, who kept him in Prison, had caus'd to be done in Spain, though ironically, as most Men conceiv'd it) now came, in great Triumph,

Pope's lito St. Paul's in London, and caus'd Te Deum to be fung, and Bonfires to be publickly made. French Ambaffador in Spain this while underftand-ing well how matters were likely to pass, hasten'd the delivery of the Cartelles, of which the chief Cause was ill Usage of the Pope. For the performing whereof therefore, with more Solemnity and Oftentation, all the Ambaffadors of England, France, Venice, Florence, and the rest, desir'd leave of the Emperor to depart, saying, their Commission was expir'd. To which Charles briefly answer'd, That he would detain them no longer, than till his own were recall'd from their Mafters Courts. Hereupon it was thought fit to proceed unto the Defie; which though the Sp.iniards relate with much particularity and circumflance, I shall yet declare as briefly as I can, according to their History.

Upon the 22d of January, Anno Domini 1528, Jan 22. Charles being at Burgos, Clarenceaux and Guyenne came to the Court, and demanded Audience, which accordingly was granted them; hereupon the faid Heralds, holding their Coats of Arms in their left hand, after three low Obeyfances, prefented themselves before Charles, who sate in an high Throne, being attended by his chief Nobles and Counfellors. Clarenceaux (whom Sir Francis Pointz, being now return'd to England, had left there for this purpose) begins first, saying:

Sire, According to the I aws and Edicts in- chief ' violably guarded by the Roman Emperors your convend Predecessors, as well as by all other Kings and Greens Princes, We two in the name of our Kings, define ' do present our selves before your Sacred Majefly, to declare some things on their part; befeeching your Majetty, that, having respect to the above-mention'd Laws and Edicks, you would, out of your Benignity and Clemency, ' vouchfafe to give us Security and good Ufage in your Dominions, while we attend your An-fwer, and that you would grant us a lafe Conduct, till we come to the Lands and Seigneuries of the Kings our Mafters. The Emperor promiting to accord this, Guyenne reads a Cartelly lent from the King his Mafter, the fubliance whereof was, 'That because Cheels would not 'condefeend to an honest and fitting Conclusion (Cartella Cartella Carte of Peace, nor pay unto the King of England that which he ow'd him, nor put the Pope at liberty, nor leave Italy in Quietness; the King, my Mafter, hath commanded me to tell you, to his great Grief and Displeasure, as also of his good Brother the King of England, that he shall from henceforth hold you his Enemy, notifying to you, that, from this Day forwards, he intends not to keep any Contract or Agreement that may be for your Profit and Advantage but that he will do you, and your Subjects, all the Harm he can, by War or otherwise, until, upon honest and fitting Conditions, you restore his Sons, put the Pope in liberty, pay the King of England that you owe him, and leave in Peace ' and Repose all his Allies and Confederates. Nevertheless, he offers Forty Days respite for the withdrawing your Subjects out of their Domi-' nions, requiring the like for his.

> Dated November 11. 1527. and figued, Guienne, King of Arms.

Charles hereunto reply'd prefently, 'That he The Enchad understood all he had faid on the part of pero's the King his Mafter, and that he did marvel Answers ' his Prisoner of War, and having his Faith plighted to him, he was disabled to proceed in this manner. Besides, it seem'd strange to him, that he should defie him now; since he had made War with him a long time, and yet never defy'd him. Yet, that he trusted in God, he should be able to defend himfelf. As for that ye fay of the Pope, none is more forry than my felf for what is pass'd, as being done without my Knowledge or Confent; but, for that, I must advertife you, that I received affur'd News yesterday, that the Pope is at liberty. As for the Sons of the King your Males, but well as the sons of the King your Mafter, he knows well I hold them as Hoitages, and his Ambaffadors know as well, that it is not my Fault, if they be not deliver'd. for that you fay on the part of the King of Eng-' land, my good Uncle and Brother, I believe that he is not well informed of all the paffages in these Affairs; otherwise, that he would not have fent me this Message. But I shall advertise him of the whole Truth, and do believe, that, when he knows it, he will be the fame to me that formerly he was. I never deny'd the Money he lent me; and am ready to pay it, as by right 'I am bound. Notwithstanding which, if he will needs make War against me, I can do no less than defend my self, and pray to God, he ' give me not more occasion to make war against ' him, than I have given him against me. As for the rest, I desire to have your Cartel under your ' hand, that I may answer more particularly. Hereupon Guyenne took his Coat of Arms and put it on.

1528.

1528.

Sandov Claren ceause's

Then Clarenceaux, not by writing, but by word of mouth, fpake to this effect. 'Sire, The King 'my Supreme Lord and Mafter, confidering the Speech to necessity of Peace in the Christian World, as ' well for resisting the Turk, (who having taken the Isle of Rhodes, and Fortress of Belgrade, in-' tends yet further Conquefts) as for repreffing the Herefies and Sects that are newly rifen; and finding that your Commanders and Army have lately fack'd the City of Rome, and taken our holy Father Prifoner, together with divers Cardinals, who have been allo put to Ranfom, and that the Churches have been facrilegiously profan'd, and all manner of Religious Orders put to the fword; infomuch that by these Cruelties and Mifchiefs, the Air and Earth have been infected, and the Anger of God drawn ' down upon us, if we procure no reparation for them: And, because the Root and Beginning of these Wars proceeds from the Contention and Debates between You and the most Chrifiian King: the King my Mafter, for giving an end to these Differences, hath, by his Ambassa-'dors, propos'd to you, feveral times, fuch honest Conditions, that you ought not to refuse, 'if you desir'd Peace; and the rather, because your unreasonable Demands would be an ill 'Precedent for other Kings and Princes, that may be subject to the like Fortune: And whereas he alfo, as a Prince, being bound many ways to the protection of the Holy See, hath defir'd you to give the Pope intire liberty; and hath, oftentimes, requir'd the Money he lent you in the time of your Necessity, which yet you have not paid him:

'Yor these Causes, the king my Master hath thought fit to take a final Resolution, to desire 'you, without further delay, to condescend to Equity and Reason; and to tell you, that, fince you have refus'd it hitherto, he could do no less than conclude a League with the Most Christian King, and other Confederates, by force of Arms to conftrain you to that, which by right you ought to do. Wherefore, the faid 'King my Mafter, and the Most Christian King, require you this once for all, to accept the Conditions they have offer'd you for Peace; de-claring, in case of resusal, they must (though not without great Grief and Displeasure) hold you for their Enemy, denouncing War unto you thereupon, both by Sea and Land, and defying you with all their Forces. Yet, if you defire to recal your Subjects out of all their Dominions, as they on their part likewise re-quire, they offer you forty Days respite for this purpofe.

This being faid, he put on his Coat of Arms, and afterwards gave his Speech under his hand, figning it, Clarenceaux, King of Arms.

The Answer Charles made to this, little differing from what he made to Guyenne, I shall not particularly relate.

Then Charles, calling Guyenne afide, defir'd him, among other things, to tell the King his Mafter, That he thought he was not well advertis'd of foniething that he told in Granada to his Ambaifadors, which did concern him much: that he did hold him to be fo gentile a Prince, that, had he known it, he would have an-fwer'd him before now. Wherefore, that he fwer'd him before now. fhould do well, to take information thereof from his Ambaffadors, fince thereby he should underfland, that I Charles have better kept what I promis'd at Madrid, than he hath done; and I pray you fail not to tell this to the King; which Guyenne promis'd; and fo, doing his Obeyfance, departed. After which, the faid Kings of Arms were call'd upon by Juan Aleman, Principal Secretary to the Emperor, to receive the Answer he fent to the Cartels. That, made to the French King, having little in it more than what is formerly fet down, I shall mention no otherwise, save only that a Day was requir'd for Treaty of repealing the Merchants on either fide.

To Clarenceaux he answer'd, by the Pen of his Sandows Secretary: That the Progress of the Turk in The Em-Christendom, and the Captivity of the Pope, were peror's Senot occasion'd by him; and that the King of Answerte England ought not to complain, that he ever re- Clarenfus'd to condescend to honest and reasonable conux.

Terms of Agreement, fince for his fake only, he had released much of that, which Francis, of himfelf, had freely offer'd unto the Viceroy of Naples. And all this before ever Harry did intermeddle with the faid Peace. Alfo, that, for the same reason, he had accorded divers other Conditions, which no other Perfons could have perfuaded him unto. Whereas, on the other fide, Francis had never done any thing to comply with him. As to the fecond Point, which is concerning the liberty of the Pope, he was af-' fur'd already from Iraly, that he was free. So that no more needs to be faid thereof. And, for ' that which pass'd in Rome, as soon as ever he was advertis'd thereof, he writ his Justification unto our King; desiring (wi hal) his Counsel and Assistance in that which he thought might be most for the Service of God, and Good of Christendom, to which yet he never answer'd. Which argu'd, he did not so much desire the liberty of the Pope (which by his loving Advice he might have procur'd) as to pick a Quarrela-gainst him. And as for the Title which your King pretends of being Protester of the Pope, and Defender of the Faith, he would not yield to him the honour of that Duty, but that the would fay only, that if both had done what they ought, it would have been better for Christendom: Neither should those have been born out ' and favour'd, who have fo manifestly broken their Promife, which yet, according both to Divine and Human Right, ought to be conferv'd inviolable, both towards Friends and Enemies. As for the third Point, which speaks of the Debts 'demanded, it is answer'd, That the delay of Payment was caus'd by the Treaty betwixt your King's Ambaffadors and me, according to which, the faid Debt should be affigued on Fran-' cis to pay; and, fince that time, the Non-payment was occasion'd by want of futlicient Power in your King's Ambaffadors to discharge me thereof. And as for the Obligation of In-'demnity, there being in Arrear four Years and ' four Months at the rate of 133307 Crowns by the Year; and for the 500000 Crowns to be paid as a Penalty for not having match'd with the Princess Many, it is answerd, that the Ambaffadors.

things should appear, he thought himself exwhere, at the same instant that he paid the Money, he might receive the Securities he entred into for the faid Payments. As for the Indem-'nity, there had fo many things interven'd fince, that he thought he could produce five fufficient Reasons to exempt himself, when indifferent Commissioners shall hear the business on both fides. And as for the Penalty, which the faid Ambassadors demanded, there were three evident and peremptory Reasons to clear him from fatisfying that Demand. First, because by the lansifying that Demand. Pint, became by the Law Givil and Canon, all penal Stipulation, by which the free power of matrying in any fitting place is prohibited, is, iplo faith, void, and of no offect. Secondly, That, when the Obligation for the faid Penalty were valid, yet the faid King your Master cannot prevail him-felf of the Treaty of Windfor, (where the faid Penalty was agreed) unless he prove first, that he had intirely accomplish'd all that was to be done on his part; which he thought was more than could be made appear. Thirdly, That, before he marry'd, he requir'd the King your Master to send his Daughter to this Kingdom, for the better satisfaction of his Subjects, who desir'd much to see him have Children, who might fucceed him: Whereas your King thought fit rather to give Commission to his Ambaisadors to confent to any other Marriage, than to fend his Daughter hither. Besides which, it appear'd by certain Letters that were taken, the King your Master treated of a Marriage be-twixt his Daughter and the King of Scotland his Nephew; which Treaty was begun long before he marry'd with the Empress. So that. when the Stipulation were valid, the King your Mafter should pay the Penalty, as being reci-procally agreed: On which yet he would not infift, as being void in Law. Moreover, that, contrary to the faid Treaty of Windlen, he had fecretly kept in his Court John Joshim, and afterwards publickly received the Prefident of Rouen, as Ambassador, who treated on the part of Francis; and because the Ambassador he had in England, had writ the truth of what he saw and understood, he was ill us'd, and threaten'd in the said Kingdom, and the Dispatches he wrote, taken and open'd by the Ministers of your King, contrary to all Right both divine and human. And, which was worst of all, fince the Imprisonment of the said Francis, the King your Master, being requir'd to set down his Claims and Demands, whereby (according to the faid Treaty) each of them might have recover'd their Right, and a good and durable Peace been establish'd in Christendom, yet the King your Master would never accept thereof, as thinking to make his advantage another way; which hath been the Cause of all the Breaches that have follow'd fince. That yet he had forborn to take notice, or complain of these Offences, as being desirous to keep the Friendship of the King your Master, which he esteem'd so much, that he accorded for his sake almost all that his Ambassadors demanded at Palentia, concerning the Peace with Francis. As for the Defiance you have made on the part of the King your Master, there is sufficient Anfwer thereto given by word of mouth. It being poffible (as was then faid) that there might be more just occasion to make War against the King your Master, than he hath against me; especially, if it be true (which is said in England, France, and other parts) that your King indeed a Stranger passing the Watch about London, baffadors, having not with them the original obligations and Contracts, by which there of marry with another, (norwithflanding the Difpensations granted on that behalf.) fides all other Injuries done herein, it will be manifest, his Intention was to make the Lady (he pretended to give me in Marriage) a Baflard; which yet as he could not easily believe, in a Prince he efteem'd fo much, for if any fuch purpose were, he must lay the Fault there, of upon the finister and perverse Information of his Cardinal, whose unmeasurable Ambition and Covetousness was such, that because he refus'd to employ his Army in Italy, for the making him Pope by strong hand, (which also he had procur'd the King his Master to write for, and himself had intreated by some Letters written by his own hand;) and because also he would not fatisfy him in other his inordinate and unreasonable Defires, he had many times declar'd, that he would give that Diffurbance and Impediment to all his Businesses, that for this hundred Years the like had not been feen; fo that he would make him repent it, when the Kingdom of England should be hazarded thereby. And certainly, if the King your Master will believe the evil Counsel of the Cardinal, it will be the right way to bring that to pais which 'he faid, and consequently to be the ruine of your King and Mafter's Dominions. An which being consider'd, he protested he was not the Author of the Evils might follow hereupon. Finally, for the Bufiness of the Merchants, he refer d him to a further Treaty.

These Answers were read unto the faid Kings of Arms by Juan Aleman Scigneur de Bouch us, and then given unto them, to be carried to their feveral Kings and Masters, in Burgos, Jan. 27. 1528. Jan. 27. Wherewithal they had their safe Conducts to de-

Thus did Clarenceaux, instead of satisfaction for the Money, and Kindneffcs done to Charles, return with a Reply full of Offence and Evafion. unto his King and Master. Of which our King yet made no other account, than such as became one, who holding himself free from all Causes of Sufpicion and Calumny, despised whatsoever in cither kind was objected against him; since, having inviolably kept his Intention and Oath of falling on that Prince, which most interrupted the Publick Peace, he thought it now his part to join against Charles. For though in the beginning he interceded only for a Peace betwixt him and Francis, (refufing therefore to be the Chief and Protector of the Clementine League) yet finding now that the Generals and Army of Charles proceeded to fuch an enormous Outrage, as to take and hold the Pope Prisoner, he thought he could do no less than use all means that might conduce to his delivery, and the repressing of the exorbitant Ambition of Charles, who was thought not obscurely to aspire to an universal Monarchy. As for the little Cavils and Punctilios concerning the receiving of Giovanni Joachim, or the giving a civil ear to a proposition of Marriage in 1526 Scotland, and the like, as they were not, before 1525. fome Contraventions of the part of Charles, fo no effect did follow thereof in those times when Charles most suspected them. Though when our King was inform'd that Charles did, after his Treaty at Windsor, give and receive Overtures of Marriage in more than one place, it could not feem strange if he took the same liberty. the opening of the Letters, our Cardinal by particular Dispatches to Doctor Sampson, Resident in 152: Spain, had a good while fince fo clear'd his King from any finiter Intention therein, that it ought not to have been further mention. For though manner, had fome Letters taken from him, which afterwards were open'd by Sir Thomas More, and deliver'd to the Cardinal; yet the faid Letters, which (as it appear a afterwards) came from Monfieur de Praet, (who departed secretly out of England, without taking leave either of our King or his Council,) and were written Colobba and a contract of the secret with the contract of the secret with the se ten in Ciphers, and contain'd many dangerous falshoods, were, in due time, posted to the Emperor, (whereby also he might perceive what ill offices his faid Ambaffador did,) and the fault laid on de Praet, who chofe rather to use his own Authority than to demand a Pals, in a time when he knew they could not otherwise be convey'd; which likewife was the excuse for intercepting another Messenger, who carry'd Letters to the Lady Margaret in Flanders, of the same Tenor; which yet she receiv'd presently after. And for the excuses not to pay the Money requir'd of him, or the penalty above-mention'd, they were but Arts, by which others might learn to deceive him in the fame kind, and which therefore might instruct Francis to do the like.

Vol. II.

1528. Records.

April 9.

Offob.

Hall

Hall.

The Cirtieschery to Clarcu-

a ride

Our Cardinal being thus incens'd against Charles, thought fit, as well in delpite of him, as for the affertion of his Kings proceedings, publickly to give account, in the Star-chamber, of the whole State of this business; adding withal, that our King was refolv'd to make War against Charles. In the delivery whereof, though he did exaggerate the actions of Charles, even to the making him criminal of whatfoever either by the Law of God, or Man he could be guilty; yet our Merchants, who thereupon, should neither vent their chief Commodities in the Low-Countries, and Spain, nor again receive from thence tupplies of fome Commodities they flood in need of, would no way approve this War; as that, from which they faw neither profit or honour likely to enfue; especially, when they heard, the Pope was deliver'd from his Imprisonment. Nevertheless, the Cardinal, pursuing his Intentions, (as the Emperor had done first in Spain to the English and French,) feifeth on the Goods of the Subjects of Charles, and shortly after on the Person of his Ambassador Don Hugo de Mendoza, upon notice given, that our Ambassador was staid in Spain. The Consequence of this, was, that our Merchants presently found the like measure in the Low-Countries, to the great prejudice of that Intercourse and Commerce, which for many Ages had pass'd betwixt both Nations. Upon news yet, that our Ambaffadors were well us d in Spain, Hugo de Mendeza was not only fet at liberty, but perfuaded by some, that the Defrance which Clarenceaux had made unto Charles, was by him haftened, at the motion only of the French Ambaffador. For which prefumptuous act, he thould therefore fuffer Death, affoon as he return'd to Calais. Hugo de Mendoza, glad hereof, fends a dispatch by Post into Spain, acquainting Charles with all these Particularities. But as the Garrier path by Bayenne, the Governor thereof open d and copy'd thefe Letters, which afterwards he flew'd Charenceaux, as he return'd home-wards. Charenceaux, at first, feem'd much astonish'd, but, at last, considering he had good warrant from the Cardinal, for all his Proceedings, he recoilects himself, and continues his Journey. He did not think fit yet to come to Calais, but, taking Ship at Boulogne, and landing at Rye, he fecretly posted to Hampton Court, where the King was; using such means there, that he obtain'd speedy access to him, shewing, at an undue time of Night, and in a suspected | ceiv'd there; infomuch, that notwithstanding 1528, all these Rough Passages,) he had been rewarded with a Chain of 700 Ducats. Lastly, he fhew'd the Copy of those Letters the Governor of Bayonne had intercepted; which fo flartled the The K's King, that he processed against the Cardinal, as first mulone, that not only usured too much upon the the Cas-Regal Authority, but represented things much disalotherwise than they were, unto him. The King hereupon fent for the Cardinal, and lays these Infoloncies and Presumptions to his charge in fuch a manner, that, howfoever the Cardinal excus'd himfelf, the King was observed to mi-Hall. ftrust him ever afterwards. The matter hereupon was brought to the body of the Council; where, notwithstanding the Cardinal alledged that nothing was done, but what was conformable to the Kings Intentions, as he conceiv'd them; yet, because in a matter of this high Confequence, he had proceeded too fingly, without advising with the King and Council, he was reprov'd. In sequence whereof also (notwith-standing this design'd War) some Overtures were made for keeping the Commerce betwixt us, and the Low-Country-men still open, if it could be fairly done. Therefore the Dutch-men were Licens'd to depart home, the Spaniards yet being not permitted to go, till it 'appear'd, how our Merchants were us'd there.

The Lady Margaret, Regent of the Levi-Countries, being inform'd hereof, doth in exchange of this Courtefie, difmifs our English likewile, yet retaineth their Goods, until she might hear how the Spaniards were us'd in England, but together affures them, that when she is satisfied thereof, all things should be safely restor'd. And now our Merchants (who us'd not the Trade to the many Northern and remote Countries they now frequent) foreseeing the consequence of these Wars, refus'd to buy the Cloths that were brought to Blackwell-Hall in London; whereupon the Clothicrs, Spinners and Carders in many Shires of England began to mutiny. For appeafing whereof, the Cardinal commands our Merchants to take off these Cloths, at a reasonable price, from the poor Mens hands, threatning, otherwise, that the King himself should buy them, and sell them to Strangers. But the sulen Merchants, little mov'd herewith, faid, they had no reason to buy Commodities they knew not how to utter. Therefore, whatsoever was proposed for Staples at Calais, or Abbeville, our Merchants did not, or at least would not understand it. But this discontenument did equally extend to the Inhabitants of the Low-Countries, and especially to Antwerp, where the chief Mart was. The Lady Margaret confidering this also, and fearing left any Insurrection might follow, sends over, by the advice of the Emperors Council, the Prowoff of Caffeller, and one other, to join with Dom Hugo de Mendoza, for the obtaining, if nothing elle, yet of a Truce and abtlinence from War. These Ambassadors having obtain'd Audiunto him. Sire, The Emperor's Majesty doth acknowledge him- Spanis Sire, The Emperors Mingley dath acknowledge time spanish felf for much bound to your Grace for the many fixwers Anholfstreeceiv'd from you, ever face his Minority, that he don's present to the time fixed by your Herald, as a peremptory demunication of Winy, till he had the King-rald, as a peremptory demunication of Winy, till he had been further of your pleasure. Therefore, his Council hath appointed these two Noble Persons and my felf, to know your determinate Inspers, and final Resolution herein. The King, pauling a while, as one that is his heart loved Charles, and yet was bound that in his heart lov'd Charles, and yet was bound, among other things, three Letters from the Carbinal, Authorizing this Defiance to Charles. He of War I am nothing popul, And of War I am lefs Ilis Anaffar'd him also of the good usage he had re-fearful, I thank God, as having both Men and Mo-sweet ence of the King, March 29. 1528. Mendoza faid March 29.

Hall

bailadors reply.

1528. nes in readiness, which I know other Princes lack, for all their high words; and therefore to War I could Joon agree. Tet, before I make you a determinate Answer berein, I shall declare some part of my Mind to you, and tell you accordingly, that, although your Alaster be a great Emperor, and mighty Princes I cannot, nor may not, suffer him to bear down and destroy the nor may not, jutjer him to bear down and defirey the Realm of France, which is our true inheritance, and for which our Brather and Ally, the French King, 115 st spearly a great Penfon and Tribute; wherefore ver, of fulfice and Equity, mult maintain that Land, out of which we have so for fair a Rent, and such a Profession, the Provost of Casselles replying hereunto, told the King; That the antient Love and Friendship which bath been betweet your Realm and the Huse of Burgungty. Flanders and the Love Countries. of Burgundy, Flanders, and the Low-Countries, as now so confirm'd and rooted in their Hearts, that I assure your Grace, that, next their Sovereign Lord, they would soonest live and die with you. In which regard be bop'd, that no new Alliance could corrupt and change this so long setled and inveterate Amity. Which wange into yo tang sented and invoterate Amity. Which yet we say not out of Fear, as being well surnish of War, but out of that true Affection, which we have ever born you. Therefore, though we offer you choice of Wir, or Peace, yet the Emperor intends no more basis than the laws with the wife. herein, than to leave you the arbitrement of both. And berein, tom to leave you not are treemen of out. Exam thus much I will confejf out of my Infractions, that if you chuse War, we have yet Cammiffen in fitting Terms to fue for Peace, we have likewife Commiffen to think you for it, and to effer both us and ours at your Command. Hugo de Mendoza, to fecond this, faid, that, of very right, the Emp. ror and his Dominions ought to have your love and favour before the French King and his Na-tion. Since the French had never apply a themselves to yan, but in the time of their needstry, whoever the leve on our part hath been ever inviolable. This was an Age, in which much Honour, and fome Good-nature was to be found. Therefore our King, returning to his former affection to Charles (and the rather, for that he found so much was deferr'd to his Mediation, in the affairs of Francis, as is above related) and, besides, having an eye on the businesses of Scotland (as will appear hereafter) and, howfoever, being defirous to conferve his Stile and Dignity of Arbiter, told them, that, as he well perceiv'd the intent of their coming, so he would be well advis'd, how to make them a fitting Answer; faying, that, in the mean while, he was content there should be a A Truce Truce for a time; wherewith the Flemish Ambassadors return'd home, well fatisfy'd that they had obtain'd this respite. The King hereupon advifeth with his Counfellors; among whom, though those who adhered to Woolfer, did perfuade a War, yet the greater part (who did secretly disaffect the Cardinal) told the King, That the Refultance of War in the Low-Countries could he nothing but a grivance to his Subjects, a decay of Trade, a diminution of his Customs, and addition to the greating of Francis, who would have the advan-tage of ell that mea undertaken in this kind. Which being dul; consider'd, it was thought fit to make an abst.nence from War for eight Months, and until it appear'd (upon consultation betwiest the Emperors Amb. fladers and bis) bow a General Peace might be mede. Hereupon Letters were fent, not only to Spain and Flanders, but to France, manifesting the Keasons, why the King had, for a while, sufpended this War. In which Estate also the bufiness continued, till answer was brought from foreign Parts.

The War filipen-ded.

The Fr. Ambaffa-

dors

Speech

made,

being obtain'd, he faith, That, though he doubted not but his Highness did well remember the late League,

The Bishop of Bayenne, Resident here on the part of the French King, was no sooner advertis'd hereof but he demanded Audience; which

King, which also was ratified and confirm'd by the three Estates of the Realm of France, by vertue mberethree Effects of the Realm of France, by within morro-of you have an Annual Design and Tribute to a great value paid to you, in confideration whereof, you have promised to defend the faid Realm against all Perfort; Jet, because it is well known to many, that the im-perors Ambassical to the laboratory and the contrary, defperor simbolledars have thours a the contrary, ast-poling your Highness (all they could be infringe the faid League, I thought it my part to put your High-ettal, nels in mind thereof, alluring your Highness, for the relef, that, whensever you should begin to make a ther-upon the Emperor and his Subjects, it would be a perpetual Obligation, not only on him, but on the whole French Nation. The King reply'd hereunto, that, The Kings though it were more e fie to enter into Wers, them to Answer end them with Honour and Profit, yet that be would preferve inviolable the League and Amity betwint his Brother of France, and himfelf. So that the King, your Masser, needs not doubt, but that I will defend his Country to the uttermost of my Power; though, I must tell you, that, when I could procure him an Honourable and Advantagious Peace, I should think I had described as well of him this way, as any other. Wherewith the Ambassador departed well contented, yet so, as he was in some more uncertainty concerning the intended War. There-fore he follicites the Cardinal, as his Masters best friend, to hasten the Forces, which our King had now in readiness for a War with the Low-Countries: But, as the favour of the Cardi- The Carnal began now fomewhat to decline, fo found dinal's inhe not that expedition which he was wont to terest dereceive in his Addresses. Howsoever, the War betwixt the French and Flemings continu'd. In which this memorable accident is recorded. That Hall a French Ship lying at Margate, being fet on by a Fleming, and finding her felf too weak, the wind being fair for the River of Thames, packs on all her Sails, and makes for London. The Fleming, as eagerly pursuing her, overtakes and boards her near the Tower-Wharf; which Sir Edmund Walfingbam, Lieutenant of the Tower, Earning walling law, Lieuterian of the Tower, perceiving, calls his Men together, and feiz'd on them; where, though the Flening boldly challeng'd his Prize, yet the Kings Council, confidering, that (in this place) both of them were under the Kings Procedion, it was thought for the difficility them freely considering day. fit to dismiss them freely on either side. It appears before how Gurenne, King of Arms, charg'd himself with a Message from Charles the Emperor unto the King his Master, containing an Affront and kind of Challenge, which the faid Charles had formerly declar'd to the Archbishop of Bourdeaux. Guyenne having now perform'd his part, Francis could no longer forbear to take notice of it. Yet, because it seems he did not fufficiently apprehend the relation which the faid Archbishop of Bourdeaux made thereof. he requires of him more ample and clear information. The Atchbishop hereupon writes to Sandov, Charles, and craves, that, under his hand, he would fet down what he told him by word of Mouth; for the rest, making some excuse, that he did not remember it better. Charles anfwers him, and repeats the words; fhortly after which, Francis dispatches Guyenne with a Cartel; in the delivery whereof I shall set down the forms were us'd, the example being fo rare.

Guyenne having obtain'd a fafe conduct from Charles, who also commanded one Montalvo, a Gentleman, for his more fecurity, by the way, to accompany him, comes to Monzon in Arragon, where Charles then was, 7th of June 1528. Ha-June ving gotten Audience the next day, Charles fit-June 8. ting in his Throne, and being well attended by his prime Nobility and Prelates, expects him. Guyenne coming hereupon to the lower end of a concluded betwiset bim and bis Brother the French great Hall, puts on his Coat of Arms, and after 1528. five low Obeyfances made, cafts himself on his Knees before Charles, and speaks thus.

K offr.
Sire, I befeet your Majefty, that, continuing the fends the good ninge I have received bitherto, you will give me Femorara lawe to perform that, that belong to my Office, and Challenge. that, this being done, I may have leave fafely to return. Charles answer'd, King of Arms, do thy Duty, and my Will is, that thou be always well Treated. Then Guyenne, rifing up, faid;

A HEAR CHYCHE, THING UP, HAUS, Sire, The King my Mafler, being advertis'd of the words you commanded me to tell bim, and of that which, hefere and after, you have spoken against bis Honeur, despress formed to yulfie it, before all the World, (as in truth be may,) that he hash commanded me, for in truth be may, I that he hash commanded me, for answer, to present you this Writing, subscribed with his own Hand, which when your Majesty shall please to peruse, your will find, how intirely he satisfies all. Moreover, your Majesty will be pleased to give me leave to return to the King my Masser, for I have no further Commission. This being said, he seem'd to offer a Paper unto Charles. Before yet Charles would take it he said King of Arms has the would take it, he faid, King of Arms, baft thou Commission from thy King to read this Writing thou Tangeor's bringft's Gregoree antwored, that he band. Then Antwor. Charles faid, King of Arms, I have beard that which you have faid, and will look on the Writing which you have brought, and will do in fuch fort, that my Honew flull be preferved. And, for the King your Mifter, he will have enough to do to keep his, it he ing a thing in a manner impossible; as for that which concerns my fustice, my Chancellor here shall deliver Then the Chancellor faid, His Majesty, bolding bimself to the Protestations made heretfore on his part, protesteth here again, that, for any thing that either now, or hereafter, he shall say, or do, he doth not intend to prejudice or derogate from the Rights that belong unto him by the Capitulation of Madrid; and that, notwithstanding any breach on this particular oc-cosson, it shall remain in full force and effect. And that this Protestation shall be understood, as distributed and reparted in all the proceedings, that shall bereafpals in this matter.

When the Chancellor had spoken this, the Em-When the Chancellor had upoken this, the Lin-peror faid; King of Arms, although, for many Rea-fons, the King your Mafter be not capable of doing any Act in this kind, either gains me or any else, yet, for the good of Christendom, and avoiding of more essentially on Blood, and for giving an end to these Wars, and for no other reason, I do enable him for this purple; wherewith he took the Paper that Guy-man hald in his Hand. Then Greeners faid yo enne held in his Hand. Then Guyenne faid to him; Sire, If the Answer that your Majesty shall fend to the King my Master be the security of the Field, or Fighting-flace, and that you field to give it me, I have Commillon to bring it, and nothing elfe. Therefore your Majely will be pleast not to force me to any thing elfe, but the fail feerity of the Field, in which the King my Master will assuredly present him-Self, with those Arms with which he intends to defend bin left. And for me, your Majefty will be pleas d to let me depart. Charles answer'd, Your Majter ought not to prescribe me what I am to do; I will do what I have faid; for which cause, as well as that something may be in this Paper, to which I may reply by joine particular Millinger, I charge you to procure him a fafe Conduct, fince you would not come without mine; which Guyenne promisd; wherewith the Emperor calling fun Aleman, his Secretary, charg'd him to Record all that had been done there. After which Guyenne (who feem'd to have taken Arter which curems (who reem it to have taken list leave) faily Sirv, I have another Paper to pre-tent your Majefy by the hinds of Seigneur Aleman your Scretary, if your Majefy be pleas d to command him to vereive it; which Charles likewife permitted. Whereupon all the principal Perfons prefent, and liftly Guyanne alfo, Indfcrib'd their Names unto the Record. This being done, the Emperor com-mended his Secretary Aleman to read in an high scales the Cartel deliver'd by Gavenna 1528. The Cartel of Francis the French King, to ~ Charles the Emperor.

W E Francis by the grace of God King of France, The Chatter Lord of Genoua, &c. To you Charles, by lenger the same grace, chosen Emperor of the Romans, King the lame grace, coojen temperor of the Romaths, Ring of Spain. We let you know that being advertis d, how, in certain Answers given to our Ambussadors and Rings of Arms, (which for negotiating a Peace we fent unto you) you, destring without reason to except your self, have accust dus, saying, that you have our Eaith plighted to you, and that hereupon contravening our promile, we are depicted out of your binds and power. For defending of our Honour, which hereinis, much against truth, impeach'd, we have thought sit to fend you this Cartel; by which although we say, that no Man under restraint can plight his Faith, and that, though this excuse is very sufficient, yet, as we defire to give satisfaction to every one, and as well to our own bonour, which we have kept, and will keep (God willing) to the death; We let you know, that, if either you have already, or shall hereafter lay to our charge any thing which may touch our Faith, or Liberty, or that we have done any thing, which a Cavalier that loves his honour ought not do; We say unto you, that you have ly'd in your Throat; and that as many that you have tyd in your Irroat; and that as many times as you shall fay it, you Lye sheing resolved to desend our benour to the last period of our Life. And since, against Truth, you have laid this Impu-tation on us write not to us any more, but assure us the Field, and we will bring the Arms; Protesting that, if after this Declaration, you write to any part, or speak any words against our Henour, the shame of delaying the Combat shall be youns, since, being come to these terms, all cause of writing ceaseth.

Dated in our good Town and City of Paris, Mart. 28. Marti 28.

1527. before Easter.

Underneath which was plac'd the little Seal of Francis in Wax.

This being the fubftance of Francis his Cartel, Henry's was communicated beforehand to our King, who advice to advis'd him only (as I find in our Records) not Francis to give the Emperor that harsh word of the Record. Lye. In the Paper deliver'd to the Secretary Aleman, a Relation was made of fome paffages between Francis, and the Seigneur de Granvele Ambaffador of Charles, residing in the French Court, Sandov. in which Francis pretended to excuse his breach of promife, by the conftraint and necessity he was in, faying, among other things, that be yielded not bimfelf to the Emperor, and therefore that be could not accuse him of breach of Faith. It was also declar'd there, how Francis caus'd the Cartel above-mention'd to be * read publickly before * Mart. 28. the Emperor's Ambaffadour. Moreover, Fran-Francis cis labour'd to avoid the imputation laid on him endeaby Charles for defying him now, when yet he excuse his had made fix or seven years War without send-breach of ing any fuch Defiance. To which therefore he Faith. answer'd, That the Ambassadors of Charles bad defeed him fift, at Dijon, and therefore it would not feem frange if he defended himfelf. The rest was little more than some Protestations against the late Imprisonment of the Pope, the detaining of his two Sons for Hoftages, fonie Complement of Henry King of England, and fome Excuses for not having answer'd this butiness fooner; among which, the following, being fomewhat extravagant, feems worth the relating: For, whereas Charles objected against him, that he kept his promise in Madrid better to Francis, than Franeis had done to him, he faid he did not remember to have promis'd any thing there; for, concerning the Concord of Madrid, he faid, it was 1528. fet down in Writing; howfoever that he held (God willing) unto the Death, and thereupon do let me 1528.

himfelf fufficiently discharg'd from it, in regard know, that, if either I have already, or shall here he was not at liberty when he Sign'd it, nor afterwards fet free upon his word, (which, in that your Fairb or Liberty, or that you have done any thing which acade only, he thought himself bound to observe:) for the rest, professing he could call to mind nothing that might oblige him, but only that he faid he would in Person assist Charles against the Turk, which he was ready to do likewise with all his Forces; affuring farther, that Charles should not so soon have his foot in the Stirrup for this purpose, but he would be before him in the Sad-To all which the faid Ambaffador reply'd, he had no commission to hear, or treat of these Busi-nesses, and therefore desir'd leave to depart, and sight condusts, the Emperon his Musich having recall dism. Whereounto Francis answer'd, that the Emperor his The Spabaffador's reply to thefe ex-Whereunto transis sussect a, that the Emperor ins. Masser had forced him to these confees, and that he did esteem him so gentile a Prince, that, when he should understand this answer I make him, he would answer thereunto like a Gentleman, and not like a Lawyer: Because, if he did otherwise, he would send a Reply to his Chancellor, by an Advocate, a Person of the Chancellor, when the service and an houster Man than he. For our his Quality, and an honester Man than he. For your particular, I have thought fit to let you know, that I shall cause you to be accompany'd to the Frontiers

1 mais cause you to be accompany a to the Frontiers of my Dominions, to the intent that I may receive my ambossadors at the time that I dismis you. This was Signi d by Robertet, Secretary to Francis.

Hereupon Charles resolves, by Burgundy his King of Arms, to fend his Reply unto Francis,

June 28. bearing date June 28. 1528.

The Cartel and reply of Charles the Emperor, to Francis the French King.

Charles's Aniwerto the Romans, King of Germany and of Spain, Francis's &c. I do let know to you Francis, by the Grace of Challenge God King of France, that, upon the 8th of this Month of June, I received by Guyenne, your King of Arms, your Cartel, dated Matt. 28. which from a remoter place than Paris might have come bither in a flowerse time: and conformable to that which on my NHARLES by the divine Clemency Emperor of remeter place than Patts might have come hither in a florter time; and conformable to that which on my part was faid to your King of Arms, I answer to that which you say, That in certain answers given by me to the Ambassidaevs and Kings of Arms, whom for negotiating a Peace yea south of the me, in which you alledge, that, for excusing my self, without cause, I have accused you, I reply, that I have not seen any King of Arms, on your sure, but him that came to Rur-King of Arms on your part, but him that came to Burgos, to denounce War against me. And as for my Self, having err'd in nothing, there is no need to excuse jetj, owenig err a in notning, twee is so need to except my self. But for you, it is your own faults that accuse you. And whereas you mention the plighting of your Eaith to me, you say true, when you understand thereby the Capitulation of Madrid; where it appears, by certain Writings subsortion d with your own Hand, that you would return to be my true Prisoner, in case you did not accomplify all, which by the faid Capitula-tion was promis'd. But, that I should fay, as you mention in your Cartel, that you, having plighted your mention in your Cartes, toat you, moving piecese you Faith unto me, did contrary to your premife, go away, and escape my Hands, and Power, they are words which I never said, because I never pretended to bold your Faith, so, as not to go away, but to return in the form that was agreed. And if you made this good, you should neither be wenting to your Children, nor that which you owe unto your Honour. And to that that which you over this your temour. And to took you say, that, for defence of your Honour (which in this case should, much against truth, be impeach'd) you have thought sit to send your Cartel, by which you say, that although no Man under ward or restraint can plight his Faith, and that this excele is very sufficient. Natwithstanding, as you destre to give satisfdo, you say that I have Ly'd in my Toroat, and, as many times as I shall say it, that I Lye. And that you are resolv'd to defend your Honour to the last period of your Life.

To this I answer, that, considering the form of the Capitulation, your excuse for being under restraint can have no place; but, since you make so small account of your Honour, I do not wonder that you deny your felf to be obliged to accomplish your promise; for your words cannot vindicate your Honour. Therefore I have said, and will say (without Lying,) that you have done Laschement and Meschamment, in not keeping the Faith you gave me, according to the Capitula-tion of Madrid. And, in saying this, I do not charge you with things secret, or impossible to prove, since they you will toling steeres, or inspilies to prove, since they appear by Writings, sign'd by your Hand, which you can neither excuse, nor deny: And if you will affirm the contrary, (fince I have releas'd and enabled you only for this Combat) I say, that for the good of Christendom, and for avoiding the effusion of Bload, and for putting an end to this War, and to defend my just Demand, I shall, in my Person maintain against yours, that, that which I say, istrue. But I will not return to you the Language you give me, fince both your A-Etions (without that I or any elfe speak of them) make you a Lyar, and that it is more easy afar off to talk in this manner, than near at hand. And, as forthat which you fay, that, fince, against truth, I have laid this Imputation on you, that from henceforth I should write no more, but that I should assure you the Field, and that you will bring the Arms, I say, you must have patience a while, till I have laid your Assions open to you, and until I have writ you this Answer, by which I say, that I accept the appointing of the Field, and that I am content to assure it on my part, by all the reasonable ways that can be devis'd, and, by all the realgonave ways that can be devised; and, for this effect, and for the better expedition thereof, I do now name the place for the said Combat, to be upon the River, which passet per the them there is and Andaja, in that port, and after that manner, which by agreement on both sides, shall be thought most secure and convenient. And, it seems that in reason you ought not to refuse this, or say it is not secure enough, since there you were set free, upon giving your Sons for Ho-stages, with your Eaith and Promise to return. And considering as well that in the same River you did en-trust your Person, and your Children; you may be confident now to bazard your own only, since I will as well bazard mine. And means shall be found out, that, notwithshauding the Situation of the place, nei-ther of us shall have advantage of the other. And for this purpole, as well as for the election of Arms, (which I presend of right to belong to me and not to you) and because in the conclusion of this business no trifting or delay may be admitted, we may fend Gen-tlemen on both parts to view the said place; with suf-I temen on both parts to view the faid place; with suf-ficient power to treat and agree, as well concerning the security of the Field, as the choice of Arms, the day of Combat, and the rest that belongs bereunto. And if, within the space of XL days after the delivery berees, you neither answer nor advertise me of your in-tention berein, it will sufficiently appear, that the de-lay is on your part, which therefore shall be imputed, and laid to your charge, together wish the default of not having accomplish at that which you promised in Madrid. And whereas you protess, that if, after this Declaration, I say or write words contrary to your Ho-Declaration, I say or write words contrary to your Ho-nour, that the shame of delay of Combat shall be mine, since when matters are brought to these terms, all cause can plight his Faith, and that this excuse is very suffor any properties of the state of the s 1528. me, fince all the World may witness the desire I have to advertise him, and he would presently send a 1528. ~ fee an end thereof.

At Monzon in Arragen, June 28. 1528.

This also was certified under the Hand and Seal of Burgundy, King of Arms, who, together carry'd, in a Paper, the fourth Article of the Concord of Madrid. And, moreover, in a publick writing, declar'd that his Imperial Majetly commanded him, with all speed, to enquire an Answer thereof. And that he should offer his fervice for bringing of it, if Francis so thought fit. Yet if the said King would not send it but by another, then that he flould affure Francis, on the part of his Imperial Majesty, that the faid Meffenger might come fecurely; and that a fafe Conduct should be made him if he desir'd it; although his Imperial Majefly did not think it necessary for a King of Arms, as being a priviledg'd Person. And, besides this, that he the faid Eurgundy should give to Robertet, Secretary to the King of France, or any other, whom the faid King should appoint, an Answer, in writing, to that which Guyenne gave in presence of his Imperial Majesty, and, by his consent, to the Secretary Aleman. The tenor of which Writhe Secretary Aleman. The tenor of which Writing being long, and containing little in it, but what is formerly fet down, I fliall pass over. And the rather, for that it took no more effect. Nevertheless, I must not omit to say that the excufe of Francis was not generally approv'd, nor his Cartel thought just. For if a Prifoner of and why. War may avoid his promife, because he is under constraint, it would follow, that few or none would be taken, but rather kill'd upon the place; which would make the War not only more bloody and barbarous, but even deftroy a principal part of that Jus Gentium, which in these cases hath been inviolably observed in all times. So that if Francis had excus'd his not returning by being a publick Person, and had faid that his Obligation by Oath, when he was Crown'd, unto his People and Kingdom was a greater tye than that of his particular Honour; and, together, had alledg d, that he could not obtain their confent, either to perform his Promife for restitution of Eurgundy, or otherwise to go single out of his Kingdom; it was thought, by some, he might have vindicated himfelf in great part, and, indeed, laid fome imputation on Charles, for de-manding things impossible to perform. But I come to that which enfu'd; according to an Act which Burgindy gave under his Hand and Seal, as Authentick, for the justifying of the Emperor his Mafters Reputation.

Inly 1. This Burgundy, coming to Funterable, fends a Baggady Trumpet 1. July 1528. to Monsieur de St. Bonet annes on Governor of Bayonne, for the fafe Conduct which the trans. Gujenne had promis'd. The Governor excus'd himfelf, as not having Commission; yet as Burguilds perfitted in his Demand, the faid Governour, about eight days afterwards, fent him word, that his fafe-conduct was ready, if he brought fecurity of the Field to Francis; requiring further to know if his Commission extended to any thing elfe. To which Burgundy aniwer'd, about feven days after, that the Emperor his Mafter had commanded him not to declare his Meffage to any, but Prancis: And that, therefore, he had dispatch'd a Courier to his Imperial Majesty to know what answer he should make : who hath commanded me, hereupon, to let you know, that I do bring the fecurity of the Field, and other things that concern the Combat, and Auswer to the Cartel of the King your Master. To which, the next day following, the Governour answer'd again, that, if he brought the Gentleman to conduct him to the King his Mafter. To which about nine days after, Burgandy anfwer'd, that he did bring the fecurity of the Field, and the rest did concern only the Combat, and the haftning thereof; which being fo, he faid he ought not to be deny'd, or prohibited to do his Office, fince it was a thing never known that any should speak to one, and yet not hear his Answer; as if it were enough, for defending of ones Honour, to fend a Cartel, without doing, or fuffering any thing elfe. For which reason, and because the Emperor is desirous to shew that he is in earnest, he did require him this time for all, that, without more delay, he might receive his fafe-conduct, as Guyenne had in the like cafe, and that, if he were delay'd, he protefted that he had done all that was convenient for the discharge of the Dignity of the Emperor his Master, which you know of what Importance it is; and so expected his speedy Answer. No answer being return'd hereunto in the space of nine days more, (notwithstanding that the Governour had promis'd to fend a Trumpet with an Answer) Burgundy thought fit to remember him of that promife, and therefore fends a Trumper again; to which (as the Spinish History hath it) St. Benet made no other Answer, but hid him as Bingundy would not depart, fo at laft the Governour of Biggind and Interest and August 17.

guff 17. 1528, which declard, that the King his Malter was offended with him, for having deferr'd the giving him fafe-conduct fo long, which therefore he promis'd to fend him when he defir'd it; which Burgundy requiring out of hand, the Governour fent him. Whereupon Burgundy (who put on his Coat of Arms assoon as he was in the French Territories) came to Bayonne, where he protested to the Governour, that the demanding safe-conduct should be no derogation to his priviledge belonging to him as King of Arms; and fo, continuing his Journey, he came to Estampes, 2 September, where Guyenne attended Sept. 20 him; flaying yet there feven days, before he was permitted to go to Paris, (the King paffing all that time in Hunting.) Being at length conducted to Paris, he would have worn his Coat of Arms, but was not fuffer'd, it being told him, it was Cofa de un San Nicholas de Aldea, which I interpret, a thing not to be flew'd but upon Holy-days, or in a Country-Church.

But Burgundy protefling against this usage, (as being contrary to the Priviledges of his place) those who conducted him went to the King, who, after fome space, return'd, bringing with them two Notaries, to record what pals'd, before whom they said, that, if he defir'd to enter into Paris in his Coat of Arms, he would be in great danger of the People; and therefore if any inconvenience follow'd, he must not lay it to their charge. Notwithstanding which, some Perfons being fent to fecure him, he put on his Coat of Arms, and, the next day, obtain'd Audience of the King; who in a great Sale (or Hall) fate on his Throne, being attended by many Princes, Prelates, and Gentlemen; our Ambaffadors also being present, to whom (as I find in our Records) he then shew'd the Order of the Garter upon his Leg, faying to them, that, feeing he went about an Act, wherein confifted the Hefeeing be went await an 2113, array to support the feet and feet and feet are feet and feet are feet as a feet are feet as a feet are feet as a feet as feet as a feet as feet without giving him time to speak, faid, King of Arms, hast thou performed thy Office as then ought of bitherto? Thou knowest what thou hast written in thy facurity of the Field, and nothing elfe, he should Letters; dost thou being me the security of the Field

Sandou

Francis's conduct general-ly con-

Tuly r.

tiers of Irance.

1528. according to that which in my Cartel I writ to the Emperor thy Master? He reply'd, Senior si, or Yes, will you be pleas'd that I perform my Ossice, and say what the Emperor commandeth me? The King anwerd hereunto, No, meles you give first a Putent figil d mith your hand, that may contain the security of the Field, and nothing essential. The Herald there beginning to speak, and saying, Sire, The Sacred Majesty of the Emperor— The King interrupt-Misely of the imperor—— In Ring intercupe-ed him, and faid, I tell thee, that thou must not speak to me of any thing, because I have nothing to do with thee, but with thy Misser; yet when thou shall have given his Patent, and that the Field may be well assured me, then will give the license to say what then will, and not otherwise. Then he said, Sire, It was commanded me that I (bould read it, and after wards give it you, if you be pleas'd to give me leave fo to do; or that having given it you first, I should after-wards do what I am commanded. Then the King rose suddenly from his Throne, speaking angrily; What? Does thy Master think to establish new Cestoms in my Land? I will none of these Hyp. cristics. He answer'd then, Sire, I am assured that the Emp. ver will do all that a brave and virtuous Prince ought to do. The King reply'd hereunto, That he thought to well of him, be did believe he would do fo. Wherewith Monsieur de Montmorency, who was the Grand Maiftre, began to fay fomewhat to the King, which the faid King of Arms understood not; but the King paffionately reply'd, No, no, I will not give him leave, unlife I have the Surety of the Field; without which (he said) he should return as became; and so hids the King of Arms speak no more unto him. Yet he reply'd, Sire, If you will not suffer me, I cannot do my Office, nor give you the Cartel of the Emperor, without your leave, which once again I ask; and if you will not give it me, because I may that you day it, reserving me yes your fafe Condust to return. Then Francis said, I will that it be given you; wherewithal the Herald departed. He then folicited Montmorency, the Grand Maistre, to obtain leave for him once more to deliver the Emperor's Cartel. Notwithstanding which, he receiv'd no other Answer, but that the King would grant him no Audience, fince his Commission was ex-pir'd: Therefore that he might depart when it pleas'd him. Then Burgandy protested that the Fault was not in him, and much less in the Em-peror his Master, and that the Emperor his Mafter would publish this in all places where he thought fit. Then the Secretary offer'd him a Relation of the buffnets, which yet he wou'd not receive, in regard fome Paffages were omitted, and particularly the harsh Words, which the King gave him. Wherewith Burgundy return'd, and, at his coming to Court, deliver'd this Relation to the Emperor under his Hand and Seal. Which also I have follow'd, not that I would shew any Partiality to either fide, but that it is the moft particular, that I could meet with, among the teveral Relations that are extant, and for the moft

> Charles now confidering what remain'd to be done for discharge of his Honour, brought the business to his Council of State and War; who all agreed, That the Refufal of Francis to hear the Reply to his Cartel had given end to this bufiness; and, for the rest, that it was sufficient to certifie certain principal Perfons, both at home, and abroad, of all these Passages.

part agreeing with them.

And this was the end of the Cartels and Points d homeur betwixt these two great Princes; not for want of Courage, (in which both undoubtedly abounded) but for not being able to agree fafficiently between themselves concerning the Laws of Duel; of which therefore Men spake, in that Age, diverfly, according to their feveral Affections; yet fo, as few difintereffed Perfots Charles denied, but that (notwithflanding the Punctua-Behavilities of Francis) Charles had behav'd himfelf like our more a gentile Cavalier. Whilst our king and the Franch were in that than Frangood Intelligence which is above-mention'd, it takes might feen probable that Scotland thould be qui. The After Their beft Support ever coming from that fairs of Country. Yet fuch was the Power of the Durgstlift at time, that time, that they feen'd to fure all laffes at that time, that they feem'd to fway all things. For as they held a ftrict guard about the King, they made use of his Authority for their own ends. And particularly the Earl of Auguis their chief. Nevertheless, as Queen Margaret had lately obtain'd at Rome a Divorce from the faid Earl, and thereupon marry'd Henry Sturrt, (shortly after created Lord Mession) she drew many of the prime Nobility against him. Who yet July 2 attempting the King's delivery by force, were defeated near Lithgou, and the Earl of Lenox slain. Howbeit the King by Night flipping away from Anguis, to the Castic of Steeling, resolves to summon a Parliament, and exauctorate the Douglaffes; fending a Letter also to our King, to this purpose, (as our Records tell us) That the Earl of Anguis, being made one of the chief about his Perfon, had wrought the exclusion of the rest, and got the whole guiding of his Person for two Years; in which time many evil Adventureshappen'd. Moreover, that he conspir'd his Slaughter. This being done, he appoints the Parliament to be held September 4. Where the Deuglasses Sept. 4. being now depriv'd of their Publick Offices and Places, not only refus'd to come, but endeavour'd by all means to diffolve this Meeting. Therefore, hearing the King was departed out of Edenburgh, they fent some Troops of Horse to seize on it; which likewise they had perform'd, but that Ro- July 25. bert Maxwel by the King's Command prevented them. Hereupon Anguis retir'd to his own Ca-ftle, being about thirteen Miles diffant. The King understanding hereof, comes to Edinburgh, Sept. 4. where, by vote of the Parliament, the Earl of Anguis, George his Brother, Archibald his Uncle, and Alexander Dromond their dear Friend, were condemn'd, and their Goods confiscate, and Proclamation fent forth, that whofoever receiv'd them in House, or otherwise reliev'd them, should be subject to the same Punishment. Shortly after which, William (another Brother of the Earl, and Abbot of Holyrood) languilh'd, and at last dy'd of Grief: Into whose place succeeded a Man, who, to avoid the Crime of being a *Simo*niae, us'd this notable Trick, as Buchanan hath it; hearing that the faid William was at the point of Death, he lays a great Sum of Money, as a Wager, with the King, that he should not have the Donation of the next Abby that fell. The King (though young) understood his meaning 3 and as he wanted Money at that time, was content to win the Wager, and lose the Abby. The Douglasses despairing now of Mercy, spoil and sorage the Country even to the Gates of Edinburgh; nor was all their Prey by Land; for a Ship, la-den with precious Merchandise, being driven by a Tempest on that Coast, was risted by them, and the chief Merchandise taken away; among which, some quantity of Cinnamon, which was left in the bottom of the Ship, being taken, the vulgar fort, not knowing the use thereof, burnt it for Fuel in their Houses, as Buchanan harh it. The more discontented fort of the Kingdom bearing that the Douglasses were thus in Arms, join with them. The King understanding this, and together finding that their Numbers and Power did daily increase, advis'd to raise Forces for taking a Castle of the Douglasses, (for which 1528. purpose he got Ordnance and Munition from this time, as that he shou'd be thought to change Dunbar) in which John Duke of Albany, late Viceroy, held Garrison. He could not yet take the Castle.

Our King hearing of these Stirs, sends some Octob. Ambassadors in October, 1528, to treat of an Accommodation. Neither was Francis averse, as defiring to dispose our King to a War against Charles. The Difficulties yet were fuch, that all that could be obtain'd, was a Truce for five Years more, upon condition, that the Douglaffes should deliver their Cattles up, the King giving them fome other Conditions; which yet being not in all points observed, they were forc'd to forsake their Country, and fly into England, where our King entertain'd them with a Pension, and, at all occasions, mediated their Restitution; which at last (but not till the Death of James V.) he effected, (as will appear:) Howbeit Alexander Dromond was receiv'd into favour; though, whether for his own Merit, or to divide him from the Douglasses, is uncertain; for James Coluit, one of their Friends, and the late Abbot of Holy-rood, (notwithstanding his bought Title) were banish'd from Court.

The Affairs of Ireland

8527.

The Bufineffes of Ireland paffed thus. The Earl of Kildare formerly mention'd, being reftor'd to his Place of Deputy, was yet still profecuted by the Earl of Offory, upon pretext of favouring the Earl of Defmond; who, upon the Treaty he made first with the French King, and afterwards with the Emperor, to attempt Ireland, was declar'd Traitor. This prevail'd so far, that Kildare was fent for to the Council Table, 1527, where the Cardinal, his old Enemy, declaim'd againft him. But he wittily and boldly defended himfelf, as E Camp. our History, and especially Campion, hath it at Hist. Irel. large. Howbeit he was committed, and more Accufations produced against him; and particularly, that the Invasion his Brethren had made upon the Earl of Offery, now the King's Deputy, proceeded from him; whereof also being convice, he was condemn'd, and repriev'd in the Tower. At which, the Cardinal offended, fends the Lievtenant a Warrant for his execution. But the Lievtenant, favouring Kildare, acquainted our King therewith; who thereupon not only checks the respited his Death, but some while after pardon'd and fent him home to his Country; checking the Cardinal in the mean time not a little, for for his Prefumphis Prefumption. tion.

Luther's Letter of 1525. Sleid.

I shall now return to speak of the Affairs of Religion in Germany, which Luther more than any of the other Reformers did govern; which Creto K. Hen. dit also that he might dilate and conserve, he had a good while fince written to our King a kind of Apology for the difrespectful Answer made to his Book; offering, for fatifaction, in some publick writing to acknowledge (together with his own Presumption) the King's singular worth. In this Letter, among other things, be fays he understood that the King was not the Author of the Book, which, under his Name, came forth against him; but certain Sophisters, who, to instance themselven into his Evanger, had our who, to instance themselven into his Evanger, had our who, to infinuate themselves into his Favour, had put forth the Work under his Name; and then calls the Cardinal, Angliæ Pestem. He added also, that he was informed, to his great Contentment, ipfum & fastidire genus illud perditorum hominum, & ad veri cognitionem animum adjicere: After which, he inserts a brief Remonstrance of his Dostrines, and begs a favourable Answer. Our King having receiv'd this Letter, answers it sharply, laying Inconforming nit own book, and the Carama, worm, he plants, among meaning in our belief, till Controversies in Replants, he should love the better beneforth; and then enough in either Belief, till Controversies in Replants abjects to him his late incessum Marrimonium with ligion were better disputed, whereof yet they spire.

a Num. This Answer also being sent the Pope, could find no end. For as long as in any Angle and printed, Luther, who took nothing so ill at of the World there was either a new Opinion to examine.

any of his Tenets and Opinions, lays the Fault on Christiem King of Demark, who had given 1515. him hope, that our King, being treated gently and refpectfully, would embrace the Rfsmad Doctrine; but now that he repented himself of this eafy Language, though it were not new to him to lofe his labour in this kind; for having written fubmiffively and humbly heretofore to the Cardinal Cajetan, George Duke of Saxony, and Erajmus, he had found no success thereof, but that they were so much the fiercer against him. ever, as his Doctrines had made no little progress in Germany, and that divers who did not manifeftly declare themselves his Followers, did yet concur fecretly in many of his Opinions, Charles, for repressing those Tumults, (which alteration of Religion doth commonly produce) thought fit to call an Affembly of the Princes of the Empire, to be held at Spire. For though the Decree made at Worms (where Luther was condemn'd) did yet fland in force, the Determinations did not yet appear so conclusive and satisfactory, that either fide feem'd quieted therewith.

The Princes meeting at Spire in June 1526, the Diet at Emperor's Letters (dated from Sevil, March 23) Spire, were read to them. Wherein he declared, That 1529 he would shortly go to Rome to be crown'd, and talk with the Pepe concerning a Council: In the mean time forbidding them to innovate ought in Religion, but conform themselves to the Decree of Worms. But the Reformed Cities answer'd, That the execution of the Decree of Worms would bazard a Sedition among the Decree of Wolfms would burned a Section among the People; and that the Pope now gethering Forces againft the Emperor, there was little bege of obtaining from him a General Council. Therefore, they defir'd the Emperor to permit a National Council of Germany, for the fettling of Religion; or, if not, at leaft to fulpend the Decree of Worms till a general Council be call'd. Things thus tending to an open Diffention, the Tark invading Huppery on the Diffention, the Turk invading Hungary on the one part, and the French and Italians confederating against Charles on the other, Ferdinand (the Emperor's Deputy in this Diet) thought fit to con-descend to a Decree to this effect: That there was great need of a Council, either general, or skidof the German Nation; and that it should begin within a Year, which the Emperor was to be intreated to grant. As concerning Religion, and the Decree of Worms, that, till one of those Councils be call'd, every Prince and State so behave themselves, as they may give a probable account of their Actions to God, and the Emperor. After this, a violent War betwixt the Emperor 1527. and French, the facking of Rome, and Caprivity of the Pope, (as is before related) difcomposing all things, the Lutherans (or as they ftil'd themfelves the Evangelicks) increased in Germany, with- The La out that Charles thought it convenient to endea-therans invour their suppression. Till at length, returning crease. to good Terms with the Pope, and an Overture being made for an Accord with the French, he returns to the care of Religion, and, by Letters dated at Valledolid, August 1. 1528. appoints a Aug. 1. Diet at Spire, to commence in February 1529, where though (he faid) he could not, for his great Occasions, be present, yet he had intreated his Brother Ferdinand, Frederick the Palitine, and fome others to appear for him. This Diet yet did not begin till March following; to which March 15, the discreet and peaceable Melansibon was, with 1529 much Honour, brought by the Elector of Saxony. The Eleflancy and Levity to the charge of Luther, and definding his own Book, and the Cardinal, whom, he thinker; among which note few were unrefolved should be considered by the charge of th

1528.

The King's Aufwer.

The Em. peror

grants li-berty of Con-

April 19.

1529. German

Princes proteft against the Em

1526.

I 5 2 3

not a just exercise for their Curiosity. At last the former Decree of Spire, 1526, was examined; in which, because it was then agreed, that, as concerning the Decree of Worms, and matter of Religion (in the mean time) till one of these Countels were held, every Prince and State should so behave themselves, as they may give a probable reason of their Actions to God and the Emperor; the Emperor now alledging it was mifunderstood by divers, and defiring that this might be interpreted, propos'd the fettling thereof in this manner.

That all, who have obey'd the Emperor's Edict at Worms hitherunto, should continue to obey it, until a Council were called, which was promised with all speed possible. That they who had so far entertain'd any new Dollrine, that they could not without danger leave it. should yet stay there, without multiplying Opinions, or priming new and offensive Books, (according to the Deprinting new and offenfive Books, (according to the were at Noremberg, 1524.) That the amient Tenent about the Euchariff and the Mass should be held. That they who would go to the Mass should not be hinder'd. That Preachers sollow that therepretation of the Series turns which the Church bath received and approved 3. turs which the Church hath received and approved a shiplaining from controverted Points, which should be determined by the Council. In the mean while, that difference of Opinion in matters of Religion should not be a breach of Peace, or occasion of moving on either side. That no Prince should receive the Subjects of the other into his protection. That they who did otherwise should be under the Bann, (or proferib d.) But the Anabaptists were more shrewdly dealt withal, it being agreed, that they, who with Pertinacy did maintain that Doctrine, should be put to death.

Many things yet were dislik'd herein by the Electors of Saxony and Brandenburg, the Dukes of Electors of Saxway and Brandenburg, the Durks of Lumnburg, the Landgrave of Hoffen, and divers others. Therefore they protefled against it; and first they said, That the former Diet of Spire was more suverable, as permitting every one the exercise of this Religion, till a Council in Germany, or, otherwise, a General Council were called; and that there perors Or-der. was no reason to wary from it, unless another more con-vention were accorded. That, in the Assembly of No-remberg, they had deliver'd many Grievances to the reinteetly, toey had deliver d many Grievanies to toe poe's Legat, for which yet no Remedy was given, nor indeed could be expected, until the faid Council were call'd. As for the Mafs, that it was fufficiently con-willed by the Minifers of their Churches, and the Eu-charift after the true manner restor'd. Wherefore, that they could by no means admir, that either they or their Subjects should be present at the Mass, since, when the use thereof might be received in their Churches, yet f two Divine Services, so discrepant, should be celeif two Divine Services, so discrepant, should be cele-brated in the same place, muchil Example and Scandal must follow. And fir the Point of the Eucharist, that though there were dissernce among the Reformed, yet that more angle to be condemn'd unbeard. As for the Article, which prescribed the Cospel to be interpreted according to the ordinary and received Destrine of the Church, that it was well stated, when the true Church were full difful, until which, they would labour to in-terpret one olive of Services by the other. That the terpret one place of Scripture by the other. That the terpret one place of Scripture by the other. That the left Decree as Spire was made for the fake of Peace and Concord, but not this; and therefore, that they altogether protified against it. In the mean while (until this General or Provincial Council for Germany were call d) they promisd to do nothing, that might justly be reproved. As for keeping of Peace, the taking of that which belongs to others. Ambapatiss, and printing of Books, they said, they knew wery well what west to high said. was to be done.

This Protestation of the Princes being communicated to the chief Towns of Germany, (among which Strasburg, Noremberg, Ulm, Conflance, Rote-ling, Winfeim, M.mingen, Lindaw, Kempten, Hail-brun, Norlingen, Sangal, and divers others are 1528. examine, or ancient Error to reform, they wanted number'd) they all join'd so together, that the 1528. Name of Protestants took thence its original; Name of Protestants fook thence its original; which Name therefore (properly taken) feems The to imply no more, than one refolv'd to embrace Name the above-mention'd Tenets, till fome hawful first wid. Council, either General or Provincial, determin'd the contrary. Feedband, finding matters thus not to fort to that effect he defin'd, departs out of the Affembly betimes, though much entreated by the Elector of Saxony and the rest to ftay, which he refusing, they appeal'd to the Emperor, and future Council.

Let us now fee what was done in Italy this 1525 while; the Pope, though efcap'd, was not yet fuddenly provided with Counfel or Money. For as the Obligation he had to comply with the League, form'd in his defence, as well as defire of Revenge, made him correspond with Lautrech, fo fear of returning again to Imprilonment, caus'd him to proceed fo warly, that one might doubt his Intentions. Therefore he kept Lautrech still in much suspence; faying one while he defir'd an Univerful Peace, then excufing himfelf for want of Men, Money, and Authority. Nevertheless, if the seat of War might be transferr'd out of the Patrimony of the Church, he faid he would advise what was to be done. here also, he knew not how to resolve. For as the War of Milan was in a manner ended, fo himself had an eye upon the Kingdom of Naples ; and for Florence, it was his native Country. Be-fides, he was fufficiently inform'd, that Francis, when he might have hope to recover his Children by fair means, would not affift him. All which reasons made him to temporife, even to the giving suspicion of deserting the League, whereof himfelf was Author. Hereupon Lautrech flaid at Bononia, attending both Men to reinforce his Army, and further Instructions. But as Charles and Francis came to no Agreement, fo he was commanded to proceed with his Army; in which Sir Robert Jerningham, Gentleman of the Bed-Chamber both to King Henry and Francis, had the Command of 200 Horfe, paid by our King. Whereupon the Imperialitis, knowing how much it concern'd them to defend the Kingdom of Naples, retir'd thither with a fmall remnant of their Army: Where they had enough to do, both as they were to refift the French, and as the People, defirous of Novelty, (after their giddy manner, when either they think themselves opprest, or that otherwise they hope for a milder Government) were ready to revolt, which also appear'd fo much, that, long before Lautrech came to divers Towns, they yielded themselves, fending their Keys a days journey before them. The first that made head against them was the Prince of Aurange. But as his Forces were much inferior to the French, he at last retird to Naples; where yet he was so hated by Hugo de Moncada, and the Spaniards, that he was in danger of having the Gates thut against him. Lautrech now, pursuing his good Fortune, besieges Melfi. But as a number of Labourers and Husbandthen, unapt for War, were shut in it, so their Fears and Noises, while the Soldiers defended the Walls, made them retire to the Castle, as thinking they had other Enemies within. Whereof the French taking advantage, enter'd and fack'd the Town, making the Prince of Melfi, his Lady, and Children Prifoners. After which, divers other places yielded to the French, till they came to Naples, which was April 173, or as others fay, May 1. 1. 1.28. April 17-And now their Army feem'd terrible, both as it Raple bowas reinfore'd by fome Regiments of Swift, and fieged by as the Inhabitants of Nuples favour'd them. While the Foreign that of the Spaniards was no greater, than what the Walls of Naples, and fome little places in the

Vol. II.

Lieutenant to Andrea Doria, was commanded, with eight Galleys, to ride before the Haven. This troubled much the Besieg'd, for all the hope they had either of Victuals or Relief, was on that part. Hugo de Moncada, confidering this, puts forth with a few Galleys in that Port against Doria, and begins a surious Fight; the Success whereof was, that he lost, at once, both Victory and Life, and about 700 more with him; Alforso de Acados Marquis del Vasso, Alganio de Comercia de Surious and Grane chapes, and Grane conservations and Grane chapes. lonna, and fome others of Note, being taken Prifoners. This as it added great Courage to the French, fo it occasion'd some Benefits to the Imperialists, both as it took away the Competition betwixt Moncada and the Prince of Aurange, (who now commanded in chief,) and as it open'd a way (as shall appear afterwards) for gaining Andrea Doria unto the Emperors Service.

The Siege continu'd yet four Months; Lau-trech, as being Mafter of the Field, desiring rather to take the City by Famine, than by the Sword. And now the Victuals were almost all consum'd; when the Prince of Aurange thought fit to fend Hernando de Gonzaga with about 5000 Foot, and 700 Horse, with divers Carts, to forrage and get Provision, but they also were defeated, and the Carriages taken from them. Howbeit Naples held out still.

This while Antonio de Leyva recovers Pavia, Novarra, and Baigras, and divers other places, taken by Lautrech; and so joyn'd with the Duke of Brunswick, who came with 15000 Germans, and 500 Horse, to serve the Emperor. These two agreeing together to befiege Lodi, found such gallant resistance, that they were at last constrained to desist, and the rather, because they heard, the Count de St. Paul, with a strong Army of Swifs and French, was on his way to relieve it. Be-fides the Germans, who came with Brunsswick, ha-ving not their pay at the time appointed, did for the most part return, so that the French, by joyning with the Duke of Urbin, made themselves quickly masters of the Field, recovering again all the places Antonio de Leyva had taken, and to-gether with them the fatal Pavia. But see up-on what Engines fortune now turn'd! Philippino Doria, victorious and triumphant, being come to Surrento, to cure his hurt Soldiers, and repair his Galleys, Lautrech fends Giovanni Joakim to require the Prisoners, as being taken in the Name, and for the Service of the King his Mafter, Philippino, though receiving this Message with great Indignation, yet dissembled it for the present, faying only, he could determine nothing, without acquainting his Uncle Andrea Doria, whole Lieutenant he was. But this was only to get rime: For he expected a Reward, before he would leave his Prifoners. Which also, or at least the hope of it, Lautrech should have given, before he demanded them. This error therefore cost dear. For Philippino, who took pay chiefly to give proof of his Vertue, and therefore would ferve but for a time (now almost expir'd) was not to be treated in this fashion: As the French found foon after. For, employing his thoughts at this prefent more how to gain his own liberty, than to leave his Prisoners, he sound means them by surprising Milan, upon intelligence with to retire himself to a place of more Surety; certain Citizens there. But bringing provision where, upon private Conference with his Prito- of Victuals only for twenty four hours, and no ners, he found, that he could make more profit Artillery, he gave off his Enterprife, and retird of them from the Spanish, than the French fide. In to Alexandria, with intention to pass there the conclusion, Andrea Dovia also being solicited by rest of the Winter, 1528.

the Prince of Awange to change Master (as soon)

1528. Confines thereof did hold. Howbeit, as Lautreeb as his term was out,) he begins to liften; and 1528. Confider d that divers brave Commanders for the Imperialifs were of this number, he did not think fit to invelt the Town by Land, till he had flate in the Kingdom of Naples. He would not blockt it up by Sea. Therefore Philippino Daria, yet leave the French abruptly, nor before he had gotten some pretext for it. Therefore he fent gotten fome pretext for it. Therefore he fent to the French Court, to demand satisfaction for the Ransom of the Prince of Aurange, taken before Marseilles, and others during the Siege of Pavia. He also required that Genous might be reflor'd to its Superiority over Savona. Which demands being brought to the Chancellor da Praet, and dislik'd, it was thought fit to fend Antoine de la Roch-Fouchalt, with Commission to seise on the Person and Galleys of Andrea. Notice on the Perion and Gaileys of Zinarea. Footies whereof being feerely given him, Diria, leave Doriting the Fronth Gallies to their new Commander, leaves the withdrew himfelf with his own, to the Emperion. ror's Service; who, for obliging him the more, promis'd to restore Genoua his Native Country to its former liberty, and to make him General of the Imperial Navy. Thus did the French lofe And 's him according to his Condition, it behoving Admiral them, as he was generous, to have dealt more gently with him; and as Mercenary, more cautiously; especially, when he might make so much benefit by revolting to the other fide.

While this Treaty was on foot, Piedro Lando, June 12. with thirty Venetian Galleys, blocks up Naples by Sea: So that now it feem'd impossible for it to hold out: Yet the hand of God is above all: For a kind of Pestilence, (which Sandoval calls sandov. Nigra or Black) souniversally seiz'd on the French, that they diminish'd daily in great numbers, and among them * Sir Rebert Ferningham : whose Apr. 25 Company therefore was given to Mafter John Carew, his Licutenant, who yet dy'd there of the fame Difeafe. At last also Lautreeh himself, (a Aug. 15 brave Commander, but withal noted to be of Plague in opinionative, that he would, alone, have the the Franch glory, or shame of all his Actions) dy'd of the Disease, and huge numbers of others; which fo disheartned the French, that the weak remainders, wanting (besides their Health) Money, Victuals, &c. rais'd the Siege, and retir'd homewards. And thus fuccessively were two great siege of Armies consum'd with the Plague, without o Napla ther force; as it usually happens, when Pec-tais'd. ple, not acquainted with the Temper, Wines, and Fruits of a Country, live licentiously. They could not yet retire fo quietly, but that the Imperialifts follow'd them, and took divers Prifoners, and, among others, the old and weak Pienets, and, among outers, the one and the new date of the Marquifs Saluzzo, who un-promb dertook (after Lautreb) the Government, yet looie their held Aversa for some while; though, at last, he Conquest. was conftrain'd to yield it together with him-felf. In fequence whereof all other places the French held in those parts were furrender'd, fave a few the Venetians fortified. Genoüa alfo was conftrain'd to yield it felf, and fhake off the French yoke, by the means of Andrea Doria, who hearing that the Plague had chas'd almost all the Inhabitants thence, enters it by Sea, and forceth Theodoro de Trevulci to a Composition, by which he was to forsake the Town. The Geneuics, hereupon, were restor'd to their former liberty, and Savona, not long after, taken by them. The Count St. Paul, finding affairs thus to go ill on the French fide, thought to repair 1528. Sweating Sickness in Eng.

As the Plague destroy'd the French in Italy, the fweating Sickness confum'd very many in England; it feeming to be but the fame Contagion of the Air, vary'd according to the Clime. It was first known in England, 1486. then 1507. then 1517, and now 1528, when it fo rag'd, as it kill'd ordinarily in five or fix hours space, invading even the Kings Court, where not only Sir Francis Pointz, Sir William Compton, and Mr. William Cary (two of the Kings Bed-Chamber,) dy'd of it; but the King himfelf was not without danger.

Sleid. l. 6.

In Germany also it did much harm, killing many, and, particularly, interrupting a Conference at Marpurg, betwixt Luther and Zuinglius, concerning the Eucharist.

I shall now come to the business of the Divorce :

History of I shall now come to the bunners of the Divorce Hen. VIII. so much vexed by our Writers, that, for satis-Divorce faction of the Reader, I have extracted a Relation thereof out of those Originals, and Authentick Records, that I shall presume to recommend it, for more than an ordinary piece of Hi-

Our King had now, for many years enjoy'd the Vertuous Queen Katharine, without that either feruple of the Validity of their Match, or outward note of unkindness had past betwixt them. Nevertheless, as, presently after the Birth of the Princess (who alone of all their Chil-dren furviv'd) Luther and others, controverted the Authority, and extent of the Papal Jurisdiction, fo in this Kingdom, the Dispensation of fulius II. for the aforesaid Marriage being privately question'd, many of our Learned Men concluded it void, as being granted in a Cafe pro-hibited Jure Divino, and therefore indispensable. This again, whisper'd in the ears of many, begot fuch a muttering, as, being brought to the King, made him think what he was to do. For though he knew that a keeping of the Succeffi-on doubtful was one of the ill Arts by which Princes conferve themfelves, yet, as a defire to have Pofterity, which might fucceed him in the Crown, prevail'd over all other Confiderations, he refold to clear this Point by all fitting Degrees; and the rather, in that he knew the fame Objections had been made (though wrongfully) to Edward IV, and his Children. And certainly (as it appears to me by many Circumstances,) it was, in the beginning, as much as he could, in favour of the Princefs his Daughter. So that, although the Bishop of Tarbe (being fent by ness of the Francis 1527, to conclude the Alternative formerly fer down,) did object openly against her Legitimation, as being got by the King upon his Brothers Wife, it did not much move him. But, feeing it now grown a publick doubt, he thought it more notorious than could be supprest. Neither did he believe that Charles would be greatly fcandaliz'd at it; fince, to avoid the Treaty of Windfor, himfelf had alledg'd fome things to this purpose. All which again (as Polydore relates) was fecretly fomented by Longland Bishop of Lin-coln (his Majesties Confessor,) at the instigation of the Cardinal; who both hated the Emperor, and was averie from the Queen, by reason of her reproving his loofe, and inordinate Life. Though (whatever Polydore faith,) it will appear hereafter, that Woolfey indeavour'd not, finally, the Divorce. Howfoever, on fome or all of these causes, the King was much perplext, as knowing how deeply this affair concern'd himfelf, his Posterity, and Kingdom. And because it was easie to collect of what Consequence any Rumor of this kind might be, he not only fent to our Ambassadors in Spain, as is said before, to there, for that so many Circumstances had made silence the noise thereof, but us'd all means postible had been been sometimed the Bull and Breve, upon which the sirst Marrifible both to appeale those violent Jealousies the age was grounded, to be suspected. The profe-

Queen had conceiv'd, and to fatisfie his People, at least until himself had look'd further into the Business. In which certainly his Intentions privately were to proceed; for befides his difpatching his Secretary William Knight, Doctor of Law to Rome, (whom yet he commanded to advile with our Cardinal by the way, being then in France,) he took information fometimes about his present Condition, and sometimes (it is proba-bable also) about such Ladies as might surnish him a choice for a Genial, and fecond Bed. In which number the Dutchess of Alanzm, Sister to Francis, is the first I find mention'd, whose Picture (as Hall faith) was fent over, about this time. Neither did the Cardinal, being certified World's of these Passages, omit to comply at least in advice appearance with him, and therefore writ to the July 20. King, that the best way to obtain his desire, 1527. was, to tell the Emperor plainly, that unless be fet the Pope free (at this time in Prison, asis formerly mention'd) be would proceed in the Divorce upon his own, and his Clergies Authority. After which, he fent for John Clark, Bishop of Bath, (then resident Ambassadar in R. (then refident Ambaffador in France) and commended him to the King, as a Person to whom he might discover himself; and, together, deliver'd his Opinion: First, That, because the Party would Bishop of appeal, the bussiness could not be determined in Eng. But and land, unless the Pope would give him absolute Authority, in omnibus Cassibus, (a Minute whereof to be fent to Rome, I have seen.) Secondly, That the thould be perfuaded, and ingression Religionis.

And, lastly, if neither of these could be effected, it should be thought of, Quid posses claim fieri quoad forum Consciencia: ? Concerning which Points, the Bishop of Bath at his return speaking, (as I find in an Original from the faid Bishop to Wool fey) the King replyd, My Lord of Bath, the Bull King's re-is good, or it is naught; If it be naught, let it be for ply-declar'd, and if it be good, it shall never be broken by no by-ways for me. Whereupon, the Bithop reno by-ways for me. Whereupon, the Bishop re-presented, that the Popes Captivity hindred all Suits in this Court, and, bowloever, that the Process would be so slow, as it could not be determin'd in six or seven years. Besides, that there must be three distinct Sentences given in it by three divers Judges, the two last to be chosen for the adverse Party. Lastly, that after all this, the Sentence may be recall'd; Quia fententia contra Matrimonium, nunquam transit in rem Judicatam; Adding, in Conclusion, as the knot of the business, that the Party would Appeal. To which the King anfwer'd, he thought life would not appeal from the Arch-Bilpop of Canterbury, and the Bilpops of Rochetter, Ely, and London: As for the tedion/sels of the Suit, since he bad patience eighteen years, that he would stay yet four or five more; since the Opinion of all the Clerks of his Kingdom, besides two, were lately declar'd for him; adding, that he had staded the Matter himself, and written of it, and that he found it was unlarful, de Jure Divi-Record. No, and undispensable. But incites standing thus, and no probability of the Oueens Futifulnet's since which the King answer'd, he thought she would not and no probability of the Queens fruitfulness fince the Princess Mary's Birth, appearing; and the rather, that Spanish Women are observed to be seldom Mothers of many Children; he resolves to have recourse to the Pope; comforting himself, for the reft, that no other difficulty appear'd in removing all these Inconveniences, than the ob-taining a Dispensation to dissolve that Marriage, which a Difpensation only had at first made. knew the same key that lockt, could unlock. Therefore he thought fit to send to Rome, both to represent the dangerous Condition of himself, his Iffue and Kingdom, and to folicite the Pope

1528.

H.1/1.

French

Ambaffador first

gainst the lawful-

The Vast 25th of December, 1527.) was recommended, by the Cardinal, to Sir Gregory Cafalis, an Italian; which also he was required to urge so far, as to fay, that our King could impute the punishment nigement God had laid on him in taking away his Iffue negenera God nad faid on min in taking and model of Cital at Male, upon nothing fo much, as the unlawful-becase, nels of this Marriage; which learned Men did also generally so deteit, as they held it to be more than the Pope could dispence with (as I find they declard afterwards in a Book, which was fent thither.) Wherefore, that he should procure a Commission for hearing and determining this Caute, to be directed to the Cardinal; or, if that were refus'd, to Bishop Stapbylaus, Dean of the Russia, who had been lately in Eng-Land. And that he should furthermore fay, that he doubted not, but the Pope would eafily grant it, though against the will of Charles; fince he had granted Charles a Dispensation and Absolution from the Oath which he had taken to marry the Princess ALary, without so much as demanding the consent of our King. For facilitating of which business, Letters of Exchange, to the value of ten thousand Ducats were lent him; as also certain Instruments for the Popes figning which were, First, a Commission, in ample form, to hear, and determine the Cause in England. Secondly, a Decretal, wherein the Pope, upon probation of Carnal knowledge between zirthur and Katkarine, should pronounce the Marriage void. Thirdly, a Difpensation for the King to marry another. Fourthly, a Pollicitation, that the Pope will not recall any of these Acts. But it was an zon, that he durst neither give the said Knight a publick Audience, nor fo much as adult a private Message from him, but by the Intervention of the Cardinal Pisani. So that, what Wisslam or Picty scever cur King might pretend hercin, the Coifuntura certainly was no way aufpicious And the rather, because the Pope, during his Imprisonment in the Castle of St. Angelo, had been requir'd in the Emperor's Name (as I find by a Dilparch of Doctor Knights from Orvieto) not to grant any Act concerning the Divorce. nor so much as suffer the cause to be heard before any Judge in our Kings Dominions. I find also in the same Letter that Lorenzo Pucci, Cardinal Sanderum Quatuor, being chosen by the Pere for dispatching our kings befinesses, had teld Dector Knight, that the Commission penn'd here in England, for the Popes Signing, might not pass, but that he had minuted another, which the Pope (though with some Reluctation) had granted; earneflly intreating our King Levertheless, not to put it in execution, till the Spiniards, and Almains were gone out of Italy, and himself left in his full liberty. To confirm which grant also, the same Doctor Knight, by a Letter (dated fan. 9. 1528.) did certifie, that the King's Dispensation was obtain'd under lead, as amply as the Minute fent from England did contain; and the Commission for the Lord Legate likewife was granted fufficiently, though not according to the form propos'd; and that it was drawn by the Cardinal Sanctorum Quatuor. Moreover, he tells (as in the Popes Name) that if Monsieur de Lautrech were come, the Pope thinketh he might, by good Colour, fity to the Emperor, that he was required by the English Ambassadors, and Mnsieur de Lautreeb to proceed in the bufinefs. All which Particularities I have the rather fet down, that it might appear 1528. cuting whereof therefore (in a Difpatch dated | bufinefs, feem'd to proceed chiefly from Humane Confiderations. Which also is much confirm'd by a Difparch from Gregory Cafalis 12 fan. 1528. Ropes di ficulties where (on the Popes part, and in his Name) he herein, faith, that if the Kings Conscience be satisfied and from (which he alone can best tell) his Course were, whence, Ut statim Committat causam, aliam unorem ducat, Jan. 13. litem fequatur, mittatur pro Ligato, &c. and, that this was the only way for the King to attain his defires: Though yet he intreated this advice might be taken, as proceeding from the Cardihalf or cardinary and Simonetra, and not from himself. And this, certainly, as it may be thought a politick Advice, so would it have proved fafer and easier for both, than a Commission for two Kings part, fo it caus'd a like danger and inconvenience to the Pope. Howfoever, it appear'd afterwards, that the King, either out of tenderness of Confeience, or Confideration of the hazard he should run, if the Pope would not confirm this Act, thought not fit to allow thereof; but chose rather to demand a larger Commission than that which Doctor Knight obtain'd; the procuring whereof also he committed to Stephen Gardiner, Doctor of Law, and Se-Gardiner ted to Stephen Gardiner, Doctor of Law, and Se-Gardiner creatry to Woolfey, and Edward Fox, Provott of fent to Kings Colledge in Cambridge; not neglecting in Rome at the mean time, both to inflruct the Pope in his cause, and do him all the good offices he could with Christian Princes, and States, and particularly the Venetians, concerning the reflitution of Ravenna and Corvia; though yet it took not fuch effect as was hoped. Neither did our King for-Janget, by a Letter of Cardinal Woodley's to the Protonotary John Cafalis, to defire him to acquaint the Pope with some domestick and private Passages; which (though out of the respect I bear to that vertuous Queens Memory) I cannot but mention fomewhat unwillingly, yet must not omit, both for the fake of that truth that ought to be in History, and as it feems to contain fome Motive of the Kings Intentions. I shall fet down the words in Latin as they are extant in our Record. Sunt nonnulla secretò Sanctissimo Domine No-King Henfro exponenda, & non credenda literis, quas ob Cau-ri's pr fire expenences, or non-creacement interns, quine or sau-fas, merbolq; nonnulles, quibus, absque remedio, Re-vate rea-fons for gins. Liberat, & ob animi etiem conceptum scrupulum, the Di-Regia Majestas nec potest nec wult, ullo unquam post- vorce. bac tempore, ea uti, vel ut Uxorem, admittere, quodout tempore, en uit, vei in Oxorem, aumities, quoi-cung; evenevit. There are befiles some particular Res-sens to be laid before his Holines in private, but not proper to commit to Writing, upon which account, as well as by reason of some Distempers which the Queen lies under without beper of Remedy, as likewise thro-some scruples which disturb the Kings Conscience, insonuch that his Mojeffy neither can ner will for the fu-ture lock won her, or live with her as his Wife, be the Consequence what it will. Gardiner and Fox, receiving their Instructions in Feb. 1528, repaired first to Francis, from whom Feb.

they readily obtain'd a premife to co-operate puilfantly with the Pope, for effectuating the Rings defire, as also a persualory and menacing Letter in case of resusal to the Pope; for complying wherewith also the Bishop Supplieus was Feb. 28. fent by him to Rome not long after. Our Ambaffadors having given the King account hereof, proceeded in their Journey to half, and coming at last to Orviete, where the Pope then was, they Pope's found him lodg'd in an old and ruinous Mona-man flery, his outward Chamber altogether unfur-Lodging. nish'd, and his Bed-chamber-hangings, together with his Bed, valu'd by them (as the Original Letter hath it) at no more than 20 Nobles. Pope yet receiv'd them lovingly; though not without the anxiety of one who could neither how the difficulties that the Pope made in this fafely grant, nor deny the request of a king,

Tan 9.

Sep. 13.

Line r. E 5 2 8

1528. to whem he fo much ow'd whatfoever liberty he & express a beher volumus, co babenus) emilerimus, 1528. to when he so much ow'd whatseever noerty ne enjoy'd. Their Instructions for the present, were a colden instruction and training the source only yet, to thank him for the Commission and its fulfiles deptaverious, provides a conjuntation of the Commission and training the source or formal for the commission of the source or formal formal for the commissions, or devicement, one amount in official than the source of the s here (Successor unto Melebior Langus, who was first authorized by the Pope, to give Queen Ka-therine notice of this Assair, together with the Popes secret intention therein.) They added surther, that by Gambari, as also by Sir Gregory Cafalis, eur King had gladly understood, how all defects, upon due Remonitrance, should be supply'd and amended. They were charg'd also, from the Cardinal, privately, to protest in his Name, that he was no Author of this Counsel. After which they were defir'd, by him, to proceed to the me-rit of the Caufe, and Qualities of the Gentlewoman (being, as I take ir, Miltrifs Bolen.) The perplex'd Pope, who knew well how much the Sp. niard was interest'd herein, heard them at this time with more fear, when at another time he would have granted their request. Therefore, together with an ambiguous Answer, which he gave them by word of Mouth, he fent in Ci-pher a Letter to our King, of fo much Irrefo-lution, that it needed no other cover. Howfeever, as the Commission of our Ambassadors was to flay till further order was given, they feem'd ThePopes to take all in good part. At laft our able Neperplexity gotiators, urging the aforefaid and many other Motives to the Pope, and he again finding the Feweb and Confederate Army Puilflant and Victorious in the Kingdom of N ples at that time, made no difficulty to grant a full Commission to two Legates, to hear and determine the Caufe in England, being (according to the Kings defire) Commif Wassley and Campejus (not long fince made Bishop fion to the of Salisbury.) Besides, it seems he granted this Cardinals following Pollicipation on Permiss. Deep 1 following Pollicitation, or Promife, Dated at Viterbe, July 23. 1528. which yet, being no Original-piece, but an ancient Copy, extant among Sir Robert Cottons Records, I shall mention but according to the credit it may deferve from the equal Reader; only I must not omit to suy, that, as divers Original Disparches, both before and after, give some touches of it, and that the Date Stankberg is added to the control of the contro for the rest is added, so it may challenge better credit than to be thought a Minute, and much less a Counterfeit and suppos'd piece, which also is the more probable, in that the Pope granted ampler Testimonies than this, in favour of the Divorce; howfoever they were either con-

The Pollicitation.

troll'd again, or detain'd in the hands of his Ministers, after that fort, that our King might well take notice, but neither Copy nor advantage of Premissio Pontificis in Negotio Regis.

TU M nos Clemens, divina providentia illius nomins Papa septimus modernus, justitiam cyus cauje perpendentes, quam charissimus in Christo silius noster Henricus Octavus Angliae Rex illustris, Fidei Desensor, & Dominus Hiberniæ, de ejus Matrimonii nulli-tate, tanquam notorium, publicum, & famosum, apud nos exposuit, quod cum charissima in Christo filia neftra Catharina, cleræ memoriæ Ferdinandi Hispani-arum Regis Catholicæ filia, nulliter & de facto con-traxisse, & consummasse assurant, leges tam divinas quim humanas in ea parte notorie transgrediendo, prout revera sic transgrediebatur, ad dilectos nobis in Christo fliot, Thomam, & Laurentium miseratione devina Sanclae Ceciliae, & Sanclae Mariae in Transfiberim respective tisulocum, nospris Apostolicae selas in Re-no Anglic pradicto Legatos de Latere, Commissionem dem Henrico Regi in guftiria illa quem celerrime admi-nistranda propensionem certius & clarius attestemur, securioremque reddamus de judiciorum Labyrintho longo v. rioque ambitu in causis, (ut nunc sunt mores) justisfimis, non una fere estate explicabili; denique ut precellus per eofdem deputatos nostros juxta & secundum tenorem dictae commissionis babitus & factus, fiendus aut habendus, validus & firmus ac inconcuffus maneat: Promittimus, &, in verbo Romani Pontificis, pollicemur, quod ad nullius preces, requisitionem, seu instantiam, merove motu, aut aliter ullas unquam literas , brevia, bullas, aut rescripta, aliave quecunque per modum vel justitia, vel gratia, aut aliter que materiam emissarum antebac in causa prædicta commismuciam emigram ancesa en anja pracesa en ficunum commissonisve pradicta, processive per kujuf-medi deputates nostros juxta & secundum tenorem di-ctarum commissionum commissionisve pradicta habiti & facti, habendive out fiendi, inhibitorium, revocatorium, aut querifinado prejudicidem quaeung; ratione contineam, queve dictarum commificarum commifica-infece feu processus dictarum commissionum commissional nifec feu processus dictarum removement, impedi-tum, o effectualem executionum removement, impediant, aut in aliquo contrarientur, illave aut eorum aliqua revocent, aut eifdem vel eorum aliquibus în toto vel in aliqua parte corundem prajudicent, concedemus : Sed datas à nobis eisdem deputatis nostris commissiones & commissionem bujusmodi, processiuma; per bujusmodi deputatos nostros junta & secundum tenorem dictarum commissionum commissionisve pradicta babitum & facommissionem commissione praedicia basettem & ja-cium, luberdungs & finadem (un plevillima vi, eu-theritate, rebore & efficicia realiter & cum effects con-levastimus, rats bubbimus, tuchimus, de diculenta, Denig comos tales titeras, brevia, bullas, out referi-tis, que dicterum commissionim commissionifve preciufve antedicti executionem, aut ejuftem virture decreta, definita, & pronunciata per cosdem deput tos nestros confirmare possint aut waleant, absor; mora, recu-satione, aut difficultate quacung; de tempore in tempus realiter 💸 cum effectu valida 🔗 efficacia dabimus 💸 concedemus. Et, insuper, promittimus, & in verbo Romani Pontificus pollicemur, quod præmissa vel ecrum uliqua nullatenus infringemus, nec aliquid contra ex vel corum aliqua directe vel indirecte, tacite vel expresse, principaliter wel incidenter, quowis quasito colore vel ingenio, nisi vi vel metu coakii, vel Dolo aut Fraude ad boc inducti, attentabinsus aut faciemus; Sed ea omnia 👉 singula sirma, valida, inconcussa 💸 inviolabilia patiemur, & permistemus. Ac insuper, se quod absit) aliquid contra præmissa vel cerum aliqua quevismodo faciamus aut attentemus, illud pro casso, irrito, inani 💸 vacuo omnino baberi volumus & batrine, train Gottas ominio substitutiones. Observe on the bermy, a e ex nunc prout ex ture, & ex tune prout nine, cossimus, annullamus, & reprobamus, nullinsque reboris aut efficacie fore wet esse debere pronuciamus, decernimus, & declaramus. Datum Viterbio, die xiii. Julii Millesimo Quingentesimo Vicesimo Octavo: Pontificatus nostri Anno Quinto.

Ita est Clemens Papa septimus antedictus,

E Clement, by the Providence of God the feventh Pope of that Name, having duly weigh'd with how much Juffice our well be-lov'd Son in Chrift, Henry VIII. King of England, Defender of the Faith, and Lord of Inland, hath laid before us as a thing Notorious, publickly known, and of evil Report, his cale concerning the nulltry of a Marriage, which he dil both contract, and de f.ilo, confimmate with our most dear Daughter in Chift, Kabrine, Daughterto the most Catholick King, Ferdinand of Spring no Anglie predicto Legatos de Latere, Commissionem of Glorious Memory, contrary to the Lawsboth sub certa tune expressa forma, (quam pro hie inserta, of God and Man, which he thereby grievously express'd (which Commission we do hereby confirm and ratifie, as much as if here again express'd and inserted) to our beloved Sons in Christ, Thomas and Laurence, by the Divine Grace, Cardinals, Sancta Cecilia, and Sancta Maria in Transtiberim, our Legats de Latere in the Kingdom of England, from the Apostolical See; whereby we did constitute and appoint them (as we do by the tenor of these Presents, most fully and effectually constitute and appoint them either together or afunder) in our flead to examine, and finally to determine as competent Judges in this Cause; that we may give the more manifest and evident token of our Tenderness and Affection to the aforesaid King Henry, in speedily administring Justice, and freeing him by our immediate Sentence, from that tediousness and vexation wherewith the most just Caufes (by the corruption of the prefent Times) are fo far embarass'd, as scarce to be finish'd, and finally determin'd in an Age: And being defirous that the Process carry'd on, or to be carry'd on according to the tenor of the faid Commission, may be firm, valid and irreversible, we do engage, and upon the word of a Pope promise, that we will never by the Entreaty, Request or Instance of any Person, or from our own mere Motion, or otherwise, at any time grant any Letters, Breves, Bulls or Writs of any fort, either under shew of Justice, as acts of Grace, or on any other pretence whatever, to inhibit or revoke the matter of the Commissions heretofore in the above-mention'd cause issued out, of the forefaid Commission, or of the Process by these our Delegates, according to the tenor of the former Commissions, or said Commission either yet form'd and made, or to be form'd and made hereafter, whereby any prejudice, hin-drance or interruption may be given to the full, perfect, final and effectual execution of the faid Commissions, Commission or Process, or whereby all or any of them may in any wife be reany part of them; but we will preferve entire, ratifie, confirm and defend to all purposes with our utmost Power and Authority, most effectually the Commissions and Commission granted by us to our forefaid Delegates, and the Procefs which the faid Delegates according to the tenor of the faid Commissions or Commission. by their plenary Power and Authority have or shall form and carry on. Lastly, We will effectually make valid, and without refusal, delay. or any difficulty whatever, grant all such Letters, Breves, Bulls or Writs, which may ferve any ways to firengthen or confirm the execution of the faid Commissions, Commission or foremention'd Process, or to ratific and establish any things by virtue thereof, by our foresaid Delegates decreed, determin'd or adjudg'd. And we do furthermore engage and promife, upon the word of a Pope, that we will in no wife (un-lefs by force and violence compell'd, or by fraud and treachery furpriz'd) injure all or any of the forefaid Particulars, or act or attempt any thing contrary to them, or any of them directly or indirectly, tacitly or exprefly, mediately or immediately, upon any colour or pretence whatfocver; but will support and preserve all and every of them firm, valid, fix'd and inviolable. And further, if (which God forbid) we fhould act or attempt any thing in any wife against the Premifes, or any of them; We do hereby for that will and declare as effectually as if this our Declaration were at that time made, that fear how far those Innovations might extend.

Woolfey hear the Caufe. July 23.

rs 28. transgress'd; and having thereupon issu'd out | void; and it is hereby made null and void, and rs 28. our Commission in form and manner there is declar'd, pronounc'd and adjudg'd to be of no is declar'd, pronounc'd and adjudg'd to be of no force and efficacy.

> Given at Viterbo July 13. 1508. in the fifth year of our Pontificat. Clement V.

This while, the Queen, who understood well Queen what was intended against her, labour'd with all surprized those Passions which Jealousie of the King's Affection, fense of her own Honour, and the Legi- ings. timation of her Daughter could produce; laying, in Conclusion, the whole sault on the Cardinal; who yet was less guilty than the Queen thought, or Polydore would make him. I will not deny yet, but, out of due regard to his Ma-fter's Interests (so nearly concern'd in this great Affair,) as well as care of giving fatisfaction to his Confcience, which feem'd much troubled, he might comply with the Kings defires; but to be the fingle Author of a Counfel, which might turn fo much to his prejudice, when the King should die, is more than may easily be believ'd of so cautious a Person as Woolfey. And this In- Hates the nocence, perchance, was the reason that he nei- Cardinal ther suspected himself to be so much abhorr'd for it. of the Queen, nor to stand in that danger of her Practices, which yet procur'd at last his ruine. The first who gave the Cardinal notice of the Queen's Displeasure (as I find by a Letter of his dated at Feversham 5 July 1527, then in July 5. his Journey towards France,) was the Arch-Bi-1527, shop of Canterbury; the consequence whereof he fo much apprehended, that he thought fit to use all means for satisfying her. Therefore he presently labour'd with the Archbishop to persuade the Queen, that whatsoeyer she heard in this kind, was intended only for clearing the furmifes of the Bishop of Tarbe, formerly mention'd. He writ alfo to our Ambaffadors in Spain, to quench all rumours there, upon the same pre-text. But the Queen had sent those Agents a-broad, (and amongst them, one Abel, her Chapkin) who both inform'd her of all that pass'd, and ingag'd the Emperor to assist her to the uttermost of his Power. Therefore the Pope stood more and more suspended. The pace of Campe-Interests. jus (the promis'd Legate) a'fo appear'd flaggering and flow; and all that might frustrate the King's Intentions, was fecretly practis'd. This while the Cardinal, (who out of the King's defigns would ever produce and fubrogate fome particular end of his own, whereof, either in point of Glory or Profit, he might make Advantage) had fo difpos'd this of the Divorce, as thereby to mediate the Pope's entire Delivery, not only from the Guards, but even fear of the Emperor. Again, as, during the Popes reftraint, he had, (under pretence that it was the best expedient for the King's propos'd Divorce) projected a meeting of Cardinals at Avignon, for fetling the government of the Church, where he him-felf intended to be present; so, now, since the King lik'd not that courfe, and that the Pope was free, he perfuaded him to erect fome Ca-The Carthedral Churches in England, at the price of dinal adthrowing down more Monasteries. Whereby it vises to eappears, both how busie this Cardinal was, and thedrals how much he studied his own ends. For as he by dissolnow much ne tudied ins own ends. For as he by diffol-knew this would pleafe the King (who began to vingtome think that Religious Perfons might force God as well Monaffer in defending the Kingdom, as praying for it.) to he affurd hindleft the Authority thereof would be derived on him chiefly; and the Pope, in the mean time observation, while he applied to the mean time, obnoxious, while he could not but likes the

Pope,

1528. Pope, I find by a Letter of the Protonotary her there? Thirdly, if this may not be done, 1289 Jebn Cafalis, Odiob 30, 1528, that he answerd, whether he can dispense with the Fing to have two Wives, and the Children of both traiting are? The Pope would proceed deliberatly, because it was ad likes the perpetuam rei memoriam. Therefore he desired the two Legates (for Campeins was by this time come) might be joyn'd in determining this bufinels, and that all the Revenues of the Monasteries, might be conferr'd on the new Bishops; and that the two Legates, having advis'd with the Pope hereof, should afterwards nominate them. So that it feem'd the Pope held it fitting to comply with the King a little at this time, fince G rdiner told him plainly, that he had in his Instructions these Words to tell him, Necesse of supprimi prosecutions the Regis Collegio Monssteria cujuscurque erdinis: In conclusion, a Bull was granted for applying the Revenues of fome fmall Monaste ies for maintenance of the King's Colleges in Cambridge and Windfor Castle; the Copy whereof is excant in Sir Robert Cotton's Library. It may be doubted vet, whether these Apprehensions, that were now in more than one kind, given the Peps of our King's declining the absolute Authority of the Church of Rome, did dispose the Pope more to oblige or difoblige him. For, though the Pope had reason to fear, lest he should lose his ancient Ju-risdiction in this Kingdom, if he deny'd; yet he might doubt as well, that in adhering too muc. to that side, he might offend the Emperor so far, as to hazard the loss of his own. He therefore. at once, treats with the Emperor of a perfect Peace and Amity, and together of recovering Cervia and Ravenna, and of effecting certain other Defigns which he had in Florence; and grants (as is abovefaid) in appearance a large Commission to Woolfey and Campejus; yet, in effect, so re-firmin'd, as the Emperor might see it was not out of his Power to check or revoke it. And this was all that Sir Gregory Cafalis and Stephen Gardiner, after much Importunity, could obtain. They mov'd the Pope also to canonize Hinry VI. (which I find was formerly propos'd to Alexander VI. by 1494 I find was formerly proposed to Alexander via by deal Bell. Harry VII.) to which the Pope answer'd, That if Ranvilli's Canoniza: the Archibility of Canterbury, and Billing of Winton chefter (with had examined the matter in partible). did fend the Process thither, as their Commission requir'd, for Novemb. the Canonization should follow shortly after. Businesses standing thus, our King thought six to fend Sir Ambaffa France Bryan Knight, and Peter Vannes (an It.lian, and his Secretary, for the Latin Tongue) to Rame; their Instructions in general, being sign'd dor fent with the King's own hand) were to diffuade the Pope from entring into any League with the Emperor, whose Delign was (he faid) to divest the Pope of his Means and Authority, by the forci-ble bringing in of one zingelo a Cordelior to be Pope, who should not intermeddle with Secular Jurisdiction, and the Patrimony of the Church; which therefore the Emperor would take to himfelf and usurp. For preventing whereof, the King wish'd him to keep a Guard, offering in his own and Francis's Name, to contribute thereunto. They were commanded also, to search privately Arustiens for a certain pretended Breve, in Rome, (faid to be a Supplement or Confirmation of the Bull of Julius II. and authorizing the Marriage with Queen Katharine) fince it was not to be found in the King's Records. Furthermore, they were requir'd to discover (in the Name of a third Person) whether, if the Queen enter'd a Reli-gious Life, the King might have the Popes Lifpenfation to marry again, and the Children be legitimate, and what Precedents were for it? Secondly, whether if the King (for the better

two Wives, and the Children of both a trimate? Since great RealLis and Procedents, circularly in the Old Testament, appear & rit. All which they were to do with that Successful and Circularly ction, that the Cause might not be publish'd, propounding the King's Cafe always therefole as another Man's. Laftly (as in all other I . rueliers) lome kind of Menaces were to be added. But Perfuations and Terrors wanted not on the ther fide; which did fo much more preval, with the Pope, as the Danger was more immediate and preffing on the Emperor's part, than on our King's, Therefore our Ambaffadors were fo far from ob- Wildow taining any thing, but what was formerly grant-Success ed in the Commission to Cardinal Wolfey and C mp. jus, that they found the Pope now more than ever dilpos'd to favour the Emperor: Infomuch that they observed daily new Delays and Refluctions in him. Some whereof (besides the Evidence in our Records) S nders doth confess, sun! 1.2. while he faith, that the Pope, by four feveral Mef- 45% et gers to empire (now on his way) gave him in Ganbelton cha ge: First, that he should make easile Journal on the Secondry that when he came to England, he should labour all he could to reconcile the King and usen Third.y, that if this could not be effected, he should persuade her to enter a Monaery, and take on her a Religious Life. Laftly. that when this could be obtain'd, he should give to definitive Sentence for the Livorce, without express commandment from him, & bec (faith he) ummum co n. zimum sit tibi m.nd..tum. Camp jus thus instructed, protracts all things; whereat tho' our King feem'd feandadz'd, as fur esting it came from Unwillingnes, yet, being an active Prince, he made at of that time to negotiate in Spain for recovering the Breve, (of which above) commanding the Bishop of Werester, and Doctor Edward Lee, by all means to procure it. At ength (and not before the beginning of October, 1728) Compans coming thro France, and being conducted thence into England, by John Clark, Eishop of Bath, our King's Ambassader there, came to London: Where being by our Cardinal done of presented to the King, he publickly acknow-the king edg'd in the Name of the Pope, Cardinal, Clergy, and People of Rome, that our King was Li-berates Urbis. Shortly after, obtaining Audience of the Queen, he took occasion both to acquaint her with her Danger, and to perfuade her there-upon to renounce the World, and enter into fome Religious Life. For which many Pretexts wanted not, (as I find in our Records) like having been obferved, fince the Commillion obstaired, to allow Dancing and Pallimes more than before. And that her Countenance not only in Court, but to the People, was more chearful than ordinary; whereas (it was alledged) the might be more lad and penfive, confidering the King's Confcience was unfatisfy'd, and that he had refrain'd her bed, and was not willing the Lady Princets, her Daughter, should come in her company. But the offended Queen replying peremppany. But the offended Queen replying peremptorily, That the was replaced both to find to that O en's Adarringe the Reman church had one elicited it and to define the configuration of the bunflever, not to admit fuels partial finder as the januares, to give future in her Caile. Company with define faither Instructions: The Answer whereuntone Pope yet so long deferred, that very near fix Months pass of before the two Cardinals sax in their Commission. their Commission.

Secondly, whether if the King (for the better inducing of the Queen thereunto) would promile to enter himself into a Religious Life, the Pope might not dispense with his Vow, and leave to the Pope.

April c. 1529.) return our king this Answer, on 1522.

Enmeror King Heabout the

them, to fend to England; but the Breve it felf was deny'd, for fear (as he faid) of miscarrying. To which our Ambassadors answer'd, That our King was a Prince of that Piety, that he ought not to be adjur'd; and for the Breve, that it was a Jewel belonging to the King and his Queen only, and not to be detain'd by any other from them. And for appealing to Rome, it needed not; fince Authority of determining that bufiness was already given from thence to Cardinal Woolfey and Campejus. Befides that, in Caufes Matrimonial, the prefence of the Parties to be examin'd, being requir'd for the most part, the Emperor might eafily imagine how unfit it was for the King and Queen personally to go to Rome, especially at that time. After this, the, Emperor commanding the Breve to be read, the Ambaffadors requir'd a Notary to be allow'd them, for fetting down the whole paffage of this buff-ness, together with their Protestations. But no Notary but the Emperor's being permitted, the Ambailadors were forc'd to accept him, defiring notwithstanding their Allegations might be set down apart. Hereupon the Emperor told the Ambasfadors, that he would fend an express Meffenger to our King, to intreat him to continue his Match, and, in case of refusal, to protest against the Divorce. Our Ambassadors yet per-fifted still in urging the Emperor, for his own fake, to fend the Breve for England; left the and fupplication for the fame Breve, it is not to Judges, wanting fight thereof, should proceed be thought that it should be fo far out of your against the Queen, or otherwise, that he would remembrance, the Causes of Imperration being send the fail Breve to the Pope.

The Emperor reply'd, that therefore he would not fend it. For if it miscarry'd, the Judges might then proceed as they would; but for fending it to the Pope he would advise. And that, if matters were now as they were heretofore, he would not fear to fend it to England. By a Letter also, the twentieth of April 1529, they certifie the King, That the Emperor intended to fend both to England and Rome, to make his Protestations against this Divorce; and that he would not send the Original Breve. Furthermore, that he requir'd our King, according to an Article of a former Treaty, to fall upon Francis, at a Perturber of the Publick Peace. Laftly, because the faid Ambassass balladars but beard, and consider d, at large, the Breve, they fent their Objections against it. Which, being one of the grounds of the King's proceeding in this great Affair, I have thought fit punctually to fet down, as they are extant in the Original Letter, written in Cipher, and thus to be read, as I find it decipher'd in our Records. That where it is pretended the Bull and Breve to be impetrate in one day, either they were impetrate in one Suit, and by one Man; and then it is not to be thought, but that this Suit, being the Pope's of fo great importance, was committed to fuch a one, as could perceive, that the Pull, not containing fo large Difpenfation as the Breve, is fuperfluous, (fuppoling the Breve to be necessary.) If the one were impetrate after the other, and the Suits made by one Man, it is hard to think the Emperor's part. That he was forry to understand more durable to remain; and, that the two 1528.

for the intended Diverce, adjusing our King (for the Kings were bound to imperate Bulls, and not rest by the Sacrament of Marriage, not to disolve it.

Brewes, whereof he or they that had such Commission or; if he would needs proceed therein; that the hearing mission (as it seemeth) could not be ignorant. Adding further, That he would defind the Suits were made by divers Persons, and by several Commission on England. Adding further, That he would defind on the Queen's just Cause. Wherewith, the pretended day) why to two several Persons several Commissions five or them, to send to England; but the Brewe it selfs its Years after; but more likely it is, if the Brewe Breves, whereof he or they that had fuch Com- Aug. 17missions should be given herein, the thing requiring no haste, the Marriage following five or six Years after; but more likely it is, if the Breve were then obtain'd indeed, that it was procur'd by fecret Practices not known to all Parties quorum intererat scire & consentire ; for, both the Parties confenting, I think there can be no fufficient Caufe alledg'd, why, the thing being done by common confent, the Breve rather than the Built should have Lirger Dispensation; for what needed two divers suits, with divers Commissions, it both the Parties were agreed upon the Suits? Especially the Impetration of both being in one

> Secondly, supposing it to be true, that Master Abel faith, the Queen to have fworn, quod nun-quam fuit cognita à Principe Arthuro; the Cause of the Impetration for fo much is vain, (viz. quod Regina cum Arthuro principe matrimonium carnali co-pula confummaverit.) If this be true, it appeareth that he that fu'd the Breve had no Commission of the Parties, for they would not give him Com-mission to impetrate Dispensation for Cause not

Thirdly, fuppofing it to be true, that Mafter Abel faith to me, that the Queen never heard of fuch Breve, before the Emperors Orators there prefented it to her; how can it fland, that is reported in the Breve, qual impetratum eft Breve ad

Regime instantiam?
Fourthly, if your Highness had made instance reduce it to the fame.

Fifthly, if it were impetrate at the inflance of your Highness, and of the Queen's Grace, no Cause is why it should be sent into Spain to King Fernando (as the Emperor's Folks first faid, but now fwerve) and not to your Highness, and the Queen's Grace. If any will suppose that it was done by your Confent, no Reason agreeth why you should consent thereto, and not rather keep it in your own hands, than fend it to the Cuftody of another. And yet, if you did consent, it cannot be thought, but that it should remain in your remembrance, as the firmity of your Marriage, and discharge of your Conscience, with other things, touching highly your Succession, standing therein: And it may be supposed moreover, that fome writing of the Deposite thereof fhould remain there, which is not found.

Sixthly, confidering that the King of most noble memory, your Father then alive, your Highnefs not being at the date of the Breve paft xv, or xvi Years of Age, I for it the Cife is, though as King Henry was then but xii, and jumething more, I conceive these Figures were Cipbers on, settlifting his true Ago: Unless perchance the Cipbers' or People did otherwise mistake it;] it may be well supposed. that your Highness was not then much to folicite the impetration of fuch things. And that, it any fuch Breve should have been impetrate that time, that rather it should have been done at the the suits made by one Man, It is hard to think that one Man, being influeded in the Suit of inflance of the King your Father, than of your both, would put the Difpenfation of lefs moment in a Bull, and of greater moment in a Brew, feeing the one might be as facilly impertate in your Highness Name, we it could be breve, feeing the one might be as facilly impertate in your Highness Name, we it could associate the other, and that the Difpenfation in Lead is Ambaffadors Letter to the King. Octob. 2. 1518.

April ac

Bilhop of Worcester's iections to Bull for the Marriage.

1528. at his fetting forth. And, if any his Intervention and Confent had been in this matter, he tion and Confent and been in this matter, he would not have bound King Fernouls, and likewife have been bound himfelf, to get Bulls of Dilpenfation. And furely it may be thought, that, if the King your Uather confented, Down How to I saw in did the fame, to that it cannot be doubted, but that as they fay here, they have two Bulls (Lary d) in their Archives, to should the time to the confented by the conference of the confented by the confented alfo this linear have been, which indeed was not there found, as hereafter fluid be thewid, nor any Inch is four I in your Highness Archives. Wherefore it may be well rectioned, that there was no I che brain'd by the Confent of the King your Lather. And io, S. andily, maketh wie Boare fulpect, that the Emperor's Folls first faid, that it was found in Archivas Ecquin Hilpanianum, as appeareth in my Lord Cardinals Graces Letters; and now, fragetting themselves, the Emperor's Chancollor and Portage have confessed to us, that it as found among the Writings of Doctor il: Put-Us, which we Outor of Spain, in Em vel, in thing's days of most noble memory your l'athur. Which contrariety maketh to appear that they do not upright. Of a Nephew of Doctor Puolis being there, I have written in our common Letters the fifth of April, and now dougain; by whom peralventure fome light might be had.

Eighthly, whoso considereth the high renown'd Wisdom of the King your faid Father, and his great fage Council, Men of fingular Wildom and Learning for all purpofes, may well conceive that, or ever any Diffeentation for Marriage to be had between your Highnels and the Queen were fent for, that her Grace was examin'd an eld cignated principe Arthuro an nen? And that, polythere, that the two Kings would have provided therefore Difrenfationem in Bulla, as they were bound. And on the other fûce, it negavit fe faile e grittin, with can opus Brezi quaad, &c. And far the facead part of the Breze, I cannot fuppele that your Highness, in that time which the date of the Brave pretendeth (your Highness being then not much more than xii or xv Years of Age, and the King your Father living) need any Diffeentation in that party. And if none needed then, why should your Highness then make inflance for any, which is supposed in the breve?

Minthly, if this Preze were impetrate in the days of Doctor de Feebla; the being thereof to long in his hands, and the manner of keeping of the fame, giveth new Conjecture that it is a thing caffat; for the thing being of fo much importance, touching fo nigh your Highness and the Cueen, why should he keep it; specially so long? for he lived in England after the date of the Breve five or fix Years, and dy'd there, not long after the King your Father. Who can think that fuch a King, and fuch a Council, would have fuffered the Breve to be out of their hands, in his hands, all that time, if the Breve had been known to them necessary for this Matrimony, and of any value? And, as I faid, the manner of keeping thereof feemeth to confirm the fame; which manner of keeping I conje ture of two things: One, that it was not kept in a Cale of Tin, after the manner of Breves; for only in a Paper they did exhibit it to us twice. Another, that in the Superfeription it ap-pear'd flubber'd, by reason of often handling, peradventure lying among so many his Writings and old Letters; wherefore, although it were then impetiate, yet it feemeth that he took it as caffat, and void, peradventure as furreptitiously obtained of his own head, without any Commiffion or Confent of the Parties.

Tendaly, another confidence in that the computer Emperor's Chancellor and Partie for this have divers Letters and Wikit goof the faid Parties, and fecond of the Queen-jyve, because they uter'd not that they have anothing specially content ing this Partie, (which they would not have fingount to fay, for so would as it makes have a gotten to fay, for so would as it makes have in the gotten to fay, for so would as it makes have in the proposed in these had lead on any such as the well to purpose, if there bad been any such) moved up purpose, it there had even any first) in veil up on that sufficient, I denoted of them, and divers times to the fame, whether they had any fipecial Tetters concerning the Bert.? The could not, ne did fay that they had; but the Emperor's Chancellor answerd. That the Bert was enough. Whereapon may be gather'd that the Assignment of the Little Ass that his Antiver impl, it, that they have non other.

Eleventhly, if any fuch Brow were impetrate at that time, by the Knowledge and Confint of both the Kings, likely is, that either of their fhould have one. Let them then here bring forth the Erece in Archivis inis. If they will fig, this the Brever Archives uns. It they wan 1855, tent is it; What likelihood is it, that it flound be fent into England, to come into Systin ? For this Brever, if it were in Dector i'e Paciela's Cuffody, came out of England after his death, with other his Wish. tings; which I think his Nephew there (if he confess that it was found amongst other his Uncle's Writings) will also contest. I fay, why was it fent into England? It is not to be doubted, but Den Fernando had an Ambaifador in the Court of Rome, which might earlier and nearer way have fent it into Spain. Wherefore, if they can not, out of their Archives, bring forth any Inch Breve, their Diligence in cuflody of fach thingsupposed, and well deprehended in the enthody of two Bulls, (for fome of the Scoretaries faid to me that they have two) they may, of this, ga ther (themselves) that there is no fuch, ne any otherwhere, of any effect and value.

The Twelfth Sufficien against the Breve is in it felf; that, whinfoever it was impertate, it was not duly im start, may be gathered of di-vers things in the firme, and about the fame; the hand of fome Lea, or, and not of one opercial in writing of fuch things; and fome Definite in the writing; fuch, as my Lord of Hamfie faith, he hath not feen committed in any press. And, as he trutleth to prove, the Date first furtherly condemn the Breve. And these Exceptions were, as I find in another Letter, dated from the fame Am- April 20. baffarors to the Cardinal: First, that there were Rafures in it. Secondly, divers Hands. Third-ly, Names falle written, as Artherus pro Arthurus. Fourthly, the Date faile; as being Decemb. 26. 1503. which, according to the Date of Briver, beginning Decem. 25, was almost a Year before fulius II. was Pope. It was observed likewise, Julius II. was Pope. It was observed likewise, that the Seal swelled in the middle, and appear'd like fome old Scal newly clap'd on. And thus much out of these Dispatches of those able Negoriators, the Bilhop of Wiresfew, and Edward Lie the Kings Almoner; who, Irading the Transfumpt of the Breve to the King, Aril 2, by a Letter the twelfth of Jame following, allo certify'd our King of the Engling of Com. 6. E. ty dour King of the remains or clear in a mande, the Emperor's Chaplain, to the farl of Defound in Indianal, (which hash relation to the I have formerly faid of him) algother with the return of a Chaplain of the faid hard, in the Company; the Emperer reeming to take this in tended Divorce to much to leave this he thave as fit to give our king this Jacout's strong a ter which, I find also the Binep of Nacepter repeal d. This while, the common People, who with much anxiety artended the freeds of the great Affair, feem I, betwist Pity to Green Kallar, Vol. 16.

French King and his, whereof the Comte de Tu-renne, and Sir Gregory Cafalis should be Captains; and, in the mean while, that a General Peace should be treated of. But whether the Pope, as being late enough offended with the Guard which the Emperor put on him, would not now accept them from any other Prince; or that he thought them too flender to defend him; or that it would argue partiality to do any thing on these terms; or that otherwise he had made his private Peace with the Emperor, (which certainly was the truth;) I do not find the Pope accepted this offer. Howfoever, he feem'd flill to fear the Emperor; Infomuch, that by a Difpatch from Gregery Cafalis, dated January the third, 1529. I find the Pope for the better making both his own, and a General Peace, espe-follow'd at Cambray this year,) declar'd to Cardinal Woelfey, he thought it necessary to go him-cially betwixt Charles and Francis, (which alfo Jan 2.

forthe

Dic. 80.

Divorce

1528. and envy to Anne Bolen, (now appearing to be in the Kings favour) to cast our some murmuring and seditions Words; which being brought

Thousand Men, to be kept at the cost of the to the King's Ears, he thought fit to protest publickly in an Affembly of Lords, Judges, &c. call'd Nov. 8. to his Palace of Bridewell, That nothing but define of giving fatisfaction to his Conscience, and care of The K's Motives of groung fatisfaction to his Confidence, and core of to the Di effablishing the Succession to the Crown in a right and vorce. Industrial Line, but suffly procured him to controvert this Marriage; being (for the rest) as happy in the same such affection and vortues of his Queen, and Vinnee liverality in the Court, in such an abrupt and the Court of the Court, in such an abrupt and disconvened of soliton, that the description is a such as a such control of the court of the description of the court of the court of the description of the court of the description of the court of the discontented fashion, that she determin'd to abfent her felf altogether. Neither could she be induc'd (as Sanders hath it) to come to the King any more, till her Father was commanded (not without threats) to bring her thither. Who by reprefenting the common danger to them both obtained at length (though not without much difficulty) the confent of his unwilling Daugh-But is reter to r. turn; where yet she kept that diffance, call'J. that the King might eafily perceive how fensible she was of her rate Dismission. May

It was now mid-My 1529, when our King, understanding how the Pope intended a strict I cague with the Emperor, and pidging wifely aito, that Fr. neis, upon the restoring of his Children, might eafily be drawn from him, did refolve, without relying any longer on either of their Premifes, to take the best course he could, for giving a conclusion to this business. And the rather, in that matters feem'd daily more and more indispos'd for that conclusion de desir'd. For though Compejus, according to the order he had from the Pepe (as I find by a dispatch of febr Cafalis, Dat. Dec. 17. 1528.) did both per-Dec 17. 1528. fuade the (ucen to a Divorce, and diffuade the has a Bull fation being relative to the Queens enrring into Religion, or other diffolution of the Marriage;) in regard (as the Pope pretended) it was got by the importunity of Cardinal Worlley, with intention that it should be shew'd to the King and Cardinal only, as an arrha or token of his good will, and afterwards burnt; protesting neverthefion, but that the Bulla Devetalis should by no means be shew'd to any of the Kings Counsel-1 rs, or other Perfon whatfoever, though upon Outh of Secretic; it being fufficient that the The King King and Cardinal had from it already, in Camp jus hand. How our King yet was facisfied with this evaluen of the Popes, appears not to me by any Record, more, than that he still folicited the Pepe, that it might be exhibited publickly. How beit the Pope, who had far other thoughts, told our Agents, that he kept the Bulla Decretalis fecretly, as well from all his Cardinals; as fearing left the Emperor should call him to a Council for it. For the more caution, taking order that the Memory of it should be raz'd out of all his Archives. And, not flaying here, (as I find by our Records) he commanded one Francifco Campana (his Servant) into England, on pretence to confer with the King and Cardinal, but Program indeed to charge Campejus to burn the Decretal. Who be to our King, that he had not kept promife with felf in Person into Spain, and that Cardinal Wool-Jey should go along with him: not yet as Pope and Cardinal, but as two Legates, or Ambaffadors, for concluding a Peace. But this Journey Pope fails (if at least it were really intended) was inter-fick. rupted by the fickness of the Pope, which was thought so desperate, that our Cardinal Feb. 7. Feb. 7. wrote to Stephen Gardinar (then at Rome) that, by all means, he should procure the Papacy for him, being (as affairs then flood) the most different and equal that could be found in Chriftendom. To which purpose also, besides our www. s Kings Recommendations, the Cardinal had ob-intregues tain'd the French Kings Letters, written with for Papacy, much earnestness for him, that though the Conking from it, as having either way the end he prepes'd: yet he fail'd in both. Nor would he (as I find in the fame dispatch) let go out of his hand the decretal Ball mention'd before, being the absolute decision of the Cause, (the Dispension of the Cause, (the Dispension of the Cause). valescence of the Pope did frustrate this design, Stephen Gardiner yet was wish'd to keep the Letstepin Garante, yet was writed to help the was Record given, that if Woolfey could not be chosen, the few Cardinals which were for him (being a third Harpeter) part of the whole number) should put in a Protestation, and departing the Conclave, should in fome fecure place proceed to an Election, notwithstanding any to be made at Rome. But, whether the Pope having notice of this untimely ambition of our Cardinal, were now offended with him, or that otherwise his ingagement to with and atterwards burner proteining neverthed the Spanised (whereof, in a Diffusion from the role should proceed according to their Committee of the Emperor July 21. 1528, that came july 27. 152 him off; I find after this time the Pope more averse than ever. Therefore, notwithstanding a defign of his, that Cardinal Woodley and Campejus, having sinish'd the business of the Divorce, should afterwards go to conclude an Universal Peace, yet all that past in this affair afterwards (on his part) was little more than illusion. Which May 5. Sir Francis Bryan discovering, in a Dispatch to our King, plainly told him, no good was to be done; which our King also believing, had commanded Gardiner to threaten the Pope with his April 21, Sollicitation of the Princes of Almaine. Among whom I find particularly George Duke of Saxon (the Lutherans in vain opposing it) to have per-fuaded the Divorce. Gardiner, hereupon, wieth Gardiner more than one menace; though fo much in vain, the Pepe that, for a Conclusion, he advis'd our King to proceed upon the Commission given to the Legates, the Pope being (as he alledg'd April 21, Arril 21, 229.) So aw'd by the Cefareans, as he had rether fuffer much in anothers Name, than do ahim, about the Restitution of Cervia and Ravenny thing in his own. To incourage him the the fear which he had of the Emperor, fends to leters at Rome. Moreover, for seconding this adJune 12.

peror.

vice, Gardiner, by another Letter, May 4. fays there was danger of recalling the Commission given to Woolfey and Campejus; which was con-firm'd by divers other Letters from our Agents. Whereof Gregory Cafalis, in a Dispatch of 13 June following, gives a reason, in these words of the Pope; who, being at that time more flackly re-liev'd from the Confederates than he expected, and divers of his Subjects (for the reft) in Arms against him, said, Malle sese in pracess dari, & Cæsari à Stabulo, nedum à Sacrisinservire, quam inferiorum bominum, subditorum, Vassalorumg; rebellium injurias sustinere. The Remedy whereof he expected only from the Emperor. So that not only fear, but even hope making him obnoxious, he did, for more than one Reafon, encline to The Pope the Emperor. Our King alfo, being well ininclines to form'd hereof by certain excusatory Letters from Rome, and that a Treaty betwixt the Pope and Emperor (whereof there shall be mention) was already upon term of Conclusion, and an Interview appointed; gave order first to recal Gardiner and Bryan; yet fo as he neglected not, at May 2c.

the same time, to fend William Bonnet, Doctor of Law, to Rome, to hinder the Advocation of the Canfe; whereof he was fo jealous, that he intercepted not only those Dispatches which were fent to Rome from Campejus, or any elfe, but even those intelligences which Queen Katharine should give to her Aunt the Ludy Margaret, Governess of the Low-Countries. So that now our King, finding his Conscience unsatisfied, his Nobility in suspence, and the People murmuring at The King these procrastinations in an affair that so much The king concern'd the Succession, charg d the two carbonists of t concern'd the Succession, charg'd the two Car-

of both Universities, at Lambeth, that his cause

And now, publick notice of a folemn hearing being given, the Court was appointed to fit; the Queen chusing Archbishop Warbam, and Nicholas West Bishop of Ely, Doctors of the Law, and John Fisher Bishop of Rochester, and Henry Standish Bishop of St. Asaph, Doctors of Divinity, her Council, &c. according to the permillion the King gave her in that behalf. The passages whereof, out of an Ancient and Authentick Record in Parchment, fubfcrib'd by the three Notaries (us'd in this business, and remaining in the Custody of that great Antiquary, Sir Henry Spelman, Knight,) I shall set down, with as much particularity, as the context of my History will fuf-

The place appointed for hearing and determining the Caufe, was a great Hall in Black-Fryers in London, (commonly call'd the Parliament-Chimber.) The time, the thirty-first of May, 1529. The Judges, the two Cardinals above-mention id, whose Commissions I have thought fit to set down at large.

Commif-Clemens Episcopus, servus servorum Dei , Dilectis sion to De- filiis Thoma Sancta Cacilia Eboracen. & Laurentio legates to Sanétæ Mariæ in Transtiberim de Campejo nuncupatis presbyteris Cardinalibus, in Regno Anglia nostris & Apostolica sedis Legatis de latere, Salutem, & Apostolicam benedictionem. Sane ad aures nostras ex pluriworum fide-dignorum relatione frequenter perlatumest, de validitate illius matrimonii quod charissimus in Christo filius noster Henricus Angliæ Rex illustris, Fidei defensor & Dominus Hiberniæ, cum charissima in Christo silia nostra Catharina Regina, sedis Apostolica dispensatione prehensa, contraxisse & consummasse dignoscitur, subertam nuper in partibus illis quæstionem, quæ licèt in publicum Ecclesiæ judicium deducta hactenus non fuerit, causa tam n tam magni gravisque mo-menti exitus, viz. quem justitia & æquitas dederit, animos istic omnium sic habet suspensos, ut celerem ec maturam definitionem requirat, non fine maximo difcrimine proteland. Cum staque nos, ques ad justitiam in judicio & veritate, omnibus en aquo subministrandum Servum Servorum Deus constituit, facti veritatem per nos ipsos inquirere ac Causam hanc examinare non valemus, Confiderantes prateres quod factum, ex quo jus oritur, illic certius quam h'c, tum etiam citius expeditiusq; cognosci poterit, Cupientesq; reassertim in Regno illo sedi Apostolica semper devotissimo, omnem diffentionum materiam extingui, & dulciffimum illum pacis amorifa; intestinum concentum felicissimama; charitatis H. rmoniam multos jam annos consta tem retineri, ac in posterum conservari, dictama; proinde super træfeto matrimonio causam in judicio, justitia, & veritate decidi, certumq; firmum, validum, o maturum, quod maxime expedit, finem fortiri; Circum-(pectioni vestra ad audiendum ea omnia & singuls qua dicti matrimonii vires, dispensationisve Apostolicae cupuscung; coram vobis producendae aut exhibende validitatem aut invaliditatem contingent, deg; & fuper omnibus illis ac aliis quibuscunque me terris, allegationibus & causis dictum matrimonium aut dispen, sicnem concernent, seu tangentibus cognoscend. n.cn.m in causa dicti matrimonii & validitatis dispensationis, vocatis partibus, summarie & de p! mo, sine strepitus 👉 figura judicii procedendum, dispensationes qui scunq; Apostolicas, prout illas validas, efficaces, & sufficientes, invalidatve, inefficaces, minus sufficientes, surreptitias, aut arreptitias, aut alio quecunque m do enervat. inveneritis, tales illas elle, & biberi debere pronunciandum & declarandum, dietumq; matrimonium similiter, si ab alterutra parte petatur, prout animo debere, definiendum, sententiand. & decernendum; ac in eventum improbatæ dispensationis & declarationis nullitatis matrimonii, summarie & de plano sine strepitu of figura judicii, ut præfertur, sententium divortii pu-dicialiter proferend, denique tam Honrico Regi, quam Catharinæ Reginæ præfatis, ad alia vota commigrand. Licentiam in domino & facultatem tribuendum. Vobis conjunctim, & altero vestrum nelente aut impedito, divifim, citra omnem persona aut Jurisdictionis gradum, omni recusatione & appellatione remotis, vices & omnem authoritatem nostram committimus & demandamus. Vos etiam conjunctim, & altero veltrum nolente, aut impedito, divisim, ut præfertur, ad ea omnis quæ in hac commissione continentur duntamat exequenda, expedienda, ac plenæ finalig; executioni demandanda, Vices-gerentes nostros etiam ex corta nostra scientia croamus, & deputamus, ita, ut in priemiffis, quod nesthoritate & potestate nostra facere possemus, id ctians vos facere possitis. Vobis quoque tam prolem en frimo matrimonio susceptam, si id ita expedire Visium fuera, quam ex secundo matrimonio suscipiendam, legicimam guam ex sexumu maritmono jurispenaum, iqiimini decernend, prominciand. Eqitimini totico etimu uriuf 3 prolis, cenfaris & panis Ecelefaftici quibufeunque, per modum decreti aut finélionis perpetue, municuli & validanti omnibus validavibus & & ficacioribus modis 👉 formis qu.e de jure concipi 🖒 🗽 cogitari poterint, en certa nostra scientia, authoritate zipostelica, tenore presentium, potestatem paritar & authoritatem concedimus, Nan-obstantibus Concilias generalibus, Apostolicis constitutionibus, & ordinationibus editis, caterifg; contrariis quibufcunque. Dat l'atorbii, Anno Incarnationis Dominicæ Millesimo Quigente-simo Vicesimo Octavo. Sexto Id. Junii, Pontificatus no-Stri Anno Quinto.

Clement Bishop, Servant of the Servants of God, to our belov'd Sons Thomas Archbishop of Tark; Cardinal Sanctae Cecilia, and Laurence Campy ... Cardinal Sancta Maria in Transtiberim, our 'Legats de latere from the Apostolical See to the Vol. II.

Universi-

Feb. March

May 21.

hear the Caufe.

1529. Kingdom of England, Health and Apostolical Benediction. The Relation of very many Persons of undoubted Credit hath reach'd our Ears, concerning the Validity of that Marriage which our belov'd Son in Christ Henry King of England, Lefender of the Faith, and Lord of Ireland, (a Dispensation of the Apostolical See being first had) was known to have contracted and confumnated with our dearly belov'd Daughter in Christ Queen Katharine, from whence in those parts a Controversie hath arisen which hath so perplex'd the minds of Men, and held them in fuspence and expectation, what Justice and Equity will determine in a case of so peculiar a Nature, and of fo great Moment, not yet try'd in any publick Court of Ecclefiastical Judicature, that it is but necessary to proceed to force and the first surface and the force it is but necessary to proceed to some quick and speedy determination herein, to avoid that danger which must unavoidably ensue upon deferring it. But fince we, whom God has ap-pointed Servant of his Servants, to administer to all Men Impartial Justice in Judgment and Truth, are not able in our Person to inquire into the truth of the Fact, and examine this Caufe our felves: Confidering likewise that the Fact, concerning the right of which the present Debate is, may with more certainty, speed and expedition be inquir'd into and examin'd, there rhan here; farthermore, being desirous, that in that Kingdom, which has always flewn the greateft Affection and Obedience to the Apostolical See, all matter of Diffention may be taken away, the Bond of Peace and Love be ftrength-ned, and the bleffed harmony of Mutual Charity, which has fo many years continu'd, may ftill flourish, and be convey'd down to Posterity; and a Decision may be made of the above-mention'd Cause, concerning the foresaid Marriage according to the rules of Justice, Judgment and Truth, whereby this Difpute may, as its most expedient it should, obtain a firm, valid, certain and speedy Conclusion and End. For these purpofes, we do hereby give and grant a plenary Authority, and most ample Power and Commission to your Eminences in our own flead, either both jointly, or in case of unwillingness, or any other Impediment, to either of you fingly; that, being subject to the Authority and Jurisdiction of no Court or Person whatever, nor liable to any Appeal or Question concerning your Jurisdiction; you do hear and examine all and every thing which may relate to the Validity or Invalidity of the faid Marriage, or of any Apoftolical Difpensation whatever, to be exhibited and produc'd before you, and all other Things, Matters, Circumstances, Allegations and Caufes, which may any ways relate to, and concern the faid Marriage, and the faid Difpensation: And that you do proceed judicially, without Tumult or Diffurbance, fummarily and plainly to examine all Parties concern'd and knowing in the case of the said Marriage, and of the validi-ty of the said Dispensation; and if it shall to you appear, that any such Apoltolical Dispen-sations shall be sufficient, effectual and valid, or invalid, ineffectual, unfufficient, furreptitious or arreptitious, or on any account null and void, fuch you shall pronounce and declare finally that they are, and ought to be held; and in like manner concerning the faid Marriage, you shall, if by either Party requir'd, define, determine, and fi-nally fentence the same to be valid, just, lawful and firm, or on the other fide unjuft, invalid, and unlawful, and thereupon that it is and ought to be void and null, and is therefore by you there declar'd invalid, unjust, unlawful, void and null, on either side pronouncing Sentence, as shall appear most just according to the King Henry being his Brother, did marry the faid

Laws of Reason, and the Dictates of your own Consciences; and if it shall thus appear that the Dispensation is invalid, and the Marriage Null, that you do judicially, deliberately, fummarily and clearly, as aforefaid, pronounce a Sentence of Divorce, and grant a Faculty and Licence in the Lord to the foresaid King Henry and Queen Katherine to marry again. And we do hereby create and depute you jointly, or (if as abovefaid any ways hindred) feparately in our flead to execute, finish, fully and finally to determine all or any of the things contain'd in this Commission in fo ample a manner, that whatsoever we by our Power and Authority could have done in the Premises, all that you are hereby enabled to do as fully and effectually. We do likewife of our own certain knowledge, by our Apostolical Authority, and by the Tenor of these Presents, grant you Power and Authority to pronounce, fentence and publish, if it shall to you feem convenient, that the Children by the first Marriage as well as by the second are Legitimate; and that you do confirm and establish the Legitimacy of both forts, either by Cenfures and Ecclefiaftical Punishments to be inflicted ora the Gainfayers, or by way of Decree and perpetual Sanction, or by any other more valid and effectual Method or Form that can be thought of, or contriv'd to strengthen, and effectually fupport the fame: Any General Councils, Apoftolical Canons, publick Ordinances or Decrees whatfoever to the contrary notwithstanding.

> Given at Viterbo in the year of our Lord 1528. 6th of the Ides of June, in the fifth year of our Pontificat.

After the Commission was read, our Chroni- May 31. cles fay, the King was call'd, and appear'd Per- Han fonally in Court, at whose feet the Queen pro-ferated her felf, demanding Justice, Right, and Step. Pity, &c. But now to come to the Authentick The King Record. I find the King and Queen were by appears Bifthop Lengland, the Kings Confessor, considering the Authentick The King Standard Confessor appear upon 18 June 15. appear upon 18 June next enfuing. The King (for obferving his time.) gave Richard Sampfon, Dean of his Chappel, and Jehn Bell, Doctor of the Decrees, a Commillion Seal'd in green Wax, and dated at Greenvich, 15 June; by which he conflictuted them his Proctors, with Authority to refuse or accept the Court and Judgment of the two Cardinals, and, if need were, to Appeal; allowing them also to substitute other Proctors; binding himself finally fub Hypotheca & obligatione Bonorum, to ratific what they should do. But the Queen using a shorter way, ap-June 18 pear'd in Person, protesting yet against the Car-The Q dinals, as incompetent Judges; requiring fur-protests ther, that this her Protestation might be Recor-their Ju-ded, and fo departed presently out of the Court, ritaktion This while the Cardinals, who took into their Commission foin Longland, Bishop of Lincoln; John Clark, Bishop of Bath and Wells; John Ille, Abbot of Westmirter; and Doctor John Taylor, Master of the Rolls; fent unto the Queen Letters Monitory; declaring, if the appear'd not, they And is would notwithflanding proceed to execute their prenount-Commission; for which purpose the above ced Conmention'd Bishop of Bath and Wells, was emusical out. ploy'd; but the, refuting, is pronounc'd Contumacious.

Certain Articles were then put in by the Legates, against our King and Queen Kathwine, the principal Substance whereof was, that Prince Arthur did marry, and carnally know Queen Katharine, confirming also this Marriage by Cohabitation with her till his Death. After which, 1529. Lady Katharine, An. Dom. 1509. in facie Ecclefics, and had Children by her; which Marriage yet being as well Divino as Ecclefic fice jure prohibited, and (unless it may be otherwise made good) to be reputed in its self nullum omnino & invalidum, had caufed huge Scandal both in the Clergy and People of England, and of many other places, infomuch that it hath come to the Pope's Ears, who taking notice hereof, gave Commission to those Cardinals to hear and proceed in this bufiness, according to the importance of it.

This being done, the Queen is cited a fecond time to appear; which she refusing, is pronounc'd June 28. This hinder d not the Court again contumacious. yet to proceed, and appoint Doctor Taylor, Archdeacon of Buckingham, to examine the Witnesses; while themselves calling for the Dispensations that were alledged in favour of this Marriage, a certain Bull and Breve were exhibited, which I have thought fit to fet down at length as they are extant in the fame Record.

The Bull being sub sumbo, more Romana Curice, was an Original; but the Breve was only a Copy subscribed and signed with the hand of Juan Vergara, a Canon of Toledo, and Publick Notary, Authoritate Apostolica; and with the Seals of Balthazar de Castiglione the Pope's Nuncio, and of the Reverend Father in God Alfonjus de Fonseca, Archbishop of Toledo.

The BULL.

Ulius Episcopus servus servorum Dei dilecto filio Henrico chariffimi in Christo filii Henrici Angliz Regis illustris nato, & dilectæ in Christo filiæ Catharinæ charissimi in Christo filii nostri Ferdinandi Regis ac chariffimæ in Christo filiæ nostræ Elizabeth Reginæ Hifpaniarum & Siciliæ Catholicorum naiæ illustribus, Salutem & Apostolicam be-Romani Pontificis præcellens nedictionem. authoritas concessa sibi desuper utitur potestate, prout personarum, negotiorum & temporum qualitate penfata id in domino conspicit salubriter expedire. Oblatæ nobis nuper pro parte vestra petitionis series continebat, Quod cum alias tu filia Catharina, & tune in humanis agens quondam Arthurus chariffimi in Christo filii nostri Henrici Angliæ Regis illustrissimi primogenitus, pro confervandis pacis & amicitiæ nexibus & fœderibus inter chariffimum in Christo filium noftrum Ferdinandum, & chariffimam in Chrifto filiam nostram Eliz. Hispaniarum & Sici-Iiæ Catholicos ac præfatum Angliæ Regem & Reginam, matrimonium per verba legitime de præsenti contraxissetis illudque carnali co. pula forsan consummavissetis, Dominus Arthurus prole ex hujusmodi matrimonio non fuscepta decessit, cum autem sicut eadem petitio lubjungebat, ad hoc ut hujusmodi vinculum pacis & amicitiæ inter præfatos Reges & Reginam diutius permaneat, cupiatis matrimonium inter vos per verba legitime de præsenti contrahere, supplicari nobis fecistis, ut vobis in præmistis de opportunæ dispenfationis gratia providere de benignitate Apostolica dignaremur; Nos igitur, qui inter fingulos Christi fideles, præsertim Catholicos Reges & Principes, pacis & concordiæ amœ-volque & quemlibet voltrum à quibulounque 1529. excommunicationis, suspensionis, & interdict. aliisque Ecclesiafticis sententiis, censuris & pœnis, à jure vel ab homine, quavis occasione vel causa, latis, si quibus quomodolibet innodati existitis, ad effectum præsentium duntaxat confequendum, harum ferie abfolventes. Ez abfolutos fore cenfentes, hujufniodi supplicationibus inclinati, vobiscum, ut impedimento affinitatis hujusmodi ex promissis proveniente, ac constitutionibus & ordinationibus Apostolicis caterisque contrariis necuaquam obstantibus, matrimonium per verba legitime de præsenti inter vos contrahere, 8: in eo, poltquam contractum fuerit, etiamli jam forfan hactenus de facto publice vel clandestine contraxeritis, ac illud carnali copula confummaveritis, licite remanere valeatis, authoritate Apostolica tenore præsentium de specialis dono gratiæ dispensamus, ac vos &: quemlibet vestrum, si contraxeritis (ut pratertur) ab excessu hujusmodi ac excommunicationis sententia quam propterea incurriflis, eadem authoritate absolvimus, Prolem ex hujusmodi matrimonio sive contracto sive contrabendo susceptam forsan vel suscipiendam legitimam decernendo. Proviso quod tu (filia Catharina) propter hoc rapta nois fueris; volumus autem quod fi hujufmodi matrimonium de facto contraxistis, Confesfor, per vos & quemliber vestrum eligendus; pœnitentiam falutarem propterea vobis injungat, quam adimplere teneamini. Nihil ergo omnino hominum liceat hanc paginam nostræ absolutionis dispensationis & voluntatis infringere, vel ei aufu temerario contraire, fi quis autem hoc attentare præfumpferit, indignationem Omnipotentis Dei, ac beatorum Petri & Pauli Apostolorum ejus se noverit incursurum. Dat. Romæ apud Sanctum Petrum, anno Incarnationis Dominica Millesimo quingentesimo tertio. Septim. Cal. Januarii, Pontificatus nostri anno primo, Ulius Bishop, Servant of the Servants of God; to our beloved Son Henry, Son of our most dearly beloved in Christ Henry King of England, and to our beloved Daughter Katharine, Daughter of our most dearly beloved in Christ Ferdinand and Elizabeth, most Catholick King and Queen of Spain and Sicily, Health and Apostolical Benediction. The Supreme Authority of the Pope exercises its Power granted rily of the Pope exercises its Power granted from above, as it shall seem most whoshen and expedient in Christ, according to the difference of Persons, Things and Times. Your Petition lately exhibited to us did set firth that Too Daughter Katharine, and Arthur (eldest Son of the most Illustrians and our most beloved Son in Christ Henry Wing of English). in Christ Henry King of England) since deceas'd, for the better preferring and continuing the Leagues and Treaties of Peace and Friend-flip between our most dear Son in Christ Feet-dinand, our rooft dear Daughter in Christ Elizabeth, most Caholick King and Evecu of Spain and Steily, and the forefaid King and Queen of England, did luvjully contrast a Marnitatem vigere intensis desideriis affectamus, riage in Words de præsenti, and did perhaps subscrib'd it.

The BREVE, together mith the Assertations of those who 1529. confummate it by Carnal Knowledge, which Prince Arthur dy'd, leaving no Issue by the said Marriage ; Now whereas your Petition did further set forth, that to the end that the said Amity and good Friendship may be still strengthen'd and continu'd between the foresaid Kings and Queen, you did desire that a Marriage might be contracted between you, in order to which you did supplicate that we would of our Apo-stolical Grace and Favour grant you a suffi-cient Dispensation on account of the premi-ses; We therefore out of our hearty Inclination and earnest Desire that Peace and Concord (bould ever flourish and remain among all the Faithful in Christ, but more especially among all Catholick Kings and Princes, hereby absol-ving you and either of you from all Sentences of Prohibition, Suspension, Excommunication, and all other Ecclesiastical Censures and Penalties on any Occasion or Pretence whatever, either by any Person or Law inflicted upon you, or that in the Case foremention'd may be, by Suit yet depending 5 and as we do hereby judge you absolved, so in compliance with your so reafonable Request, by our Apostolical Authority, out of our meer and special Grace and Favour. by the Tenor of these Presents, we do dispence with you, so that any Impediment thro' the forefaid Affinity between you, any Apostolical Con-stitution, Ordinance or Pretence what soever notwithstanding, you may lawfully contract Marriage together per verba de præsenti, and when it is so contracted, altho' it should already have been either publickly and openly, or privately and claudestinely contracted, and perhaps by Carnal Knowledge confummated, that you therein may lawfully continue and remain, and we do by the Sume Authority absolve and free you and either of you from all Censure and Sentence of Excommunication, which you may have incurred by having de facto entered into this Contract of Marriage before this Dispensation; and we do further pronounce all the Children legitimate, either already or yet to be born from the said Marriage, either now or to be hereafter contracted. Provided that you (Daughter Katharine) have not by force and violence been hereto compell'd; provided also, that if you have already actually contracted the said Marriage, your Confessor, to be by you both or either of you appointed, do therefore lay upon you some wholesom Penance, which you are hereby oblig'd to do. Let therefore no mortal Man presume to instringe this our Sentence of Absolution and Dispensation, or with rash Boldness to contradict our Will berein; and if any one shall be so presumptuous as to attempt any thing contradictory hereunto, let him take notice that he shall therefore incur the Vengeance of the Almighty God, and of his blessed Apostles St. Peter and St. Paul.

OS Balthazar de Castiglione Mantuan. Apostolicæ sedis Notarius, in Hispaniarum Regnis, terrisque & locis temporali dominio Serenissimorum Principum Caroli in Imperatorem electi & Johannæ Regis & Reginæ Catholicorum Subjectis ejusdem sedis Nuncins, & Alfonsus de Fonseca miseratione dominica Archiepiscopus Toletan Hispaniarum Primas, ac Regnorum Castell. Archicancellarius, Universis & singulis ad quos præsentes literæ pervenerint, & quos nôsie fue-rit opportunum, Salutem in Domino. Noveritis, quod literas quondam Sanctiffimi in Christo patris fe. re. Julii Papæ secundi in sorma Brevis sub annulo Piscatoris, sanas & integras, non vitiatas, non cancellatas, nec aliqua parte sui suspectas, sed mni protius vitio & suspicione carentes, pro parte Sa. Cæs. & Catholicæ Majestatis Caroli divina favente Clementia E. Ro. Imperatoris, & in ejus præfentia nobis præsentatas cum ea qua decuit reverentia recepimus. Quarum quidem literarum tenor erat in exteriori suprascriptione Dilecto filio Henrico, chariffimi in talis. Christo filii nostri Henrici Angliæ Regis Illust. nat. Illust. & dilect. in Christo fil. Cathar. chariffimi etiam in Christo filii nostri Ferdinandi & char. in Christo sitiæ nostræ Elizabeth Reginæ Hispaniarum & Siciliæ Catholicorum natæ Illust. interius vero talis.

Given at St. Peters in Rome in the Year of our Lord 1503. Seventh of the Calends of January, in the first Year of our Pontificat.

Julius Papa secundus : dilecte fili & dilecta in Christo silia, Salutem & Apostolicam benedictionem; Romani Pontificis præcellens authoritas concessa sibi desuper unitur potestate. prout (personarum, negotiorum & temporum qualitate pensata) id in Domino conspicit salubriter expedire. Oblatæ nobis nuper pro parte vestra petitionis series continebat, quod cum alias tu filia Catharina, & tunc in humanis agens quondam Arthurus chariffimi in Christo filii nostri Henrici Angliæ Regis Illnstris. primogenitus, pro conservandis pacis & amicitiæ nexibus & fœderibus inter præfatum Angliæ & chariffimum in Christo filium nostrum Ferdinandum Regem & charistimam in Christo filiam nostram Elizabeth Reginam Catholicos Hispaniarum & Siciliæ, matrimonium per verba legitime de præsenti contraxeritis, illudque carnali copula confummaveritis, quia tamen Dominus Arthurus, prole ex hujulmodi matrimonio non suscepta, decessit, & hujusmodi vinculum pacis & con-nexitatis inter præsatos Reges & Reginam ita firmiter verifimiliter non perduraret, nist etiam illud alio affinitatis vinculo confoveretur & confirmaretur : ex his, & certis aliis causis, desideratis matrimonium inter vos per verba legitime de præsenti contrahere: Sed quia desiderium vestrum in præmissis adimplere non potestis, dispensatione Apostolica desuper non obtenta, nobis propterea humiliter supplicari fecistis, ut vobis providere in pramissis de dispensationis gratia & benignitate Aposto1529, lica dignaremur. Nos igitur qui inter fingulos rio fupremo, Don Johanne Manuele, Don 1529 Christi fideles, præsertim Catholicos Reges & Laurentio de Gorrendo comite Pontisvallium Principes 5 pacis & concordia amounitatem vigere intentis defideriis affectamus, his & aliis caufis animum nostrum moventibus, hu jufinodi fupplicationibus inclinati, vobifcum, ut aliquo impedimento affinitatis hujufmodi ex præmissis proveniente non obstante matrimonium inter vos contrahere, & in eo, poltquam contractum fuerit, remanere libere & licite valeatis, authoritate Apoltolica per præsentes dispensamus: Et, quatenus forsan jam matrimonium inter vos de facto publice vel clandestine contraxeritis, ac carnali copula confummaveritis, vos & quemlibet vestrum ab excessi hujusmodi, excommunicationis fententia quam propterea incurriftis, eadem authoritate absolvimus, ac etiam vobiscum ut in hujusmodi matrimonio sic de facontracto remanere, seu illud de novo contrahere inter vos libere & licite valeatis, similiter dispensamus, prolem ex hujusmodi matrimonio five contracto five contrahendo suscipiendam legitimam decernend, volumus autem, si hujusmodi matrimonium de facto contraxiftis, Confessor, per vos & quemlibet vestrum eligendus, pænitentiam, quam adim-plere teneamini, propterea vobis injungat. Dat Romæ apud Sanctum Petrum sub annulo Dec. 26. Piscatoris, die xxvi. Decemb. Millesimo Quingentelimo tertio. Pont. nostri Anno primo. Sigismundus.

> Quibus quidem literis diligenter per nos Balthazarem de Castiglione tanquam nuncium Apostolicum, & Alfonsum de Fonseca tanquam loci ordinarium, inspectis, & perlectis, Quia eas fanas & integras, ac omni prorfus vitio & suspitione, (ut præmittitur carentes invenimus, ideo, ad requisitionem expressam præfat. Cæfar. & Catholicæ Majestatis, tam fuo quam conjunctorio nomine Serenissima Dominæ Catharinæ Reginæ Angliæ fuæ chariffimæ materteræ & confanguineæ, afferent. ipfius requirent. & prædict. Reginæ intereffe, ob atternitatis memoriam, & ne vetustate prædictum originale deperent, utque de illius tenore ubi opus fuerit edoceri possit, & in locis in quibus, ob bellorum viarumque discrimina, non liceat tuto ipsum originale dispensationis transmittere aut committere, ejuldem Majeltatis requilitioni, tanquam jultx& rationabili, annuentes, easdem literas exemplari & transumi ac in publicam formam redigi mandavimus ; decernentes & volentes ut huic præsenti transumpto publico plena sides deinceps adhibeatur, in locis omnibus ubi fuerit oportunum, perinde ac si originales ipsæ literæ exhiberentur. Quibus omnibus uterque nostrum authoritatem nostram interposuimus, & decretum. Et, ad ampliorem evidentiam præmiflorum, præfens instrumentum manu nostra uterque signavimus, Idemque Sigillorum nostrorum justimus appensione commu-Anno à Nativitate Domini Millesimo Quin-

Militibus velleris aurei, Carolo de Popeto Domino de la Chaulx Lodovico à Flandria Domino de Prato, & Nicolao Perrenot Domino de Grande villa, omnibus confiliariis prædictæ facræ Cæf. & Catholicæ Majestatis tellibus ad præmissa vocatis specialiter atque rogatis. Balthazar de Castiglione Nuncius & Collector Apostolicus, A. Toletan. Et ego Johannes Vergara Canonicus Tolcian, in facra Theologia magister, publicus Apostolica authoritate notarius, qui pramissis omnibus, una cum prænominatis teltibus interfui 3 hoc publicum instrumentum fignavi, & subscripti, in testimonium veritatis, per eandem Cass. Catholicam Majestatem rogatus & requisitus.

TE Balthazar de Castiglione of Mantua, Nuncio of the Said See, in the Kingdom of Spain, and all other Territories and Places Subspain, and an outer terminal such tracts for jet to the Temporal Dominion of their most Serene Majesties Charles elected Emperor and Joan, most Catholick King and Queen, and Astonius de Fonseca, by the Grace of God, Archbishop of Toledo, Primate of Spain, and High Chancellor of the Kingdoms of Cacity. stile, to all and every one to whom these Presents may come, and whom the Knowledge thereof may any ways concern, Health in the Lord. Know ye that we formerly received with all due reverence the Letter of our most holy Father in Christ, Pope Julius II. of happy memory, in sorm of a Breve, under the Scal of the Fisher; which Letter was sheron us in the presence of his most Sacred, most Imperial, and most Catholick Ma-Sacrea, maje Imperial, and maje Catomica Rus-peror of the Romans, being whole and entire, no ways viciated nor cancell'd, nor on any ac-count or in part of it to be suspected, but five from all manner of suspection or colour of De-ceit. The outward Superscription of which Letter was in this manner: To our beloved Son Henry, Son of our most dearly beloved in Christ Henry King of England, and to our beloved Daugher Catherine, Daughter of our most dear-ly beloved in Christ Ferdinand and Elizabeth, most Catholick King and Queen of Spain and Sicily. And the Contents of the Letter within was to this effect: Julius II. Pope, sends you, Dear Son and dear Daughter in Christ, Health and Apostolical Benediction. The Supreme Authority of the Pope exercifes its Power granted from above, as it shall seem most wholesom and expedient in Christ, according to the difference of Persons, Things and Times. Your Petition lately exhibited to us did fet forth that you, Dugbter Catherine, and Arthur (eldeft Son of the most Illustrious and our most beloved Son in Christ Henry King of England) since de-castd, for the better preserving and continuing the Leagues and Treaties of Peace and Friendmiri. Dat. Toleti die duodecima Decemb. Ship between our most dear Son in Christ Ferdinand, our most dear Daughter in Christ Elizagentesimo xxviii. Præsentibus ibidem illustribus & generosis viris, Dominis Henrico comite a Naslau, Marchione de Zenete cameradid lawfully contrast a Marriage in Words de 1929. præsenti , and did perhaps consummate it by carnal Knowledge ; Now because Prince Arthur dving without Iffue by this Marriage, in all likelihood this bond of Peace and Amity between the faid Kings and Queen would not last fo sirm, as if strengthen'd and supported by a new tye of Affinity: You therefore, for these and certain other Causes, desire lawfully in Words de prasenti to contract Marriage; which desire as you may not in the Premifes fulfil without our Apostolical Disponsation therein sirst had, You therefore have made it your humble request, that we would of our Apostolical Grace and Fawour wouchsafe you our Dispensation in the Premises. We therefore, out of our hearty Inclina-tion and carnest Desire that Peace and Concord should ever flourish and remain among all the Baithful in Christ, but more especially among all Catholick Kings and Princes 5 thefe and other Reasons us thereunto moving, in compliance with your Request herein, do by these presents of our Apostolical Authority dispence with you, so that it may be and is lawful for you, any Impediment ariling from your Amnity by reason of the Premiles notwithstanding, to contract Marriage together, and in it so contracted lawfully and freely to live and continue: And, instituted as per-baps you may have already publickly or clande-finely de facto contracted Marriage, and con-Summated it by Carnal Knowledge, we do in fuch case by the same Authority free and absolve you or either of you from Censure and the Sentence of Excommunication, which you may thereby have incurred, and we in like manner dispence with you berein, that you may be impower'd freely and lawfully to live and continue in the Marriage de facto thus contracted, or to contract it men ; and we do declare and pronounce that all the Children hern or to be born from this Marringe contrasted or to be contrasted, be, and be accounted legitimate. But our Will is, that if this Marriage was contrasted de facto before this Dispensation, that a Confessor, to be appointed by both or either of you, do therefore injoin you Some Penance, which you are hereby bound to do. Given at Rome at St. Peters under the Seal of the Fisherman, December 26, 1503. in the first Year of our Pontificat.

Sigifmundus.

Which Letter being by us Balthazar de Castiglione as Apostolical Nuncio, and Alfonsus de Fonteen, as Ordinary of the place, diligently read over and carefully examined, and because we found it us is asirefuld perfect and intire, without any Colour or Suspicion of Deceit, therefore by the express Defire of his said Imperial and Catholick Majefly, both in his own, and in the Name of the most Screw Catherine Queen of England his most dear Aunt and Cosin, in as much as it greatly concerned both himself and the faid Queen, for the perpetual remembrance thereof, that the forefaid Original may not be con showed by time, and that certain knowledge may be had of the Tenor and Contents of it as often as it shall be necessary, and in such places as by reasin of Wars or the hazard of Carriage it may not be safe to transmit or trust the Original Di-Spensation, in compliance with the so reasonable and just request of his said most succeed Majety, we caused the said Letter to be copied, transseribed and publicity attested; willing and decrease that to this Copy thus saithfully transcribed and publicity notified as unquestionable Credit shall, in all places where it is thought sitting to produce it, be given as to the Original Letter it for all which both of us do give our Anthoritative Decree and Sanction. And for the fuller and more certain consistential of the truth of these Premises, we have both to this present Instrument set our Hands and Seds.

Given at Toledo this Twelfth of December, in the Year of our Lord, 1528

In the presence of these most Noble and most Illustrious Lords, Henry Count de Nasiau. The Marquis de Zenete, Lord High-Chamberlain. Don Juan Manuel, Oon Laurence de Gorreudo, Knights of the Golden Fleece. Charles de Popeto, Lord of Chaulx. Ludoviens à Flandria, Lord of Prato. Nicholaus Perrenot, Lord of Grandville. All of the Priva-Council to his faid most Sacred, most Imperial and most Catholick Majesty, who were specially called and appointed Witnesses bereto. Bulthazar de Catholione, Nuncio and Apostolical Collestor; Alphonsius, Archbishop of Toledo. I Johannes Vergara, Canon of Toledo, Prossifier in Divinity, and by the Apostolical Authority appointed Publick Notary, who was present at the significant self-sid Witnesses, such faid Witnesses subscribe their hands, have signed this Publick Instrument, and six my Nameto it, in testimony of the Truth, being threumo called and requird by his faid Imperial Catholick Majety.

Against these Dispensations the following Objections July 9

I. That the Peace and Unity betwixt England Objeand Spain was firm before the granting of those the Difpenfation, which yet was alledged as a squist the Bull and Bleve.

II. That the faid Dispensation, as being grounded on this Pretext, must be held surreprisions, Henry VIII. being then not above thirteen, and confequently unable for Marriage, which also if the Pope had known beforehand, or that otherwise it had been represented to him, he would not have easily granged any such Dispensation.

not have easily granted any such Dispensation.

III. Because it was presented that Harry VIII. had defir'd the March only for maintaining Peace betwirk the two Kingdoms; whereas, (being then not above thirteen) he must be thought uncapable of such Thoughts.

IV. That though this Difpenfation might once be thought to have his Force and Vertue, yet feeing the Motive of granting it was grounded upon the above-mention'd Peace, and that one of the faid Princes dy'd before the Iolemnizing of the faid Marriage, the Caufe of the Difpenfation mut be held void.

V. That, supposing the Objection of a slinicy were taken away by vertue of the fail Dilper fation, yet the Objection de publica honglate vers not clear d.

VI. That the Breve above-mention'd process by the Tenor of it to contain many Uality ds and Sufpicions, and particularly that his 85 to nd lfo erReafons against them.

Tuly 12.

July 14.

July 10 Depoi

concern-

Arthur's

bedding

differ from the Bull, fo that it may be thought forged fince the rime of the Questions moved concerning this Matrimony; as by comparing them together may be manifeltly gather'd.

This also was urged by these Reasons: 1. That in the Register-Book of the Breves at Rome, no fuch Breve is found, or any Argument that fuch a Breve was made.

2. That likewise neither in the Chartophylacio, or Paper-Chamber of the King, no fuch Breve is extant, nor otherways, in the private Treaties of the Marriage, any mention is made thereof.

3. That in the Date of the faid Breve, as it is exemplify'd, the Year of our Lord is discrepant from the vulgar account; for whereas the Stile of the Court of Rome begins always from the Nativity of our Lord, this feems to be a Year be-Julius was made Pope.

All which Objections were deliver'd to the King's Proctor, that he might answer to them. Whereupon Witneffes being summon'd to appear July 12.

Thomas Duke of Norfolk, Charles Duke of Suffolk, Thomas Marquis Dorfet, George Earl of Shrewsbury, Thomas Viscount Rochfort, Robert Viscount Fitz-water, John Bishop of Carlile, Sir David Owen, Sir John Huffey, Sir Richard Weston, Knights, with divers others, presented themselves to be examin'd, by the Archdeacon of Buckingham, abovemention'd.

In the mean while, these two Articles were added to the former, as ferving to strengthen the Objections above-mention'd.

1. That the Year for Pope's Breves begins Dεcember 26, and the Year for Bulls the 25th of March.

2. That in all Marriages contracted within the Kingdom of England, the Form hath been in Words, De præsenti, ego accipio te, &c.

Businesses being thus ripe for examination of Witnesses, the Depositions of two antient Ladies, who excus'd themselves by their Infirmity from appearing in Person, were publickly read.

1. The first, being Mary Counters of Effex, said little, but in general terms.

2. But Agnes the old Dutchess of Norfolk, who ons taken was prefent at the Marriage at St. Paul's in London, ing Prince declar'd the Age of Prince Arthur at the time of bedding this faid Marriage to be about fifteen; and more-kashariae, over, did positively affirm, that she saw Prince Arthur and the Lady Katharine, alone, in bed to-gether, the next Night after their Marriage. Which therefore, as also a following Deposition of the Vifcountes Fitz-water, may ferre to ansand de fiver Sanders's Tale, where he faith, a grave schif, ang. Matton was put into the fame bed with him, to hinder the Prince from knowing her carnally.

3. George Earl of Shrewsbury depos'd, the Marriage was celebrated at St. Paul's, Decimo septimo Henrici Septimi, 1501. adding further, that Prince Arthur was born at Winchester, secundo Henrici Septimi; and that he believ'd the Prince knew his Lady carnally, both as being able fo to do, as also because himself knew his Wife being not fix-

4. William Warbam Archbishop of Canterbury, being examin'd, protests not to reveal any Secrets of the Queen, as being her fworn Counfellor. the Marriage in the Bishop of London's Palace, For the rest, as he answerd warily to the Que-

1529. Inditing, as also many Clauses and Circumstances slions propounded him concerning the Validity 1529 of the Match, infomuch that he referr'd himfelt therein to the Judges, who were to determine it; fo yer he made no difficulty to confess that he approv'd it not at first; which also he declar'd, not only in a Contestation which he had with Richard Fox Bilhop of Wincheffer, who perluaded it, but in certain Words to King Henry VII. himfelf, whom he told plainly, that the Marriage feem'd to him neither honourable, nor well-pleafing to God. Adding further, that because the faid King Henry VII. appear'd not much inclin'd to the Marriage, that he the faid Deponent in treated him to perfuade his Son Prince Ham; to protest that he would not take the I adv Katherine to Wife, and that he should renew this Protestation when he came to the Crown; which also he the faid Deponent believeth was made. Notwithflanding, that when the Bull of Difpenfation was granted, that he the faid Deponent contradicted it no more; and that the murmuring of the People on that occasion was quieted, till the King's Confcience being troubled, reviv'd it again.

5. Sir William Thomas, Knight, deposed, Prince Arthur and the Lady Katharine liv'd five Months, partly about London, and partly at Ludlow, in houlhold together as Man and Wife; and that he heard Sir William Wodal, who was at the Prince's Christning, fay, that he was above fifteen at the time of his Marriage, and the Lady Katharine elder.

6. Sir Anthony Poynes, Knight, deposed, that Prince Arthur was above fifteen at the time of his Marriage.

7. Thomas Marquis Dorfet deposed, he saw a Register of the Nativity of the King's Children; by which he found the Prince Arthur born September 20. 1486. and that at the time of his Marriage (which was upon a Sunday, in November. decimo septimo Henrici septimi) he was of a good and fanguine Complexion, and able as he fuppos'd for that purpose.

8. Robert Viscount Fitzwater deposed, the Prince was then about fifteen, and Queen Katharine elder; and that, the next day after being in bed together, (which he remember'd after they enter'd to have been folemuly blefs'd) he waited at Breakfast on Prince Arthur, where Maurice St. Johns did carve, and he the Lord Fitzwater gave Drink: At which time the faid Maurice demanding of the Prince how he had done that night? The Prince answer'd, I have been in Spain this night.

9, 10, 11. Thomas Lord Darry, William Lord Montejoy, and Henry Guldeford, Knight of the Garter, faid little, but by way of publick re-

12. Charles Duke of Suffolk deposed, that he was in the Bishop of London's Palace the morrow next following the day of Marriage, and that he waited there upon the Prince at Breakfast, confirming moreover in effect the Words of Maurice St. John, before fet down. Furthermore, he added, that the Shrovetide following the Marriage, (which was in November preceding) the faid Prince began to decay, and grow feeble in body; which grew, as the faid Sr. John related, by reason the said Prince lay with the Lady Katharine.

13. David Owen deposed, that Prince Arthur was born at Winchester, secundo Henrici septimi; which he knew, because he was at the Christen-

14. Thomas Duke of Norfolk, Lord Treasurer of England, deposed, that he being the day of Q Vol. II.

1529. heard the Prince's Words to Maurice St. John, when he faid he had been that night in the midft of Spain; by which Words, as also because Prince Arthur was a Gentleman of a good Complexion and Nature, and above fifteen, he believes that and matther, and above inteen, he beneves that he carnally knew his Lady; because himself also at the same age did carnally know and use: And he believes this the rather, that he heard from credible Persons, that the said Prince Arthur did lie with the faid Lady Katharine five or fix nights afterwards.

15. Zintbony Willoughby, Knight, deposed, that being the morrow after the Marriage in the Prince's Privy-Chamber, the faid Prince spake afore divers Witnesses these Words, Willoughby, give me a Cup of Ale, for I have been this night in the midft of Spain: After which he faid, Mafters, it is a good Pastime to have a Wife; which Words he repeated also diversother times. Moreover, he heard fay they lay at Ludlow together the Shrovetide next following.

16. Nicholas Bishop of Ely said, he could depose nothing concerning the carnalis copula, but that he doubted of it, because the Queen often sub testimonio conscientiæ suæ said to this Deponent, that the was never carnally known of Prince Arthur, though otherwise he must confess them both to be legitime estats at the time of their Mar-riage. He doubted further, whether the Cardinals were competent Judges, an Appeal being made from then.

17. Richard Sacheverel, Knight, deposed, the People faid commonly, that it was unfit one Brother should marry the other Brother's Wife.

18. Thomas Viscount Rochefort, deposed, that he heard divers of Prince Arthur's Followers confirm the Words he used, of his having been in Spain the night of his Marriage. Moreover, he heard say, that King Henry VIII. was persuaded by his Confessor, about two Years since, to ab-flain from the Bed of the Lady Katharine, left he fhould offend his Confcience.

19, 20, 21, 22, 23. Sir Richard Weston, and Sir John Husser, Knights, deposed, the Age of King Henry VIII. was thirty eight upon the Eve of the Feaft of St. Peter and St. Paul last; which Viscount Recbefort also confirm'd, faying the place of his Birth was Greenwich, and the Year was 1491. and Day the twenty eighth of June; which Robert Viscount Fuzzwater confirmed also, adding that King Henry VII. died two Days before the Feaft of St. George, twenty Years fince; with whom David Oven, Servant and Counfellor with whom David Oven, Servant and Counteilor to King Homy VII. agreed, fave only, that he faid it was three Days before the Feaft.

24. Thomas Duke of Norfolk deposed, that Pedro de Ayala or Allea, and Doctor de Puebla, Ambassadors from Spain, were much in favour heretofore with Homy VII. and that Homy VII. died before the Marriage betwixt his Son Prince Henry and the Princes Katharine; and Queen Isabel or Elizabeth her Mother died also before that time. 25. William Warham Archbishop of Canterbury, and Counfellor to Henry VII. and Henry VIII. for thirty fix Years laft paff, deposed, that he conceived Henry VIII. to be under thirteen, at the time of Dispensation granted; because King Henry his Father told him that he was impubes, after that time. Whereupon this Deponent reply'd to the King, that any Protestation he should then make, would be of no force, and therefore he fhould make it again one or two Days after his coming to annos pubertatis.

26, 27. Charles Duke of Suffolk, and Thomas Marquis Dorfet, examined again, faid little but what was formerly fet down.

28. Pedro Mates, Utriufque Juris Doctor, Native that he remembers. Furthermore, that upon con-of Barcelona in Spain, who had lived in the Court of Rome thirty Years, in exercitio confurum, depo-fed, that the Date of Years there is computed after three divers manners; fo that Judgments, Contracts, and last Wills, bear date from the Nativity 25 Decembris; Litera Apostolica sub pian-bo xxv of March; Litera Apostolica per Breve sub annulo piscatoris, ceræ rubeæ impresso feribuntur simpliciter & absolutæ absque expressione ipsins Domini aut Nativitatis, aut Incarnationis, sed solum Anno M. D. &c. Yet fo that he conceiv'd it began always à Nativitate, seilieet xxv Decembris; neither doth he know any thing to the contrary, except the Pope's Secretary after the Stile.

29. Nicolans Rustiens of Lucca in Italy, faith, that Annus Domini in Brevibus Apostolicus is computed from the Nativity of our Lord.

30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36. Thomas Viscount Rochefort, Henry Guilford Knight, Thomas Marquis Notarius Publicus, John Taverner, and John Clamport, being examined, deposed, that the Forms of Marriages are always in verbis de præsenti, in

37. The Lady Elizabeth, Wife to Viscount Fitzwater, deposed, that she saw the Lady Katharine and Prince Arthur in bed together, which was bleft, and that she left them alone together.

Hereupon the Depositions were published, and July 17: the King's Proctor fummon'd to receive those Acts and Writings he deliver'd into the Court; but he not appearing, is pronounced contuma- Queen

The Commissioners yet proceeded to require contumathe fight of the Archiva, and Record concerning cious. this butiness; for which purpose Thomas Wrinthesly, and Thomas Tong King of Arms, had been employ'd: These Men certified that Prince Arthur died in the Castle of Ludlow the second of April, 1502. and that his Brother Henry was born the twenty eighth of June, 1491. and that the Marriage betwixt Prince Arthur and the Lady Kathariage between trinice Julius and the form was the fourteenth of November, 1501.

This being done, a Deposition of Richard Fox, 1527.

Agr 5 & 6.

nounced

Bishop of Winchester, taken by Doctor Wolman, Apr 5 & 6.

April 5 and 6. 1527. was read. The most sub- Winchester stantial part whereof was, that he conceived Do- exmined, ctor Puebla did first motion this Match, and that more than one Bull was impetrated for dispensing therewith, whereof two remained in England, one or two were extant in Spain, but all of the fame Tenor, and gotten without asking the confent of Henry VIII. Furthermore, that he did not remember that Henry VIII. when he came to age, did expresly consent to, or diffent from the intended Marriage, yet that he believed that a Protestation was made in the Name of Henry VIII. to this effect: That notwithstanding any Contract or Tokens mutually fent, or Cohabitation in the House of King Henry VII. he would not hold himself bound to ratifie this Act done in his Non-age; and that this Protestation is to be found inter protocolla Magistri Ryden, then Clerk to the Council, before whom it was made. As for the Person by whom this Protestation was made, Coram Magistro Ryden Notario publico; credit quod vel ipsemet, vel Magister Thomas Rutha tune Secretarius Domini Regis, & postea Episcopus Dunelm. vul Mr. Doctor West tune censtiliarius ejustem domini R.gis & nunc Episcopus Eliens, secit eandem protesticie-nem nomine domini nostri Regis Henrici Octavi moderni ; præsentibus tune ibidem Comite de Surrey tune Thefaurario Anglia & postea Duce Norfolcia ac domimina Catharina, at recolit, ac infra set de Erifopi Dunelm, vulgariter nuncupat. Durelme-place. Adding further, that our King was not prefent there, 1520. forence had betwixt Henry VII. and himfelf, he found it was the intention of that King, that his Son Hemy should marry the faid Lady Katha-rine, although he deferr'd the Solemnization of this intended Mattimony, by reason of some discord which was at that time betwist him and the King of Spain, for the calling back of the Dowry. He added moreover, that King Henry intended not (that he knew) to marry the Mother of Charles V, but his Aunt Margaret, Dutchels of Savor.

This Examination being compleat, and fet down by Andrew Smith Notary, the faid Doctor Woolman requir'd him to subscribe his Hand; which was refus'd by the faid Bifhop, both be-cause he was blind of both eyes, as that he was not admitted to take any Counsel or Advice about it. But Doctor Woolman preffing him on the Kings part, that he should subscribe his Name, he at last affented, out of the reverence he bore to the King, and that he never contravened him in any thing. Whereupon he fubfcrib'd his Name April 8. the year above mention'd, being 1527 After which also another Instrument of this tenor was produc'd.

Augustinus Spinola tt' Sancti Cyriaci in thermis presbiter Cardinalis, Sancta Romana Ecclesia Camerarius, Universis & singulis præsentes literas Inspecturis Salutem in domino. Rationi convenit & congruit honestati, ut de his quæ à Romanis Pontificibus processerunt, & quæ in eorum archivis & registris scripta, & reor qua in corum archivis or regigiris feripia, or re-gifrata funt, cum ab aliquibus petitur, teftimonium veritatis perhibeatur; hine est, quod nos Universitati vestræ tenore præsentium sidem sacimus & attestamur, in libris & Registris cameræ Apostolicæ, viz. in mur, in tibra & Registris camera Apostolica, vit. in libro Registris Srevium Anui prini, scumdi, & tertii felicu recordationis Julii Papa fecundi, vidimus & legimus quoslam literas Aposlolicus, in sorma sirvii esiladem Julii Papa fecundi (u mori es) Registratas, quarum tenor successivo sequitum, & est talis. Charissimo in Christo filio nostro, Anglia Registulleria Charissimo in Christo fili nostro, Anglia Registulleria con benedictionem. Accepturus literas sua ferenitatis, in authorabia exatis and Outsila estatus authorabia exatis and Outsila estatus. in quibus nobis gratias agus, qued Oratoribus tuis bonorifice obviam proditum sit, quod nos eos benigne au-dierimus, ac liberali responso opportunisque gratiis & favoribus prosecuti suerimus : sacu (sili Charissime) pro solita pietate, ut ea etiam tibi sint grata, quæ à nobis præteriri non solent. Declaracimus nostris bonis in te mentis affectum verbis & rebus quibus potuimus, Declarabimus & quotidie magis, ita exigente tuæ fere-nitatis in nos & fanctam Apostolicam sedem devotione & observantia singulari. De dispensatione matrimoniali nunquam negavimus, nec ullam suspitionem præbuimus, quo minus eam facere vellemus, ut aliqui mi-nus vere dixerunt. Sed respondimus, nos expectare in illa concedenda tempus magis accommodatum, ut con-Sultius & maturius fieret, cum hujus sancta sedis & Jattia & maiurin steers, eum nayas saure seu-urtiusque partis bonore. Eam itaque cum expediveri-mus, ut deliberavimus, ad tuam ferenitatem (magni-enim momenti est) per dilectum filium Robertum Shir-bonnen. Decanum Sancti Pauli Londoniess, nume se-lectum saure seure oratoribus tuis, qui maxima doctrina modestiam, sidem, diligentiamque præ se tulit, mittere cogitamus; duplici ratione; Cum quod per eum secrete & tutissime perferretur, tum ut talem virum tantaque virtute & probitate præditum Serenitati tuæ diutius præservemus, probiate preditum Serenitati tua diutim prafervenna, ut ejus fide co opera diutius frui possit. Rome enim fine viitæ periculo diutius este portest, propera aeris intemperiem & assus bitolerabiles, &c. Dat. Romæ apud sincium Perum, P.T. Julii, Millessimo Quirrentessimo Quarro, Pantif. nossri primo.

Angustimus Spimola Priestl, Cardinal St. Syriaci in Tormis, and High Chamberlain of the Holy Church in Rome, to all and singular to whom these preference was received.

these presents may pertain, Health in the Lord. It is not only agreeable to Reason, but a point of Honesty, that when enquiry is by any Perfons made into the Processes of the Popes which 1529 have been written, register'd, and enter'd into their Books, and preferv'd in their Archives, that a true and just account of them should be given: For which reason we do make known and teffifie to every of you, by the tenor of thele Prefents, that in the Books and Regusters of the Apostolical Chamber, to wit, in the Book of the Register of the Breves of the first, second and third years of Pope Julius II. of happy Memory; we have feen, and read a certain Apostolical Letter in form of a Breve of the faid Pope Julius II. Register'd according to Custom, the tenor of which is to this effect. To our most dear Son in Christ, the most Illustrious King of England, Health and Apostolical Benediction. Most Dear Son in Christ, we have receiv'd your Highnesses's Letters, in which you give us thanks for so graciously receiving your Ambassadors, for granting them such ready Audience, giving them fuch kind Answers, and bestowing upon them other marks of our Grace and Favour. To esteem so highly, most dear Son, which light favours is the effect of that Piety and Gratitude you have never fail'd to shew. We have in-deed already made manifest both in our Words and Actions, as far as we were able, our good affection to you, nor shall we ever be backward to manifest the same in more instances, it being but reasonable and just so to do, on account of your Highness great Zeal for, and particular Devotion towards us, and the Apoftolical See, As for the Dispensation in the point of your Marriage, it has never been by us deny'd, have we ever given any just cause to suspect that we would deny it, as some have basely suggefted: On the contrary our answer has been, that we wait only till a more feafonable and proper time shall offer it self, that it may be done more to the reputation of both Parties, and to the Honour of the Holy See than now. When we shall find this more proper season to grant the Dispensation, as we have determin'd to grant it, We do purpose to send it (as a thing of great Trust and Moment) by our Beloved Son Dr. Robert Sherbon Dean of St. Paul's London, one of your Ambaffadors, who together with his extraordinary Learning, has given evident proofs of his Modesty, Fidelity and Diligence; and this we choose to do on two accounts, both that it may by him be convey'd with Secrecy and Privacy and befides that, we may further recommend one of his great Capacity and Integrity, as a Person whose Fidelity and Services may be of further use to your Highness at home, fince the difagreeableness of this Air to him, and the excessiveness of the heat make it impossible for him to continue longer at Rome without hazard of his Life.

July 6.

Given at Rome at St. Peters July 6, 1504. in the first year of our Pontificat.

The rest, having little material, fave that mention is made how the Cardinal Sandi Petri ad vincula, the Popes Nephew, was made Pro-tector of the English, I have putposely omitted, that I may infert another Letter of the Popes of 22 of February 1505. the Tenor whereof is this:

22 Of February 1505, the 1emi winess of the Leave Chariffino in Christo film only of Henrico Angliu Re-Leave gi illustris. Chariffine in Christo film offer, Salutem & from the Apostolicam benedict. Intellections of dilecto film G. Pope to V. Sanishas this way. Hony. Cardinali Sanëti Petri ad vinculatui Regnique tui protellore, noftro setundum carnem nepote, & d venera-bili fratre nostro Silvestro Episcopo Wigorn. tuc sere-nitatis apud nos oratore, literus disponsations matrimonialis tantopere ab eis, nomine tu.e serenitatis, petitat; ex bispaniis ad te missas faise. Fili Charissime, no Vol. II.

1529. dispensationem illam Instantibus Cardinali & Episcopo | the greatest saithfulness and secrecy herein (which prædictis, tua potissimum contemplatione, concessimus, ac super ea, sub Bulla plumbea literas expediri secimus, ut ad tuam screnitatem per Cardinalem & Episcopum antedictos statuto tempore mitterentur. Sed cum clarae memoriæ Elizabeth Hispaniarum Regina Catholica finem bujus mortalis vita fibi instare cerneret, impensa & maxima cum instantia per oratorem suum nobis humiliter supplicasset, ut pro consolatione sua duplum dictarum literarum ei concedere dignaremur, quod banc consolationem sibi dare vellemus ut de bujusmodi dispensatione certior facta aquiori animo ab ipsa vita migraret : Nosque pietatis Christianæ & nostræ in illam ebaritatis paternæ esse putavimus non defraudare ipsam Reginam jam-jam morituram desiderio bujus rei, in qua etiam subditis & Regnicolis illis bonam spem conjunctionis tuæ serenitatis posset afferre, presertim quod idem orator rem hanc secretam futuram pollicebatur, (quod ab eo non servatum molestissime ferimus) Bullam igitur Originalem apud nos servatam serenitati tuæ, una eum Enfe, quo te pro tua fingulari virtute, & in fanctam fedem Apostolicam pietate donand. merito duximus, per eundem Episcopum Wigorn. nobis prorito auximus, per eunaem i pijcopum 10 igoru. novis pro-batum & charum decreviums mittere, à quo secenitas ipsa tua uberius intelliget causas ejusdem Bulla bacte-nus asud nos vetentas, & nomulla alia sibi per nos commissa pogotia. Nes miretur majestas tua, si de bac ve nibil cum ipsis Cardinali & oratore communicaviunus, nunquam enim putavimus fore, ut ab eratore dictae Regina deciperemur, & litera dispensationis pradicti ad te ex Hispaniis mitterentur, quas ut solum Reginæ tam periculose ægrotanti pro solamine suo ostenderen-tur duplicari concesseramus. Nam, præterquam tuæ tur duplicari concesseramus. Nam, præterquam tuæ serenitati de nobis & sancta Romana Ecclesis benemeritæ gratificari cupimus, ipsis Cardinali & Episcopa oratori tuo meritam fidei & diligentiæ laudem in tuis negotiis promovendis dare debemus. Dat. Romae apud 1505. Teb. 22. Sanctum Petrum die vigesima secunda Februarii, Anno Millesimo Quingentesimo quinto, Pont. nostri Anno se-

To our most beloved Son in Christ, the most Illustrious Henry King of England, Health and Apostolical Benediction. We have been inform'd by our beloved Son in Clirift, the Cardinal St. Petri ad Vincula, the Protector of you and your Kingdoms, and our Nephew according to the Flesh; and by our venerable Brother Sylvester Bishop of Woreester, your Highness's Ambassador here, that the Letters of Dispensation in the coint of your Marriage, which they have fo long folicited in your Highness's Name to procure, have already been fent to you from Spain.

Know therefore, most dear Son, that at the instance of the foresaid Cardinal and Bishop, but in respect wholly to your self, we did grant the faid Dispensation, and in consequence appointed our Bull under the Seal of Lead to be got ready to be fent your Highness in due time by the foresaid Cardinal and Bishop. But where-Elizabeth, of Glorious Memory, most Catholick Queen of Spain, perceiving her felf to be now finishing the course of her mortal Life, did with great Earnestness, and most pressing Instances by her Ambassador, most humbly entreat us, that we would vouchfase for her Consolatithis, that we would vouchait for her Comonation, to grant her a Copy of the faid Letter, that being by us fully farisfy'd of this Difpendation, file might to her great comfort depart this life in Peace; We thought it a piece of Chriftianity, and an indifferentiable part of our computational transmitter and the following the second communication of the communicatio paternal Love and Affection toward her, to comply with the Queen's earnest request at a time she was expiring, in communicating to her the knowledge of a thing, which even to the com-monest and meanest of her Subjects, would give comfortable and chearful hopes from the propromife we are greatly griev'd and troubl'd that he hath broken.) The Original Bull we judg'd meet and convenient, to keep by us till we have an opportunity to fend it you, by the fame our most dear and most faithful Bishop of Worcester, together with the Sword which we rhought fit to prefent your Highness for your fingular Piety, and filial Obedience to the Holy Apostolical See, at which time your Highness will receive more perfect information, as well of the reason of our delaying hitherto to fend the Bull, as alfo in some other affairs with which we have incrusted him. Nor ought your Majesty to wonder, that we have not communicated before any thing hereof to our Cardinals, or your Ma-jesties Ambassador, since we could never have thought it possible, that the Ambassador of her said Majesty should have herein thus deceiv'dus, and that the faid Letters of Difpensation should be transmitted to you from Spain, the Copy of which we granted only for the consolation of the faid Queen, who thus lay at the point of Death: And not denying them to your High-ness for want of Inclination, which we with great reason have, to gratifie your delires herein, who have so well deserved of us, and of the Holy Catholick Church, nor out of distrust or difrespect to the said Cardinal or Bishop your Ambaffador, of whofe Fidelity and Diligence in promoting your Affairs, we are abundantly fa-

> Given at Rome at St. Peters February 22. 1505. in the second year of our Ponti-

And that these are true Copies, Augustinus Spi-la, at the instance of King Henry VIII, and nola, at the instance of King Henry VIII, and by the commandment of the Pope, did certifie under the Hand and Seal of his Office the twenty feventh of January, 1529.

In fequence whereof, the Commissioners took Oath of the Kings of Arms, that the Copies they deliver'd were true, appointing further the next Wednesday, ad concludendum. Upon which day (being 21 falty) the Commissioners being July 21, sate, John Hughes, Promoter, appeard before them, and signified that there is found a certain Protestation made by our King, when he came to ripe years, in the presence of Notaries and Witnesses, and subscrib'd with the hand of the faid King (at that time Prince of Wales) and fome Counsellors of King Henry VII, which he faid were much to the purpose of the business then in question. Whereupon the Commissioners receiv'd the faid Protestation in præsentia dieli Magistri Ricardi Sampson Procuratoris Regis, & in contumaciam Regine; Commanding further, that it should remain penes acts sna. The tenor of it should remain penes acta sua. which Protestation is thus: In Dei nomine Amen. Coram vobis Reverendo in K. Heney's

Christo Patre & domino domino Ricardo Dei & Aposto-Protesta lice felis gratia Epssepo Wintoniens, Ego Hermat tien a Wallie Princeps, Dux Cornubies, & Cornes Cestrale and the Wallie Princeps, Dux Cornubies, & Cornes Cestrale and the diec, allego & in bis feripits propono, Quad lice to before its minorem extatem agent & intra annos pubertatis rotorie Consumi enistens, cum Serenissima domina Catharina Hispania-mation. qui quidem Contractus quamvis obstante ips; minore atate mea de se jam brvalidus, Impersectus, nullius efficaciæ aut vigoris extiterit; Quia tamen annis p::bertatis & matura ætate mea jam supervenient. con-tractus ipse per tacitum consensum, mutuam cobabitationem, munerum aut interfignium dationem seu recepcontortable and chearful hopes from the pro-fiped of fo near an Allyance with your High-forfan existimari seu videri poterit apparenter validanels; especially when her Ambassador promis'd tus aut confirmatus; Ea-propier, Ego Henricus Wallice

June 27.

1529. Prinseps prædičius, jam proximus pubertati existens, mov'd neither by force, crast, nor intreaty, but 1529 o'd annes pubertatis attingens, Protestor, quod non intendo eurodem prætensum omtradium per quæcunque per whatever, I do renounce and disclaim the said contract; and do resolve and intend by the probare, vilidare, seu ritum babere; sed nunc in præfenti, non vi, dolo, nec prece inductus, sed sponte & libere, mallo modo coastius, contra bujúmodi contratium reclamo, & eidem diffentie, voleque & ormino intendo ab eedem contractiu mavimentali pratenso melionibus modo & forma quibus de jure melius validius aut efficacius potero vel possim fenitus resilire, & eidem exflacitus potero vel pojim festitus rejuire, v etaem ex-presse dissentire, prout in prasenti contra eundem recla-me, v eidem dissentio. Protessorque qued per nullum dictium, factum, actum, aut gestrum per me aut nomi-ne meo per altum quemeunque quandocumque aut qua-litercumque imposterum factudam, agendum, gern-dum, aut explicandum, s'olo aut intendo in prastitum contractum matrimonialem, aut in dictam dominam Catharinam tanquam sponsam, aut uxorem meam con-Super quibus vos omnes testimonium perhibere volo, requiro, rogo, atque obtestor. Per me Henricum Wallia Principem.

Lecta fuit & facta suprascripta protestatio, per præfatum Serenissimum Principem Dominum Henricum, coram Reverendo in Christo patre & domino domino Ricardo permissione divina Winten. Episcopo, judicialiter pro tribunali sedent. & me Notarium infra scriptum ad tunc præsentem in ejus actorum scrib im in bac parte assumente, & testium infrascriptorum præsentiis; Anno Domini 1505. Indictione Octava, Pontificatus Sanctiffimi in Christo patris & Domini nostri Julii Santiffini in Corifeo paeris O Lomine nogri giani divina providentia eo nomine Papee secundi Anno secundo, Mensis vero funii die xxvii. quo die Dominus Serenissimus Princeps preximus puberati, & anno secundo di conservatione di conservatione di conservatione di conservatione de la conservatione del conservatione del conservatione de la conservatione del conservatione de la conservatione de la conservatione de la conservatione de la conservatione del conservatione de la conservation nos pubertatis attingens erat, ut tunc ibidem asserebat, In quadam bassa camera infra pilatium Regium Riche-mondiæ, in parte occidentali ejustem palatii situat. Super quibus omnibus & singulis præstatus Screnissimus Princeps me Notarium præmemoratum Instrumentum conficere, & testes infra nominatos testimonium perhi-Conjuctes, O legies inju nomanuos legimonium peru-beve requisivit instantes, O Rogavit. In quorum om-nium o singulorum sidem o lestimonium, presiatus se-renssissimus princeps supra, o testes, ut premittitus, rogati o requisiti, sua nomina propriis manibus infra scripferunt. Ita est ut supra, quod ego Johannes Read manu & signo meo manuali attestor.

Giles Daubney, C. Somerfet,

Thomas Rowthale, Nicholas Weft,

Henry Marny.

In the name of God, Amen. In the prefence of you the Reverend Father in Christ, by the grace of God, and favour of the Apostolical See, Richard Lord Bilhop of Winchester; I Henry Prince of Wales, Duke of Cornwall, and Earl of Chester, do fay, alledge, and by this writing fet forth; that although in my Minority and Being not as yet arriv'd to ripenels of Age for giving my Consent, I have de facto contracted a Marriage with the most serene Lady Catherine, Daughter of the King of Spain, which Contract, although it be of it felf invalid, imperfect, and of no effect and force, by reason of my said Minority; yet because this Contract when I shall come to age and years of Consent, may appear and seem valid, and consirm'd by tacit Consent, mutual Cohabitation, giving and receiving Tokens and Gifts, or any other determinate way; for these Causes, I the foresaid Henry Prince of Wales, now nearly arriv'd to maturity of Age, and being, just at years of consent, do hereby Protest, that by any thing said or to be said, done, or to be done, I do not intend to ratifie, confirm, or make valid the faid pretended Contract of Marriage; but by these Presents, being thereunto most powerful means, in the most significant rerms, and most effectual manner I can to re-nounce, disclaim, and diffent from the said pre-tended Marriage Contract, as the same is hereby renounc'd, disclaim'd, and dissented from. And I farther protest, that by any Word, Deed, Action or Behaviour, faid or done by my felf, or by any other in my Name, or to be faid, acted, done or perform'd by any Perfon at any time, or in any manner whatfoever, I do not confent to the faid Marriage Contract, or receive the faid Lady Catherine as my lawful Sponse and Wife; To all which Premites, this my Testimony is given, fet forth and publish'd by me,

Henry Prince of Wales.

The above written Protestation was made and read by the most Serene Prince the Lord Henry, before the Reverend Father in Christ, Richard Lord Bishop of Winchester, who then fat Judge, and before me the under-written Notary Pul lick, who took it in Writing, in the presence of the under-written Witnesses, in the year of our Lord 1505, in the eighth Indiction, in the fecond year of the Pontificat of our most Holy Father in Christ, by the Divine Providence Julins II. Pope, on the 2-th day of June, on which day his most Serene Highness the Prince, was entring upon years of Maturity and Age of Confent, as he there afferted, in a certain ground Room, under the Royal Palace of Richmond, fi-tuate in the Western part of the said Palace. Concerning all which, and fingular the Premi-fes, his faid most Serene Highness the Prince, inflantly order'd and demanded of me the faid Notary, to draw up this publick Infrument, and the under-written Witnelles thereto to bear Te-flimony. In Proof and Evidence of all which things, and every of them, his faid most Serene Highness the Prince, and the Witnesses, as is aforefaid, being thereunto call'd and requir'd, fet their Names subscrib'd with their own Hands. The truth of all which, I folin Read testise, by setting thereto my Hand and Seal Manual.

G. Danbney, C. Somerfet,

Thomas Rowthale, Nicholas West,

Henry Marny.

Among whom Nicholas Well, above-nam'd, now Bishop of Ely, in presence of the Commissioners, acknowledged and confessed, that this Protestation on was subscrib'd with his own Hand. Whereupon the Commissioners, in contumaciam Regine, did, in the presence of the above-mention'd Prodry, in the phetere of the above-mention a rio-étor, continue and Prorogue the Court, till Fri-day next following, warning the faid Proctor allo to be there. Upon which day, being the twenty third of July, the Court being for, the July ap-Promoter above-mention'd fignify'd unto the Commissioners, that all that was requisite for the instruction and information of their Understanding and Consciences, had been judicially propos'd and exhibited to them, and remain'd in their cuftody, and that therefore this day was affign'd, and appointed for concluding the bufinefs. Notwithstanding because Cardinal Campejus alledg'd and protested in verbo veri Prelati, that a certain general Vacation, which he term'd Ferius generales messium & windemiarum, was observ'd in the Court of Rome every year, before the said Fri-

. day; and because he and his Colleague were bound to follow the stile of the said Court in the Process of the above-mention'd Cause; processes the refere the faid Judges, in the prefence of the court. Kings Proctor, and in contimaction Regime, did prorogue the conclusion of this basiness, until the first of October next following, warning the Kings Proctor then to appear, and receive a conclusion of this business as should be according to Justice. All which pass'd in the presence of Thomas Duke of Norfolk, the Bishop of Ely, and divers other Perfons.

And thus much out of the Record formerly mention'd; which I have with more particularity fet down, in that it is fo rare and unufual a cafe to find a Prince fubmit himfelf, in his own Kingdom, to the Judgment of two Persons, whereof one was a suspected Stranger, the other, in Birth but of the meanest of his Subjects and after all this, to receive no other fruit hereof, but delay and infatisfaction; as appears not only by this abrupt Difiniffion, but by a fudden Advocation of the Caule, to the Pope, inhibiting further proceedings here (as will appear shortly after;) the consequences whereof extended further yet than our King then thought, or the Pope could eafily have imagin'd.

These Proceedings were subscrib'd by the Notaries William Clayburgh, Doctor of both Laws, Protonotarius Apostolicus, Florianus Montinus, and Richard Watkins, who acknowledg'd the rafures, interlineations and lines in the Margin, together with the number of the leaves in the Parchment Book (being 69.) To which also Letters testimonial from Niebolas Wotton, Doctor of the Laws, and the Bilhop of Lendon's Official, having the Scal of the Office, were annex'd. After all which, a Difpensation, written by a later hand, and in loose Paper, was found in the said Book. Though that alone should not have induc'd me to publish it, had I not seen it already printed in a Book cull'd Anti-Sanderus, and met in our Archives fome dispatches that make it proba-

The Tenor of the Bull is this.

Bull for a new Difpenfation.

Lemens Episcopus Servus Servorum Dei, Chariffimo in Christo filio nostro Henrico Angliæ Regi Illustri, Fidei defenfori, Salutem & Apostolicam benedictionem. Exponi nobis nuper fecisti, quod alias tu & dilecta in Christo filia Catharina, relicta quondam  fratris tui germani, non ignorantes vos primo affinitatis gradu invicem fore conjunctos, matrimonium per verba alias legitime de præsenti, nulla saltem canonica seu valida dispensatione desuper obtenta, quamvis de sacto contraxiflis, illudq; Carnali copula confummastis, ac prolem ex hujusmodi matrimonio suscepistis, excommunicationis sententiam incurrendo: Et cum Majestas tua in hujusmodi matrimonio abiq; peccato remanere nequeat, & ne diutius in hujufmodi peccato & excommunicationis sententia remaneat, desideret ab hujusmodi excommunicationis sententia à judice Ecclefiaftico competente abfolutionis benesicium obtinere, ac matrimonium ipsum nullum & invalidum fuisse, Tibiq; licere cum quacunq; alia muliere, alio non obfistente canonico, matrimonium contrahere, declarari, & in eventum declarationis nullitatis matrimonii hujulmodi tecum dispensari, ut cum qua-alias cum alio matrimonium contraxerit, dum- 1529. modo illud carnali copula non confummaverit, etiam fi tibi alias fecundo vel remotiori confanguinitatis, aut primo affinitatis gradu ex quocunque licito seu illicito coitu conjuncta, dummodo Relicta dicti fratris tui non fuerit. ac etiam si cognatione spirituali vel legali tibi conjuncta extiterit, & impedimentum publicationestatis justitize subsistat, matrimonium licite contrahere, & in eo libere remanere. & ex eo prolem legitimam suscipere possis. Quare pro parte tui, afferentis ex antiquis Chronicis Regni constare, in ipio Regno quamplura gravishma bella sæpe exorta, & Christianana pacem & concordiam violatam fuisse, propter impios homines fua detestanda regnandi & dominandi libidine excitatos, confingentes ex justis & legitimis quorundam progenitorum & antecessorum tuorum Angliæ Regum nuptiis procreatos illegitimos fore propter aliquod confanguinitatis vel affinitatis confictum impedimentum, & propterea inhabiles effe ad Regni fucceilionem, inde miserandam Principum ac Procerum & populorum fubditorum ftragem secutam suisse; Nobis suit humiliter supplicatum, ut Regni tui tuorumque Subditorum tranquillitati & paci inprimis confulere & tantis malis obviare, ac alias in pramiss, opportuna remedia adhibere de benignitate Apoitolica dignaremur. Nos qui omnium Regum, præsertim majestatis tuæ ob ejus quamplura immensa in nos & hanc sanctam sedem. in qua permissione divina sedemus, collata beneficia, dum ab iniquissimis pestilentissimorum hominum conatibus, qui eam, partim viribus & scelerata audacia, partim perversa doctrina labefactare moliebantur, strenuissime cum viribus & gladio tum calamo & eruditione tua vindicare indies non cessat, petitiones, præfertim falutem animarum concernentes, quantum cum Deo possumus, ad exauditionis gratiam libenter admittimus, eorumg; honestis votis favorabiliter annuimus, ex præmissis & nonnullis aliis caufis nobis notis, hujufmodi supplicationibus inclinati, tecum ut si contingat matrimonium cum præfata Catharina alias contractum nullum fuisse & esse declarari, teq; ab illius vinculo legitime absolvi, cum quacunque muliere, ipfaque mulier tecum, dummodo à te propter hoc rapta non fuerit, etiamfi mulier ipia talis fit, quæ prius cum alio matrimonium contraxerit, dummodo illud carnali copula non fuerit confummatum, etiamfi illa tibi alias fecundo aut remotiori Confanguinitatis, aut primo Affinitatis gradu, etiam ex quocunque licito vel illicito coitu proveniente, invicem conjuncta, dummodo relicta dicti fratris tui non fuerit, ut præfertur, etiamfi cognationis spiritualis aut legalis & publicæ honestatis justitiæ impedimentum subsistat & tibi conjuncta existat, matrimonium licite contrahere, Et poslquam contractum fuerir, in eo sic contracto, etiamsi illudinter to & ipsam mulierem jam de facto publice vel clandestine contractum & carnali copula confummatum fuerit, licite remanere valeatis, authoritate Apostolica & ex certa nostra scientia & de Apostolica potestatis plenitudine, tenore præfentium dispensamus, prolem inde cunque alia muliere, etiam si illa talis sit, qua sorsan susceptam & suspiciendam legitimam fore decernentes. Non obstantibus prohibitio-nibus Juris Divini, ac constitutionibus & or-related to you in the second or more remote dedinationibus aliis quibuscunque in contrarium editis, quibus, in quantum Apostolica authoritas se extendit, illis alias in suo robore permansuris, quoad hoc specialiter & expresse derogamus. Districtius inhibentes & in virtute fanctæ obedientiæ expresse mandantes, sub interminatione divini judicii, ac fub pæna anathematis, aliifque Ecclefiasticis sententiis, cenfuris, & pænis, quas ex nunc prout ex tunc & è converso ferimus & promulgamus, in his feriptis, ne quifquam imposterum ullum impedimentum pro contractus Matrimonialis non consummati, Consanguinitatis in secundo aut ulteriori gradu, Affinitatis primo ut præfertur, cognationis spiritualis aut legalis seu justitiæ publicæ honestatis impedimentis prædictis adversum liberos tuos quos ex quocunque Matrimonio vigore præsentium contrahendo Dei benignitate susceperis palam vel occulte in judicio vel extra illud allegare, proponere, aut objicere, seu verbo vel facto disfamare præsumat, aut quocunque modo attentet. Nulli ergo omnino hominum liceat hanc paginam nostræ Dispensationis, Decreti, Derogationis, Inhibitionis, & Mandati infringere vel ei aufu temerario contraire. Si quis autem hoc attentare præfumpferit, indignationem omnipotentis Dei, ac beatorum Petri & Pauli Apoflolorum ejus se noverit incursurum. Dat. in Civitate nostra Urbevetan. Anno Incarnationis Dominicæ Millesimo quingentesimo vicefimo feptimo. Decimo fexto Cal. Januarii. Pont. nostri Anno quinto.

Lement Bishop, Servant of the Servants of God, to our most dear Son in Christ, the most Illustrious Henry King of England, Defender of the Faith, Health and Apostolical Be-nedition. You have caus'd to be laid before us, that heretofore you, and our beloved Daughter in Christ Catherine Widow of  your own Brother, knowing the Relation that was between you, of the first degree of Affinity, did de facto contract Marriage in Words de præsenti, and did consummate the said Marriage by carnal Knowledge, and from thence had Children born, having no sufficient canonical Dispensation granted you to that effect, incurring therefore the Sentence of Excommunication : And whereas your Majesty who cannot without Sin live in the faid Marriage, does defire to continue no longer in the faid Sin, nor lie under the fentence of Excommunication; but by some competent Ecclesiastical Judge, to receive the benefit of the state of Excommunication. fit of Absolution from the said sentence of Excommunication, and that the Marriage it felf (hould be declar'd to have been, and flill to be null and invalid, and that it is, and may be lawful for you to marry any other Woman, any Canon to the contrary notwithstanding, and that in confequence of such Declaration of the nullity of the said Marriage, you may be dispensed with, lawfully to marry any other Woman, and with her in Marriage freely to live, and lawful Issue by her to have, although she may be one who has already contrasted Marriage with some other Person, provided she hath not consummated it related to you in the fecond or more remote degree of Consanguinity, or sirst degree of Assini-ty, either from Lawful or forbidden Wedlock, provided five be not the Widow of your faid Bro-ther, and although the may be relate to you by any other legal or spiritual Assirity, whereby an impediment may otherwise the against you there-in, in the common course of Law and publick Justice. And whereas your Majesty has further laid before us, that it is evident from the Chronicles of your Kingdom, that many grievous Wars have often arisen in your Kingdom, that all Christian Peace and Concord hath been vio-lated and disturbed by traiterous and malicious Men, out of their detestable Ambition, and wick-ed defire of Power, but under pretence that some of the Children, born in just and lawful Marriage of some of your Predecessors and Forefuthers, were illegitimate, on account of some impediment in the said Marriages, by reason of Confanguinity or Affinity, whom under pretence of the faid Illegitimacy, they have gone about to exclude from the Succession, from whence has follow'd most miserable Destruction and Bloodshed, both of Princes and Nobility, as well as of the common People; on which account your Majesty has supplicated us, that of your Aposto-lical Grace and Favour, we would wouchsafe herein to consult the peace and quiet of your Kingdom and Subjects, to obviate these great Mise-ries, and apply sitting Remedies to the asoresaid Grievances. We who seventably listen to, and as far as with a fafe Conscience we may, chear-fully comply with all Petitions, especially those which concern the safety of their Souls, which we at any time receive from Christian Princes, especially from your Majesty, by reason of the manifold marks of Assection and Kindness you have always shewn both to us and the Apostolical See, over which by the Divine Permission we prefide, which you have not ceas'd most courageously to maintain and support, as well with your Power and Sword, as with your Learning and Pen, from the most wicked attempts of ne-farious Men, who partly by sorce and open Vi-olence, partly by crast and subtle Doctrines, endeavour'd to undermine and overthrow it; for the foresaid, as well as some other reasons us thereunto moving, in compliance with your Petition, we from our Apostolical Authority, by our certain Knowledge, and out of the plenitude of our Apostolical Power, by the tenor of these Pre-sents do dispence with you, that if your contract of Marriage with the said Catherine, shall be declar'd to have been, and still to be null and invalid, and you to be lawfully freed from the bond thereof, that then it may, and is lawful for you to marry any other Woman, and any other Woman to marry you, provided she be not there-to by you compelled, although she should be one who has already contracted Marriage with Jone other Person, provided she bath not consummated it by Carnal Knowledge, and although she may be related to you in the second or more remote degree of Consanguinity, or sirst degree of Affinity, either from lawful or forbidden Wedlock, provided she be not the Widow of your said Brother; and although the may be related to 1529. you by any other legal or spiritual Affinity, where-- by an impediment may otherwise lie against you therein, in the common course of Law and publick Juffice : And if Such Marriage is contracted, that you may lawfully continue and remain therein, although it should be so, that this Marriage was contracted de facto, by you either openly or clandestinely, and by Carnal Knowledge confummated before this Dispensation was granted, determining farther, that all the Children born, or to be born, from this Marriage, be, and be accounted Legitimate; any Prohibitions of the Divine Law, Constitutions or Ordinances what-Drone Law, Confitutions or Ordinances what foever declaring the contrary notwithflund-ing, which we do, as far as by our Apoptolical Power we may, difaunul and refernd so far as they may affect this special particular Matter now before us only, leaving them in all other regards, and to all other manner of purposes in their full space and power. Strictly enjoyning, and in virtue of their Canonical Obedience commanding, under the threat of Divine Venge-ance, and under penalty of Anathema, and o-ther Ecclefisfical Sentences, Censures and Punishments, which we do now for that time pro-nounce and publish, by the tenor of these Presents, that no Person whatever shall presume or attempt to alledge, propose or object either in open Court or in private Discourse, any impedi-ment in the Marriage which by the tenor of these Presents you shall contract, or to speak or at, or attempt any thing in Word or Deed a gainst the Legitimacy of the said Marriage, or the Children which shall be born of it on any infination or pretence of Marriage pracontraded, Confanguinity in the second, and more remote Degree or Affinity as aforesaid in the first, or any other spiritual or legal Assimity in the com-mon course of Law and publick Justice judy d an Impediment. Let no mortal Man therefore presume to contradict this our Writ of Dispen-Sotion, Decree, Ordinance, Inhibition and Com-mand, or with presumptuous boldness in any wife to gainfay it. And if any one shall pre-Sume herein, let him know that he shall incur the vengeance of the Eternal God, and of his Holy Apostles St. Peter and St. Paul.

> Given in our City of Orvietan, in the year of our Lord 1527. 16 Calends of January, and in the fifth year of our Pontificat.

While these things pass'd thus in England, the Queen found means to inform the Lady Margaret, Regent of the Low-Countries, of the whole Process, who thereupon sends word of it to Charles and Ferdinand, intreating them to affift their Aunt; which they accorded, dispatching their Orators to the Pope, whom also the Queen The Q. their Orators to the Pope, whom ano the Queen denies her conflitted her Proctors in the Court of Rome; giving them Commission to tender to the Pope continum a Copy of the Bull, Breve, and her Declaration nated the that the was never earnally known by Prince with Pr. Arthur. Shortly after which, the faid Orators in the Queens Name, made a Proteflation against laby. the two Legates now in England (every page fubscrib'd with Queen Catharines own hand) intreating the Pope to advoke the Caufe, to annul the proceedings in England, to warn the King to ipfam fub cenfuris & pænis fuisse factam; Nos, defift his Suit, or at least to try it at Rome, &c. I quorum intentionis nunquam fuit neg; est peror, otherwise that they would feek their Reme- 1729, dies elfewhere. The Pope being thus press'd at Rome, and having now concluded the Treaty with the Emperor at Barcellona, July the third, July 3 1529. about three Weeks before the Cause was prorogu'd by Campejus, could no longer, either with the fafety of his Person or Dignity, favour our King; fo that what excufes fover (in the frequent Dipatches he made about this time) were given to our King, yet were they little more than Complement and Evañon, till, finally, declaring himself more openly for the Emperor, he sign'd an Advocation of the Cause to July 15. himself, inhibiting further Proceedings under great Penalties. And herein (as our Agents did Pope deobserve) the Popes principal Ministers did not a fires to little concur; that the benefit of deciding there-bear the of might fall upon them. In vain therefore did himself. our Agents (being Sir Gregory Cafalis and Doctor Bennet) both by representing the defection of our King from the Roman See, and the ruine of the Cardinal of York, labour to flay these Proceedings. For the Inhibition was brought into England, about the beginning of September, the King Septenben being in his Progrest; and because it was fent to the Queen to make her benefit of it, the King (by Stephen Gardiner, now his Secretary) fends to Woolfey, to perfuade the Queen to let this Inhibition (or as he calls it, a Citatory Letter) fleep, it containing matter prejudicial to his Person, and not to be published to his Subjects: And that it will be sufficient for the Ceffation of the Process that the Pope by Letter to Wolfey (July 19.) hath fignified his Advocation July 19. of the Caufe. Nevertheless, if the Queen will needs have the Inhibition executed, then that it should be privily executed upon the two Legates, (rather than be divulg'd in Flanders;) which it feems was done accordingly. Howbeit, shortly after the Advocation was granted, the Pope, conceiving that the Cenfures and Penalties mention'd in the Inhibition would not be well taken by our King, dispatch'd a Breve to him of Angust 29, which for the better statisfaction of the Reader, I have thought fit to transcribe out of the Original and infert here.

Anglie Regi.

Harissime in Christo Fili noster, salu-The Popes tem, &c. Dudum vertente Caula inter the King. Serenitatem Tuam & Chariflimam in Christo Filiam nostramCatharinam AngliæReginam Illustrissimam, de & super sædere Matrimonii; nos, instantibus apud nos Oratoribus tuis causam ipsam, Dilectis filiis Thomas Sancta Ceciliæ, & Laurentio Sanctæ Mariæ in Transtiberim tt' Presbyteris Cardinalibus nostris & Apostolica sedis Legatis de latere commissimus, in qua ad nonnullos forfan actus proceffum est; Postmodum, Charissimo in Christo filio nostro Carolo Hispaniarum Rege Catholico in Imperatorem electo, & Regina ipía ad nos reclamantibus, & aliis etiam legitimis caufis animum nostrum moventibus, causam ipfam ad nos advocavimus, & eam audiendam, ac nobis & facro venerabilium Fratrum no-strorum S. R. E. Cardinalium Collegio referendam atque decidendam commilimus; In qua ad Inhibitionem fortasse processium est. Cum autem nuper acceperimus Inhibitionem

July.

1529. sonam tuam de nobis ac de Apostolica sede pended. femper optime meritam aliquibus censuris & pænis quomodolibet innodari: Celfitudini tux fignificamus, censuras ipsas præter mentem & intentionem nostram à Judice sive Commissario emanâsse: Et propterea censuras & pænas prædictas, quoad personam tuam, nullas nul-liusque roboris vel momenti suisse & esse decernentes. Causam verò ipsam usque ad feflum nativitatis Domini nostri Jesu Christi proxime futurum jam fufpendimus, prout per præsentes suspensam esse volumus. Fecimusque in illa, quantum pro nostra in te charitate, cum Doo facere licuit, ut, quum pro stimulo conscientiæ causam te movisse cognoscimus, illam, quæ tanti est, eadem quoque ratione altius cogitando, posthabitis molestiis atq; odiis quæ nascuntur ex litibus, cum animi tui pace componere possis. In quo nos adjutores semper habiturus es, Majestatem T. hortantes in Domino ut interim Reginam ip fam pro ipfius Confcientiæ tuæ Securitate maritali affectione tractare non definas, quemadmodum Celsitudinem Tuam pro virtute sua facturam confidimus. Dat. Romæ die 29. Augusti, 1529. Anno 6.

To the King of England.

Oft dearly beloved Son in Christ, Health, &c. A Cause heretosore depending between your Highness and our dearly beloved Daughter in Christ, Catherine Queen of England, of and concerning your Marriage Contract; We at the earnest request of your Ambassadors, committed the said Cause to be determin'd by our beloved Sons, Thomas Lord Bishop, and Cardinal Sanctæ Ceciliæ, and Laurence Cardinal de lacree from the Apostolical See, in which Cause perhaps some Process has been made; since which at the instance of our most dear Son in Christ, Charles most Catholick King of Spain, and elected Emperor, and his most Catholick Queen, as well as for some other Reasons us thereunto moving, we order'd the said Cause to be brought before our own selves, and reserved the Determination and Decision thereof to our solves, and the sucred College of our most vene-rable Brethren their Eminencies the Cardinals; on which account perhaps an Inhibition has been given. Now whereas we have heard that this Inhibition has been executed, and that therein are mention'd several Censures and Penalties; we whose intention it never was, nor is to subject your Highness's Person, who have so well deserved of us, and of the Apostolical See, to any Censures or Penalties what soever; do hereby fignifie to your Highness, that those Consures were inserted into the Said Inhibition by our Judge or Commissury without our Knowledge, and contrary to our Inclination : Which Consures cern your own Person, we do hereby resembled, claring them to be null, of no Power, Essivation or Validity. As for the Cause it self, we will that it be suspended till Christmas-day next en-suing, and it is by these presents till then sus-

And herein we have done all that we 1529. could with a safe Conscience, in favour and affection to your Highness, that as we are assured that you have for Conscience sake propounded your Case, you may have time duly and carefully to confider an affair of so creat Moment and Importance as this is, and thereby settle it, without the vexation and trouble which Suits of Law ingender and produce, to the great com-fort and quiet of your mind; wherein you shall never fail of our Aid and Affiftance: In the mean time, we do exhort your Majesty in the Lord, that for the sake of Conscience, you would not leave the Queen, but till these things shall be determin'd, comfort and cherish her with the Love and Affection of an Husband, as we truft your Highness of your great Piety and Goodness

Given at Rome August 29. A. D. 1529. in the fixth year of our Pontifi-

Before yet these Breves were fent, the Pope wifely confidering that by the diligence of our Agents not only the first Minutes of them were fent to England, but also that his Treaty with the Emperor was more notorious than that it could be hidden, thought fit to advertise our Cardinal, That the League betwixt him and the Em-July 18: dinal, that the League betwirk him and the Em-July 18; peror was made pro temporum ratione & rerum The Pope Christianarum utilitate; exhorting him therefore to do him good offices with the King, which al with the fo he explicated in another Dispatch, Septem Emperor. ber 23; wishing that Aid might be sent against Sept. 23. the Tirk. All which being contrary to the King's present Designs, could not upon what terms socwer be represented without much Offence, and ill conceit of Cardinal Woolfey. The King believing that underhand he held Intelligence with the Pope, to the prejudice of his Affairs. Which Polydore also affirmeth; faying, that he writ pri- Polyd. Virg. vately to the Pope to suspend the Cause, till The Ca they could bring the King to fome better temper. derhand This alfo I believe was confirmed in the King's dealing mind, by fome notice he might have of a joint with the Dispatch (a Minute whereof is extant in our king. Records) from Woolfey and Compejus, during their Session, whereby they desir'd the Pope to avoke the Caufe, in case it grew so doubtful that they could not determine it; both as they would be free from the Trouble and Danger, and as they conceiv'd, he might better help the King ex plenitudine potestatin; who perchance (as they faid) would be content therewith, if the Pope would promife to end the matter, shortly afterwards to his fatisfaction. But as this was, in part, done without our King's knowledge, and that, for the rest, it left the business in more Pexplexity and Irrefolution than ever ; fo the King, who (I find by Cavendish) had recover'd fomething under the Cavendist Cardinal's hand, which he urged against him, Life of began to frown; whereof also the Courtiers took and that notice as now his Fall was priced against William. that notice, as now his Fall was voiced every where. Though yet it was not in that precipice, Greatly but that the King admitted him flill to no small referred degrees of his wonted Access and Favour. How-king at the Cardinal was powering his Decodence. beit, as the Cardinal was now in his Decadence, all these steps did but lead unto his Ruine. To Gets the which also the secret ill Offices of the angry batted of Queen, and despighted Anne Bolan did contrible Qued Miss Belin, who also be the beling one another did contrible Qued bute; who, though hating one another, did con-fpire to his destruction. The Causes on the fpire to his deftruction. The Causes on the Queen's part are touch'd before, which also were Vol. II. R nct them.

Woolfey.

Court

1521.

1920.

1529. not a little fet forwards by the Industry of the Cardinal also fearing the Revenges of that Sex, 1529.

Emperor. And for those of Mrs. Anne Bolen, and, for the rest, being unwilling to come to besides her unkind dismission from the Court, sharper terms with the Lord Percy than he had al-(which she conceiv'd to have been the Cardinal's Advice) another inveterate Grudge made her irreconcileable. The Relation whereof, being ta-ken out of a Manuscript of one Master George Cavendish, Gentleman-Usher to the Cardinal, I

Cavendijb, have thought fit to infert.

Life of Cirdinal This Gentlewoman being descended on the Father's fide from one of the Heirs of the Earls of Ormand, and on the Mother's from a Daughter of Mrs Bolois Det the House of Norfolk, was from her Childhood of that singular Beauty and Towardness, that her Parents took all care possible for her good Education. Therefore, besides the ordinary parts of virtuous Instructions, wherewith she was liberally brought up, they gave her Teachers in playing on Mufical Inftruments, Singing and Dancing; infomuch, that when the compos'd her Hands to play, and Voice to fing, it was join'd with that Sweetness of Countenance, that three Harmonies concurr'd; likewife, when she danc'd, her rare Proportions varied themselves into all the Graces that belong either to Rest or Motion. Briefly, it feems the most attractive Perfe ctions were eminent in her. Yet did not our King love her at first, nor before she had liv'd fometime in France, whither, in the Train of the French Queen, and company of a Sifter of the Marquis Dorfet, she went Anno Dom. 1514. After the death of Louis XII. she did not yet return with the Downger, but was re-Effect in ceived into a place of much Honour with the the French other Queen, and then with the Dutchel's of cilanson, Sister to Francis, where she staid, till fome difference grew betwixt our King and Francis; therefore, as faith du Tillet, and our Records, about the time when our Students at Paris were remanded, she likewise left France, as is formerly related; her Parents thinking not fit to fuffer her to flay there any longer. All this while therefore no argument of extraordinary Affection towards her was discover'd in our King. So that though it be probable, that the were at the Interview betwixt the Kings and Queens (near Guiffes) above-mention'd, yet she left not the French Court. But, at last, being come hither, and, about the twentieth Year of her age, camb. Eli, receiv'd into our Queen's Service, however the Lord Per. King might take notice of her, the Lord Henry er courts Percy yet (the Earl of Northumberland's eldeft Son) appear'd first enamour'd of her; infomuch, that at all times when he repair'd to Court, in the Train of our Cardinal, (whom he attended in ordinary) his Addresses were continually to her; whereof he made that use, as at length he obtained her good will to Marriage. So that in miles him what kind foever the King's Affection might Marriage, manifest it felf, neither was she so fatisfied of it, as to think fit to relinquish this advantageous Offer, nor the Lord Percy aware that he was opposed by fo puissant a Rival. But this Treaty (which proceeded to little less than a Contract) coming at last to our King's Ears, the danger he found himself in of losing a Beauty he had contemplated follong, that it was become his dearest Object, made him resolve to acquaint the Cardinal with his Love to her; withing him also to diffuade the The Car- Lord Percy from it. The forward Cardinal here-dual upon both violently dehorts the Lord Percy from from the King dif- the Gentlewoman, and ufeth all Arts to infinuate fusdes the himfelf into her good Opinion and Favour. But L Porcy. Mistress Bolen, whether she were ignorant, as yet, how much the King lov'd her, or howfoever had rather be that Lord's Wife than a King's ready used, defires the King to write to the Earl of Northumberland to come up; alledging there was no such way to preserve the Gentlewoman for himfelf, and together to conceal his Love, as to use a cunning diffuation of the Marriage to the Earl; whereby also he might be induced to interpole his fatherly Authority for disfolving of the Match. Hereupon the Earl repairing to Court, the Cardinal first, and afterwards the King discover'd the Cause of his sending for, in very kind, but withal in fuch covert and ambiguous terms, that betwixt unwillingness to difparage the Gentlewoman, and the inforcing divers Reasons why the Lord Percy should not marof mifapplying the King's Affection to himlelf.

Mittrefs, took very ill of the Cardinal this his

Howfoever, he fo check'd his Son, that fear of displeasing his Father became at length the predominant Passion. So that it neither serv'd him to declare the Merits of the Gentlewoman, nor to tell his Father, that his Promife, before Witnesses, had engag'd him further than that he knew well how to come off: The apprehension His Faof the King's Displeasure having wrought that ther the impression in the Earl, that he would take no Northan-Denial or Excuse on his Son's part, till he had berland made him renounce all his Pretences to her; makes which also he urged so far, as at length his Son him reconsented to marry the Earl of Shrewsbury's Daugh-all Pretenter. But the Hatred which Mistress Anne Bolen sions to conceiv'd against the Cardinal concluded not so; her. nor indeed could ever end till she had procur'd his final Ruine. And this is the truest relation of Mistress same Bolen, that I have been able to gather out of those Records and Manuscripts that have come to my hands. So that now I should have proceeded with my History, were I not constrain'd (in a fort) to vindicate both her Honour and her Progenitors from those foul Calumnies which in a Book of Nicolas Sanders, an Sant de Englishman, de Schismate Anglicano, are cast upon Schisma

This Author, though learned, yet more credulous than becomes a Man of exact Judgment, reports out of one William Raftal, a Judge, (in his Life of Sir Thomas More) that Miftress Anne Bolen was the King's Daughter, by the Wife of Sir Thomas Bolen, while, Jub Specie honoris, he was employ'd by the King, Ambaffador in France; and that this Gentlewoman coming to the Age of fifteen, was deflour'd by fome Domesticks of her Fathers, and then fent to France; where also she behav'd her felf fo licencioully, that fhe was vulgarly call'd the Hackney of England, till being adopted to that King's Familiarity, the was termed his Mule. Many other Passages of this kind are also inserted by Sanders, which I forbear, as being forry to have occasion for publishing thus much. But how impossible these things are, the ingenious Reader may eafily find out, when he compares the times: For if Mistress Anne Bolen Sandari's went to France with Mary the French Queen, 1514. Calum-(as is proved by divers principal Authors, both cerning English and French, besides the Manuscripts I have her refufeen) and was here viriated at fifteen Years of ted. Age, it must follow that she was born about or before 1498. at which time our King was neither above feven or eight Years old at most, and therefore unable to get a Child (especially nine Months before) nor had that Regal Power in his hands for employment of Ambaffadors, till ten or eleven Years afterwards. So that Mv. Sanders or Raltal's Affirmation herein is but fiction, as the reft certainly is, the having always lived in good anteafonable interruption of her Marriage. The Reputation. As for the Beauty and Handlom-1529. nots of Miffrels some Bolen, which the fame Author doth traduce, besides that it contradicts common Sense, (she having been, by their Allega-tion, a Minion to two Kings) even that Picture of hers, extant still with the Dutchess of Richmond, doth fufficiently convince. And for her Religion, there is no probability that it should (at first) be other than what was commonly pro-fest: Since it appears by original Letters of hers, that she was a special Favourer of the Clergy of that time, and a Preferrer of the worthiest fort of them to Ecclefastical Livings, during her chief times of Favour with the King, though I will not deny, but upon his defection from Iome Articles of the Roman Church, fine might also comply. But I should be glad that Mr. Sanders had not divers other things which might require a ferious Review; though I must not deny, but as he hath in some things follow'd Cardinal Pool, (a Person of great Learning, and much reverenc'd in his time) so he hath his Authority. Howbeit 25 this Cardinal was fo near in blood to divers whom the King put to death, he may be thought perchance more partial than to be believ'd every where: Neither will it fatisfie all Men, that he pretends (in more than one place) to have known even fo much as the King's Libde Unit Thoughts (by Revelation;) fo that I shall leave Escale these things to the liberty of the indifferent Reader, and turn to my Hiftory.

Our King, who at the first prorogation of the Sentence, by reason of the Feria Vindemiarum, hoped yet, that at least, Octob. 1. (when the Court was appointed to fit again, he might have the Cause determin'd, seeing now all proceeding in England inhibited, the Cause avocated to Rome, Campejus recall'd; and finally finding, by many Dispatches, that the Pope and Emperor had appointed shortly to meet at Bononia, was much troubled; and the rather, for that the two Cardinals proceeding hitherunto had been little more than Illusion; whereupon also he became much incens'd against them. Yet containing a while his Anger, he neither alter'd his sashion to Woolfey, nor declar'd any dislike of Campejus: Insomuch, that he calmly gave him leave to depart. So that no Argument of Sufpicion or Dislike appear'd hitherunto on either fide. Campejus thus difmift and rewarded, was conducted honourably to the Seafide, where he expected only a fair Wind. But Campijui's when he came to take Ship, the Searchers, upon Coffers pretence he carry'd either Money or Letters from the Cu-the Cu and Papers; not without hope, certainly, to re cover that Decretal Bullour King so much long'd

Love-Letters betwixt our King and Miltrest Bo-len, being convey'd out of the King's Cabinet, were fought for, though in vain, they having been formerly fent to Rome. Which Usage so offended Campejus, that he complain'd immediately to our King; protesting be would not proceed in his Journey till he had repartition for the Wrongs done to his Perfon and Dignity; and that the People were sathe King. tisfy'd concerning certain scandalous Rumours, which he heard were scatter'd abroad to the prejudice of Car-dinal Woolsey and himself. But our King by his October 22. Letter of October 22. answer'd, That it must not for. I find also (by some relation) that divers

houte.

Complains of it to be expected from him, pressure at 1 that it must not be expected from him, pressure, gicquid we's vulgi temeritas essurias edulitas dos antinam ninium sortasses pulos & antia sensitia dos antinas solutares, our King answerd, That be conceived it was expired, not only in the sensitia solution. The K's as it was revok'd by the Pope's late Inhibition, but particularly by the interposition of his own Regal Authority, which alone his Subjects did acknowledge. Adding moreover, That he wonder'd somewhat that Campejus understood our Law so little, as not to fear bow he usurped after that time the Name of a Legat 1529 bow be ujurped after that time the Name of a Legat in this Kingdom; fince be, howing been made Bijhop bere of Salisbury, was bound by Oath to the Confervation of the Royal Prevogative. As for the Searchery doings, it was a Miffake; it the Commandian the bardings, the was a Miffake; it the Commandian the barding been given long fince, when there was juft occasion for it, and not in relation to his particular, who therefore he was farry to have been fo voughly util a defining the Cardinal, for the relf, to except the faild Searchers, fince they are housed there has Oath Salahe Const. the Caramas, for the rep, to example the find sounders, finde they are bound thereto by Oath. So that be ought not to pretend this as a caufe of his flay. As for the other part, which was the Rumour, our King faid, It was uncertain from whence it came; not with standing that it was (though not altogether fixed in his breast, yet) so generally received and believed in his Kingdom, that it would be hard to remove that Opinion: In which regard also, it was in vain for him to ftay here so much as one hour. How soever, that he might make this use ef it, as to know how ill his Subjects took this frustration of the Business. But as his Royal Care should be to prevent the Inconveniences Royal care possua ve to prevent the inconveniences, might follow hereof, so that it belong'd to Campejus s Wildom to continue those good Intentions he had made show of. For we (faith the King) tune demum dubitare poterinus, cum ipse factis palam diversum often-

Campejus being now more than once licens'ds thought it time to be gone; so that, coming at last to the Pope, he acquainted him with all the Proceedings, not forgetting the Dangers in which Cardinal Woodley was, for his too much Oblequioutness to that See. But the Pope, whether now altogether govern'd by the Emperor, or that otherwise he secretly hated the Cardidinal for his late unfeafonable Ambition to fucceed in the Papacy, feem'd to care for nothing for much as the conferving of his late League, though yet he was not fo fecure of our King. The King but that he feared not a little his often threatend threatens. Defection. So that he omitted nothing (that nounce might fland with his other Interests) for the the Pope, containing of him in his wonted Devotion: Infomuch that he offer'd new Projects daily for his Satisfaction. Among which Gregory Cafalis relates one, which shall be fet down in his place.

Cardinal Woolfey being now divefted of his late Woolfe/ 175 Power (wherein he had the Glory, in some fort, to have been superior to his King) and for the rest being left alone, and exposed not only to a general Hatred, but to the private Machinations of the prefent and future Queen, became fensi-ble of his ill estate; though yet he did not believe himself so near his Overthrow, as it appear'd afterwards. But what cou'd he hope for, when fuch puissant Enemies did procure his Defiruction ? Therefore, though he receiv'd some Advices from Rome, which might argue a Care rather than a Power for his Conservation, yet in effect what fecret Intelligence foever pass'd betwixt the Pope and him, came to the Emperor first, and after to Queen Katherine, who cunningly caus'd it to be whisper'd into the King's Ears, by fome more indirect ways, than it could pof-fibly be imagin'd to proceed from her. Likewise Miftress Anne Bolen, having learn'd from some of the King's wifest and gravest Counsellors divers Malversations of the Cardinal, was so far from difguifing them, that she even missinterpreted his better Actions. Edmund Campion adds to these Camp. as Reasons, that Sir Francis Bryan being in Rome, Diverse, did by the means of a Familiar of one who kept the Pope's Papers, obtain a Letter of the Cardinals, which wrought his Ruine, in this man-ner: Having first shew'd her the Cardinal's Hand-writing, and then corrupted her, this Courtezan fo dexteroully perform'd the reft, as upon pretence of vifiting her Servant in his Student Vol. II.

An Indictment

againft

An In-

entory

raken of his rich

Goods

I will not contradict, yet I suppose to be the more improbable, that I find by Original Difeatches, Bryan was come from Rome before any Argument of the King's Disfavour to the Cardinal appear'd. Howfoever, the way the King took to overthrow him was meerly legal, though approaching to Summum Jus, after most Men's Opinion. In the carriage whereof yet that Seerefy was us'd, that the Cardinal did not, or perchance out of Greatness of Mind wou'd not take notice of what was intended against him. So that though the Bill or Indictment was put in (at preferr'd the beginning of Michaelmas Term) yet did he ride that Day to the Chancery with his accu-flom'd Pomp. Of which our King being adver-tis'd, thought fit to forbid him the place; as Octob. 9. thinking it undecent, that a Man, who was upon terms of Conviction, should administer that high Charge. Therefore the Dukes of Norfolk Oaob. 18 and Suffolk were fent, the eighteenth of Odober, The Seals to require the Great Seal of him. But the Cardinal, instead of rendring it, disputed their Aufrom him. thority, alledging the Place of Lord Chancellor was by the King's Letters Patents given him du-The two Dukes hereupon returned ring life.

> ters to the Cardinal, who having read them, deliver'd immediately the great Scal; in fequence thereof, also submitting himself to the King, who commanded him to leave York-Place, and fimply to depart to Alber, a Country-House near Hampton-Court, belonging to the Bishop of Winchester. He charged his Officers also to inventory and bring forth his Goods. Whereupon much brave Furni ture made into Hangings, befides whole Pieces of rich Stuffs were set upon divers Tables in his House; the variety and number whereof may be when (as Cavendish hath it) of fine imagin'd, Holland Cloth alone there were a thousand Pieces. Betides, the Walls of his Gallery on the one fide were hang'd with rich Suits of Cloth of Gold, Cloth of Silver, Cloth of Tiffue, and Cloth of Bodkin; on the other fide was placed the most glorious Suit of Copes that had been feen in England. In a Chamber near to the Gallery was a great Cupboard of Plate, of maffy Gold; and in a Chamber adjoining, vast quantity of other Plate. All which the Cardinal commanded Sir to Court, bringing the next day the King's Let-

William Gascogne (his Treasurer) to deliver to the King, when he was requir'd.

Plate.

In the mean while the Bill against the Cardinal proceeded, the most substantial parts whereof being extracted out of the Original Record. I have thought fit to prefent to the Reader. The ground upon which Christopher Hales, the King's Attorney, profecuted the Cardinal, was a Statute 1681. II. of 16 Richard II. in which is enacted, That, whereas the Commons of the Realm ought of right, and were wont of old time to fue in the King's Court to re-cover their Presentments to Churches, Prebends, and cover their Frejenment to Characes, Account, and either Benefices of Holy Church, to which they had right to prefent, and when Judgment shall be given in the faid Court upon such a Plea and Presentment, the Architecture faid Court upon succe as see and execution, we subject to bilhops, Bilhops, and other Spiritual Perfons, which have Infituations of fuch Benefices within their Jurifdictions, be bound, and have made Execution of Juch fudgments by the King's Commandments, of all the time aforefaid, without interruption, and also be bound of right to make Execution of many other the King's Commandments: Of which Right the Crown of England bath been peaceably feized, as well now, as in the time of all his Progenitors. And whereas the Biftop of Rome (for fo he is termed in the Act) had made

1529. dy, she convey'd away this Letter, and gave it Execution of such Commandments, and also because be 1529

Bryan, who fail'd not immediately to fend it to both ordain'd and purpos'd to translate some Prelates of the Realm, which relation of Campion, though the Realm, some out of the Realm, and some from one bath ordain'd and purpos'd to translate some Prelates of the Realm, some out of the Realm, and some from one Bishoprick to another within the said Realm, without Bypoprick to amother prittin the faid Realm, without the King's Affent and Knowledge, and without the Affent of the Prelates, which fo field be troughted; which Prelates be much profitable and necessary to an Lord the King, and to all his Realm; which Transflations. if they should be suffered, the Statutes of the Realm should be defeated and made void, and his said Liege Sages of his Council, without his Allen, and againgth bis Will, carried away and gaten out of his Realm, and the Substance and Treasure of the Realm shall be carried away, and so the Realm destitute as well of Counsel as of Substance, to the final Destruction of the Same Realm; and so the Crown of England, which hath been so free at all times, that it hath been in no bath been so free at all times, that it bath been in no earthly Subjection, but immediately subject to God in all things touching the Legality of the some Coorn, and to name others, should be submitted to the Pore; and the Larrs and Statutes of the said Realm, by hin defeated and avoided at his will, in perpetual destruction of the Sovereignty of the King our Lord, his Crown, his Regality, and of all his Realm, Sec. Therefore the King, by the Assent of his Lords, and at the Request of the Commons, hath ordain d and established, that, if any purchased or pursue of the Court of Rome, or eliephere, any Transvented purfu'd in the Court of Rome, or elsewhere, any Tranlations, Processes, and Sentences of Excommunication, flations, tracegies, and sentences of excommunication, Bulls, Infruments, or any other things subatfactor, which touch the King, against him, his Crown, and Regality or Realm, and they which bring within the Notification, Realm, or them receive, or make thereof or any other Execution whatfoever within the same Realm or without; that they, their Notavies, Procurators, Maintainers, Abettors, Fautors and Counfellors, fball be put out of the King's Protection, and their Lands and Tenanents, Goods and Chattels, forfeit to the King, and that they be attach'd by their Bodies if they may be found, and brought before the King and his Council, there to answer to the Cases aforesaid, or that Process be made against them by a Writ of Pramunire facias, in manner as it is ordain'd in other Statutes of Provifors, and other, which do fue in any other Court, in de-rogation of the Regality of our Lord the King. Upon which Statute it was alledg'd, That Tho-Upon which Statute it was alledg'd, mas, Legatus de Latere, Cardinal, Archbishop of York, and Primate of England, being not ignorant of the Premises, had obtain'd certain Bulls from Clement VII. by which he exercifed Jurisdiction and Authrough Legatine, to the deprivation of the King's Power established in his Cours of Justice; which said Bulls be caused to be publickly read in Westminster, (Aug. be caused to be probleckly read in Wettminiter, (Aug. 28. Anno Reg. 15.) assignming to bimself thereupon 1553; the Dignity and Jurisdiction of Legatus de Latere, Aug. 38. which be bath exercis d from the said twenty eighth of Rg. 15. August to this day, to the prejudice of the Right of both Secular and Ecclefissfical Persons, and that by colour thereof, he had given away the Church of Stoke-Guilford in the County of Surrey (being of right in the Donation of the Prior of St. Panerace) to one James Gorton, who also enjoy'd it accordingly. All which was to the contempt of the King and his Crown, and contrary to the aforesaid Statutes of 16 Richard II. Moreover that, by colour of the faid Authority, he had caused the last Wills and Testaments of many (out of his cange in let by ris and refunding glandy (an glass). Diocefs) to be exhibited and proved in his Court, and their Goods and Chattels to be adminified by fueb as be appointed. Allothat, under colour of the feid Authority, he had made divors Vifitations out of his Diocefs, and drawn divers Pensions from Abbeys, to the contempt of the King and his Laws.

The proof of which Particulars, though evident and notorious, were not vet urged to his Conviction, till, through the King's special permission (by Writ of October 28.) John Scuss and Oats 28. Christopher Genney appear d in Court as his Attordivers Processes and Consures of Excommunication upon Christopher Geomey appeared in Court as his Attor-certain Bishops in England, because they have made news; where, for all other Answers, they pro-

I he Bill againft

Con-

ment and

~ Cardinal did not know the impetration of the faid Bulls to have been to the Contempt and Prejudice of the King, or that it was against any Statute of Provifors heretofore made. As for the Particulars wherewith he was charged by Mafter Attorney, he confest them all true in the manner and form alledg'd: And fo fubmitted himfelf to the King. Whereupon the Court gave Sentence, that he was out of the King's Protection, and his Lands, demn'd to Goods, and Chattels forfeit, and that his Person might Imprilon- be ferzed on.

Not contented herewith yet, another Proof of Eorferure of Goods, the fame kind was by the King's Attorney produced against the Cardinal, namely, that contrary to the right of the true Patron (being the Master and Fellows of the Hospital of St. Lazarus in Burton-Lazar) he had, by the same Authority, given away the Parish-Church of Galby in Leicestershire, and Diocess of Lincoln (then vacant by the death of one Woodroff) to one John Allen, Doctor of both Laws, and plac'd him

And thus fell the Cardinal, together with all his vast Possessions, into the King's hands. Concerning which the Criticks of the time gave fundry Opinions, the most part yet supposing him capable of the King's Mercy, had he been either lefs rich, or more humble. They thought him indeed condemn'd by Law, but by the Rigor of it. All which they confidered the more, that the Cardinal had so long exercis'd his Legatine Power, without that the King either feem'd to dislike it, or any other had question'd him for it. Therefore, howfoever he was convicted by form of Justice, they yet clear'd him in great part, and not they only, but the King. Infomuch, that the Impression taken of his ancient Services, was not defac'd wholly. So that notwith-flanding his best Goods were feiz'd on, and that the King might have taken therewith his other Possessions, and (with them) his intire liberty, yet he both fent him a Protection, and left him the Bishopricks of 20rk and Winebester, which he had lately given him after the death of Richard Fox, only he confin'd him for the present to his House at Alber, till his farther Pleasure was signify'd. Being upon his way, the King (touch'd with fome compassion) sent him by one Master Norreys, not only a gracious Meffage, but a Ring, which was a Token betwixt them, when any special business was recommended. Upon receiving whereof, the over-joy'd Cardinal alighted from his Mule, and in the Dirt upon his bare Knees acknowledg'd the Comfort he receiv'd. To fnew his Thankfulness also to Master Norreys, he prefented him with a Chain of Gold, at which a piece of the Crofs did hang. But it troubled him much that he had nothing to fend to the King; till at last having espy'd in his Train a facetious Natural, in whom he took much delight, he defir'd Mafter Norreys to present him to the King. Which Promotion yet this Fellow (for the approving himself no Counterfeit) did so slight, as the Cardinal was forc'd to send six of his tallest Yeomen to bring him to Court. The Cardinal coming at last to Asher, found himself to zirundel first, and after the Bishop of Carlisle provided him, he wanted even the most ordinary parts of Houshold-stuff. And thus the ill-accommodated Cardinal paffed fome Weeks in expectation of the King's further pleafure, not neglecting, in the mean while, to use those Friends he had left in Court, for the reintegrating him tested in the said Cardinal's Name, that the said Servant, (who came asterwards to great Preferment) was employ'd, but Miffreds Bolen feeretly oppos'd all. So that the Cardinal, being now in a manner hopeless of reguining the King's good Opinion, difmiffed (not without Tears on both Diffr & fides) the greatest part of his numerous Family, his ser-without other reward than what Matter Crommel vants and fome of his Chaplains did freely contribute. The King hearing the Cardinal to be fomewhat humbled, fent Sir John Rulfel with a Turquoife Nov s. Ring to him as a Token of his Care and Affecti-But it was not Gifts that the Cardinal expected from the King, but Liberty and Restitution to his former Greatness; which yet was so much in vain, as his Offences were daily exaggerated. For as the King did not think it enough that he had particularly advantag'd himself of the Cardinal's Punishment, unless he made some use thereof to the general, fo he call'd a Council of on a conthe Nobles, to fit in the Star-Chamber, who having fufficiently condemn'd him, he afterwards permitted him to the Parliament, which began November 3: 1729. Wherein the King alfo did Nov. 3- wilely, fince by intereffing the Publick in his 885-18. Condemnation, he both declin'd the Cenfure of Leonite Condemnation, he will be condemnation to the condemnation of the condemnation o those who thought the late Proceedings to have the Starbeen of the severest, and indear'd his People by Chamber putting the Power of punishing him into their hands. Therefore they took it as an intire Satisfaction for all they had hitherto fuffer'd; and by applauding of the King, made him know how thankfully they took this Favour. And thus did the King return to that former good Opinion he had of his Subjects.

Hereupon certain Articles against the Cardi-Articles nal were preferr'd in Parliament. The Origi-against nal whereof, found among our Records, I have him in thought fit to transcribe; and the rather for that ment our vulgar Chronicles mifreport them.

Onftrain'd by necessity of our Fidelity and Confeience, complain and flew to your Royal Majefty, We your Graces humble, true, faithful, and obedient Subjects, That the Lord Cardinal of York, lately your Graces Chancellor, prefuming to take upon him the Authority of the Popes Legat de Latere, hath by divers and many fundry ways and fashions committed notable. high, and grievous Offences, mifufing, altering, and fubverting the Order of your Graces Laws, and otherwise contrary to your high Honour, Prerogative, Crown, Estate, and Dignity Royal, to the ineffimable damage of your Graces Subjects of every degree, and confequently to the great hindrance, diminution, and decay of the universal Wealth of this your Graces Realm, as is it touched fummarily and particularly in certain Articles here following; which be but a few in comparison of all his Enormities, Excesses, and Trangressions committed against your Graces

That is to fay,

First, where your Grace, and your Noble Progenitors within this your Realm of England, being Kings of England, have been fo free, that they have had in all the World destitute of all Necessaries, as, till one Master no other Sovereign, but immediate subject to Almighty God, in all things, touching the Regality of your Crown of England, and the lame Preheminence, Prerogative, Jurissicion, lawful and peaceable Pofferfion, your Grace, and your noble Progenitors have had, used, and enjoyed without interruption, or bufiness therehe had left in Court, for the reintegrating him fore, by the space of two hundred Years and into his former Favour; or when that could not more; whereby your Grace may prescribe act be done, for the making his Fall more casty. For gainft the Popes Holinels, that he should not which purpose one Master Thomas Cromwel, his nor ought to send, or make any Legat to exe ingly ferz'd.

Goods

accord-

Sends his Fool a Prefent to the King

1729. Cute any Authority Legatine, contrary to your Graces Prerogative within this your Realm:

 Now the Lord Cardinal of York being your Subject, and natural liege born, hath of his high, orgullous, and infatiable Mind, for his own fingular Advancement and Profit, in derogation, and to the great imblemishment and hurt of your faid Royal Jurisdiction, and Prerogative, and the large continuance of the possession of the same, obtain'd Authority Legatine, by reason whereof he hath not only hurt your faid Prescription, but also by the faid Authority Legatine hath spoil'd and taken away from many Houses of Religion in this your Realm, much Substance of their Goods; and also hath usurped upon all your Ordinaries within this your Realm much part of their Jurisdiction, in derogation of your Prerogative, and to the great hurt of your faid Ordinaries, Prelates, and Religious.

H. Alfo, the faid Lord Cardinal, being your Ambaffador in France, made a Treaty with the French King for the Pope, your Majesty not knowing any part thereof, nor nam'd in the same; and binding the faid French King to abide his Order and Award, if any Controversy or Doubt flould arife upon the fame betwixt the faid Pope and the French King.

III. Alfo, the faid Lord Cardinal being your Ambassador in France, sent a Commission to Sir Gregory de Cafalis, under your Great Seal, in your Graces Name, to conclude a Treaty of Amity with the Duke of Ferrara, without any Command or Warrant of your Highness, nor your faid High-or Warding of your ringings, not you also needs advertis'd or made privy to the fame.

IV. Alfo, the faid Lord Cardinal, of his prefumptuous Mind in divers and many of his Letters and Instructions sent out of this Realm to outward Parties, had join'd himfelf with your Grace, as in faying and writing in his faid Letters and Instructions; The King and I. And, I would ye should do thus. The King and I give unto you cur hearty Thanks. Whereby it is apparent that he used himself more like a Fellow to your Highness, than like a Subject.

V. Alfo, where it hath ever been accustom'd within this your Realm, that when Noblemen do fwear their Houshold Servants, the first part of their Oath hath been, That they should be true Liegemen to the King and his Heirs Kings of England; the fame Lord Cardinal caufed his Servants to be only fworn to him, as if there had been no Sovereign above him.

VI. And alfo, whereas your Grace is our Sovereign Lord and Head, in whom flandeth all the Surety and Wealth of this Realm, the fame Lord Cardinal knowing himfelf to have the foul and contagious Difeate of the great Pox, broken out upon him in divers places of his Body, came daily to your Grace, rowning in your Ear, and blowing upon your most Noble Grace with his perillous and infective Breath, to the marvellous danger of your Highness, if God of his in-finite Goodness had not better provided for your Highness. And when he was once healed of them, he made your Grace to believe that his Difeafe was an Impostume in his Head, and of none other thing

VII. Allo, the faid Lord Cardinal, by his Authority Legatine, hath given, by prevention, the Benefices of divers Persons, as well Spiritual as Temporal, contrary to your Crown and Dignity, and your Laws and Effatutes therefore provided; by reason whereof he is in danger to your Grace of Forfeiture of his Lands and Goods, and his Body at your pleafure.

VIII. Allo, the faid Lord Cardinal, taking up

come first to him alone, and so hearing their Charges and Intents, it is to be thought he hath inftructed them after his pleasure and purpose, before that they came to your Presence; trary to your high Commandment by your Graces mouth to him given, and also to other Persons fent to him by your Grace.

IX. Alio, the faid Lord Cardinal hath practifed fo, that all manner of Letters fent from beyond the Sea to your Highness have come first to his hands, contrary to your high Command-ment by your own mouth, and also by others sent to him by your Grace; by reason whereof your Highness, nor any of your Council, had knowledge of no matters, but fuch as it pleas'd him to shew them; whereby your Highness, and your Council have been compell'd of very force to follow his Devices, which oftentimes were fet forth by him under fuch crafty and covert means, that your Highness and your Council hath often-times been abus'd. Infomuch, that when your Council have found, and put divers Doubts, and things which have afterwards enfu'd, he to abuse them us'd these Words; I will lay my Head that no fuch thing shall happen.

X. Also, the said Lord Cardinal hath practised that no manner of perfon, having charge to make espial of things done beyond the Sea, should at their return come first to your Grace, nor to any other of your Council, but only to himself, and in case they did the contrary, he punished them for so doing.

XI. Alfo, the faid Lord Cardinal hath granted License under your great Seal for carrying out of Grain and other Victual, after the Rettraint hath been made thereof, for his own lucre, and fingular advantage of him and his Servants, for to fend thither as he bare fecret Favour, without your Graces Warrant or Knowledge there-

XII. Also, the faid Lord Cardinal used, many Years together, not only to write unto all your Ambassadors resident with other Princes in his own Name all Advertisements concerning your Graces Affairs, being in their Charge; and in the fame his Letters wrote many things of his own mind, without your Graces Pleasure being known, concealing divers things which had been neceffary for them to know: But also caused them to write their Advertisements unto him; and of the same Letters he used to conceal for the compassing of his purposes, many things both from all your other Counsellors, and from your felf alfo.

XIII. Alfo, where good Hospitality hath been used to be kept in Houses and Places of Religion of this Realm, and many poor People thereby relieved, the faid Hospitality and Relief is now decay'd, and not us'd; and it is commonly reported that the occasion thereof is, because the of the Rulers of the faid Houfes, as well for his favour in making of Abbots and Priors, as for his Visitation, by his Authority Legatine: And yet, nevertheless, taketh yearly of such Religious Houses, such yearly and continual Charges, as they be not able to keep Hospitality as they us'd to do; which is a great Cause that there be fo many Vagabonds, Beggars and Thieves, XIV. Alfo, where the faid Lord Cardinal faid, before the suppression of such Houses as he hath suppress'd, that the Possessions of them should be fet to farm among your Lay-Subjects, after fuch reafonable yearly Rent, as they should well thereupon live, and keep good Hospitality; and now the demain Possessions of the said Houses, since on him otherwise than a true Counsellor ought to do, hath used to have all Ambassadors to mete, and measur'd by the Acre, and be now fet above the value of the old Rent; and also fuch as were Farmers by Covent-Seal, and Copy-holders be put out, and mov'd of their Farms, or elfe compell'd to pay new Fines, contrary to all Equity and Confcience.

XV. Alfo, the faid Lord Cardinal, fitting among the Lords, and other of your most Ho-nourable Council, us'd himself that if any Man would shew his mind according to his Duty, contrary to the opinion of the faid Cardinal, he would fo take him up with his accustomable Words, that they were better to hold their peace than to speak, so that he would hear no Man fpeak, but one or two great Perfonages, fo that he would have all the words himfelf, and confum'd much time with a fair tale.

XVI. Alfo, the faid Lord Cardinal by his Ambition and Pride, hath hindred and undone many of your poor Subjects for want of Dispatchment of matters; for he would no Man should meddle but himfelf. Infomuch, that it hath been affirm'd by many wife Men, that ten of the most wife, and most expert Men in England, were not fufficient in convenient time to order the matters that he would retain to himfelf: And many times he deferr'd the ending of Matters, because that Sutors should attend and wait upon him, whereof he had no small pleasure that his House might be replenish'd with Sutors.

XVII. Alfo, the faid Lord Cardinal, by his Authority Legatine, hath us'd, if any Spiritual Man having any Riches or Substance, deceas'd, he hath taken their Goods as his own; by reafon whereof their Wills be not perform'd: And one mean he had, to put them in fear that were made Executors, to refuse to meddle.

XVIII. Alfo, the faid Lord Cardinal conftrain'd all Ordinaries in England yearly to com-pound with him, or elfe he will usurp half or the whole of their Jurisdiction by prevention, not for good order of the Diocess, but to extort Treasure; for there is never a poor Arch-Deacon in England, but that he paid yearly to him a Portion of his Living.

XIX. Also, the faid Lord Cardinal hath not only by his untrue fuggestion to the Pope, shamefully flandered many good Religious Houses, and good virtuous Men dwelling in them, but also suppress'd by reason thereof above thirty Houfes of Religion; and where, by Authority of his Bull, he should not suppress any House that had more Men of Religion in number, above the number of fix or feven, he hath suppress'd divers Houses that had above the number; and thereupon hath caus'd divers Offices to be found by Verdict, untruly, that the Religious Persons, so suppress'd, had voluntarily for aken their said Houses, which was untrue, and so hath caus'd open Perjury to be committed, to the high Difpleature of Almighty God.

XX. Alfo, the faid Lord Cardinal hath examin'd divers and many matters in the Chancery, after Judgment thereof given at the Common Law, in subversion of your Laws; and made some Persons restore again to the other Party condemn'd, that they had in execution by virtue of the Judgment in the Common Law. XXI. Alfo, the faid Lord Cardinal hath granted many Injunctions by Writ, and the Parties never call'd thereunto, nor Bill put in against them. And, by reason thereof, divers of your subjects have been put from their lawful Poffeftion of their Lands and Tenements. And, by flich means, he hath brought the more Party of the Sutors of this vonr Realm before himfelf, whereby he and divers of his Servants have gotten much Riches, and your Subjects fuffer'd great Wrongs.

XXII. Alfo, the faid Lord Cardinal, to aug-ment his great Riches, hath crus'd divers Par-dons granted by the Pope to be fulpended, which could not be reviv'd till that the faid Lord Cardinal were rewarded, and also have a yearly Pension of the faid Pardon.

XXIII. Also, the said Lord Cardinal, not regarding your Laws nor Justice, of his extort Power, hath put out divers and many Farmers of his Lands, and also Patents of the Archbi-shoprick of York, and Bishoprick of Winchester, and of the Abby of St. Albans, which had good and fufficient grant thereof by your Laws.

XXIV. Alfo, the fume Lord Cardinal at many times when any Houses of Religion have been void, he hath fent his Officers thither, and with crafty Perfuasions bath induc'd them to compromit their Election in him. And that, before ere he nam'd or confirm'd any of them, he and his Servants received fo much great Goods of them, that in manner it hath been to the un-doing of the House.

XXV. Also, by his Authority Legatine, the fame Lord Cardinal hath vifited the most part of the Religious Houses and Colleges in this your Realm, hath taken of them the twenty-fifth part of their Livelihood, to the great extor-tion of your Subjects, and derogation of your Laws and Prerogative; and no Law to bear him

XXVI. Alfo, when Matters have been near at Judgment by Process at your Common Law, the same Lord Cardinal hath not only given and fent Injunctions to the Parties, but also sent for your Judges, and exprelly by threats commanding them to defer the Judgment, to the evident fubversion of your Laws, if the Judges would so have ceas'd.

XXVII. Alfo, whereas neither the Bishoprick of York, nor Winchester, nor the Abby of St. Al-bans, nor the profit of his Legation, nor the benefit of the Chancery, nor his great Penfion out of France, nor his Wards, and other inordinate taking could not fuffice him, he hath made his Son Winter to spend twenty-seven hundred pounds by the year, which he taketh to his own ule, and giveth him not past two hundred pounds yearly to live upon.

XXVIII. Alfo, where the faid Lord Cardinal did first sue unto your Grace to have your Affent to be Legate de Latere, he promis'd and folemnly protested before your Majesty, and be-fore the Lords both Spiritual and Temporal that he would nothing do or attempt by virtue of his Legacy, that should be contrary to your gracious Prerogative or Regality, or to the Da-mage or Prejudice of the Jurisdiction of any Ordinary, and that by his Legacy no Man should be hurt or offended; and upon that Condition, and no other, he was admitted by your Grace to be Legate within this your Realm, which Condition he hath broken, as is well known to all your Subjects. And when that he made this Promife, he was busie in his Suit at Rome, to visit all the Clergy of England, both exempt and not

XXIX. Also, upon the Suit of the faid Lord Cardinal at Rome, to have his Authority Legatine, he made untrue furmife to the Popes Holiness against the Clergy of your Realm, which was, that the Regular Persons of the said Clergy had given themselves in reprehum sinsum; which words Saint Paul writing to the Roman apply'd to aborninable Sin; which Slander to your Church of England, shall for ever remain in the Register at Rome against the Clergy of this your Realm.

XXX. Also, the faid Lord Cardinal had the cinc of the Verge; and it was commanded by 2529 more part of the Goods of Dr. Smith, late Bi- your faid Officers to fet up the faid Prices both 1529. shop of London, Bishop Savage of York, Mr. Dalby Archdencon of Richmond, Mr. Tornyers, Dr. Rothal late Bishop of Durham, and of Dr. Fox late Bishop of Winchester, contrary to their Wills and your Laws and Justice.

XXXI. Also, at the Oyer and Terminer at York Proclamation was made, that every Man should put in their Bills for extortion of Ordinaries, and when divers Bills were put in against the Officers of the faid Lord Cardinal of Extortion, for taking twelve pence of the pound for Pro-bation of Testaments, whereof divers Bills were found before Juffice Fitz-Herbert, and other Commissioners, the same Lord Cardinal remov'd the fame Indicaments into the Chancery by Certiorari, and rebuked the fame Fitz-Herbert for the fame Caufe.

XXXII. Alfo, the faid Lord Cardinal hath busied and endeavour'd himself by crafty and untrue tales to make Diffention and Debate amongst your Nobles of your Realm, which is ready to be prov'd.

XXXIII. Alfo, the faid Lord Cardinal's Officers have divers times compell'd your Subjects to terve him with Carts for Carriages. And also his Servants have taken both Corn and Cattel, Fish, and all other Victuals at your Graces price or under, as though it had been for your Grace, which is contrary to the Laws.

XXXIV. Allo, the faid Lord Cardinal hath mifus'd himfelf in your most Honourable Court, in keeping of as great Estate there in your Ab-sence, as your Grace would have done, if you had been there prefent in your own Person.

XXXV. Alfo, his Servants, by virtue of your Commission under your broad Seal by him to them given, hath taken Cattel, and all other Victual, at as low price as your Purveyors have done for your Grace by your Prerogative, against the Laws of your Realm, XXXVI. Alfo, where it hath been accustom'd that your Purveyors for your Honourable Hou-shold have had yearly out of your Town and Liberty of St. Albans three hundred or four hundred Quarters of Wheat, truth it is, that fince the Lord Cardinal had the room of Abbot there, your faid Purveyors could not be fuffer'd by him and his Officers, to take any Wheat within the faid Town or Liberties.

XXXVII. Also he hath divers times given Injunction to your Servants, that have causes before himin the Star-Chamber, that they nor other for them should make labour, by any manner of way directly or indirectly, to your Grace, to obtain your gracious Favour or Pardon, which was a prefumptuous intent for any Subject. XXXVIII. Alfo, the faid Lord Cardinal did call before him Sir John Stanley Knight, which had taken a Farm by Covent-Seal of the Abbot and Covent of Chefter, and afterwards by his Power and Might, contrary to Right, committed the said Sir John Stanley to the Prison of Fleet by the space of one year, until such time as he compell'd the faid Sir John to releafe his Covent-Seal to one Legbe of Adlington, which marry'd one Lark's Daughter, which Woman the faid Lord Cardinal kept, and had with her two Chil-Whereupon the faid Sir John Stanley, upon displeasure taken in his heart, made himself Monk in Westminster, and there died.

XXXIX. Alfo, on a time your Grace being at St. Albans, according to the ancient custom us d within your Verge, your Clerk of the Mar-ket doing his Office, did present unto your Oslicers of your most Honourable Houshold the Pri-on the Gates of your Honourable Houshold, and also in the Market-place within the Town of St. Albans, as of ancient Custom it hath been us'd; and the Lord Cardinal, hearing the same, prefumpenously, and not like a Subject, caus'd the aforefaid Prices which were feal'd with your Graces Seal, accustomably us'd for the same, to be taken off, and pull'd down in the faid Market-place where they were fet up, and in the fame place fet up his own Prices feal'd with his Seal, and would, if it had not been letted, in femblable manner us'd your Seal flanding upon your Graces Gates; and also would of his prefumptuous Mind, have openly fer in the Stocks within your faid Town your Clerk of your Market. By which Prefumption and Ufurpation your Grace may perceive, that in his Heart he hath reputed himfelf to be equal with your Royal Majesty.

XL. Alfo, the faid Lord Cardinal, of his further pompous and prefumptuous Mind, hath enterpris'd to joyn and imprint the Cardinals Hat under your Arms in your Coin of Groats, made at your City of York, which like Deed hath not been feen to have been done by any Subject within your Realm before this time.

XLI, Also, where one Sir Edward Jones, Clerk, Parson of Crowley in the County of Buckingham, in the 18th year of your most Noble Reign, let his said Parsonage with all Tythes, and other Profits of the same to one William Johnson by Indentures for certain years, within which years the Dean of the faid Cardinal's College in Oxford, pretended title to a certain Portion of Tythes within the faid Parfonage, supposing the faid Portion to belong to the Parsonage of Chichles, which was appropriated to the Priory of Tykeford, lately suppress'd, where of truth, the Par-fons of Crowley have been peaceably possess'd of the said Portion, time out of mind: Whereupon a Subjana was directed to the faid Johnson to appear before the faid Lord Cardinal at Himpton-Court; where without any Bill, the faid Lord Cardinal committed him to the Fleet, where he remain'd by the space of twelve Weeks, because he would not depart with the faid Portion; and at the last, upon a Recognizance made, that he should appear before the faid Lord Cardinal wherefoever he was commanded, he was deli-ver'd out of the Fleet. Howbeit, as yet the faid Portion is fo kept from him, that he dare not deal with it.

XLII. Alfo, where one Martin Docorura had a Leafe of the Mannor of Balfal in the County of Warwick, for term of certain years, an Injunction came to him out of the Chancery, by Writ, upon pain of a thousand pounds, that he should avoid the Potfession of the same Mannor, and suffer Sir Gere. Throgmorton Knight, to take the Profits of the fame Mannor, to the time the matter depending in the Chancery between the Lord of St. Johns, and the faid Docoura were discust; and yet the faid Doconvra never made antiwer in the Chancery, never was call'd into the Chancery for that Macter. And now of late he hath receiv'd the like Injunction, upon pain of two thouland pounds, contrary to the courfe of the Common Law.

XLIII. Alfo, whereas in the Parliament-Chamber, and in the open Parliament, Communication and Devices were had and mov'd, wherein men-tion was, by an Incident, made of matters touching Herefies, and erroneous Sects. It was spoken and reported by one Bishop there being present, and confirm'd by a good number of the same Bishops in presence of all the Lords ees of all manner of Victuals, within the Pre- Spiritual and Temporal then affembled, that two 1529. of the faid Bishops were minded and desir'd to the resisting of this brunt, nor even the gracious 1529. repair unto the University of Cambridge, for Examination, Reformation, and Correction of fuch Errors as then feem'd, and were reported to reign amongst the Students and Scholars of the fame, as well touching the Lutheran Sect and Opinions, as otherwife; the Lord Cardinal informed of the good Minds and Intents of the faid two Bishops in that behalf, expresly inhibited and commanded them in no wife fo to do. By means whereof the fame Errors (as they affirm'd) crept more abroad, and took greater place: Saying furthermore, that it was not in their defaults that the faid Herefies were not punish'd, but in the faid Lord Cardinal, and that it was no reason any blame or lack should be arrected unto them for his Offence. Whereby it evidently appeareth, that the said Lord Cardinal, besides all other his heinous Offences, hath been the impeacher and disturber of due and direct correction of Herefies; being highly to the danger and peril of the whole body and good Christian People of this your Realm.

XLIV. Finally, Forafmuch as by the afore-fiid Articles is evidently declar'd to your most Royal Mafesty, that the Lord Cardinal by his outragious Pride hath greatly shadow'd a long feason your Graces Honour, which is most highly to be regarded, and by his infatiable Avarice and ravenous Appetite, to have Riches and Trea-fure without measure, hath fo grievoully op-press'd your poor Subjects, with fo manifold crafts of Bribery and Extortion, that the Com-monwealth of this your Graces Realm is thereby greatly decay'd and impoverish'd: And also by his Cruelty, Iniquity, Affection and Partiality, hath subverted the due course and order of your Graces Laws, to the undoing of a great number of your loving People;

Pleafe it your most Royal Majesty therefore of your excellent Goodness towards the weal of this your Realm, and Subjects of the fame, to fet fuch order and direction upon the faid Lord Cardinal, as may be to the terrible example of others to beware fo to offend your Grace and your Laws hereafter: And that he be fo provided for, that he never have any Power, Jurif-diction, or Authority, hereafter to trouble, vex, and impoverish the Commonwealth of this your Realm, as he hath done heretofore, to the great hurt and damage of every Man almost, high and low. Which for your Grace fo doing, will daily pray, as their Duty is, to Almighty God, for the profperous Effate of your most Royal Majefty long to endure in Honour and good Health, to the pleasure of God, and your Hearts most defire

Subscrib'd the first day of December, the twenty first year of the Reign of our Sovereign Lord

King Henry the Eighth.

T. Darcy. T. Rochford. T. More. T. Norfolk. Char. Suffolk. II'. Mountjoy. Will. Sandys. Tho. Dorfes. H. Exeter. William Fitz-William. G. Shrewsbury. Henry Guldeford. Anthony Fitz-Herbert. John Fitz-James. R. Fitzwater. Fo. Oxenford. H. Northumberland.

These Articles were presented to the King by defence of the Lords, and then fent down to the lower the Cardi. House: Where Tho. Cromvel (obtaining the place nal his of a Burces) for within defeated the of a Burgefs) To wittily defended the Cardinal tual.

1. That the Imperial Army which was in Naples charge. And upon this honeft beginning, Cross floudd have fecure Passage through the Popes Territoral obtain'd his first Reputation. Yet could not Master.

Meffages receiv'd frequently from the King chear up our Cardinal. For as he found the Pope had now a long while neglected to give the King any fatisfaction (which certainly was the only way to procure the Cardinal's Restitution) and that (for the rest) no evident sign of the Kings relenting appear'd, fo being not able to support any longer his many Afflictions, he fell dange-Who falls roufly fick. The News whereof being brought fick thro to the Kings ears, mov'd fo much Compaffion, recoveras not only he, but, by his Intreaty, Miftres ing the Anne Bolen (whom the Cardinal had in vain im-Kong faportun'd to intercede for him) also fent him se-vour. veral Tokens; whereof one was a Ruby, wherein the King's Image was curiously engraven, a Gift heretofore of the Cardinals, together with a gracious Message deliver'd by Doctor Butts a gracious Mellage deliver d by Doctor Burns his Physician; That his Highness was not anyer with Obsims him in his Heart, which he should know shortly, the KN burns him in his Heart, which he should him Health Parion. Whereupon as the Cardinal recover'd his Health fo the King, for confirming his Promifes, feal'd his Pardon, February 12. and three days after, by Feb. 12. Letters Patents, reftor'd him to the Archbisho-prick of Tork. Moreover, he sent him Money, Plate, rich Hangings, and Furniture for his House and Chappel, in that quantity, as the Cardinal was for the present much recover'd: Hoping alfo, that fince he had refign'd his House call'd York-House (but afterward by the King styl'd the Mannor of Westminster, now White-Hall) that his Halinsted. Punishment ended there, and himself now upon terms of regaining the Kings favour. The Confidence whereof also made him to be an humble Suppliant to the King, that, for his Healths fake, he might have leave to remove to Rich-mond-House, the use of which he had receiv'd in Feb. 1530 exchange from the King, for that his fumptuous Palace which he built, and call'd by the name of Hambton-Court.

It is now time to look a while on foreign Hi- War in flory. Our last Narration lest the Count de St. 1538 Pol in Italy, where he had quarter'd that part of the Soldiers which remain'd of that years Wars, in their Winter Garrifons; but the Spring being come, he took divers places on this fide the Tifino, and at laft joyn'd his Forces with the Duke of Urbin, General of the Venetians, and Francisco Sforza. Yet, whether that he durft not attempt the City of Milan, which Antonio de Leyva strongly defended, or that the Count de St. Pol affected more the Enterprize of Genoüa, their Army march'd to Landriano, June 21. 1529. Of which French deAntonio de Leyva being advertis'd, us'd that dili1529. gence, that he furpris'd the Count de St. Pol June. when part of his Army was march'd before, and wholly defeated the reft, taking him Prisoner.

This while the Emperor equipp'd a great Fleet for Italy, with intention to be Crown'd there, having first (for the more ample furnishing of himself with Money) pawn'd the Moluca's to the King of Portugal for 350000 Ducats.

The Pope hearing of these great Preparatives at the same Scason that the Defeat of St. Pol. (fucceeding that of Laurrech in Naples) had wholly difabled the Army of the Confederates, refolv'd to comply with the times. So that, before the News thereof could eafily be convey'd to the Emperor, he endeavour'd his own Peace, to the Emperor, he enceated a member of for this purpose employing one Antinio Musetoler a Neapolitan; who prevail'd fo far, as he concluded here to this effect. a League at Barcelona, June 29. to this effect.

1. That the Peace betwixt them should be perpe-The Popes 2. That the Imperial Army which was in Naples Emperer.

Vol. II. 2. That

3. That the Emperor (hould give Donna Margaing at Cambra) was not without fome of that

(his Natural Daughter) in Marging to AleffanEmulation and Puntillio which is ordinary in T C 2 Q. rita (his Natural Daughter) in Marriage to Alessandro de Medicis Son of Lorenzo, and that he should invest him in the State of Florence, with the Title of

4. That Cervia, Ravenna, Modena, Reggio, should be restor'd to the Apostolick See by the Emperor's Power.

5. That the Pope should give unto the Emperor a Bull, with the Title of the Kingdom of Naples, to be held in Fee from the Pope, upon payment every year of a Horse or a Hackney white.

6. That the Pope should in all Ecclesiastical Affairs, enjoy his accustom'd Right.

7. That the Pope and Emperor (hould fee one another in Italy.

8. That the Emperor should assist the Pope against the Duke of Ferrari.

9. That Institute should be done to Francisco Sforza Duke of Milan, and that the Emperor commit bu Cause to indifferent Judges.

10. That the Emperor and his Brother Don Ferrard.

nando and the Pope joyn together to reduce the Lutherans, either by fair or foul means to the Roman Catholick Faith.

All which Articles (and perhaps fome private July 3. ones concerning the Affairs of England now in a-gitation) were fworn to on both fides upon the Great Altar of the Cathedral Church of Barcelona.

And thus did the Pope renounce all his former Defigns, and betake himfelf intirely to the Emperor, at the fame time when the two Cardinals fat on their Commission in England. So easie was it for the Pope to forget both the Injuries receiv'd from the Imperialiffs, and the good turns from all his Confederates, when a readier way was open'd him for regaining his Cities,

Guiceiard, and revenging himfelf on the Duke of Ferrara and the Florentimes, who, during his late Captivity, had expuls'd the Family of Medicis out of the City.

Francis also understanding that, upon this fecond Overthrow of his Forces in Italy, his Reputation was loft, and his Confederates discouraged, and hearing befides, the Pope had concluded this League with the Emperor, thought it better to referve his Money for Ranfoming his Children, than to cast it away in the Wars. So that, not-withstanding his reiterated Protestations of Affection to our King, he underhand labour'd a Peace with the Emperor. The Overtures whereof also were willingly accepted, both as Charles doubted a change of Religion in Germany, and as the Turk had made no little Progress in Hungary. For which causes also he chose rather to hearken to those motions were made for delivering of the Children of Francis upon reasonable terms, than to detain them any longer unufefully. Thus both their minds fecretly concurring to Peace, between both their minds terreity concurring to reace, Charles the Treaty thereof was permitted to two Ladies, and Francis Madam Leitife Mother of Francis, and Regent by Ladies, of Francis, and Madam Anna-Alargarita Aunt to Charles, and Regent of the Lon-Countries. Of which kind though the Precedents be rare, yet, as Affairs then flood, they were thought no ill Mediatroffes. Both as the suppleness of their Sex could better decline that rough Dispute, which (confidering the late Cartels) could scarce be eschew'd betwixt the Servants of either Prince, and as it was a kind of Gallantry, to effay, if after formany broken or avoided Treaties which Men had made, one concluded by Women would hold; howfoever for Women to treat of Marriage or Childrens bufinefs, was no strange But the event shew'd they were able Ne-their Sex, yet at last they fell to treat in good earnest. The Proposition which before all of ther Madam Lastife made, was that a Messenger might be sent to see the Estate of the Children of Francis, it being in vain (she faid) to treat of their Delivery, when (for any thing she knew) they were not extant at all. This being accorded, the Ladies proceeded to the more substantial Articles of a Treaty.

Madam Margarita faid, indeed the had no other Instruction, but to demand the execution of the Treaty of Madrid; but Madam Luisife, reprefenting fometimes the unreafonableness, and fometimes the impossibility of performing those Articles, reduc'd her to more moderate Terms. Whereunto also our King's Ambaslidors, Cuth-bert Tonstal Bishop of Duresme, and Sir Thomas Sir Thomas More, did not little conduce. For as our King Mer the knew the weight he could add on either fide, would fway the Balance, fo he interpos'd Cith-the Treaces; hoping to get either Francis to procure his ty at Cam-Divorce, or Charles to suffer it. But as those bray. Princes affairs requir'd a more quick and ferious Dispatch, than to attend the Decision of so great and doubtful a Bufiness, they car'd little to fatisfie our King, or to comply with Miltress Belen. Therefore, fetting apart those Considerations, they attended only their own Interefls; and Madam Louise very particularly the News of her Grand-Childrens safety. For which purpose having employ'd one Verdin, he gave sambon this Account as it is extant in the Spanish His-

That he found the Dauphin and Duke of Or-The Dause leans in the Cassle of Pedrazu, under the Guard phin and leans in the Cassle of Pedrazu, of the Marquis de Verlanga, in a dark Chamber, Duke of Orleans's ill furnisht, having forgotten all their French, fo course that when Vordin spake to them, they requir'd treatment an Interpreter, that their best entertainment was in Spain. playing with little Dogs, and making Pictures in Wax. That, when he prefented them new Cloaths, the Marquis would not suffer them to be put on, whereof Fordin gives this ridiculous Reason, that the Spaniards believ'd there were Witches in France, that could transport any one in the Air when their Charms might but touch But Vordin was deceiv'd; the true the Body. reason being, that out of a certain curiosity for preservation of those Princes, as well as discharge of his own Truft, Verlanga would neither fuffer those, nor any other Cloaths to be worn by the Princes, till others had put them on first. Madam Louise was so ill fatisfi'd with this Relation, that she hastned the Peace. To which purpose, as the Cardinal de Salviati (the Popes Legate) did contribute his endeavours, (but with favour certainly to the Emperor) fo our Ambaffadors likewise did co-operate, but so, as they had principal regard of Francis: Our King believing that he might be the fooner induc'd openly to affift him, when his Children were free. Thus these pompous Ladies (who met at Cambray, July 5.) mediated a Peace, though not July 5. oray, july 3.7 mediated a creacy intogin into without fome difficulty, Madam Loiije once breaking off the Treaty, fo that, had not the Emperor, by an express Courier, enlargd the Instructions given to his Aunt, no Peace had follow'd. At last they concluded this Treaty, in which also our King was comprehended.

The Treaty of Cambray, Aug. 5. 1529.

I. THat there shall be a good, sure, and perpetual Peace betwirk the Emperor and gotiatroffes. For though their first Meeting (be- King, and that they shall be for ever Friends of 1529. the Friends, and Enemies of the Enemies of each ty of Arteis, together with the Cannon and Mu-

II. That the Treaty of Madrid shall remain in its full force and vigour, and shall be inviolably kept betwixt them, their Heirs and Successors, without Innovation, except only in the third, fourth, eleventh, and sourcenth Articles, where mention is made of the Counties of Auxerois, Massement, Bur Jim Seine, the Vicounty of Auxene, and the Superiority or Government of St. Language, and the Superiority or Government of St. Language, And whereas it was agreed by the Treaty of Madrid, that the afordsid Places should be refler'd to the Emperor, yet, in consideration of the Peace, he is content to remain only in the Action and Right, in an amisable course, or by way of Justice to be executed; which be intends also shall be referred to him and his Heirs, notwithstanding any Prescription of time that can be alledged to the contrary, it being permitted also to the faid King, and his Successors to defend themselves. Notwithstanding all which, that a certain Rent, which the said King pretends to have for Salt out of certain Salines in those parts, thall be extinct for ever.

III. That the said King for the Ransom of his two Sons, shall pay two Millions of Crowns de Soleil; the Gold to be of twenty-two Carats and three quarters, whereof one Million and two hundred thousand Crowns, shall be paid in Specie, as much as can be gotten, and the rest in one intire Mass of Gold, if the Emperor shall fo think good, or if otherwise, it shall be coin'd, and Essay thereof taken. And at the same inflant the Dauphin and Duke of Orleans shall be deliver'd to the Deputies of the faid King. All which is to be done at or before the first day of March next ensuing, in the manner and form as shall be agreed betwixt the faid Emperor and King. And as for the other eight hundred thou-fand Crowns, the faid King shall discharge the Emperor of a certain Debt he oweth to the King of England for Moneys lent him upon Pawns, as may appear by certain Schedules and Obligations of his Majefly, which Debt is faid to a-mount to two hundred and ninety thousand Growns de Soleil, or thereabouts. And concerning the remainder of the faid two Millions, amounting anto five hundred and two Millions, amounting anto five hundred and ten thousand Crowns de Soleil, the said King shall give unto the Emperor, the said Sum, in Rent, for a certain time, upon certain Lands and Signiories in Brabant, Flanders, Hainsult, Artois, or elsewhere in the Low-Countries, where the Emperor or his Commissioners shall chuse or appoint, of the yearly value of twenty-five thousand and five hundred Crowns, till the said Sum of five hundred and ten thousand Crowns be made up. All this to commence as foon as the Children be deliver'd. At which time also the said King shall procure, that King Henry deliver unto the Emperor the Writings, Schedules, and Obligations, together with the Acquittances for the payments of the faid Debts. As also the faid Pawns and Obligations of Indemnity promis'd by the faid Emperor to the King of England; and that the faid two Millions being thus paid, the Emperor shall not demand any thing for cause of his Imprisonment.

IV. That Francis, in the space of six weeks after the Ratification of this Treaty, shall revoke and call back all the Forces he hath in Italy, whether Franch or Mercenaries, so that the Emperor may be assured the Resistance of t

V. That the faid King within fifteen days after the receipt of the ratification of this Treaty, shall reftore unto the Emperor the Castle and Bayliage of Hessian, as a Member of his County of Artois, together with the Cannon and Munition, according to the Treaty of Madrid, except those Moveables that have been reflor'd to the Lady Rem.

VI. That, because in the Treaty of Madrid, the faid King hath agreed to leave and quit unto the Emperor all his Rights of Jurisdiction and Superiority, that he and his Predecessors Kings of Frome have held, or may chain in the Counties of Flame have held, or may chain in the Counties of Flamears and Arteis, as also in the City of Artas, Tammay, Tammays, as also in the City of Artas, Tammay, Tammays, as also in the City of Artas, Tammay, Tammays, and Onder; and, because upon these general Terms, some Difficulties might arise; therefore it is declared by this present Article, that the faid King in confirmation of the Treaty of Aladrid, bath left, given, and transported, as also the faid Lady for unto the faid Emperor, his Heirs and Successions, being Counts and Countesses of Flameders, the Fee, Homage, Oath of Fidelity, and all other marks of Subjection which either he or his Ancestors have had, or pretended to have, over the laid Counts and Countesses of Flameders, the Fee, Homage, Oath of Fidelity, and all other marks of Subjection which either he or his Ancestors have had, or pretended to have, over the laid Counts and Countesses of Flameders.

or any others inhabiting in the faid Counties.

VII. That the faid King high renouncid, and that by the Authority given her, the Dutchess of singualesme, his Mother, doth renounce all right and claim to Liste, Denry and Orchies, confending further that they shall be united anto the County of Planders, in manner as they were before they were transported to the King of France, by a Treaty at Paris, Jug. 2, 1498.

VIII. That the faid King hath renounc'd, and that, by the Authority given her, the Dutches of Angoulesme, his Mother, doth renounce all Right and Claim which he or his Ancestors Kings of Famee have had, or may pretend to have in the City of Tournay, the Baylinge of Tournay, the Towns of Mortaign and St. Amand, with all the Rights. Furthermore, confenting that they may be united and incorporated unto the faid County of Flanders.

IX. That the faid King hath renounc'd, and, by the Authority given her, the faid Dutchels of Angouless, his Mother, doth renounce all Right or Claim they pretend to have in the City of Arras, or upon the Bishoprick and Cachedral Church thereof, except so much of the Revenues of the faid Bishoprick and Church, as is in the Kingdom of France.

X. That the faid King hath confented, granted, and, by the Authority given her, the faid Dutchefs of Angoulesme, his Mother, doth confent and grant to the Emperor, his Heirs and Succeffors, Counts and Countesses of Artis, that they shall remain for ever henceforth quit and discharged from the Fee and Homage, Oath of Fidelity, or any other mark of Subjection which he or his Ancestors, Counts and Countesses of Artis, have been bound to do or acknowledge to the Kings of France, excepting only Thereiene, and the Possessing height france, and fomessimals Towns in the Bolognois.

XI. That the faid King hath given and transported, and, by the Authority given her, the faid Dutchess of Angenlesse, his Mother, doth give and transport a Service or Tenure of Antois, commonly call'd the antient Composition of Artais, amounting yearly to fourteen thouland Livres Tourneis, unto the Emperor, his Heirs and Successors, Counts and Countesses of Artais.

XII. That the Inhabitants of Artis be free from all manner of Imposition or Tribute hereto-fore claim'd by the Kings of Frames

Vol. II. S 2 XIII.

XIII. That the Emperor reciprocally shall renotince and transport, as also, by the Authority given her, the faid Lady the Arch-Durchels, doth renounce and transport, for ever, unto the faid King, his Heir and Successors, all the faid King, his Heir and Succeffors, all the Right and Title that the faid Emperor or his Pre-deceffors hold or claim in any of the States Lands and Signiories of the most Christian King; and especially all he may pretend to in Peronne, Montdidier, and Roge, and in the Counties of Bolognois, Guisnes, and Ponthicu, and in the Towns and Signiories fituated upon the Soam, either upon the one part thereof or the other, together with all the Jurisdictions belonging unto them; notwithstarding any Treaty heretofore made to the contrary.

XIV. That, notwithflanding the Transportation, the Emperor hath made by the Treaty of Madrid, of the County of Humen Arteis unto the French King, it is declar'd by these Presents, that the places thereof which are, at this prefent, in the Emperors Possession, shall remain free and exempt from any pretence of the French, as those above-mention'd

NV. That all the aforefaid Renouncings and Transportations made by the King unto the Emperor, shall be understood as valid; notwith-Handing any derogation which may rife from any Union or Incorporation of them unto the Crown of France, or any bar of the Law Salick. And that the faid King and his Succeffors shall never attempt the contrary hereunto, when yet they might pretend to do it by Right

XVI. That all Suits and Processes undecided in the Parliament of Paris, or any other Court of Justice of the faid King, which may have relation to the Inhabitants of Flanders or Artais by reason of Fees, Lands or Possessions situate in the aforefaid Counties, shall be remitted to the Great Council of the faid Emperor, or to other his Courts of Justice in the faid Counties of Flanders and Arteis, to be there finally deter-

XVII. That if any definitive Sentence have been given, before this last War, against the Inhabitants of the Counties of Flanders and Artois, that the power of executing them shall be committed to the Officers of the Emperor.

XVIII. That the Parliament of Paris shall remit unto the Prefident, and others of the Emperors Great Council in Malines, the Process or Suit concerning the Right which the Count de Neves, or his Wife or Children pretend to the Inheritance of John of Burgundy, &c.

XIX. That, notwithstanding the Droist d' Authe Subjects of either Prince may enjoy their Right in as ample form as the Natural Inhabitants of the Country use to do. And as for the County of Carolois, that the Lady Arch-Dutchess may enjoy it during her Life, and after her Decease, the Emperor, and then that it shall return to the Crown of France. And it is surther agreed, that she may enjoy certain Rights in Noyers, and other places, in the same manner as the enjoyed them in the life of King Philip of Ca-file her Brother.

XX. That, if the King or any in his name do hold any Town, Caftle, or Fort in the State and Dutchy of Alilan; it shall be restor'd to the Emperor and his Commissaries, within fix weeks after the Ratification of this Treaty.

XXI. That the faid King shall deliver unto the Emperor or his Commissaries, within the the Emperor or ins communates, wanter the fact of fix weeks after the Ratification of this Treaty, the Contado de Afti, with all that apperained to it, to be enjoy'd by the faid Emperor, bis Heirs and Succeffors for ever.

XXII. That the faid King likewife shall re-ftore unto the Emperor or his Commissaries, Barleta and all other places that he or any for him holderh in the Kingdom of Naples, as foon as is possible, and before the Restitution of Francis his Children. And it is further agreed, that the faid King, within fifteen days after the publication of this Treaty, shall require the Fenetians and all other his Confederates to reflore all the Caftles, and Fortreffes that they hold in the Kingdom of Naples, within the space of fix weeks. And that, in case of Contravention (when the term is expir'd) the said King shall declare himself expresly their Enemy, and from that day forwards, shall give the Emperor thirty thousand Crowns de Soleil Monthly, until the said places be recover'd, and brought to obedience to the Emperor. And, in case they be not fo recover'd before the Dauphin and Duke of Orleans be deliver'd, the faid King shall give good Security to the Emperor for continuing the faid pay Monthly, until they be reduc'd to the Emperors Obedience. Upon condition yet, that, if the Emperor employ not the Money to the purpose aforesaid, it shall be paid back again, and that therefore the King may appoint fome Person who may inform him of the time, when the said places shall be taken in. And that the faid King neither directly nor indirectly shall favour any in the Kingdom of Naples, that have rebelled against the Emperor fince the Treaty of Madrid. XXIII. That the King shall restore also unto the Emperor or his Commissaries, all that can be recover'd, of that which was taken out of the Galleys in Portofino.

XXIV. That, for the particular in the Treaty of Madrid, concerning the Residence of Mounficur de Angoulesme should make with the Empe-

The second of the result of the Kings difference of the League defensive agreed in the Treaty of Madrid, it shall be understood only in relation to the patrimonial Possessions on either side, and that the Charges incident thereunto shall be at the costs of the demander, and, for the rest, that the said King shall not meddle in any Practices either in Italy or Germany, to the prejudice of the Emperor.

XXVI. That the Marriage concluded by the Treaty of Madrid, between the faid King, and the Lady Leonoro, Queen Dowager of Portugal, and eldest Sifter of the Emperor, shall be accomplish'd. And that the faid King as foon as can be, after the Ratification of this Treaty, shall fend Ambassadors with sufficient and especial Power and Authority to ratifie and approve all that shall be needful concerning the faid Marriage. For the Accomplishment and Confummation whereof, the faid Queen shall be conducted into France, at the fame inftant that the Dauphin and Duke of Orleans shall be deliver'd. And that the faid Matrimony shall hold in all things according to the Treaty of Madrid, faving in that only which concerns the Counties of Auxerrois, Mascomois, and the Signiory of B.s. seine; with refervation yet of those Rights which should (as is faid before) appertain to the Dutchy of Burgundy. And because the term of payment of the two hundred thoufand Crowns in lieu of Dowry of the faid Queen, and specified in the Treaty of Madrid, is expired; it is agreed again, that the faid Dowry should be paid, the half within fix Months next ensuing, and the other half within fix Weeks following, and that upon receipt of the whole Sum or part thereof the faid King shall be bound to give affurance in the manner as is specified in the Treaty of Madrid.

XXVII. That, forafmuch as concerns the Help and Affiftance by Land and by Sea promis'd by the faid King for the paffage of the Emperor into Italy, the faid Emperor releaseth it, upon Condition only, that, within two Months after he be requir'd thereunto (whether it be for his Paffage into Italy, or for his Return, or for his Service while he is there) he give twelve Galleys, four Ships, and four Galleons fufficiently provided with Artillery, and Seamen, without any Soldiers yet to be put in them, but fuch as the Emperor shall appoint; and at the cost of the faid King (except the Suldate que) for the space of five Months, after the time that they shall come into the Haven, which his Ma-jesty shall nominate. The said Emperor delivering unto the Captain or General (that should bring the faid Armado) Letters Patents fign'd with his Hand, and feal'd with his Seal, by which he shall promise and swear, after the said five Months to restore immediately to the said King or his Deputies, the faid Armado, in the manner that he receiv'd it. And moreover, the manner that he received it. And moreover, the faid King shall pay really to the faid Emperor the two hundred thousand Crowns, that, by the Treaty of Mubrid, he promisd to pay his Majesty, for the aforefaid Voyage; that is to say, one hundred thousand Crowns within six Months next enfuing, and the other hundred thousand Crowns within six Months after. And, as for the pay of fix thousand Foot for fix Months, which the faid King promis'd to furnish, giving therefore the caution and fecurity of fufficient Merchants, the Emperor by this Treaty acquits him of it, upon Condition, that he pay one hundred thousand Crowns de Soleil, the which Sum fhall remain, and be for the increasing of the Dowry of the Queen Dowager Leonora.

1529.

XXVIII. That, because in the faid Treaty of Madrid, there is no mention of the Profits and Rents of the Inheritances given by the faid Emperor and King during the War, whereupon many Questions and Differences may arise: It is determined and concluded by this Treaty, that all fuch Profits and Rents, Ecclefiaftical or Secular, as also all Debts, Moveables, which have or might have been given expresly by Letters Patents of the faid Emperor and King, or their Lieutenants in any manner, with title of Confiscation, and which have been deliver'd, taken, or paid during the War betwixt the two Princes before the Treaty of Madrid, shall remain for ever given and acquitted to the profit of the faid Lords, Vaffals, Lands, Towns, and Perfons fubject to the faid Emperor and King, and of their Allies which in the faid Wars shall have taken the part of the one or the other.

XXIX. That all the Privileges of the Towns, Neighbours, and Inhabitants of the Counties of Flanders and Arteis, and other places of the Low-Countries, which appertain to the Emperor, shall, by this present Capitulation, be confirmed, and that the Privileges also that the French were wont to enjoy in the faid Emperors Dominions shall remain in their full force, according as hath been accustom'd on both sides.

XXX. That all Prifoners of War taken by Sea or Land, as well before as after the Treaty of Madrid, of the one part or of the other, Sub-jects of the faid Emperor and most Christian King (excepting the Neapolitan Subjects of the Emperor that have ferv'd against him in the same Kingdom) and any other that have ferv'd, fol-Kingdom) and any other that have ferr'd, followed, and held the contrary part, of what Natification of this Treaty. And that, if two of the four Judges absent themselves, the other two, faid Treaty should have been put to Ransom, who shall pay their Ranson notwithstanding this Article.

XXXI. That if Robert de La March or his Children shall presume to make any Enterprise upon the Caftle and Dutchy of Bouillon, (conquer'd by the Emperor, and left by his Majetty to the Church of Leige, to which it anciently appertain'd) in fuch case the King may give no liope, favour or affiftance, neither directly or indirectly against the faid Church.

XXXII. That the Heirs of Charles Duke of Bourbon, according to the Treaty of Alidrid, shall enjoy all those Goods and Possessions that per-tain to the said Duke, so that, notwithstanding all Judgments and Sentences given and pronounced against the said Duke, during his Life, or after his Death, the Heirs of the said Duke shall enjoy their ancient Right.

XXXIII. That Jean Count of Pontieure shall be restor'd unto all the Goods which his Father enjoy'd at that time that he went out of France to ferve the Emperor, and that also the other Friends, Allies and Servants of the faid Duke of Bourbon, as also their Heirs and Successors, shall enjoy the benefit of the Treaty of Madrid in all that may concern them; notwithstanding any Judgments or Sentences given and pronounced to the contrary

XXXIV. That Don Lorenzo de Gorrenod Count de Pondevaux, Mayordomo of the Emperor, shall be put in the real possession of the Towns, Castles. Lands and Signiories of Chalamont and Montmerles, bought heretofore of the Duke of B.urbon, upon Condition yet, that if the Sum of twenty thoufand Crowns (being the price for which they were fold) be paid back again, that they return to the first Owners.

_ XXXV. That the said King, by this present

Treaty, hath taken away and remov'd, and doth take away and remove the Sequeffration, and all other Impediments on his part concerning the Principality of Aurange, and the Superiority of it, to the intent that Don Philibert de Chaulon, Prince of Aurange, Vice-roy of Naples, may en-joy it, together with his Preheminence and Su-periority, as he enjoy'd it before the faid Seque-

XXXVI. That the Dutchess of Vendolme, Widow, shall be restor'd into all the Possessions that fhe had in the Emperors Dominions, before, or during the Wars; and Louis Seigneur de Hanis shall enjoy the like for his part.

XXXVII. That the Comte of Gaure shall be reftor'd to his own in the like manner.

XXXVIII. That, for the business of Philip de Croy, Marquis of Arefebot, and the difference be-twirt him and the Seigneurs of Choffean-Bryon, and others, Tutors of the Children of Montion de Lautrech, that it should be referr'd to a particular Treaty and Agreement before the Governors of the City and Dutchy of Cambray, which faid agreement shall stand.

XXXIX. That, the Suit depending in the Parliament of Paris, between Adolphus of Burgundy Seigneur de Beures on the one part, for the Seigneuries of Creue-cour in Cambrells, &c. and the Kings Attorny on the other part, shall be icferr'd, in the flate it now is, to four Judges, whereof two be nam'd by the Emperor, and two by the King : And that the faid Judges shall be bound to return and determine the Cause in hended, as a principal Contractor, the Pope and the Apottolick See, which the faid Emperor and faid Parliaments, and there confert to the afore-King shall maintain in his Authority and Preheminence: And that they shall procure that the Towns and Places, being of the Patrimony of the Church, shall be restor'd. Also there are comprehended herein as principal Contractors, the Kings of Hungary, England, and Poland, Chrifiern King of Denmark, the Kings of Portugal and Seetland, and the Lady Arch-Dutches, Aunt to the Emperor. Also there are comprehended herein as Confederates, the Electors, the Cardinal of Liege, &c. Alfo it is agreed, that all the faid principal Contractors and Confederates shall be advertis'd hereof by the faid King and Emperor.

XLI. That the faid King shall procure the Community or Republick of Florence, within four Months after the Ratification of this Treaty, to agree with the Emperor, which being done, they also shall be comprehended herein, and not otherwise. And because, since the Treaty of Madrid, Charles Duke of Gueldres Comte de Zutphen, hath taken part with the Emperor, and agreed with him, his Majesty declares him for his Confederate, and all others nominated here: And that those who are not nominated shall be excluded out of the said Treaty, unless they be comprehended under the general terms of Vaffals or Subjects of the faid Kings.

XLII. That the faid Emperor and King (affoon as they well can) for Ratification and Confirmation of this prefent Treaty (in which de verbo ad verbum, there must be inferted and joyn'd together the Treaty of Madrid) shall swear folemnly upon the Evangelists, and the Wood of the true Crofs, in the prefence of the Holy Sacrament, and these Ambassadors that shall be appointed thereunto, to hold and keep (every one for his part) all the Points and Articles of this Treaty, as also all those contain'd in the Treaty of Madrid, which are not alter'd, chang'd, and innovated by these Presents; submitting themselves, for performance hereof, to the Jurisdictions and Ecclefiastical Censures, even to the Invocation of the Secular Power inclusive; Conflitting their Proctors in forma camera Apostolica, to appear in their Names, or in either of them, in the Court of Rome before the Pope, and the Auditori della Ruota, and to receive voluntarily the condemnation and fulmination of the faid Censures in case of Contravention; and, for this purpose, to submit themselves and pro-reque their Jurisdiction before some Prelate or Ecclefiaftical Judge. And that neither the faid Emperor and King, nor any of them may (without mutual confent) demand a Relaxation of the faid Oath, nor an Absolution of the faid Cenfures. And that, if any did demand and obtain it, it shall not avail him, without the confent of the other.

XLIII. That the faid King shall ratific and approve both this Treaty, and that of Madrid in the form there mention'd, fave where it hath been chang'd, alter'd, and innovated by these Prefents, forafmuch as concerns the Seignieur Daughin, according to the manner declar'd in the faid Treaty of Madrid. And that he also shall cause this Treaty to be ratified and approved by all the particlar Litates of the Provinces and Governments of his Kingdoms: And that he shall make them fwear and promile, that the faid Treaty shall be perpetually kept, and shall cause them to be register'd and verifi'd in the Parliament of Paris, and all other Parliaments of the ther with the Jewel, as the fame Author con-Kingdom of France, in the presence of the At-

XI.. That in this Peace and Treaty is compre- the faid King shall give especial and irrevocable Power, to appear in his Name, in all the faid Inregiftring, and fubmit himfelf volunta-rily to the keeping of all that is contain'd in the faid Treaty. And that, by virtue of the faid voluntary Submiffion, he may be enjoyn'd or condemn'd thereunto, by the definitive fentence of the faid Parliaments, in good and convenient form. And that this Treaty shall be also verified and Inregist'red in the Chambre des Comptes of Paris, in the Presence, and with the consent of the King's Attorney, for the more effectual execution, and accomplishment of them, and the validations of the Acquittances, Renuntiations, Submiffions, and other things contain'd and declar'd in the faid Treaty. Which Ratifications, Inregistrings, Verifications, and all other things above-mention'd shall be done and perfected by the faid King, and the dispatches of them, in due form deliver'd into the hands of the faid Emperor, before his Children be deliver'd, and within the space of four Months at furtheft. And if, for the Inegiftring and Verifications above-mention'd, it should be necessary that the said King should release, and discharge unto his Officers those Oaths that they have taken, not to confent or fuffer any alienations of the Crown, the faid King shall do it; and that alfo the faid Emperor shall, in his great Council, and his other Councils, and Chambres des Comptes in his Dominions of the Low-Countries, cause to be made fuch other Inregistring, and Verifications, releasing also the Oath of his Officers, and caufing the particular States of his faid Dominions to ratifie and approve this Treaty, within the time above-mention'd.

XLIV. That this Peace shall be publish'd through all the Kingdoms and Seigneuries and Dominions of the Emperor and the King, and especially the Frontiers, before the 15th of September next, to the intent that no Manmay pretend Ignorance; and the faid Arch-Dutchess on the part of the Emperor, and the Dutchess of zinguilifme on the part of the French King, and the said Arch-Dutchess particularly for the Queen Leonora, forafinuch as may duly concern her, and by those Oaths that every one of them hath made, do promise that they shall duly ratisse all that is contain'd in this Treaty of Peace. And that they shall give Letters Patents thereof, in due and fufficient form, on either part, within two Months and a half after the concluding this present Treaty.

In testimony whereof the faid Ladies Arch-Dutchess and Dutchess, and each of them, have sign'd and seal'd these Presents. Dated in the City of Cambray the 5th of August, 1529.

> Margarite. Louise.

And this is the most substantial part of the Treaty of Cambray, as it is fet down by Sandoval; but Bellay 1. 2. adds, that, befides the above-men- Bell 1. 2. tion'd two Millions of Crowns, Francis paid, for the Emperor, to our King, 500000 Crowns as a penalty the Emperor had incurr'd for not marrying the Princess Mary. Moreover, that he was bound to dif-ingage, from our King, a rich Jew-el in the form of a Flower-de-luce, wherein was a piece of the wood of the true Cross, being pawn'd heretofore by Philip, Father of the Emperor, to Henry VII, for fifty thousand Crowns. The Acquittances, for which Payments, togetorneys General of the faid Parliaments, to whom acknowledgeth, in the manner of it, the great 1529. K. Hopry's Generofi-

Mart. du

Bell. 1. 3.

Liberality of our King; who, besides giving near to Piacenza, divers understood his Words to Francis sour years Term for payment of 40000 have relation to that place; which, as also Par-Crowns (which, as he faith, was the Money ma, is said to have belong'd anciently to the lent by our King to Charles) did remit and forgive him absolutely the 500000 Crowns above-

Besides this Treaty, I find, by our Records, another at the fame time and place, made be-twixt our King, and the Lady Margarite, in the name of the Emperor. Our Kings Commission ners being Cuthbert Tonfial Bishop of London, Sir Thomas More, Chancellor of the Dutchy of Lancafter, and Mr. John Hacket, our Kings Resident there. Which yet, because it contains nothing of extraordinary, but only the continuation of Traffick for Merchants, and the forbidding to print or fell any Lutheran Books on either fide, I purposely omit

Francis understanding this conclusion of Peace at Cambray, hasteth thither, that he might both render the Lady Margaret a Visit, and promise not to fail in the performance of those Articles his Mother had agreed. Which yet the Spanish Writers fay he held no longer than until the Ambassadors of his Confederates in Italy came to him; fo that, when, together with his breach of League with them, they represented their own miserable estate at that present, he excus'd himself, through the necessity of his Condition at that time; affuring them nevertheless, that notwithstanding any Treaty, he would continue his love to and care of them, only when first he might have his Children. So that in effect he fecretly affifted them still; as hoping thereby to defend himself against the Emperor, when oc-casion were. Which also he extended so far, as, upon presumption thereof, he broke some Articles lately concluded with the Spaniard. News of this Treaty was no fooner brought to Queen Lecnora, but she, for the better complying with her Husband, interceded with the Empress,upon pretence that Charles attempted to draw fome of the Swifs (heretofore ally'd with Francis) unto his Service, and that the Children of Francis might have fome more liberty, and the French detain'd in Villalpando a lefs ftraight Prifon; which also was granted her by the Empress.

For the Emperor taking his opportunity (while the Treaty betwixt the Ladies was in agitation) departed from Barcelona the 28th of July, 1529, and arriv'd at Genoüa the 12th of Jugust after, with a Royal Train, and about eight thousand And here (as Sandoval observes) began the wearing of short Hair, (the Emperor cutting off his as a Vow for his Passage, or, as others have it, for a Pain in his Head) long Hair having been accultom'd for many Ages before. The Pope, being inform'd of this Voyage of the Emperors, fends some Cardinals to meet him at Genoua, himself in the mean while preparing to attend him at Bononia. While the Emperor having found a reception from the Genouesi, temper d betwixt Love and Fear, did so civilly inter-pret all to be Respect, that he bid them a kind Farewel, and so held on his way till he came near the Confines of the Pope's Possessions; where three Cardinals (carrying with them the Book of Ceremonies) met him, and, after due Congratulations, made it appear that the antient Custom of all those who entred upon the Patrimony of the Church, was, to fwear first not to offerany Violence to it. The Emperor accepts

Dutchy of Milan. The Emperor had now a great give him abfolutely the 500000 Crowns above mention'd; and, for the Jewel, prefented it to his Godfon Henry, fecond Son of Frances by the conveyance of Guillaume Seigneur de Langey, whom to him of the great Mifchiefs which Barbaraffa, to him of the great Mifchiefs which Barbaraffa, to him of the great Mifchiefs which Barbaraffa, Army in Italy under the Command of Antonio de that famous Pyrare, did on the Seas; and of the Turks entry into Hungary with two hundred and Septifity thousand Men. For as this flartled the Emperor from his Defigns in Italy, fo he confider'd as well how useful the Pope would be in dispofing other Princes to join against this formidable Army. For which reasons, as also for making his Coronation more glorious, he resolved to proteft against all other Enterprizes, and apply him-felf wholly to that War. And the rather, because the Turk had lately undertaken the protection of John Sepufe, Pretender to the Kingdom of Hun-Turks begary, and now laid fiege to Vienna, and endan-fiege Viger'd therein the ancient Patrimony of the House of Austria: Besides, the Protestants in Germany having about this time made some high Demands, he thought it his part to correct or suppress them. Only he judg'd it necessary not to give any publick demonstration thereof, until the Affairs of Italy were compos'd. Therefore, he first makes a Peace with the Venetians, upon condition they should restore the Places with-held in Naples from him, and give back to the Pope likewise the Posfessions of the Church. Morcove, that they should pay him a great Sum of Money towards his Charges. Which Articles the Venetians (as being in effect abandon'd of all their Confederates) gladly accepted, only, when the Duke of Urbin (their General) might be comprehended therein. Which also was accorded. They, totherein. Which also was accorded. They, to-gether with the Pope, interceded likewise for Francisco Sforz,, desiring he might be restor'd to his former Estate. The Emperor also, considering that he could make no fecure Peace in Italy, unless he remov'd all just Causes of Jealousy, begins to think how he might gratify Sforza herein, upon a propolition of a Marriage to be made between him, and Christierna, younger Daughter of the King of Denmark, and Ifabel, Sister to the Emperor; which yet because of her Unripeness for Marriage (being then but ten Years old) took no effect till 1534. So that when the bufiness of Florence might have been ended, all Italy now feem'd compos'd to Quietness. These things feem'd compos'd to Quietness. These things thus setled, the Emperor enter'd Bononia about the beginning of November, with more Glory, Nov. 5. doubtless, in that he was informed how the Turk Siege had raised his Siege from Vienna about twenty Days before: From whence after a Months Seige, he was forc'd to retire by the Valour of an old German Garrison, commanded by Philip Count Palatine, having done nothing notable, but crown'd with his own hand, at Buda, John Sepuse King of Hungary. His reception also was Charles magnificent, while the Youth of that City ha-5's Mac ving apparell'd themselves in a Livery, attended entry into his Horse like Lacquais, that they might have Bolognathe better pretence to be near him. After whom followed his Army, fome choice Persons whereof carried Antonio de Legron on their Shoulders; (though whether in regard of his ancient Infirmity of the Gout, or otherwife, for more often-tation, is not certain.) In which Equipage he went to the Church of St. Petronio, at the Gate whereof the Pope, having rais'd a high Throne upon a Scaffold, and placed himfelf on the Top, with his Tiara or Triple-Crown on his Head, the Oath, yet foas he faid he would not prejudice and, for the reft, attended with a great Trahis own Imperial Right. And because this was Cardinals, did in that posture expect him. and, for the reft, attended with a great Train of Sandor).

inconflancy.

July 28. Aug. 12. Sandov. Emperor arrives at

The Pope's Foot, which the Pope presently diverted Reception to a Pax or Kiss on the Cheek. Which Ceremony as it attracted all Men's Eyes, fo was it the more considerable unto the Spectators, for that the Conjunction of those two great Lights (as they termed it) could not but portend fome strange effect to Christendom. Charles was then about twenty nine, that is to fay, in the prime Age to temper his Countenance betwixt Loveliness and Majesty; though nothing yet in his Face was so remarkable as his great nether-lip: Which Sandoval will have to be peculiarly deriv'd which Sandeval will have to be becaming them to that Family (even to this day) from the Houle of Burgundy. The Pope, though gray, retainfuget much Vigor in his Eyes, though observed for nothing so much as his Beard, which not only he, but also all the Cardinals, as our Agent Ric. Crock hath it, wore at a great length; befides, he faid, many of them had their Robes or Veflures of a Violet Colour, instead of Scarlet, appearing, for the rest, (as the same Crook relates) in their Fashions somewhat Soldier-like. This Interview being paft, not without a ferious Pro-teflation of the Emperor's, that he would firive to reduce the Affairs of Religion into better terms, they both lodg'd in the fame Houfe, for the more conveniency of that private Conference, which often paft betwixt them: Which also continued for some Months before they departed. Wherefore though it were thought that the Emperor would make his Advantage, as having the Pope in his Power and Custody; yet the Pope and Venetians so manag'd the business, as, joyning Offices together (as is abovefaid) they obtain'd that Francisco Sforza should be admitted to the Emperors Presence, and in sequence theredons Sfar za, and restores to of not only pardon'd, but reftor'd to the Dutchy of Milan. Which act of the Emperors, as it was magnanimous beyond expectation, fo was it no lefs opportune; both as it quieted not the Estates alone, but even minds of the Italians; and, as he dispos'd them thereby to give them their best affistance towards his great affairs in Germany. Besides, he excludes Francis from hope of attempting that Dutchy, unless he would declare himself an open diffurber of the Peace of Flaty. He did not omit yet, to Capitulate with Sforzs, that the Marquis de Guaffo, and Antonio de Leyva should have certain Lands affign'd them out of the Dutchy, and that he might put Garrifons into some of the most important places thereof, till Conditions were perform'd. Shortly after which a kind of universal League, under pretence of the good of Christendom, was by the Popes means concluded, (place being left for those that would enter into it) which also was publish'd the first of Jan. 1530. in the Church of St. Petronio. And thus the Emperor proceeded to his Coronation in Bononia, whither the Crown of Iron (which should be receiv'd at Milan) being brought, and after put on in the Popes Chappel; the other, of Gold, was fet on Feb. 22. his Head, Feb. 24. (which was his Birth-day) Iscrown'd by the Pope in the great Church, with many Ceremonies. Among which I find none more notable, than that the Emperor, by ancient Cuflom, must first put on the Habit of a Canon of Santta Maria dillatorre in Rome, and after that of a Deacon, before they can be compleatly inrefted in this Imperial Dignity, the Pope the mean while faying Mass, both in Latine and in Greek. The Rites whereof appear'd so much more new and ftrange, that fince the time of Emperor alighting here from his Horfe, afcended The Emperor placing only a Commander in the the Steps, and humbled himfelf to a Kifs of the Fortress or Cittadel of Milan, and another in Como, and caufing the City of Monzo with vaft Comp., and causing the carry of national artists profilefions to be given Antonio de Leyva. Having thus feeled Lombardy, he commandeth his Army to march against the Florentines, whom the Pope paffionately defir'd to chaftife for the many Injuries his Name and Family had lately receiv'd from them.

All which figns of Amity and Correspondence being advertis'd to our King, by Crook, and other his Agents in Italy, it was easie to imagine what hope of favour he might expect from the Pope in his important Business; yet, left he should omit any thing which might serve for Juftification of his Honour and Dignity in a law- K. Henryl full way, he fent to the most famous Universite the Opinities of Italy, and else-where, to have their Opi-ons of fonions concerning the Divorce. Not offering reign any way to prevail himfelf either of his own ties about power among his Clergy, or of the Counfel the the Dope had formerly given him, till he had first worked discover'd what the Jearned'th Men in Christen Dec. 8. dom held in that Point. He also writ Letters 1519, with his own hand to the Bishop of Worcester, Dec. 8. and Sir Gregory Cafalis, (then with the Pope) to Ambassistell them, that he had fent Sir Thomas Bolen, dors to (newly created) Earl of Wileshire and Ormond, the Emwith John Stockfey, cleck Bishop of London, and peror and Edward Lee, as his Ambassactors to the Emperor, and that they should advise rogether what was to be done. These coming to Bononia, after some passages with the Emperor, who told them he could not defert his Aunts Cause, repair'd to the Pope; to whom, having propos'd the Kings affair, they received this Antwer from him; That, March 2d.
though he was urg'd by the Queen Sollicitor to preceed against the King, yet he dessir'd rather that all proceeding should be sulpended in the Roman Court, upon condition yet that King Henry, on the other side, would promise, not to innovate any thing in the mean while in England. Whereof information being given our King, he answer'd, That his Holines hath fed him hitherto with fair words only, without intent to aid him, as appear'd lately by denying his intent to aid bim, as appear a latest of medium, as Ambalfadors Audience to juftifie bis Caufe.

In the mean while our King attends his Par- Octo. 26. liament business, where Sir Thomas More, who 1539. The Parwas now returned from the Treaty at Cambray, liament being (in reward of his Service) made Lord meets. Chancellor, gave in an eloquent Oration, at the Parliament-Chamber in Black-Friers, the first overtures of the Kings intentions in that Parlia- Nov. 3. ment. To which, our King attended with his Reg. 21.
Nobles, repaird from his adjoyning Palace of Bridewel, Thomas Audley being chosen Speaker for the lower House. And as now Luthers Doctrine was fecretly admitted into many places of this Kingdom, with much approbation, fo it gave those impressions, as even the most ignorant began to examine whether the Errors then ordinarily controverted, did belong to the Doctrine or to the Government of the Church. And this alone as it was the first slep, so was it a great and bold fully towards that Reformation which Thebefollow'd afterwards. Yet as Learning was not of the Rethen commonly found among those, who in formatitheir studies had no other defign but Truth, on and fatisfying their Confcience; fo few underflood the stare of the Questions propos'd, save only they, who being of the Party, either for their own private interest would not retract, or for fear of unfetling the receiv'd grounds of Religion in Mens Hearts, thought it dangerous to permit an Innovation; which yet provid a per-Frederick 1442. no Emperor had been publickly nicious and fatal Soleciim. For whereas, in the Crown'd. This being done, Francisco Sforza was restor'd to an actual possession of his Estate. nicious and fatal Solecifm. For whereas, in the ¥ап. г.

him the Dutchy of Milan.

by the

1529. and a benign Interpretation of the rest, might Habit and Ceremony, (or at least in some of these have conferv'd an universal Peace among Chriftians, they now, by an obstinate and wilful impugning of all those who said it was possible for them to err, did leave the undertaking of this great Work either to discontented Clergymen, or to the more Laick and improvident fort; which therefore as it prov'd in fome kind, tumultuous and refractory, fo certainly the Authors on either fide were much to be blam'd; when in handling of Controversies, they either out of affectation of Glory, or hope of gaining large Stipends from their Followers (upon pretence of revealing some new or readier way for obtaining Heaven and everlasting Salvation) did teach divers peremptory, and uncharitable Doctrines. Whereas yet, according to the Rules both of Piety and Wildom, they should have proceeded more moderately; conferving, in the midft of their Differences, a Brotherly Love, and pronouncing the Errors, on what part foever, more worthy pity than hate. Which Rule was fo little observ'd in England, that many Reformers Books, and Perfons were publickly burnt, while their Disciples (for Revenge) fell foul upon the perfors of their Advertaries, ferting forth Books to the projudice of the whole Eccletiastical Order. Which coming at last to the Kings knowledge, made him enquire further into the abuses of the Clergy, permitting the Abuses a Redress thereof to the lower House of Parliamong the ment; where complaint for Exactions for Pro-Glergy to bats of Testaments and Mortuaries, of Pluralidrefs'd by ties, Nonresidence, and Priests that were Farmers the Com- of Lands, &c. being made, the Spirituality was much offended, and especially John Fisher Bishop of Ruckester, who (as our History hath it)
Bishop of in a passionate Speech told the Lords, That the Commons would do nothing now but down with the against the Church. Saying further, that all this was for want again the Courch. Saying turner, that all tots was for many proceed—of Faith's aggravating the danger the Kingdon was ing of the in, by the example of Bohemia. The Lower-House Commons being inform d thereof, fent the King a Complaint by their Speaker; defining Reparation.

But Fisher excusing himself as he could, Sir Wilham E.tz- Villiams on the part of the King, mediated the reft. Netwithflanding which, the Injury which the Commons thought they had receiv'd herein was not fo digested, but that one who had made use of the Evange icks Doctrine spoke to this effect. How refented by them

If none else but the Bishop of Rochester or his Adherents, did hold this Language, it would less trouble me. But since so many religious and different Sects (now conspicuous in the whole World) do not only vindicate unto themselves the name of the true Church, but labour betwixt Invitations and Threats for nothing more than to make us resign our faith to a simple Omore toan to make in regign our faint is a impressible there is I shall crave the enew to propole, what I think fit (in this case) for us Laicks and Secular Persons to do. Not that I will make my Opinion a Rule to others, when any better expedient shall be offer'd; but that I would be glad we considered hereof, as the great-the distribution of the state est affair that now or hereaster may concern us.

For if in all human Actions it be hard to find that fo far, as to take a reafonable liberty to judge of the prefent times, and howfoever was offended that the Bishop rejected all on want of Faith, them take terminally of at tests in some of tools but peremptory and opposite in their Dockrines, preferred themselves, much circumspection must be used. Here then taking his Prospect, he shall find these Guides directing him to several ways; whereof the first yet extends no further than to the Laws and Religions of each Mans native Soil or Diocefs, without peffing thofe bounds. The feeval, reaching much further, braches it felf into that diverfity of Religions and Philefophies, that not only are, but have been extant in former times, until be be able to determine which is left. mer times, until be be avie to actermine wiew is wig. But in either of thefe, no little difficulties will occur. For, if each Min ought to be seeme of all that is taught at home, without enquiring further, how can be answer his Conscience? When looking abroad, the terrors of everlafting Demnation half be denouned on him, by the feveral Hierarchies and veifible Churches of the World, if he believe any Docerne but theirs. And that, amongst these again, such able and under-Finding Persons may be found, as, in all other affinities, will equal his Teachers. Will it be fit that he believe, God hath inspired his Church and Religion only, and descreted the rest; when yet Minkind is so much of one off-foring, that it hath not only the same Pater Communis in God, but is come all from the fame carnal Ancestors? Shall each Man, without more examination, believe his Priests in what Religion fovers, and, when he hath done, call their Dotrine his Faith? On the other fide, if he must argue Con-traverstic before he can be faithful, how much lessure must be obtain? How much Wealth and Sulfance must he consume? How many Longuages must he learn? And how many Authors must he read? How many Ages must be look into? How many Faiths must be examine? How many Expessions must be confer? And how many Contradictions reconcile? How man; Countries must he wander into? And how many dangers must he run? Briesly, would not our life on these terms be a perpetual Peregrination? While each Man posted into the others Country, to learn the may to Heaven, without yet that he could far at last, he had known or tried all. What remains then to be done? Must be take all that each Priest upon pretence of Inspiration would teach him, because it might be so? Or may be leave all, because it might be go; Of miy ly, to embrace all Religions, according to their vari-ous and repugnant Rites, Tenents, Traditions, and Faiths, is impossible, when jet in one zige it were possible (after incredible Pains and Expences) to learn out, and number them. On the other fide, to reject out, and number toem. On the other paes, to reject all Religious indifferently is as impious; there being no Nation, that in some kind or other dath not nor-ship God. So that there will be a necessity to distinjuly Cod. So that large with or a nectifying to allow guilh. Not yet that any M.:n will be able, upon Comparison, to discern which is the perfectles, among the many profess d in the whole World; (each of them bemany proges a in the whole it ord 3 (each of them being of that large extent, that no Mons understanding will ferve to comprehend it in its utermoft Latitude, and Signification,) but (at leaft) that every M.n. might vindicate and fever, in his particular Religion, the more effected and Augustusius Proceedings of the server of the more effected and Augustusius Proceedings. the more effential and demonstrative Parts, from the rest, without being mov'd so much at the Threats and Promises of any other Religion, that would make him obnoxious, as to depart from this way: There being no ordinary method so intelligible, ready, and compendi-ous for the conducting each Man to his desired end. Having thus therefore recollected himself, and together implored the affiftance of that Supreme God, whom For if in all human Actions it be hard to find that medium or even temper which may keep us from dealining into extreams, it will be much more difficult in Religious Worship; bath as the path is supposed narrower, and the Precipices more dangerous on every the Falle, but even from the Little, and obliged to nothing so much of the world, and obliged to nothing so much as the inquiry of these means by which be may attain in the inquiry of these means by which be may attain in the inquiry of these means by which be may attain in the inquiry of these means by which be may attain in the inquiry of these more doubtful and convexers about the inquiry of these more doubtful and convexers as several Tooches, no ally differing in Language, and invested Trustus, and contains introduction in the means the mean the means the mean that the principle of the more doubtful and convexers as several troophers, one only differing in Language, and invested Trustus, and convents introduction in the mean the means the means the means the mean the property of the more doubtful and convexers. all N.itions acknowledge; He must labour, in the next place, to find out; what inward Means his Provi-dence bath deliver'd, to discern the True, not only from as several Teachers, not only differing in Language, and universal Truths, and consequently inform him eff. Vol. II.

1529. what, in the several Articles proposed to him, it so tought, as it is sirst written in the Heart, and together delivered in all the Luws and Religious be can hear of in the whole World; for this certainly can never deceive him; since therein he shall find out how far the impressions of Gods Wislam and Goodness are extent in all Mankind. and to what drawers his writer. extant in all Mankind, and to what degrees his uni-versal Providence hath dilated it self; While thus afcending to God by the same steps he descends to us, he cannot fail to encounter the Divine Neither ought it to trouble him, if Maieffy. he find these truths variously complicated with Difficulties or Errors; fince, without infilling on more points than what are clearly agreed on every fide, it will be his part to reduce them into Method and Order; which also is not hard, they being but few, and apt for connexion; fo that it will concern our feveral Teachers to imitate us in this Doctrine, before they come to any particular Direction; left, otherwise, they do like those who would persuade us to renounce Day-light, to study only by their Candle. It will be worth the labour, affuredly, to inquire how far these Universal Notions will guide us, before we commit our felves to any of their abstruse and scholastick Mysteries, or supernatural and private Revelations. Not yet, but that they also may challenge a just place in our Belief, when they are deliver'd upon warrantable Testimony; but that they cannot be understood as so indifferent and unfallible Principles for the instruction of all Mankind. Thus, among many supposed inferior and questionable Deities, worshipped in the four quarters of the World, we shall find one Chief so taught us, as above others to be highly Reverenced.

Among many Rites, Ceremonies, and Volumes, &c. deliver'd us as Instruments or Parts of his Worship, he deliver a its at infiriments or Farts of oil wroping, no finall find vortue so eminent, as it alone concludes and sums up the rest. Insomuch as there is no Sacrament rebich is not smally resolved into it; good Lisse, Cha-rity, Faith in, and love of God, being such necessary and essential parts of Religion, that all the rest are si-nally clos'd, and determin'd in them.

naily cos a, and actermin a in them.

Among the many Explaitions, Luffrations, and Propitiations for our Sins, taught in the several quarters of the World, in sundry times, we shall find that none doth avail without bearty forrow for our Sins, and a true Repentance towards God, whom we have offended.

fended.
And laftly amidfi the divers places and manners of Reward and Punifilment, which farmer Ages have deliver'd, we shall find Gods Justice and Mercy not so limited, but that he can extend either of them even heyoud Death, and confequently Recompense or Chastise Extradis. These therefore, as universal and undoubred Truths, should in my opinion he sinft received. They will at least keep us from Impiety and Athelism, and tegether lay a foundation for Gods Service, and the hope of a better Life. Besides, it will reduce Men's minds from uncertain, and controverted Points, to a folid practice of Vertue, or when we fall from it, to solid practice of Vertue, or when we fall from it, to juil practice of vertus, or when we fall from it, to an unfeigned Repentance, and purpose through Gods grace to amend our sinful Life, without making Pardon so easies, cheap or mercenary, as some of them do. Lassly, it will dispose us to a general Concord and Peace:
For when we are agreed concerning these extended and means of our Salvation, why should we so much differ for the rest? Since as these Principles excluded rathing of Easily or Teasily on the concerning the school and the south of the state of the control of the state of nothing of Faith, or Tradition that tends to Gody Glory, nothing of Fatte, or Irantiton to at tensi to vocay turn, in what age or manner fever it intervered; each Nition may be permitted the belief of any pious Miracle that conducte to Gods Glory; without that, on this occasion, we need to fandalize or offend each other. The comman truths in Religion, formerly mentions of the comman truths in Religion, formerly mentions to the comman truths in Religion, formerly mentions that the commandation of th tion'd, being firmer bonds of Unity, than that any thing emergent out of Traditions (whether written or ots, and unlawful Assemblies, &c. and setting of unwritten) should dishove them. Let us therefore prices of Wines, as also all other Acts, limitted establish and fix these Catholick or Universal Notions. and appointed by any Statute to be done by the

They will not hinder us to believe whatfoever elfe is 1529. faithfully taught upon the authority of the Church. So that whether the Eastern, Western, Northern, or Southat whether the Lastern, Western, Northern, or Southern Teachers, &C. and particularly whether my Lord of Rochester, Luther, Eccius, Zuinglius, Erasmus, Melancthon, &c. be in the Right, we Laicks may so build upon those Catholick and infallible grounds of Religion, as what sower superfluxitures of Faith be rais'd, those Foundations yet may support them.

But as few Men are of the same mind in all points of Religion, fo it is probable this Overture was entertain'd diverfly: Some wishing a Reformation upon what terms foever; others, if it could be fafely done, as thinking there may be diseases in Religion, like that of the Cancer Occultus, which Physicians say, it is more safe to let alone, than to Cure. Yet as it was mato let alone, than to Cure. Yet as it was manifest that in Probats of Testaments, Plurality of Benefices, and divers other ways above-mention'd, the Clergy had increach'd and ufurp'd both upon each other, and upon the Laity for many Ages, so they would now omit no longer to give a redress to these grosser faults. Therefore about last Wills and Testaments, which Car-dinal Woolsey's Legantine Power had so disordred (as Sir Henry Guilford protested openly, that himself being, with others, Executors of the Will of Sir William Compton (who died 1528. of the Sweating Sickness) could not obtain a Probat from the Cardinal, and Arch-Bishop of Canterbury, before he had paid a 1000 Marks) fome profitable orders were made. And the business of Mor- Other a tuaries (exacted with much extremity even on buses rethe poorest) was setled. Moreover Spiritual Per- gulated. fons were abridged from taking of Farms, and from Plarality of Livings, unless they were qua-lified either by certain University Degrees, or by the Nobility, to whom a competent number of Chaplains were affign'd. Non-refidence also (then very usual) was forbidden, but in some Cases, and for the rest explain'd, and interpre-An Act also pass'd for a General Pardon of Acts of all Offences, Forfeitures, Punishments, &c. except Murders, and Treasons; which the King granted by way of gratifying his Subjects, for a Release of a great Lone of Money from them, Anno 15. Hen. VIII. which motioned and assented to by the Lords, was, with much ado, confirm'd by the Lower House. After which was enacted a Statute for abridging Plaints in Affize, which being Complicate before, were reduc'd to a more fingle Method. And this was much to the eafe of the Subjects. It was also declar'd Felony for Servants to imbezel their Masters Goods to the value of forty Shillings and upwards. And order taken, that after a Felon was attainted (but not before) the stolen Goods might be refor d. Furthermore, it was provided particu-Exportate larly, that no Brass should be carried beyond on of Sea. Which seems to regard principally making Brass for great Ordnance; (about this time appearing of and why. great use.) Artificers Strangers also were restrain'd to certain Rules. As that they might not keep above two Strangers Servants in their House. That they should bear such charges as Natural Subjects did, paying all Subfidies, &c. and take an Oath to be true and obedient to the King and his Laws. That they should have no Conventicles, but meet in the Common Halls of their Craft. That they should not have Journey-men or Prentices Strangers above ten at a time. Moreover, Authority was given to the President of the Kings Council to affociate with the Chancellor, Treafurer, and Keeper of the Privy Seal, &c. both for the punishment of Ri-

Seal, &c. Other Laws also were enacted, which for being meerly Legal, and therefore relative chiefly to the Mafters of the Law, or otherwise Mechanical, or at least so particular, that they belong not properly to History, I purposely o-mit. And so, a week before Christmass, the Dec. 17. Parliament was prorogu'd to the year follow-Barbaroff a Before yet I come to the year 1530. I must a Pyrate. not omit to mention Haradin Barbaroffa that famous Pirate, who, from a low and obscure beginning, had, by his Valour and Conduct (as we have before touch'd) obtain'd the Kingdom of Argier. For being not fortunate alone by Sea, when he landed his Men, he did, with no lefs Success, attempt divers throng places; so that he was generally fear'd; and the rather, ac18. that one Haradin, call'd Caca-diablo, Sinan a Jew, and many other notable Picarons had rang'd themfelves under him; whereby his Forces were fo increas'd, that no Navigation was fecure in the parts adjoyning to him. This year (particularly) he had taken Penon de Velez from the Spaniard, and And now May 21. defeated a Fleet of theirs shortly after. Octob. 25. his defign was to make himfelf Mafter of the For preventing Seas from Gibralter to Sicily. whereof the Emperor employ'd divers, but infortunately, infomuch that Andrea Doria himfelf, though recovering fome Ships out of the Haven of Sarge!, where part of Barbaroffa's Sea-forces

(under the command of one Hally, a Pirat of Tinnis) rode at Anchor; yet when he caus'd some Soldiers to be landed to attempt the Castle, Haly gathering a few resolute Men together, charg'd them desperately, and gave them a repulse with the loss of fo many, as made Doria defit from his Enterprize; which being advertis'd to the Emperor, made him refolve to invade Barbaroffa in his own Country, the fuccess whereof shall be related hereafter. The context of my Hiflory requiring me now to speak of the Florentines; on whom as the Pope paffionately defir'd to be reveng'd, fo the Emperor, having his pre-tences also, did for complying with him, fend an Army thither under the command of Phili-Emperor's best Prince of Aurange, the Marquis of Guaffo, Warin Juan de Usching and ashare for the Command of Phili-Juan de Urbino, and others of note, and about twenty fix thousand Men. The Pope yet us'd distinction; for if he desir'd that the Enemies of his Name and Family with their Adherents should be punish'd, he intreated as well that the City and the Country (whereof he was a Native) should be spard. But as the Prince de Aurange thought this a fubrilty fitter for a School-man than a Soldier, he undertook them together. While Malatesta Baglioni, a brave Gentleman, affociated with Francisco Carduci, and ten others, were chosen the chief Directors of the Florentine Sept. 16. Affairs. And by their advice the fmaller places of Toleans (for avoiding that final defolation that affaults do bring) yielded themselves betime. Yet fo as Juan de Urbino, a Soldier of Note, was kill'd at one of them. And thus fiege was laid to the fair City; the Suburbs whereof being innocent fort perfuaded the reft to implore the Popes mercy. The refultance whereof was, 15;5. Popes mercy. that at last an Ambassade was fent. But as by the craft of the adverse Party, election was made of mean and despicable Persons, the design was eluded; the Pope nor vouchfafing fo much as to theur them. This made them resolve to defend themselves.

This made them resolve to defend themselves.

Leagues of the place for ten days before, and ten day themselves.

Leagues of the place for ten days before, and ten day after the delicary, no no considerable number of East.

Vol. II.

week, were thrown down, that they might the better fortifie their Ramparts, and especial care taken to keep a paffage for Victuals open.

as the War was thought to proceed out of un-

Yet

now actuated into desperation, they by continual 1529 Sallies (as well by Night as Day) not only wearied the Affiegers, and flew divers of their ableft Commanders, but finally kill'd Philibert Prince of Aurange himfelf, who being young, valiant, and liberal, was much lamented among the Soldiers. Famine, yet, at last preffing the Florentines, a Parly was propos'd; but the more daring fort (chuling rather to die with their Arms in their hands, than to yield to the Incenced Pope) fallied forth with that fury and diforder, that one would have thought they pretended not fo much to Victory, as to fome other death than Hunger. The more unquiet fort, being thus at length worn out and spent, the rest by the means of Mulatesta, came to a composition with the Emperor, (the Pope alfo, out of compation to his Country, confenting to it) upon these terms; that they should pay 80000 Augo. Ducats towards the charge of the Army. That The He their popular Government should be changed to recommend Monarchical, under the Rule and Dominion of loose their Alessandro de Medici (Son of Lorenzo late Duke of liberty. Urbin) and his Heirs; their ancient Priviledges being nevertheless referved. And thus, after above ten Months Siege, the City was rendred to the Emperor; who, for more ample testimoto the Emperor; wno, for more ampre commony of his favour, bestowd Margarite his natural Daughter upon Abessiand de Medici, together with the title of Duke. I find yer, by a private difference patch, that he was not very well pleased with makes Medici, together and the Articles, as believing he might have made distributed by Dukes. more advantage of his Conquest; though, for contenting the Pope, he gave way to it, as being now intentive wholly to the Buliness of Germany. For as the affairs of Religion in those parts, together with the invasion of the Turk, requir'd his Presence, so he departed from Italy, Mar. 22-about five Months before the rendition of that about five Months before the retaining of this place: Making (in his way) the Marquis of Mantua a Duke, and receiving his Brother Far-Marquis dinand at Insprach, with much demonstration of of Mantas Love. Where also he advised concerning the mades buke present Estate and Disposition, not of the Affairs only, but even Perfons and Favourites of those with whom he was to treat. So that, coming at charles are last to Augsburg, where a general Diet and Al-rives ar fembly was appointed, with much solemnity (the Arg in the Electors and others, Princes of Germany, meeting there) he requir'd their Grievances. The account whereof yet I must omit a while, that I may come to the restitution of Francis his Children. The Jewel, Money, and Acquittances requir'd for discharge of his pretious Hostages, being now gotten together, Francis would no longer delay to perform his agreement. Only as he confest himself much enabled herennio by the special goodness and bounty of our King, to he fail'd not to take his advice on all occasions. And Mar. 10. thus, the day being come, Anne de Montmorency, Grand Maiftre of France, and Hernando de Velajeo Conestable de Castilla were chosen by both Princes for the persons to whose fidelity and care they thought fit to commend this important bufinels. And because the Cautions and Difficul- Auticles ties were many, they agreed upon certain Arti-cles, the most substantial whereof (besides their properties) extent in the Treaty of Cambray, to which Re- and his kindness rather than hate, so divers of the more lation must be had) were these following.

I. That a Bridge or Pontone, of forty foot long, May 26 and fifteen broad, flould be ercicled upon Boats fifthed with Anchors upon the midst of the River betwint Fuentarable and Andaya; whereupon the exchange shall be made. shall be made.

II. That no Troop, of Horse should be within ten 1529, and that no Gentlemen should pass that way, but those fent to Orleans and Tholouse, and Francis together 1529.

arbo were appointed.

III. That at the day of delivery, no Company of Men or Women Should be within three Leagues of the

IV. That in Fuentarabie there should be none but the ordinary Garrison, being fifty Men, and that the

V. That a hundred Horse, and four hundred Foot, (which afterwards was reduced to a less number) Goodld be allowed on either fide to come to the bank of the River.

VI. That twelve Persons should be admitted on either file to pass over and see these Articles observed; and that two Galleons should coast the River, with equal numbers of both Nations, to prevent sur-

VII. That the Money should be brought in one Shal-in, and the Hostinges in another, to the two sides of the Bridges and that, for Counter-ballancing the Mo-ny of much Ivon should be put in the other.

nc), so much Iron should be put in the other.
VIII. That in the Shallep of the Hoftinges should be truelve Spinituds, the Concellable, and Seigneur de Pract being comprehended, and Mons. de Brifac a Frenchman, with Swerds and Daggers, the Heltages basing Daggers only. And that the like Number and Arms should be permitted to Montmorency in the other Shallep. And one Alvaro de Lu-go a Spaniard, with two Pages to go along with shem in line of the Hofteges, and twelve Oars on either port unarmid.

1X. The coming both at the same time to the two sales of the Bridge, the Conestable, and Montmorency should land suffer to the said Bridge, and call to them in equal number their Companies. And that the Spaniards found pass into the Shallop where the Money and Writings and Jewels were, along the one a Barrier creeted, and the French on the c-ther Shallop of the Hostages.

ther Southop of the Hopfages.

X. That Queen Leonora floudd go in a Shallop apart with fix Ladies attendants, the reft being eight Covaliers and fix Oars of either Nation, but that she shall not possible the exchange were made.

Notwithflanding which Agreement, fo much time was employ'd in counting, weighing, and exami-ning the Money, that many weeks preceding were fpent before they could accord of the pay-The Spaniard finding the Gold to want of its Purity, and the Deschee or loss being valued re at 40000 Crowns. Befides, as the River on the deliverd. Spanish shoar was shallower than on the French, July there wanted not some Jealousie and Wrangling. Howfoever, at length the delivery was made. Whereof Francis being advertis'd, did post from Bourdeaux to Varin, where with much joy he receiv'd his Children, and Queen Leonora

> And now Francis remembring how much it concern'd him to correspond with our King (to whom he ow'd first his own, and next his Childrens Liberty) fent over to acquaint him there-de Sercs, whom also he married an hour before the day following.

Our King also considering that Francis being now dif-ingag'd, might more freely declare himfelf, did (by a particular Message) not only make known the little hope he had of the Popes fayour in his particular bufiness, but defir'd that Kings affiltance, for obtaining the refolution of the Universities and Learned Men in his Kingdom concerning the lawfulness of his Marriage; for which purpose he induc'd Guillaume de Billin (fent by Francis to him in the beginning of this year) to co-operate with them, as also those of Italy and Germany, not omitting together to employ at Paris, his Kinfman and Beneheiary Reginald Pole, with Sir Francis Bryan, and quad ignovarem an inde coftree Conflicative satisfies E most Fox, Matter William Pager (after) being posses, gaum vesters Manstas imprimis expresses capit.

readily promising his affishance. And because KHenry's our King had many Agents about this time em-Agents to ploy'd in Italy, as namely Doctor Richard Croke, get the (a Man excellent in the Greek Tongue) at Padua; Opinions Hierome de Ghinucci Bishop of Worcester, and Gre-of forciga gory Casalis at Rome; Doctor Stekestey at Venice, Universi-Thomas Cranmer (afterwards Archbilhop of Can-the Dis terbury) Andreas and Johannes Cafalis, and Previ-vorce. dellas; he had enough to do; while sometimes he labour'd to reconcile, and fometimes again to make use of their various Advertisements. Stokefley writ in a Letter (dated June 13.) that June 13. he had gotten the Opinions of the University of Bononia; and that more would have concur'd, had not the Pope contradicted. Croke faid, the June 22. in favour of the Kings Caufe. He writes also that the Emperor's Ambaffador in Padua, challeng'd one Frier Thomas, for favouring the King's July 4. Caufe, and told him, if this conclusion should take effect, many of the greatest Princes of Chriflendam thould be difficrited, or taken as Illegiti-mate; accounting in those as well the Empe-ror, as the King of Portugal. Notwithstanding which, he had gotten eighty principal Mens hands a good while fince, and had obtain'd thirthat the Emperor labour'd with the State of V_{ℓ} nice, to oppose the King in his demand. thermore he protested none would take Money Lawyers only excepted) for delivering their Opinions, though he forc'd fometimes a fmall Reward on them when they had done. Which particular Dr. Stokefley (in a Difpatch Sept. 23, Sept. 23, 1530.) did confirm; faying, it was their manner both in Padua and Bononia to refuse Money ner both in Padua and Bonoma to retule Money with these words, Suod à Spiritu Sancho granis accepinms, gratis & libenter impertimen. Moreover Croke, by a Letter, Aug. 31. 1530. said, Cae-Aug. 31. fir minis, precibus, pretio, & fucerdatiis, partim tarritat nuffros, partim confirmat fines: Certifying our King surther, that Andreas Cafalis and Previdellus did reveal his Highness Secrets to the Cefaritation. In combining this thing many would have ans: In conclusion I find that many would have given their opinion in favour of the Divorce. if they durft. So that though the Kings Agents did now and then differ in fome Points, they all yet agreed that most of the Learned Men in those parts would have favour'd the King in the point of his Divorce, had not the Pope and Emperor oppugned it. Croke adds further, that the Emperor got fome hands in Mining for Money, but they were of the meaner fort. Whereas twenty-nine Doctors in that place had freely fubfcrib'd on his Highnels part. Now as Gregory Cafalis feem damong all his Highnels Agents, at this time, the most industrious, so he iolicited the Pope continually on our Kings behalf, not neglecting also the Cefarious, to whom he gave, and from whom he received that Intelligence, as he made advantage of all. By which dangerous and fuspected Wildom yet he prevail'd fo far, that at length he had Authority, as it feems, to write this following Difparch, which I have caus'd faithfully to be transcrib'd out or the Original.

Erenissime & Potentissime Domine Rex, Domine mi Letter of 🕽 supreme, humillima Commendatione præmiga, Sa-Capoi: lutem & Felicitatem. Superioribus diebus, Pontifex fromRome. secreto, veluti vem quam magni saceret, mibi propose-it conditionem hujusmodi, Concedi posse vestree More-stati ut duas Uxores babeat; Cui divi, nolle mo Provinciam suscipere ea de re scribendi, ch eam Can, am.

B. 7 m

Procla-

1529. Cur autem sic responderen, illud in causa fuit, quod co certo loco, unde que Cafariani moliantur aucupari (oleo, exploratum certumque babebam, Cafarianos illud iffum querere & procurare. Quem vero ad finem id querant, pro certo exprimere non aufim. Id certe vo tum vestræ prudentiæ considerandum relinque. Et quamvus dixerim Pontifici, nibil me de eo scripturum, nolui tamen Majestati vestrae hoc reticere; qua sciat emni me industria laborasse, in its quæ nobis mandat, exequendis. Et cum Anconitano qui me familiariter nti solet, onvoia sum conatus. De omnibus autem me [ad] communes Literas rejicio. Optime valeat vestra M. jeftas. Rome die xviii Septembris, MDXXX.

> C. V. Mijestatis Humili finus Servus Gregorius Cafalis.

NOST Serene and most Powerful Lord, and my most gracious Sovereign, to whom all Health and Happiness, and the most humble acknowledgments of my Duty and Affection. Some days agoe the Pope in private offer'd to me this Propofal, as a thing of which he made much account, that your Majesty might have a Difpensation to have two Wives; to whom I answer'd, that I was very unwilling to take up-on me to write to your Majesty, to know your Majesties pleasure herein, because that I did not know whether this propofal would fatiffie your Conscience, the eale and quiet where-of, was what your Majesty does only aim at The reafon why I gave this for Aniwer, was, that in a certain place, from whence I have information of the Deligns and Contrivances of the Cefarians, I have certain intelligence and undoubted knowledge, that this propofal was flatted, and is promoted by the Cefarians; but what their aim and defign herein should be, I dare not certainly affirm, and therefore leave that wholly to your Highnesses great Prudence and Confideration. And though I told his Holinefs, that I could not venture to write to your Majefly herein, yet was I unwilling to keep this from your Majesties knowledge, that it may appear, that no Care or Industry is wanting in me to execute your Majesties Commands, or promote your Services. I have done all which I have been able with one of Ancona, with whom I have great intimacy. As to all which I refer to the common Letters. May God preferve your Majesties Health, Rome Sept. 18. 1530.

> Your most Excellent Majesties Most Obedient Servani Gregory Cafalis.

How this Letter was believ'd or accepted yet, doth not appear to me; fo that although Melanethon is faid to have concur'd in some such Opinion, no effect follow'd thereof. For I find, that at this very time, King Henry, jealous of the Queens, or (as our Historians fay) of Woolfey's procuring Bulls against him, fet forth this Proclamation, September 19.

THE King's Highness streightly Chargeth and Com-mandeth, that no manner of Person of what Emation as matton: "nameth, ton unmanne of terms of more specific properties of the best of the best Imprisonment, and farther Punishment of their Bodies, 1529. for their so doing, at his Graces pleasure, to the dread-ful Example of all other.

Thus did the King begin to finke off the Remish Yoke; to which he was much animated by the concurrence of his Subjects in Parliament, both Spiritual and Temporal, who (as it appears The Tenor whereof is this;

Pope.

Anctiffimo in Christo Patri & Domino Domino Clementi, divina Providentia, ejus nominis Papæ septimo; Osculatis pedibus omni cum liumilitate, scelicitatem precamur & optamus perpetuam, in Domino nostro Jesu Christo. Beatissime Pater, tametsi Causa Matrimonii, Invictiffimi & Séreniffimi Principis Domini nostri, Anglia Franciaque Regis, Fidei Defenforis, & Domini Hibernix, multis ipfa per se Argumentis Vestræ Sanctitatis opem imploret atque efflagitet, ut illud quam celerrime finem accipiat, quem Nos, fummo cum defiderio jam diu defideravimus, & longa fed hactenus vana fpe à Vestra Sanctitate expe-Ctavimus: Non potuimus tamen committere, ut Rebus nostris Regnique statu, ex hac litis Protelatione in tantum discrimen adducto, omnino fileremus, fed quod Regia Majestas nostrum Caput, atque adco Anima omnium nostrum, & in cujus verbis nos, tanquam Membra conformia, justa compagine Capiti cohxrentia, multa folicitudine Vestram Sancitatem precati, & frustra tamen precati sumus, id nos Literis nostris doloris gravitate adducti feorfim & feparatim flagitaremus. Sufficere sane alioqui debuisset, Causa ipsius justitia, erudissimorum virorum calculis patim probata, celeberrimarum Academiarum fuffragiis judicata, ab Anglis, à Gallis, ab Italis, prout quisque apud eos cateros eruditione antecellit, pronunciata & definita, ut Sanctitas Vestra, etiam nemine petente & reclamantibus quibulcunque, fuo Ore fuaque Authoritate aliorum Sententias confirmaret; præfertim cum Causæ definitio eum Regem, illud Reg-num respiciat, quod de Sede illa Apostolica tam multis nominibus bene meritum fit: Precibus autem nihil opus fuisset, nist quatenus homines doloribus indulgent, & preces non necessarias interdum effundere solent. Cæterum quum apud Sanctitatem Vestram nec ipfius Caufæ Justitia nec Beneficiorum acceptorum recordatio, nec optimi Principis tam affidux & diligentes Preces quicquam profecerint, ut obtineatur à vobis quod paternæ pietatis officium exigebat, adauctus supra modum in nobis miferiarum ac calamitatum recordatione doloris cumulus fingula etiam Reipublica nostra membra vocalia facit, & Verbis & literis conquestionem edere compellit. Nam quæ tandem infelicitas, ut quod duæ Academiæ nostræ, quod Academia Parisiensis, quod some or elevitere, nor use and put in execution, dirusge or publish any thing heretofore within this year radied, purchissed, or to be purchased hereaster, contrining neatter prejudicial to the high Authority. Jurissing neatt

1529. sidio sua stat Sedi Apostolicæ Authoritas, à tam multis ac Populis etiam potentislimis tam valide impetita, quibus partim Ferro, partim Calamo, partim voce atque authoritate sapi-us in ea Causa restitit; & tamen solus illius authoritatis beneficio non fruitur, qui curavit ut esset qua alii fruerentur. His quid responderi posset non videmus, & malorum interim pelagus Reipublicæ nostræ imminere cernimus, ac certum quoddam diluvium comminari, aut quod diluvio par est, multa cæde ac fanguine restinctam olim Successionis contro-versiam denuo reducere. Habemus enim summis virtutibus Principem, certiffimo titulo Regem, indubitatam Regno tranquillitatem daturum, fi Sobolem ex corpore Masculum nobis reliquerit; cujus in vero Matrimonio fola spes esse potest : Matrimonio autem vero tantum illud nunc obstat, ut quod de priore Ma-trimonio tot docti viri pronunciant, id utique Vestra Sanctitas sua Authoritate declaret. Hoc autem si non vult, & qui Pater esse debeat, nos tanquam Orphanos relinquere decrevit, & pro abjectis habere, ita certe interpretabimur, Nostri nobis curam esse relictam, ut aliunde nobis remedia conquiramus. Sed ad hoc ne adigamur, Sanctitatem Vestram oramus ut Regi nostro in tam fanctis desideriis adesse, & sine mora aut dilatione savere velit, vehementer obsecramus, ut judicio suo comprobet quod viri doctiffimi affirmant, per illam quam nobis ex Pastorali Officio debet Pietatem ex mutuo Cordis Affectu obtestamur, ne claudantur paterna viscera, tam obsequentibus, tam benevolis, tam morigeris Filiis. Caufa Regiæ Majestatis nostra cujusque propria est, à Capite in Membra derivata, dolor ad omnes, atque injuria ex æquo pertinet, omnes in ejus Majeslate compatimur, quibus facile Sanctitas Vestra mederi posset, nec posset modo, sed ex paterna pietate deberet. Quod si vel id non fecerit, vel facere quidem distu-lerit Sanctitas Vestra, hactenus sane conditio nostra erit miserior, quod tam diu sine fructu frustra laboratum sit, sed non omni prorsus remedio destituta. Sunt quidem Remedia extrema semper duriora, sed Morbum omnino utcunque levare curat ægrotus, & in malorum commutatione nonnihil est spei; ut, si minus fuccedat quod bonum est, sequatur saltem quod est minus malum, & id temporis etiam cursu facile rolerandum. Ista autem ut secum consideret Sanctitas Vestra, iterum atque iterum rogamus, in Domino Jesu Christo, cujus Vi-ces in Terris se gerere prositetur, idque ut nunc factis conetur oftendere; Ut veritatem, doctiffimorum hominum vigiliis ac laboribus inventam, probatam & confirmatam, ad Dei Laudem & Gloriam fua Sententia & Pronunciatione velit illustrare. Interim vero Deum Opt. Max. quem ipfam esse veritatem certissimo Testimonio cognoscimus, comprecabimur, ut Vestra Sanctitatis Consilia ita informare atque dirigere dignetur, ut quod fanctum, justum ac verum est, à Vestræ Sanctitatis Authoritate obtinentes, ab omni alia assequendæ Veritatis molestia liberemur.

1. Archiepiscopi. T. Cardinalis Ebor. Willielmus Can.

2. Duces. Tho. Norfolk. Char. Suffolk.

3. Marchiones: T. Dorfet. H. Exeter.

4. Comites. Willielmus Arundel. Jo. Oxenford. H. Northumberland. Rauf. Westmerland. Geo. Shrewsbury. Henr Effex. Edw. Derby. H. Worcester. Tho. Rutland. Hen, Cumberland, Robert Suffex. Geo. Huntington. G. of Kildare.

5. Episcopi. Robert. Cicestrens. 70b. Carliolens. Joh. Lincoln. Rich. Menevenfis.

6. Barones. Henr. Montague. G. Rochford. Willielm. Weston. E. Abergavenny. 7. Audley. Hen. Scroope. Tho. Dacres. Tho. La-Ware. Williehn. Dacre. Tho. Barkley. Hen. Morley. Geo. Cobbam. Rich. Latimer. Edw. Stourton To. Fitzwarren. To. Semers. To. Lumley. Willielm. Mountjoy. Chrif. Coniers. Hen. Daubeny. T. Darcy. T. Montegle. Willielm. Sandys. Jo. Husey. Andr. Windfor.

1529.

Abbates. 70. of Westminster. To. of Bury St. Ed. mund. Rich. Glaston. Will. Gloucester. Tho. of Abendon. Hugh of Reading, Edw. of York. Jo. of Peterburgh. To. of Ramley. To, of Croyland. Ro. of Thorney. Ro. of Selby. William Abbot of Bardney. Will, Ab. of St. Benet de Hulmo. Tho. Ab. of St. John by Colchester. To. Ab. of Hyde. Clem. Ab. of Eve sham.

comb. Rob. Ab. S. Crucis de Waltham. 70. Ab. of Circester. Hen. Abbot of Teux. bury.

Ric. Ab. of Malmsbury.

Ric. Ab. of Winchel.

8. Milites & Doctores in Parlamento, William Fitz:William. Hen. Guildford. Steph. Gardiner. 70. Gage. William Kingston. Bryan Tuke. Rich, Sacheverell. Rich, Sampfor. E.lw. Lee. Rich. Woolman. Jo. Bettat.

O the most holy Lord, our Lord and Father in Christ, Clement, by the Divine Providence the seventh Pope of that Name, we wish and pray for perpetual felicity in our Lord Jesus Christ, with all kumility throwing our selves at his feet. Most blessed Father, although the Cause concerning the Marriage of the most in-vincible Prince our Sovereign Lord the King of England and France, Defender of the Faith, and Lord of Ireland, does for Jundry, great, and weighty Reasons of it self, require and deand weighly Realons of Hell, require and de-mand your Holinesses Alfistance, that it may be brought to that speedy end and determination, which we with so great and earnest desires have wish'd, and with so very great, though very vain expectations have long look'd for from your Holiness: We could not nevertheless prevail with our felves to keep silence herein any longer, especially since our Kingdom and the af-fairs thereof suffer so much, and are brough into so great danger through the unseasonable delay of Sentence herein: So that since his Majesty our Head, and by consequence the Life of us all, and we in his Words, as Subject Members, by a just Union annexed to the Head, have with great earnestness pray'd your Holinefs, but pray'd in vain, we are by the greatnefs of our grief, forced separately and distinctly by these our Letters, most humbly to intreat your speedy determination hereof. Be justice of the cause it felf, approved of by the Opinions of the most Learned Men every where, and determined by the Decrees of the most famous Universities in the World, and esteem'd and judg'd most righteous by all Persons either in England, France or Italy, who are most eminent for their Learn-ing, might so far prevail, as that your Holi-ness, though no body entreated it, nay, though some opposed it, should with your own Voice and Authority, confirm that Sentence which has fo universally been pronounced just, especially when your Determination of this Cause is a piece of Justice done to that King and Kingdom, which upon so many several accounts have deserved well of the Apostolical See; although entreaties to you herein seem not to be necessary, however we make them, as Persons overborn with troubles, who indulge their grief, and frequently pour forth repeated and unnecessary Prayers. But since your Holied and unnecessiany fragers. But since you also mefs is not to be prevailed upon, either by the Jufice of the Cause, the remembrance of the good Services you have always found, or by the earnest and continued requests of the best of Princes, to do that which might be expected from your Paternal Love and Affection alone, our grief is by the remembrance of our Miseries and Calamities encreas d to that immense degree, that it overspreads the whole body of the Realm, and gives a voice of complaint to each Member their Letters, to lay before your Holine's this their insupportable Grievance. For how great a minsurum is it, that what our own two Uniwally of the University of Paris, as well as many other in France, what almost all Men of Learning, Knowledge and Integrity, both at home and abroad have determined and affirmed ses and Writings 5 yet cannot a confirmation of this so universally acknowledge a truth, be obtained from the hely Apostolical See by that Prince, by whose Support and affistance that See still keeps and preserves its Authority, which has been shaken and undermined by so many, and for powerful Adversaries, till he withflood and opposed their designs partly by his Sword, partly by his Pen, at other times by his Commands and Authority, supporting that Power and Authority of the Church, from whence others are chabled to obtain those mighty advantages from which he now finds himself only excluded. What answer can be made bereto we see not, and yet we see that from hence a shood of miseries is showing in upon the Commonwealth, and a sort of Deluge of Calamities overwhelming us, from the dif-putes about Succession, which will soon overtake us, never to be setled without infinite slaugh-ter and effusion of Blood. We now have a King most eminent for his Virtues, seated upon the Throne of his Ancefors, by right un loubted and unquestionable, who would entail lasting Peace, and uninterrupted tranquillity on his Realms, if he scaves a Son to succeed him from lawful and true Marriage, nor will that he posfible, unless your Holiness will by your Authority, pronounce the same Sentence concerning his former Marriage, which so many Learned Men have already deliver'd. But if your Holiness, whom we justly call our Father, shall, by refusing to com-ply herein, esteem us as Cast-aways, and resolve to leave us Orphans; we can make no other Construction of it, but that the care of our selves is committed to our own Hands, and that we are left to feek our remedy elsewhere. But that we may never be driven to these Extremities, we beg your Holiness without delay, or farther loss of time, to assist these his Majesties most just and reasonable desires, we most earnestly in-treat a consirmation of the judgment of these most Learned Men, humbly imploring, that for the fake of that Mutual Love, and that Paternal Affection which your Pastoral Office requires you Ageston when your ratherst Office requires you to shew us, not to shut up your bowels of Pity and Compassion against us, your most Dutiful, most Loving, most Obedient Sons. The Case of his most sacred Majesty, is the Case of us all, since the Head cannot suffer, but the Members must bear a part, the grief arising herefrom, and the injury suffer'd hereby, does equally affect us, who bear our proportion of all his Majesties Af-flictions; the remedy of which, as it must pro-ceed wholly from your Holinesses power, so is it a duty necessarily arising from your Paternal Au-thority and Affection: Which remedy, if your Holiness shall refuse or delay to grant, our Condition will indeed herein be more miserable, that so long we have fruitless and in vain sought redress, but it will not be wholly desperate, since it is possible to find relief some other way. Desperate Remedies indeed are not without extremity to be applied; but he that is fick, will by any means get rid of his Distemper: in the wrifties, the University of Paris, as well as change of our missives there is some Confort, many other in France, what almost all Men of when if we can't obtain perfect relief, yet we Learning, Knowledge and Integrity, both at may change our condition for that which is less home and abroad have determined and affirmed affiding, and more tolerable. That your Holito be true, and the truth of which they are ready to desend and support both in their Discourpour most serious Consideration, we do again and 1529. again beseech you, for our Lord Jesus Christ's fake, whose Vicar on Earth you stile your self, and that you would now conform your actions and that you would now conform your actions to that Title, by pronouncing your fentence to the glory and praise of God, and thereby giving your Testimony and Souction to that Truth, which has been examin'd, approv'd, and after much deliberation confirm'd by the most Learned Men of all Nations. In the mean time we will befeech God, whom we infullibly know to be Truth, that he would vouchfafe so to inform and direct your Holinesses Deliberations herein, that having by your Holinesses Authority, a Consir-mation of what is Jult, Rightcous and True, we may therein rest satisfy'd, and be free from the trouble of feeking to attain this end by other > Archbilhops T. Cardinal of York. William Cant. &c.

To which Clement return'd this Reply.

Venerabilibus Fratribus Archiepiscopis & E. piscopis, ac dilectis Filis Abbatibus, No bilibufque Viris, Ducibus, Marchionibus, Comitibus, Baronibus, Militibus ac Docto. ribus Parliamenti Regni Anglia.

CLEMENS Papa VII.

Popes.An-🎢 Enerabiles Fratres & dilecti Filii, Salutem & Apostolicam Benedictionem. Multa funt in vestris Literis die xiii. Julii datis ac nobis superioribus diebus reddiris, quæ gravius accepissemus, nisi ea affectui, studioque vestro erga Charissimum in Christo Filium nostrum, Regem vestrum condonanda arbitraremur. Itaq; sedato animo ad eas Literas respondebimus, tantum ut doceamus quam immerito de nobis conquesti sitis, neq; oportuisse tantum à vobis tribui privato erga Regem five officio five amori vestro, ut nos duobus, ingrati adversus Serenitatem suam animi ac denegatæ Justitiæ, gravissimis nominibus incufaretis. Nos quidem agnofeimus Regem vestrum ea omnia que in vestris Literis enumeratis, ac multa etiam plura promeritum, manebitq; perpetuo non modo apud nos fed ad posteros nostros memoria ejus in Sedem Apostolicam meritorum. Fatemurg; nos non modo Pontificiæ perfonæ quam gerimus, fed privato nostro nomine tantum Serenitati sux debere, ut nunquam beneficiis parem gratiam relaturi videamur. Sed quod attinet ad Controversiam que de Matrimonio est inter Serenitatem tuam & Catharinam Reginam, tantum abest, ut denegando Justitiam, Regis spem frustrari voluerimus, ut ultro ab altera parte, tanquam plus aquo in partes Majesta-Sed, ut tis fux propenfi, reprehendamur. paulo altius perpetuum animi nostri erga Regem vestrum Tenorem repetamus: Cum prinostri propensionem potius quam Juris rigo- 1529 rem fecuti, commisimus illam dilectis Filiis nostris Thomæ tt' Sanctæ Ceciliæ Eboracensi in Regno Angliæ Legato, & Laurentio tt' Sanctæ Mariæ in Transtiberim Campegio à nostro Latere misso, Presbyteris Cardinalibus, in Regno arq; adeo domi ipfius Regis audiendam & terminandam; satissecimusq; tum, quantum in nobis suit, Serenitatis suæ volunrati. Verum cum Regina suspectum illud in partibus Judicium habere cepisset, & à gravaminibus fibi, ut dicebat, per eofdem Legaros illatis ad Sedem Apostolicam appellasset, Procuratoribus etiam ad dictam appellationem profequendam constitutis, ne tum quidem desiderari passi sumus nostram erga ipsum Regem benevolentiam. Nam tametfi caufæ hujufmedi appellationis Commissio negari non poterat, tamen Concordia potius quam via Juris terminari hanc controversiam cupientes, omnes moras in Commissione dicta causa appellationis concedenda interpoluimus, eo prætextu, quod esset de majoribus causis, meritoq; ad Consistorium rejicienda. Habita vero deinde super hoc cum venerabilibus fratribus nostris S. R. E. Cardinalibus aliquoties confultatione, fuit aliquamdiu dilatum negotium; Sed tandem unanimi omnium Cardinalium voto conclusum est, Commissionem causa Appellationis liujusmodi per nos negari non posse. Itaq; commissa est audienda & subinde in dicto Consistorio nobis referenda & terminanda. Nam cum omnibus in rebus considerate procedere debemus, tum in hac potissimum quæ Regias & illustres personas tangit, & in quam torius Christianitatis oculos conjectas esse videmus. Post quæ deinde nullus Regius legitimus Procurator comparuit, qui aut seripto aut verbo de Juribus Regis doceret; ideoq; sactum, ut lis adhuc decidi non potuerit. Quippe cum ex actis & productis, non ex amore & benevolentia decidenda sit. Quamobrem nulla causa est, cur nobis ascribatis litis quam dicitis protelationem; de qua miramur vos queri, cum illam Oratores ipfius Regis alibi & præfertim Bononiæ à nobis petierint & impetrarint, invitifilmis quidem & reclamantibus Reginæ Procuratoribus. Cum itaq; nunquam per nos steterit, quin hæc lis, omnibus rebus mature discussis, terminaretur, non videmus quibus rationibus nitatur querimonia vestra; nisi forte id dicitis, tot esse Regis erga nos & Sedem Apostolicam beneficia, ut quoquo modo in ejus voluntatem Causam diffiniri oportuerit; id enim oftenditis fatis aperte, cum dicitis, in Causa ab eruditissimis viris Anglis, Gallis, Italis, ac tot Academiarum fuffragiis probata, & nemine petente ac reclamantibus quibufcung; Sententiam à nobis ferri debuisse. Qua in re non parum prudentiam & modestiam vestram requirimus. Nam non videmus, quibus rationibus freti postuletis, ut in Causa maximi momenti Sententiam feramus, nemine petente ac cateris reclamantibus, cum adverla pars continue opponat totius Christianitatis Scandalum, tot annorum matrimonium ad fupplicationem Clariffimorum Regum Henrici Patris ac Ferdinandi Catholici, ex Dispenmum, tribus ferme abhine annis, Regii Ora-tores ad nos hane Causam detulissent; animi terea Filiam extantem & plures Regina par531. tus ; & adversus opiniones Doctorum, quas probitatem, ut ne ultro quidem oblatum, quod pro vobis allegatis, multorum & ipfi graviffimorumque virorum judicium, & pro se facientia Divini Juris mandata adducant, Argumentis haustis non modo ex Latinis, sed etiam ex uberrimis in hac re Hebrxorum fontibus: Nobis tamen in neutram adhuc partem inclinantibus, fed æquas aures præbentibus, cum Causam hanc gravissimam & ad totam Rempublicam Christianam & posteritatem omnem pertinere existimemus. Nam ex iis quas pro vobis facere Doctorum hominum atque Universitatum Opiniones scribitis, pauca admodum venerunt in manus nostras, nobis non legitime, nec Regis nomine, ab Oratoribus præsentata, illæg; nudæ tantum illorum hominum opiniones, nullis adferiptis rationibus cur ita fentiant, nullaque facrorum Canonum & Scripturæ, quæ tantum spectare debemus, Authoritate subnixæ. Postulare autem, ut, in Regis gratiam, quicquam temere atq; inconsiderate statuamus, nec æquum nec vestra Sapientia dignum est. Nam, tametsi multum Serenitati suæ debemus, tamen in judicando pluris facere cogimur Eum, per quem Reges regnant & Principes imperant; & veri Patris officium est prospicere, ne nimia facilitate plus æquo indulgeamus Filiis nostris: irretiremus enim non nostram solum sed Serenitatis fux Confcientiam immatura Sententia; qux, non recte prolata, pernicioso universa Christianitati noceret exemplo. Nam, quod Regno ve-stro Diluvium impendere dicitis, id multo magis timendum esse arbitraremur, si Sententiam, que recta justitiæ via ac ratione ferenda est, præcipitaremus, ac, nimio erga Regem vestrum amore provecti, à Justitia atque Officio nostro discederemus; Masculam autem prolem non vos magis optatis quam nos Serenitati sux; atq; utinam tanto Regi fimiles Filios, ac non Regni tantum, fed & Virtutum Hæredes haberet Christiana Respublica! Sed pro Deo non fumus, ut liberos dare possimus. Quod autem dicitis, nolle nos, Authoritate nostra, secundum veritatem de priori Matrimonio declarare, quod tot docti viri pro ipfo Rege pronuncient; vellemus nos quidem omnibus in rebus Serenitati fuæ gratificari; posse autem ita debemus, ut non destruamus; destrueremus enim, si quid contra Juris ordinem statueremus, etsi oculis nostris explora-tissima res esset. Cæterum, quod est in extremo Literarum vestrarum, Nisi Petitionibus veftris fatisfecerimus, vos existimaturos vestri vobis curam effe relictam, atque aliunde remedia conquifituros, nec vestra prudentia nec religione dignum Confilium, ab coque ut abstinearis, Paterna Charitate vos monemus: Nec ramen ulla Medici culpa effet, fi ægrotus, curationis impatiens, quicquam in fe flatuerit, quod adverfaretur faluti. Nos quidem, quæ Nos quidem, quæ recte ac fine pernicie dari possunt remedia non denegamus? Quis enim infirmatur, & ego non infirmor? Quis scandalizatur, & ego non uror? Os meum patet ad vos, Filii dilectiffimi, & vos ut filios chariffimos monemus. Sed nec Regem ipsum, cujus causam agitis, probaturum fuisse credimus, ut ita scriberetis : Cognitam enun habemus ac perspectam ejus and Queen Catherine, we have been so far from xquum non effet, accepturum fuisse putemus; & tametsi vestrum omnium intercessionem magni facimus, tamen noster erga Serenitatem fuam amor non patitur fe cujulquam cohortatione precibulque excitari; nec meminimus frustra unquam Serenitatem suam a nobis petiisse, quod cum nostro, & hujus fancta Sedis honore concedere possemus; paremas ostendemus perpetuo voluntatem. Denique, quod ad hanc Caufam artinet, Nos quidem nullam ejus expeditioni moram interponemus, quin, cum instructa, & partes auditæ fuerint, terminetur; nobis fummopere cupientibus veftrum Regem & ipsam Reginam, nosque ipsos moleftissimo hoc negotio liberari. Hoc tantum à Serenitate sua & Devotionibus vestris requirimus, ne plus, ob fumma ejusdem Regis beneficia, à nobis exigatis, quam quod fine offensa Dei persolvere possumus: Cum in cæteris omnia à nobis expectare possitis, quæ habitâ Officii ac Perfonæ quam gerimus & Justitiæ ratione expectari debent. Datum Romæ apud Sanctum Petrum, sub annulo Piscatoris, die xxvij. Septembris MDXXX. Pont' nostri Anno Septimo.

Evangelista.

To our Venerable Brethren the Archbishops and Bishops, and to our beloved Sons the Abbots, Noblemen, Dukes, Marquesses, Earls, Barons, Knights and Doctors affembled together in Parliament in England.

CLEMENT VII. Pope.

| Enerable Brothers and beloved Sons, Health be to you, and Apostolical Benediction. There are many Expressions in your Letter, bearing date July 13, which we received some days agoe, which we could not have thought well of, did we not wholly impute them to the great duty and tender affection which you bear to our most dear Son in Christ your King. We shall therefore without taking these things amils, sedately answer your Letter, that you may thereby learn with how little reason you have complained of us, and that your private Duty and Assection to your King, ought not to extend so far, as to justifie your accusing us of two grievous Offences, ingratitude to his Highness, and denial of Justice. We do acknowledge that your King has deserved all that your Letter mentions, nay, even much more, that the remembrance of his many Meritorious Adions towards brance of his many Meritorious Assions towards the Apostolical See, will not only live fresh in our Memories, but be transmitted down to late Posterity. We can't but own likewise, that not only with respect to our Office and Charaster in the Church, but also in our own private Person, we owe so much to his Highnesses Affestion, as we shall scarce ever be able sufficiently to recompense. As to what relates to the controversy concerning the Marviage between his Hinhusses. concerning the Marriage between his Highness Vol. II.

denying him Justice, that we have even lain un-der the consure of the other Party, and have been thought partial, and too much inclin'd to sabeen thought partial, and too much melin a to ja-count his Mujeflies defires herein. But to give a more undeviable proof of our conflant affection to your King, it will be necessary to mention what has some time since passed: When first, about three years since, his Mujessies Ambassa-dors laid this Cause before us, rather seeking re-dress herein from our affection and kindness to his Highness, than from the rigorous course of Justice, we committed it to the determination of our beloved Sons, Thomas Archbishop of York our Legate in England, Cardinal Sanctæ Cæciliæ, and Laurence Campejus Cardinal Sanctæ Mariæ transtiberim our Legate de La-tere, who were both in your Kingdom, and upon the foot to examin into the Matter; whereby, as far as we were able, we satisfied his Highnesses desires. But when the Queen began to suspect them as partial Judges, and on the account of some grievances she had import on her by the said Legates, had appeal of from them to the Apostolical Tribunal, and had on her part appointed Proctors to profecute the said Appeal at Rome, even then our great inclination to his Majestics Service was sufficiently evidenced. For although we could not in this Cause deny the Queen a Commiljion of Appeal, yet feeking ra-ther that this controverfy might be finished by the agreeable methods of Peace and Concord, than by course of Law, we fram'd several delays in granting our Commission of Appeal in the Said Cause, under pretence that this being a Cause of the highest Nature, must therefore be brought before the Consistory. After this we held frequent Consultation with our most venerable Brethren their Eminences the Cardinals, whereby this affair was still further put off; till at length by the unanimous vote of all the Cardinals it was concluded, that a Commission of Appeal in this Canse could not be refus'd. It was therefore appointed to be examin'd, heard, and in the faid Confistory, by us to be finally determin'd. For as in all cases we ought to proceed with the greatest caution, so ought we more especially to do in that which concerns the Majesties of Kings and Queens, on which we fee the eyes of all the Christian World plac'd. Since which no law-ful Prottor has appear'd on the Kings part, to fet forth his Majesties Pretentions either in Wri-ting, or by word of Mouth, from whence it is that this Cause could not yet receive its Deter-mination. Since it must be decided according to what is alledg'd, and by Witnesses prov'd; not according to Favour and Affection. There is therefore no reason why this deferring our sentence of Determination, of which you complain should be ascribed to us, and your complaint herein seems to us the more strange, because his Ma-jesties Ambassadors in several places, particularly at Bononia, did request and solicit this delay of Sentence from us, contrary to the in-clination and demand of the Queens Profors herein. Since therefore we have no mays occasion'd these delays, or hindred this Cause from being determin'd after mature Examination, and dine confideration of all the Circumstances of it.

1530. disappointing the King's expectation therein by we fee not on what reasons these your Complaints 1530, denying him Justice, that we have even lain under the censure of the other Party, and have that the Services which his Majesty has shown us, and the Apostolical Sce are such, that the Cause should be determined in his favour, without regard had either to Right or Justice; for that must be the meaning of your Words, when you say that Sentence ought to be given by ns, though no body entreated it, nsy, tho some opposed it in this case, which has been adjudged just by all the Learned in England, France and Italy, and by the Decrees of so many Universities: Which words to us seem not to proceed from your usual Prudence and Modesty; since we see not with what reason you can desire, that we should in a Canse of the greatest Moment give Sentence, though none entreated it, nay, tho some opposed it; when on the other side is alledg'd the great Scandal and Offence that all Christians would take, at a Sentence of Divorce from a Marriage which has continu'd so many years, which was contracted by Dispensation from the Holy See, at the request of his most excellent Majesty Henry VII. and the most Catholick King Ferdinand; from whence the Queen has had so many Children born, and still has a Daughter living; contrary to the opinion of several Doctors (which you urge also on your be-half) and those very learned and grave Men, and who consirm their judgment both by the Laws of God, and by Arguments taken not only from the Latins, but likewise derived from the Jewish Law: Notwithstanding all which, we kept our selves unbyass'd, inclin'd to favour neither side, but to hear both, looking on this most extraordinary Cause, not only to concern the whole Christian World, but also to belong to all Posterity. As for the Opinions of Learned Men, and the Decrees of Universities which you mention, few of them have come to our notice, shewn us not in proper form by your Ambassadors, nor in the Name of the King exhibited, and those were but bare Opinions of those Men, alledging no reasons for their Determinations, nor supporting them by any Authority from Scripture, or the Canons, which herein ought only to prevail. Wherefore, to demand that we should rashly, and without due Consideration, determine any thing herein in his Majesties favour, is a thing neither righteous in it self, nor agreeable to your Wisdom. For although we owe much to his Highness, yet in executing Judgment we must necessarily much more regard him, by whom Kings reign, and Princes decree Justice; and further, it is the duty of a good Father, to take care that by over fondness, he do not too much indulge his Children: Besider, we should not on-ly entangle our own, but also his Highnesses Conscience, by such an hasty and inconsiderate Sentence, which if thus unduly given, would by its dangerous example, greatly damage the whole Christian World. As for that delage of Calamities, which you fear is impending over your Kingdom, sure it were much more to be fear 1, if we should rashly hasten that Sentence which ought calmly to proceed in the strait way of Juflice and Keason, thereby violating both our own Duty, and departing from the rules of Justice through too great favour and affection to your

King; you cannot with more earnest desires wish his Majesty a Son, than we do, and that not only his Highness, but all Christian Princes had Sons like so great a King, the Inkeritors not only of their Realms, but of such Prince ly Virtues, but we are not in the stead of God, that we can give Children. As to what you fay, that we were unwilling to confirm by our Authority, a truth concerning the former Marriage, which by so many Learned Men in the Kingdom is agreed upon; we are truly willing to gratifie his Highness in all things, wherein we are able by our Anthority, but then our Ability can't extend to those things which will destroy that Authority, as it would if we should judicially give sentence contrary to the usual Methods and due course of Law in any thing, tho it might appear never so plain and manifest to us. As for what you mention in the end of your Letter, that unless we grant your request herein, you shall imagine that the care of your felves is remitted into your own Hands, and that you are left at liberty to feek remedy herein elsewhere; this is a Resolution neither worthy of your Prudence, nor becoming your Christianity; and we do therefore of our fatherly love, exhort you to abstain from any sinch rash Attempt: Tho' it would be no fault of the Physician, if the Patient weary of his Distemper, should rashly and unadvisedly venture upon measures destru-tive to his Health: We indeed never deny'd you such Remedies as might with safety be given, and with advantage received; for who is weak, and I am not weak, who is offended, and I burn not? I write not these things to shame you, but as my beloved Sons I warn you. We can't imagine that his Majesty, on whose account you write, can approve your writing in this manner; for we know, and are so fully acquainted with his Honour and Integrity, that we are affur'd he would not accept of any thing that is unjust, although it were offered him; and although your Intercef-fion is in all cases of great power and preva-lence with us, yet is our Love and Assection to his Highness such, as to need neither the entreaty nor follicitation of any Persons whatever, to influence or quicken it; and as we never remember that his Highness has ever yet made his request to us, and receiv'd a denial, where it could be granted with safety to our own, and the honour of the Apostolical See, so we shall al-ways shew him the same regard and good will. Lastly, as to the present Cause, we shall give no hindrance or delay to its decision, so that when it is ready for Examination, and all the Circumstances of it have been heard, it shall be brought to a speedy Determination, and final Conclusion; being carnestly desirous to free your King and Queen, and our own selves from this most troublesom Affair. But this we must desire of his Highness, and of your Goodness, that you would not require more from us, by reason of his Majesties great deservings of us, than we can without offending God perform; and then you may af-sure your selves of all the good Offices which can be expected from us, considering the Person and Office we bear, and the Justice we are indispensa-bly bound to administer. Given at St. Peters, Rome, under the Seal of the Fisherman, Sept. 27. 1530. in the seventh year of our Pontificat.

And now Cardinal Woolfey it feems had tried 1530. his utmost Skill for recovering of the Kings fa-The Car vour; whereof also some hope was given him dinal fent in being permitted to remove to Richmond to his B-But as his Enemies suspected he would make use shoprick of this nearness, to obtain access to the King, of the should inflantly to fend him to the North. Wherein they prevail'd at length, obtaining further, that the Revenues of the Bishoprick of Winchester, and Abbey of St. Albans, as also some other places of his, forseited by the Pramunire, might be applied in part to the Kings Servants; a Penfion only out of Winchefer, being referred to the Cardinal. The Revenues alfo of his two Colleges were torn and divided, which griev'd him more than any other Affliction: Infomuch, that he wrote to the King, humbly, as on his Knees, with weeping Eyes, that the College of Oxford might fland, and importun'd Cromwel to this purpole, fince they are in a manner, faith he, Opera manuum tuarum. But Cromwel return'd him no comfort herein, faying, the King was determin'd to disfolve them, though whether he meant to restore them again, and sound them in his own Name, he knew not; but wishes him to be content, &c. Howfoever, in the traffick of thefe and other Lands, as well as Negotiating his Mafters business, Cromwel shew'd that Dexte rity, which at laft won him much Credit, both with the King and his principal Counfellors. And now the Cardinal being commanded to Park, had no excuse for retarding his Journey, but want of Means, which also he fignified to the King; who thereupon fent him a thousand March, pounds, with which and a Train, reduc'd now to about one hundred and fixty Perfons, he fet forth, giving by the way much Alms, and not a few other Arguments of Devotion, which also made him gracious with the People, who reforted from all places adjoyning, to him. And thus with flow and unwilling removes, he came to Cawood Castle near Tork, about the end of Sep-Sept. tember, 1330. where he prepar'd according to the antient Cuftom, to be inftall'd with much Ceremony about a Month after; all access to the Choire, being till then forbidden. But whether the folemnity of this Action was thought by our King to be unreasonable, and misbecoming one in Difgrace; or that otherwise the Cardinal had caft forth some discontented words, which were related again to the King; here certainly began his final Ruine. Which, as his Enemies (at this Diftance) did with more Boldness and Advantage procure, fo had he less means to re-pair himself. Insomuch, that without being able to discover or prevent their Machinations, he was forc'd to suffer all that could be either truly or (almost) faltly furmis'd against him. Neither had he other hope, but that the punishments he had already endur'd, might be accepted as an intire fatisfaction for all his Offences. And now his Stallation grew near, when the Earl of Northumberland, Warden of the Marches, withone Sir Walter Welfh, Gentleman of the Kings Nov. 8. Privy Chamber, came by the Kings command Hall to Cannood to arreft the Cardinal, wherein he learned us'd that Diligence and Secrefie, that he had in 21'e's plac'd his Guards in the Hall, before any escapid Northons to advertise the Cardinal thereof. Neither did berland. he, at the Earls coming up Stairs, receive him in other terms than those of a Gueft, till entring into a private Chamber together, the Earl in a low and troubled voice arrefted him of High Treafon. The difmayed and penfive Cardinal stay'd a while before he answer'd, but at last recovering his Spirits, demanded the fight of the Earls Com miffion, protefting that otherwife he would not obey; urging further, that he was a Mem-Vol. II. U 2 ber of the College of Cardinals at Rome, and fol exempt from all Princes Jurisdiction. But while the Earl reply'd, that he might not shew his Commission, Sit Walter Welft, who had now arrested Doctor Augustine the Cardinals Physician, comes in, and confirms what the Earl had faid. The Cardinal believing (by this time) that they were in good earnest, yields to Sir Walter Welsh, as the Kings Servant, and not to the Earl; to whom he faid he would not fubmit himfelf, before Which he was better fatisfied of his Authority. whether he did out of stubbornness to the Earl, who had been heretofore educated in his House, or out of despight to Mistress Anne Bolen, who (he might conceive) had put this affront upon him, in finding means to employ her antient Sutor to take revenge in both their Names, doth not appear to me by my Author. Howfoever, he protested he was no way faulty in his Allegiance.

Doctor Augustine (whole Offence yet doth not appear to me) was dispatch'd to London, in the posture of a Traitor, his Legs tied to his Horse. But the Cardinal had some Respite; though yet commanded to prepare for his Journey; which he began at length in that deliberate manner, that if he remov'd flowly before from the King, he mov'd now more flowly to him. Infomuch that had not the Earl of Shrewsbury, to whom (being the Steward of the Kings Houshold) the Earl of Northumberland was commanded to deliver him, till the Kings further pleafure were known, told him, that the King commanded he should be us'd kindly, as one whom he highly favour'd; it is probable, that the afflicted Cardinal would have fallen under the burthen of his own Griefs. Turthermore, the Earl affur'd him on the Kings part, that, though his Highness could do no less than put him to his Trial, yet that it was more for the fatisfying of fome Perfons, than out of mistrust of his Traiterous doings. And thus at Sheffield Castle, he Falls fick flaid a Fortnight, when a Wind-Colick, which ended in a Dysentery, took him. In which flate, Sir William Kingston, Captain of the Kings Guard, and Constable of the Tower, attended with twenty-four Yeomen of the Guard (all of them formerly Servants to the Cardinal) did find him. So that, notwithflanding the many Inconragements of the Earl, seconded by Sir William Kingfon (who on his Knees faluted him) the Cardinal remain'd ftill fick and comfortlefs. Neither did it avail him, that Sir William Kingston (on the Kings part) gave him many gracious words, adding furthermore, that he should make no more hast than stood with his Health and Convenience. For the Cardinal became still more and more dejected. Notwithstanding, as he confider'd that delay would but argue Guil-tiness, so he proceeded in his Journey the best Nov 27. he could, till he came to Leicefter Abbey, where a Feaver, complicate with his former Difease, feifing on him, he languish'd, not without manifest signs of his End. Being thus upon his Bed,

> Ipake to this effect: Had I ferv'd God as diligently as I have done the King, he would not have given me over in my gray Hairs; but this is my just Reward. Notwithstanding, I pray se commend me most bumbly to the King, desiring bim to call to remembrance all matters that have past betwint us, and specially about Queen ka-tharine, and then shall his Grace know whether I have Mended him. He is a Prince of Royal Courage; but cathor than he will want or mile any port of his Will bervant; as hoping thereby to afpire to the Pa-or Pleafine, he will endamage the loss of one half of pacy, whereof (as the factious times then were) his Realm. For, I affire you, I have often kneeled he feem'd more capable than any, had he not discharge him of all Trials, but that before God, before him, sometimes the space of three hours, to per-suade him from his Will and Appetite, but could ne-ver dissuade him from it. Therefore Master Kings fton, I wann you, if ever you be of his Council (as for your Wisdom you are meet) that ye be well assured and advised what you put in his Head, for you shall never put it out again. After which words (as Cavendish hath them) he began an Exhortation to take beed of the Luthcrans, by the example of those of Bohemia, lest they should likewise subvert the Secu-lar Power. But as in the profecuting of this discourse his Speech fail'd him, fo did his Breath prefently after, infomuch that he died, and was HisDeath; buried there in the Abby Church, Nov. 30. before day. And not, where he had begun a Mo-nument for himself, long fince, (wherein as ap-pears by our Records, he had not omitted his own Image) which one Benedetto, a Statuary of Florence, took in hand 1524. and continued till 1529. receiving for fo much as was already done 4250 Ducats. The defign whereof was fo glorious, that it exceeded far that of Henry VII. Nevertheless, I find the Cardinal, when this was fi-nish'd, did purpose to make a Tomb for Henry VIII, but dying in this manner, King Henry made use of so much as he sound fit, and call'd Thus did the Tomb of the Cardinal partake the fame fortune with his College, as being affum'd by the King; both which yet remain still unperfect. The news of the Cardinal's Death being brought to our King, did fo much afflict him, that he wish'd it had cost him twenty thou-fand pounds upon condition he had liv'd. Howbeit he omitted not to enquire of about one thou-fand and five hundred Pounds, which the Cardinal had lately got, without that the King could imagine how. So that, till it appear'd he borrow'd it of divers Persons, he might perchance fuspect it to be the remainder of some of his ancient Acquifitions.

Sir William Kingfon came again to comfort him, but the Cardinal, finding now that Death would

And thus concluded that great Cardinal. A His Cha-Man in whom Ability of Parts, and Industry ractor. were equally eminent, though, for being employ'd wholly in ambitious ways, they became dangerous instruments of Power in active and mutable times. By thefe Arts yet he found means to govern not only the chief affairs of this Kingdom, but of Europe; there being no Potentate, which, in his turn, did not feek to him; and as this procur'd him divers Pentions, fo, when he acquainted the King therewith, his manner was, fo cunningly to diffullige that Prince who did fee him laft, as he made way thereby oftentimes to receive as much on the other fide. But not of Secular Princes alone, but even of the Pope and Clergy of Rome he was no little courted; of which therefore he made especial use. while he drew them to fecond him on most occasions. His Birth being otherwise so obscure and mean, as no Man had ever flood fo fingle: for which reason also, his chief endeavour was not to displease any great Person, which yet could not fecure him against the divers Pretenders of that time. For asall things pass'd through his hands, fo they who fail'd in their Suits generally hated him, all which, though it did but exasperate his ill Nature, yet this good Refultance follow'd, that it made him take the more care to be Just; whereof also he obtain'd the Reputation in his publick hearing of Causes. For as he lov'd no body, so his Reason carried him. And thus he was an useful Minister of his King, in all Points, where there was no quetli-on of differving the Roman Church; of which (at what price foever) I find he was a zealous on the Road to

Nov 9

fo immoderately affected it. Whereby also it was not hard to judge of his Inclinations. That Prince, who was ableft to help him to this Dig-nity, being ever prefer'd by him, which there-fore was the ordinary Bait by which the Empeperor and French King one after the other, did catch him. And, upon these terms, he doubt-ed not to convey vast Treasures out of this Kingdom, especially unto Rome, where he had not a few Cardinals at his Devotion. By whose help, though he could not obtain that Supreme Dignity he fo paffionately defir'd, yet he prevail'd himself so much of their favour, as he got a kind of absolute Power in Spiritual matters at home. Wherewith again he fo ferv'd the Kings turn, as it made him think the less of using his own Authority. One error feem'd common to both, which was that fuch a multiplicity of Offices and Places were invefted in him. For as it drew much envy upon the Cardinal in particular, fo it derogated no little from the Regal Authority, while one Man alone feem'd to exhauft all. Since it becometh Princes to do like good Hufbandmen when they fow their Grounds, which is, to featter, and not to throw all in one place. He was no great Dissembler, for so qualified a Person; as ordering his businesses for the most part so cautiously, as he got more by keeping his word than by breaking it. As for his Learning, (which was far from exact) it confifted chiefly in the Subtilities of the Thomists, wherewith the King and himfelf did more often wea ry than fatisfie each other. His Style in Miftives was rather copious than eloquent, yet ever tending to the Point. Briefly, if it be true (as Polydore observes) that no Man ever did rise with fewer Virtues, it is as true, that few that ever fell from fo high a place had leffer Crimes objected against him. Though yet Polydore (for being at his first coming into England committed to Prison by him, as we have said may be suf-pected as a partial Author. So that in all pro-bability he might have substituted longer, when either his Pride and immenfe Wealth had not made him obnoxious, and suspected to the King, or that other than Women had oppos'd him: Who as they are vigilant and close Enemies, fo for the most part, they carry their businesses in that manner, they leave fewer Advantages a-gainft themselves, than Men do. In conclusion, as I cannot affent to those who thought him happy for enjoying the untimely Compassion of the People a little before his End, fo I cannot but account it a principal Felicity, that during his favour with the King, all things fucceeded better than afterwards, though yet it may be doubted whether the Impressions he gave, did not occasion divers Irregularities which were obferv'd to follow. General.

I will return now a while to the business of the Emperor at Augsburg, where (by his Command) the General Diet was appointed the eighth of Awil, 1530. Cardinal Campetus being employ'd for these Businesses on the Popes behalf. The Emperor coming thither in the beginning of June, the first Point resolv'd, was, that until Controversies in Religion were settled, all the Preachers on both fides (fome mode-rate Perfons to be nominated by the Emperor only excepted) fhould be filene'd: Which being done, the Emperor declares, that the Caufes of calling together the Affembly were, First, the Invation of the Turk. Secondly, the Affairs of Religion; demanding their Advice and Help in matters of Religion might be first compos'd, pro- 1530. mifing afterwards to proceed unto the reft. exhorted them to obey the Emperor herein; adding further in the Popes Name, that fuch Order should be taken as Unity in Religion might be conferv'd, to the end that all might go against the Turk. Which also was spoken in fequence of the Emperors Treaty with the Pope at Bononia, where he endeavour'd nothing more, than to reconcile the Differences then in agitation in Germany. Hereupon, the Duke of Saxoof Brandenburgh, the Dukes of Lunchburgh, the Landstrave and others, defir'd the Emperor to receive in Writing the Confession of their Faith, (call'd from this Diet, Confessio Augustana) which Proteteam a from this Diet, Confello Augustiana) which Preter the Emperor at last granted; admitting after flasting wards the Confession of Straiburg, Constante, Lyn-Gonstell, dany, Memingen, and some other great Towns, on of who following Zmightu rather than Lutber, diff-Faith. Fer'd in some Points. Whereupon, advice believe them with the straiburg that the straiburg the straiburg that the stra ing taken with Campejus, what was to be done, it was determin'd, that some able Persons of the Romanifts should, by way of Confutation, return a written Answer hereunto, accompany'd with a strict Command of the Emperors to obey it. But this again, was mitigated, and the Reasons at last examin'd on both sides. The Resultance whereof (among the more fober) was, that fince they agreed on fo many Points, their chief labours should be not to make any Schism for the rest; since it could not be deny'd, but some things requir'd Reformation. But the more heady fort, on either fide, would not acquiefce fo, requiring an absolute affent to their several Opinions; infomuch that they kindled in their Disputations against each other. The Duke of Saxony (particularly) demanding, that the Anfwer to their Confession might be given to them in Writing, which yet was not fuddenly approvid by the Emperor; though at laft finding no other way to avoid Tumult, he granted their Requeft, on this Condition, that they fhould not Print or Publish the faid Answer. Wherewith some were so discontented, that they return'd home, as thinking it not enough to enjoy their particular Conficience, unless they disputed it abroad, and instructed others. At last, in August, Aug. 6. 1530. feven Perfons were appointed on each fide to determine Controversies, of which two should be Persons of Quality, two Lawyers, and three Divines. Whereupon the Romanists took the Bishop of Augsburgh, and Henry Duke of Brunswick, two Lawyers, and Hinpinus, Eccius, and Cochleus, Divines. The other fide choosing George Duke of Dipute Brundenburgh, John Frederick of Saxony, two Law-the Protegres, and Melanéthon, Brentius, and Schnepfur, Rants and Divines. But these not agreeing sufficiently Carlo-(though coming somewhat nearer that they are lieks-at this present) Melandhen with two Lawyers, and Eccins with two others were permitted to decide the business. But because the Protestants thought they had yielded already, to as much as was possible for them with safety of Conscience, the business was remitted again to a greater number. To which courfe yet the Proteftants would not condescend, but desir'd a course should be taken for preserving of Peace till a General Council were call'd. The Emperor finding things thus protracted, labours to divide the Chiefs, betwixt Threats and Promifes, as each was most obnoxious; writing notwithstanding to the Pope (as I find by the Spanish Histoboth; which that they might perform with left confusion, he commanded their feveral Propositions to be put in Writing and read. Whereupton the Reform'd Princes made instance, that the proposition of the Reform'd Princes made instance, that the proposition of the Reform'd Princes made instance, that the proposition of the proposition of the Reform'd Princes made instance, that the proposition of the Reform'd Princes made instance, that the proposition of the Reform'd Princes made instance, that the proposition of the Reform'd Princes made instance, that the proposition of the Reform'd Princes made instance, that the proposition of the Reform'd Princes made instance, that the proposition of the Reform'd Princes made instance, the Princes made instance, the Princes made instance, the Princes made instance in the Princes made instance in the Princes made instance in the Princes made in the Pr

Dyet at Augl-

Skid. l. 7

1530. not also to write to the College of Cardinals for this purpose : Adding further, for a Morive, that divers Princes (in which our King alfo concurr'd) agreed in the same request; as judging it necessary, not only for the cause abovemention'd, but even for the Popes proper Con-fervation. He required also the dispatches usual for making his Brother Ferdinand King of the Romans. Laftly, he defir'd permission to fell the Ornaments and Goods of the Churches in Italy and Germany, or at least to have the fourth part of the Ecclefiaftical Revenues, it being, as he faid, for the defence of the Common Faith. Which coming, at last, to the Princes notice, was so fuspected, that they oppos'd it. So that, though otherwise they were averse enough from the Roman Church, yet, whether out of the danger they forefaw of putting fo much Money into the Emperors hands, or that otherwife they would make themselves necessary, they vehemently im-Aug. 18. pugn'd it. Era[mus understanding now what was doing, writes to Campejus a Monitory Letter, concluding, that as affairs then flood, it was better fuffer, than to make War against the Lutherans; supposing perchance, no Peace so devoid of Religion, as a Civil War. The Emperor finding matters thus discompos'd, calls the Princestogether, promifing that a Council should be call'd, as foon as the place might be agreed; upon Condition they would keep Peace in the mean while, and the Religion antiently profeffed. But the Protestants, affirming that theirs was the antient Religion, thank'd the Emperor for the rest, desiring only the Council might be pious and free. The Emperor not fatisfied thus, would needs difpute himfelf a while (which the Spanish say he did with that eagerness that he Sandon drew his Dagger;) but neither this prevail'd. So that, for a Conclusion, instead of making an amicable accord, he publish'd a rigorous Decree; Commanding the practice of the Antient Religion, and Ceremonies, and that the Protestants every where should permit the Romanists the use thereof, denouncing fevere punishments to those which obey'd not; Howbeit, he promis'd, within fix Months to obtain from the Pope fufficient Authority for calling a Council the year following. In the mean time, that Peace should be kept with all those who subscrib'd to this Decree; who also, and no other, might be admitted to fit as Judges in the Imperial Chamber. The Protestants now considering, that it was impossible to come to an exact decision of the points controverted, and being offended withal disconthat the Emperor denied them a Copy of this tent. Decree, took their leaves somewhat abruptly, and return'd; whereupon the Emperor (intending chiefly the fafeguard of Germany against the Turks) commanded the other Princes attendance. From whom he demanded Money, towards the War; which as few denied (to their Powers) fo the Agents for the Duke of Saxony, and other Protestants offer'd freely to contribute their Parts, when they might but enjoy Peace, and the exercise of their Religion till the above-mention'd Council was call'd. But the Emperor, not thus contented, infifled still on his Decree; and the rather that the prime Doctors of the Reformed which were many) could not agreeamong themfelves, concerning the Lords Supper, and some other Articles. The consequence whereof being not difficult to foresee, the Duke of Saxony employ'd Martin Bucer to reconcile them; who Neither also had brought them near to a head. was rhere other impediment, but that fingularity they affected in their feveral Opinions. Which yet proved to the detriment of Religion. For had they all, who agreed on a Reformation, agreed fufficiently among themselves, it is probable their Doctrine would have been more generation. rally imbrac'd. But as the Romanifts took this cil defir'd occasion to brand the Reform'd, so they again by the regarding more their Reputation (ingag'd to Emperor. their Auditors in the Pulpit, or publick Writing) than an Unity and Peace of Religion, did by degrees rather violently confirm their own Affertions, than any way retract them. So that Germany now labour'd under the terrors, and difficulties which their feveral Teachers impos'd on them. In which state of things yet the Re- Meet at form'd Princes and Cities, for preventing fur- Smallcaid, ther Inconveniences, agreed together to meet by and conthemselves, or Deputies, at Smaleald, about the defensive end of Decemb. (at the same time that the Em-League. peror having concluded the Diet at Augsburgh (19 Novemb.) had appointed all the Electors to Nov. 19. meet at Collen (Decemb. 29.) concerning the choo- Dec. 22. fing a King of the Romans. And here a defen-Dec. 24 five League being made by the Protestants, they thought sit to signific it to the Emperor; and together to declare certain objections against the pretended Election. Notwithstanding which, the Emperor proceeds to make his Brother Ferdinand King of the Romans, Jan. 5. 1531. which Jan. 5. also being advertis'd to the Confederate Protestants, John Frederick Duke of Saxony manifested the Election imperfect and defective. Not with-out the advice certainly of Francis; who as he had his defigns that way, fo he endeavour'd nothing more than to draw a Party to him; giving order, in the mean while, to unite and incorporate Bretaigne to France, upon condition that the eldest Son should always quarter the Arms thereof with those of Dauphine. And in these terms stood the affairs of Germany in the end of 1530. which I have deliver'd with the more particularity, for that the first manifest separation from the Roman Church began here, there being little elfe material in regard of England that a Dispatch of the fifteenth of fully 1530.) has July 15.] ving certified George Duke of Saxony, of his intentions concerning his Divorce, was much comforted and applauded by him. I shall conclude Odob. st. this year with rwo great Intundations; one of Novemb-Tiber in Rome, and the other of the Sea in the Low-Countries; which were very damageable; shortly after which follow'd the death of the two great Ladies who made the Treaty of Cambray. Madam Margarite, Aunt to the Emperor, depart- Nov. 10. ed first, who having been propos'd in Marriage Santov. to our Henry VII. (when she was then about twenty seven years of Age) and afterwards thought of it a little with Charles Brandon, died 1512in the 52 year of her Age, with the Reputation in the $2 year of her Age, with the responsition of governing the Low-Comprise with much difcretion for the space of 23 years. The News Duth and whereof being brought the Emperor, made this order businesses, to come to garrie and the Burial; which being perform'd with much Louis. Solemnity, he substituted his Sister Doma Maria, (Widow of the late unfortunate King of Huntary) in her place. Madam Lauise, Mother of Sept. 22. gary) in her place. Madam Louife, Mother of Sept. 22.

Francis, died thortly after, (for whom our King tept a folemn Obfequie) a Lady from whom France receiv'd many good, and not a few ill Offices. For if she govern'd wifely, during the Kings Captivity, and again procur'd both his and her Grand-childrens delivery; the was rhought also out of some particular despight to Bourbon to have given him the first causes of Disconrentment: And to have occasion'd in part the loss of the Dutchy of Milan. Our King during these great affairs of Christendom, resolving his Parliament should continue, caus'd it to fit again, Jan. 6. 151%. Where That Jan. 6. thefe Laws were enacted.

Protethance Diet in ment.

That, because much Wooll was imploy'd to uses not so beneficial to the Kingdom, and sometimes transported by Strangers, it was Decreed that none should buy Wooll in some principal Shires (to the number of twenty-eight) but those who would make Cloth or Yaru thereof, and that Strangers should not buy any till the Purification of our Lady. But this being a Law that might likewife have its inconveniency, was continued only for ten years, as it had been in fome former Kings times. Alfo a Law was made against Exactions on Apprentices by Mafters, Wardens, &c. And this was beneficial for poor Men, who were not able to put their Children to learn Occupations without paying extraordinary Sums. A remedy also was taken for repairing of decay'd Bridges, and Highways, and the manner of raising the Money (which before was uncertain) fet down. The carrying over of Horses, Mares, Geldings, also was forbidden upon a penalty to all places but Calair. Moreover, Denifons, notwithstanding their Priviledges, were order'd to pay such Culoms as they paid before. For which purpose the Officers and Ministers of Cities and Boroughs, &c. where such Cultoms, &c. were due, were commanded to fet up a Table in some open place, containing the particulars of them. Which Act yet was not extended to the Merchants of the Stilliart (call'd then Theutonici.) Together with which, it was provided, that the Tables touching Scavage to be fet up at London, should be first view'd and examin'd by the Chancellor, and Treasurer in England, the President of the Kings Council, the Lord Privy Seal, and Lord Steward, and the two chief Justices; or by four of them at least, and by them subscrib'd. And this was for preventing of the fecret exactions of Tolls by Mayors, Sheriffs, &c. upon Wares to be fold within their Precincts. A Law was made also against Egyptians, who under pretence of telling Fortunes, got Money and Credit among the more ignorant fort. And whereas fome Penal Statutes were made heretofore against Strangers who were Handicrasts-Men; it was declar'd, that the faid Strangers, being Bakers, Brewers, Chirurgeons, and Scriveners were exempted, and not taken to be Handicrafts-men. And, because the abuse of taking Sanctuary, and flying to hallowed places was great about this time, infomuch that many Čriminals, finding Refuge and Protection in them, did there abjure the Realm, and fo went into foreign Parts, by which means they difcover'd the fecrets of the State, to the great pre-judice thereof. And whereas also, when they were to be tried before the Judges in the Circuits, they would plead they were taken out of fome Sanctuary or Hallowed place, and Justice thereby delaid; divers good orders were taken to remedy these Inconveniencies. Which yet I mention not at large; because they, together with the use of Sanctuaries, were at length wholly antiquated, and abolish d. And now the business of Pramunire, into which the whole Clergy was faid to fall by supporting the power Legantine of the Cardinal, having fully been debated by the Kings Council Learned, and refolv'd against them; (whereupon also they were brought to the Kings Bench:) It was agreed in their Convocation-House, to deliver a Petition to the King. Here then the first question was, in what be the Rule of Faith. But when they found form to make it; the Title of Ecclefice & Cleri Anglicani Protector & Supremum Caput, was by tive Inflitution, they were call'd Innovators, and Archbishop of Comerbury said, One tacet Consintive videtur; whereto one answerd, Inaque tacemus Omnes. But at last this Clause being added, omners. But at fait this change treing attact, quantum per Chrift legem licet, nine Bishops, (whereof fon Fisher Bishop of Rechester was one) and fifty-two Abbots and Priors consented thereunto, as also the major part of the Lower-House, and particularly Stephen Gardiner. Being thus agreed on the Proem, they petition d the King, that he would accept the Sum of one hundred thousand pounds of the Province of Canterbury (eighteen thousand eight hundred forty pounds, And pay being afterwards given by the Province of York 1100 in lieu of all Punishments: They promising, for pour the future, to make no Constitution, or execute any, without the Kings leave. All which the King graciously accepting, granted them a Pardon for all offences against the Statutes of Provisors, Provisions and Pramunire, and all other Penalties, and Forfeitures, except Treafon, Murder, and Robbery. But when this Act having pals'd the Lords, came to the Lower-House, the Commons, not knowing how far this might concern them, made fome difficulty till themfelves were included, which being related to the King, he gave them a check, faying, that was not the way to exempt themselves. Whereupon the The King Lower-House, becoming fensible of the Kings checks the displeasure, and their own danger, humbled Com-themselves in that fort, that the King granted mons. them a Pardon likewise.

Shall begin the foreign business of this year, of the Romans at Air, January the 11th, on whom Jan. 21 it was thought, the Emperor his Brother did confer this Dignity, that he might the better eafe himself from the troubles of Germany, which now appear'd in fo many kinds, and places, that his Council in Spain writ a Letter, exhorting him to leave those parts, and return. To which al- June :8. fo conduc'd that Ferdinand had receiv'd the year Sandow. before, the Crown of Robemia, fo that he now enabled to fustain the dignity of of that Charge; to the which I find also the Duke of Bavaria aspir'd. Howbeit as this was done by the Emperors fole Authority (and without those formalities anciently us'd) it was not every where allow'd for authentical. So that it was thought fit an Imperial Mandate should be fent forth every where in Germany to obey Ferdinand. Together with which the Duke of Saxony, and the Protestants were required to affish in a War against the Turks. For which also all Military preparations were made. But whether the Prorestants doubted lest this should be intended against them, or that otherwise they thought all hope of reconciling differences in Religion to be vain, they prepar'd to defend themselves. They would indeed have been glad to see some general and moderate Reformation. But as those they call'd the most erroneous points of the Roman Clergies Faith, prov'd to be their most profitable and commodious Doctrines, the Romanifts fighting for them, tanquam pro aris & focis, all accord was adjudg'd defperate: Notwith-ftanding which, neither would they have broken those necessary Bonds of Charity, (which Religion should strengthen) or liv'd under other name than that of Catholick, when the Romanifts would have allow'd the ancient Creed to that, for reducing divers things to their Primi-Together with Cromand, came in and perfuaded them to approve it; but they being filent, the Accommodation, but advis d how to obtain a beginning of the memory of the Kings Council, together with Cromand, came in and perfuaded them to approve it; but they being filent, the

The Clerv falls remuire.

May 3.

fune.

1521. benign Cenfure of their actions abroad. fore, they fent feveral Letters to our King and Francis, dated 16th of February, 1531. from Smalcold, reciting what had formerly past at Worms, and Angsburg, betwixt the Emperor and them;

tolier for beld till a General Council were summered, but that council they were such, as they could not with any sofety of toey were Juch, as they could not with any Jofety of Conficience admit; concluding with a request, that their goal Offices with the Emperor might be interposed for the Convecction of a pions and free Council, out of all the parts of the Christian World; which also the Emperor had promised. But before the several anfweis of these Princes were return'd, the Emrecer, doubting the confequences of this Affembly, requires again their Affithance againft the Imk. To which the Princes reply'd, that before themselves had fearily given for Peace, it was unfoofinable to grant belp againft others. Which being privately advertised to the French King, he left a while his Amourettes, to which he was now much addicted, and fludied nothing more than how to make some advantage of the Division. For the prefent yet he return'd this answer only to the Princes, dated 21 April, 1531. That he diffed Peace and a General Council, and was glad to April 21 under frand they inclined that way; only that they must tike care of cheofing a fecure and indifferent place, for the Convocation thereof. And for how much be effected then, he faid they might gather by this, that during his Har with the Emperor, all free elects, and Intercute was remitted them. Our King allo and Intercense was permitted them. Our King also by his Letters, of Mry the third, writ, that be was glad to understand their Design was to conserve was gua to unavigana incir Degen was to concrete the ancient Religion, and to core only the Difeases even into it. Therefore, that they floudd especially take beed of these who desir'd to Innovate, bringing in parity of Degrees and Persons, and making the Magistrate contemptible. Of whom he could not but take notice, tenterprise. Of hisom he could not take to the firm of them beging come out of Germany to his Reshm; Concluding, that he defir'd a Council, and that he would mediate with the Emperor for them.

The Princes thus animated, protest against the Coronation of Ferdinand, as being done in an un-due manner, preparing withal to defend themfelves. Which being related to the Swifs, made them defire to enter into the Confederacy. But the Duke of Saxony refus'd; alledging, that fince they differ'd about the Lords Supper, they could not fafely accept their help and friendship, lest ill should happen to them, as to those (m serietura testatur) qui muniendi sui causa cujusque mod. præssidiis usi sunt. For, as the Scriptures began then commonly to be read, fo out of the literal fense thereof, the manner of those times was, promiscuously to draw Arguments, for whatsoever in matter of State or otherwife was to be done. Infomuch, that the text which came neareft the point in question, was taken as a decision of the business; to the no little detriment of their Affairs: The Scriptures not pretending yet to give regular Instructions in those Points. But this is so much less strange, that the year preceding, the Scriptures (heretofore not permitted to the view of the People) were now translated May 3. in divers Languages, and into English, by Tindal, Foy, and others, though, as not being warrant-Translated by the Kings Authority they were publickly on of the burnt, and a new and better Translation promised to be fet forth, and allow'd to the People. It being not thought fit by our King, that under what pretence or difficulty foever, his Subjects should be defrauded of that, wherein was to be found the Word of God, and means of their Salvation. Howbeit not a few Inconveniences were observed to follow. For as the clear and necessary parts thereof from the ob-feure and accessory; and as again taking the feveral Authors to be equally inspired, they did equally apply themselves to all; they fell into of having many dangerous Opinions: Little caring how the B.Mc they liv'd, fo they underflood well, bringing in the Religion thus into much Irrefolution and Convulgar troversie. While sew Men agreeing on the same Interpretation of the harder places, vexed each others Conscience, appropriating to themselves the gift of the Spirit. Whereof the Roman Church. (much perplext at first with these Desections) did at last prevail it felf; as affuming alone the power of that Decision; which yet was us'd more in favour of themfelves, toan such an Analogy, as ought to be found in so perfect a Book. So that few were fatisfied therewith, but fuch as, renouncing their own Judgment, and fubmic-ting to theirs, yielded themselves wholly to an Implicit Faith; in which, though they found an apparent eafe, yet as, for justifying of them-felves, the Authority of their Belief, was deriv'd more immediately from the Church, than the Scripture, not a few Difficulties were intro-duc'd, concerning both: While the more fpeculative fort could not imagine, how to hold that as an infallible Rule, which needed humane help to vindicate and support it; nevertheless, as by frequent reading of the Scripture at this time, it generally appear'd what the Roman Church had added or alter'd in Religion, fo many recover'd a just liberty, endeavouring to-gether a Reformation of the Doctrine and Man-ners of the Clergy, which yet, through the ob-flinacy of fome, succeeded worse, than so pious

The former proceedings of King Henry, being Intentions deferv'd.

advertis'd to the Pope, made him fear a total defection in our King. Infomuch, that at Rome they studied nothing more than how to retain him in his antient Devotion; fome Arguments whereof have been formerly mention'd. To the furthering of which intention also it did not a little conduce, that he had taken fome diftaft against the Emperor; who, being desir'd to appoint certain Judges to determine all differences betwixt him and the Duke of Ferrara, concerning Modem and Reggio, choice fuch as fentencid on the Dukes behalf; which so incensid the Pope, that he fell off from the Emperor (as will appear hereafter.) For which reason also it is probable, that our King might have clos'd with him, and receiv'd fome fatisfaction in the affair of the Divorce, had not his Parliament, at this time, as is above-faid, concurr'd to the Jan 6. fetting up of the Regal Authority in Ecclefiaftical Affairs. To whom therefore he thought fit to communicate what his Agents, in Italy and other places, had done, concerning that fo much controverted point of the lawfulness of his Marriage. Whereupon, the Parliament yet fitting, the Lord Chancellor, accompanied with Doctor Stokelley Bishop of London, and divers other Lords Spiritual and Temporal, came into the Lower-Spiritual and Lemporal, came into the Lower-Houfe 31th Mart 31, 32, and told them; That Mart 31, they could not be ignorant, how the King, having TheClamarvied his Brothers Wife, was roubled in Conficence, cellors and therefore had fent to the moft kenned Universities speech to in Christendem, to be refelved in that Point; and mons at the Commons at the Conficence of th in Conferencem, to be rejuited in that turn 5 cm mons a namely had imployed the Bilhop of London there pre-bout the fent, for this purpose. Not, yet, but that his own Divorce. Universities of Oxford and Cambridge could have sufficiently decided the Point, but that he might the more amply satisfie himself and the World. Whereupon Sir Bryan Tuke was commanded to take out, and read the Determinations of the Universities of Paris, Orleans, Angiers, Bourges in Berry, and People did not fufficiently separate the more Tholonfe in France, and of Bononia and Padaa, in Lurnt.

Hall.

1531. Italy, who all agreed, in declaring the Marriage unlawful. After which, above a hundred Books of feveral Doctors, (whereof Doctor Crammers was one) confirming the fame Opinion, were exhibited. The perusing of which yet (the day being far fpent) was referr'd to a further time. As also the Resolution of our two Universities (brought after the rest to our King,) which because Sanders calls in a fort Surreptitious, I shall relate out of some Original pieces which I have feen. To the University of Oxford, the Bishop of Lincoln was imploy'd, where, neither eafily, nor by general Vote, there past this Decree 4 April, 1530.

April 4. 1530

Resolution therein Nos Johannes Cotisford bujus alma Universitatis on therein Oxenia Commissarius, authoritate & consensu bujus totius venerabilis Convocationis, declaramus, deof Oxford. cernimus, & definimus, majorem partem omnium Do-Storum, Magistrorum, tam Regentium quam non Regenium, fingularum facultatum bujus alma Universi-tatis Oxin. concesss consensum pariter & assensum sum prabuisse, quod Determinatio, Definitio & Responsio ad Quastionem nobis ex parte Serenissimi Domini Regis nuper propositam, per illos Triginta tres Declores & Baccalaureos, ad id per facultatem Theologie nuper elecios, sive per majorum partem corum faci-enda, habeatur, censeatur, & reputetur pro Desinitione Determinatione & Responsione totius bujus Universitatis; Et quod liceat Dominis Commissario & Procurateribus Sigillum commune Universitatis literis super prafata determinatione per eofdem concipiendus, apponere.

> W E John Cotisford, Commillary of the University of Oxford, by the Authority, and with the consent of the whole Venerable Convocation, do declare, determine and adjudge, that the Major part of all the Doctors, Matters, as well Regents as Non-Regents of all faculties in this famous University, have agreed and given their Consent and Affent, that the Determination, Refolution, and final Answer to the Question lately propounded to us by his most Excellent Majesty the King, which shall be given by the thirty three Doctors and Bachelors in the faculty of Divinity, chosen for that purpose, or by the Major part of them, be esteemed and accounted the December of the Major part of them. counted the Determination, Resolution and final Answer of this whole University, and therefore that it may be lawful for the Commissary and the Proctors to affix the Common Seal of the University to the Decree, which shall be made in pursuance to their said Determination.

> Which Copy though blurr'd (upon what occafion I know not, for it is not probable it should be intended to the King in that manner) was dispatcht the day following, as the Act of the University, by the Bishop of Lincoln. As for the University of Cambridge, I find Stephen Gardiner, and Edmard Fox were employ'd; Where, not withflanding the Kings Letters, and the diligence us'd on their part, not a few difficulties did occur. Infomuch that it was first deny'd, then the Voices on both fides were brought even, and at last, (some absenting themselves) it was agreed, that the Question should be disputed by twenty eight Delegates, and that two parts of three flould determine it; which accordingly was done in favour of the King, by the Vice-Chancellor, and the two Proctors, ten Doctors, and fifteen others, whose Names are extant in the same Record. Which aversness, more than in foreign Universities, whether it should be attributed to the power of the Pope in England, or to their particular scrupulosity of Conscience, is guments drawn (in favour of the Divorce) out 1531 of our Records. First the place in Leviticus, Chap. xviii. Vers. xvi. Thou shalt not uncover the nakedness of thy Brothers Wife. Secondly, St. Basil's Opinion, tending this way, where he Basil F. A. faith, that he shall be Excommunicated that Mar-197rieth his Wifes Sifter. Thirdly, because two Epiftles, transcrib'd out of the Popes Registers. and fent into England, by Doctor Stokefley (whereof one was of Gregery, the other of Innocent the Third) do profefs, that the Pope cannot diffence against the Law of God, the particular case being then a Marriage. Fourthly, that geanting the Pope can dispence, ex urgentissima causa, with that which is ex jure divino, (which yet Divines for the most part deny) there was no occasion here, fince the Peace betwixt England and Spain, (which was taken as the ground of the Breve) flood firm and intire. Lastly, that the fews themselves (for our Agents consulted with them alfo) did not hold the Law of Marrying the Brothers Wife, Deut. 25, as necessary in this time, but did often pati discalcentionem. All which be The Coming maturely considered by the Lower-House, rest the made them detest the Marriage, as our Histori-Marriage, and have it. Whereupon the King thought six alfo to prorogue the Parliament, to the intent that every Man repairing home, might fatisfie his Neighbour of these Passages; not omitting, together, to cause these foreign Determinations, to be printed and publish'd this year, as the Book Notwithstanding The K's yet extant in Print shews. which, fo far was the King from remitting any havicurto thing of his gentle behaviour to the Queen, that, the Queen had he not forborn to come to her Bed, neither could his outward favour towards her, or her fashions towards him have argued any diminution of Love; all those wonted Ceremonies, by which they fuftain'd the dignity of their place, and civilities which might imply a mutual refpect, continuing firmly on either fide. Which Holl our Historians amplifie so far, that they say he fore lamented his chance, and made no manner of Mirth or Pastime as he was wont to do; without yet that they can be thought to speak improbably, when we confider both how dear this liberty coft him, and how much it endanger'd the Succeffion. However, that he might ger'd the Succeffion. However, that he might both prevail himfelf of the occasion, and also fatisfie the doubts he had rais'd, not in his own alone, but Subjects Breafts; he fent to Queen Ka- May 21. tharine fome Lords of his Council, withing them to acquaint her with these Determinations (which alfo I find had been shewed the Pope,) and to-Hall. gether to demand of her, for quieting the Kings Conscience, and ending this business, whether the would rather refer her felf to the Judgment of four Spiritual, and four Temporal Lords in this Kingdom, or fland to her Appeal. To which the fad Queen answer'd, That her F_n -The Q ther, before be confented to ber second Murriage, refer but ther, before we conferred to her second sharrings telest bad taken the advice of Dolfers, and Clerks, subcle Case Opinion she believe d rather than any others; and that, the Pope having construid it, she wondred that any should quession it. And, whereas for quieting the Kings Conscience, you would have me put the business to eight Lords; that which I fay, is, I pray God fend his Grace a quiet Confeience. As for answer to your Majage; I pray you tell the King, I am his lawful Wife, and so will abide, till the Court of Rome determine the contents. But on King who alleded d his to the contrary. But our King, who alledg'd his Proceedings were according to the Law of God (which therefore he faid should be more insisted on, than any other Authority) fent other Meffengers, exhorting her still to conform her felf; among whom one spake to this effect: Madam,

Cambridge makes a fcruple to 1531. wing us'd all fit means to clear his own, and Subjects 1 infatisfactions, concerning the lawfulness of bis Mer-cage, yen yet continue Refractory in that violent man-ner, as you not only refuse the General Determinations 207, as yet not only regige to exceed the communities of Culrectilies, and Learned Men; but contrary to the Lawr of the Land, and the Royal Dignity, have cited his Highness to appear in the Court of Rome; wither have toole namy Admonstran you have received concerning the Danger, and Consequences hereof. been able to divert you from your Purpoles, or reduce you to Reason and your Duty. Of which therefore his Highms is so sensible, that he hath forborn of late to see your Grace, or receive your Tokens, giving you liberty further, to repair either to his Minner of Oking, or Estamsteed, or the Monastery of Bisham; for, since you were known by his Brother Prince Arthur, you cannot be his lawful Wife. To which the virtuous and forrowful Queen reply'd little more than this: That to what place forcer the removed, nothing could remove her from being the Kings Hiffs.

July 14- And here the King bid her a final farewel! for, The King from this time, being July the fourteenth, I find no more.

The King ever faw her more.

Our King being now inform'd that Italian, and other foreign Merchants brought Commodities hither, which they fold well, and then return'd the Money by Exchange to their own Country, to the exhausting of the Wealth of this Realm, and the Diminution of his Cuttoms, caus'd a Proclamation to be fet forth, that ac-Causa a Froctamation to be fer forth, that according to a branch of a Statute, Rie. 3. no Money they took here for felling their Ware, should be exchang'd to other Countries, but employ'd in the Commodities of this Realm, which (our Historians say) as long as it was observ'd, prov'd to the great benefit both of the King and Subject. And now, the Money for the Pramunire being call'd on, the Clergy, for their eafe, would have drawn the Priefts of London to Contribution, which they took fo ill, that, in outragious manner, breaking into the Chapter-House of St. Pauls, they did beat the Bilhops Servants; till the Biflop, for avciding more mif-chief, gave them his Bletting, and leave to de-part for the prefent; though fhortly after they were punish d for their Misbehaviour.

This while, the Emperor (intentive wholly to the affairs of Germany) did more calmly fuffer our kings intended Divorce; and the rather, for that it is probable the Determinations of the Univerfities above-mentioned had given him, if not Satisfaction, yet colour enough to neglect a while the profecuting this bufinefs. Especially, since at this time be might have so much use of our Kings Affiftance against the Turk; of which alto hope was given him. On the other fide Francis did by all means advance, and fet it forward; both in regard himfelf (as their Hiftorians have it) was much addicted to love-making at this time; and as that he doubted not, hereby, to keep our King at a variance with the Emperor. Against whom the offences and quarrels be had taken being not extinguish'd, he both fortified himfelf by all means, and labour d publickly to traduce even his most impartial and generous Actions. Therefore he was so far from admitting the Restitution of Milan to Francisco Sforza to be an Act of Picty, that he took it, if not as an affront to him, yet at least as a politick Introduction of one to that Dignity, who he knew could not be disposifely thereof again, without offending all Italy. So likewife the parting with the Contado of Alli (anciently belonging to the House of Orleans) to the Duke of Sa-, was thought to be no more than intereffing him in that quarrel. Furthermore, his retaining an Army in Italy, at the coft of the Confehim in that quarrel. Furthermore, his retaining an Army in Italy, at the cost of the Confederates, (but under the Command of Antonio de besides were taught, it was, if not erroneous, Leyva) was understood, not for conferring the Peace of Italy, but defending of Genuis against him. All which was fo ill taken, that Francis did Sides with not only by the entremise of Gnilliume de Bellay, the Protreat of entring a private League with the Printestants. ces of Germany, for defence of the Rights of the Empire, (violated as he conceived by the undue Election of Ferdinand) but prepar'd to fend them Succours when occasion were. Nor did his rancour against the Emperor stay here; but (if we may believe some even of his own Nation) extended it felf fo far, as fecretly, at this time, to incourage the Turk to invade the Patrimony of the House of Austria; to the no little scandal, both of his own Honour, and the Christian Religion. The Emperor, not ignorant of all these Incourable Machinations, fends segment de Balmazon to From gesthe its, to borrow Money, and to invite him to furvade the vade the nish Land, and Sea-forces for a War against the Emperor. Tink; alledging Treaties, Promifes, and many Arguments to this purpose. To which Finnis 8etsyl.4 answerd. That the Emperor had gotten lately enough from him, two Millions of Gold, which ought to fuffice. For the rest, that he was neither Merchant nor Banquer to survish Money, but a Christian Prince, that would have his part of the Honour and Danger in all brave Millions. Therefore that he would spare no forces out of his Kingdom, nor permit them to go to any place where himself did not lead them. Besides, as this Summer was far spent, he could not send his Cavalry to Austria without much incommodity, (the distance between both Coun-Turk; alledging Treaties, Promifes, and many commodity, (the distance between both Councommodity, (the diltance between bour countries being to great.) Therefore, that the Emperor should defend Germany, while himself with an Army of fifty thousand Men, would undertake to defend staly, which the Turk also menacid. And for the next year, he would be reached. dy, with the help of his good Brother, the King of England, to go to any place where it should be needful. As for his Shipping, he could least July. of all spare it; having occasion to defend the Maritime parts of France against Pirats. Which being related again to the Emperor (then at Ratisbonne,) he thought fit to publish it, thereby to make Francis more odious, though effectively he took his offer to defend Italy, to be little more than irrifion. Businesses standing thus, Mansieur de Bellay, Ambassador from the French King to the Princes, (having first conferr'd with Monsieur de Valley, Ambassador from Francis to the Emperor) absolutely concludes that Accord the Princes had formerly propos'd to his Mafter: giving by this means a perpetual cause of Jea-lousie, and Offence to the Emperor. Yet as Francis thought himfelf not ftrong enough alone, fo he implor'd our Kings affiliance; which our King alfo promis'd, by Monfieur Gilles de Pomme-Belles. raye, (French Ambaffador in England,) fending with him (at his return) fifty thousand Crowns K. Henry to be employ'd for the defence and conferva-fends tion of the Right and Priviledges of the Empire. Crowns An Enterview allo was projected betwith them to General for the year following, wherein both Kings wto affite should treat of the General Affairs, and particular features. larly what they were to do, in cafe the Turk League: should again invade Christendum. While affairs abroad pals'd thus, our Nation enjoy'd much fecurity, and quietness; so that, if contention about Religion had not hapned, vers explications of the Holy Scripture, yet many good Men labour'd to reconcile them; affirming, that whatfoever was necessary to the attaining of everlasting Happiness, was so plain-they might have thought themselves happy which though it had its beginning from the di-

Frank K. promotes the Di-burnt.

Err.

(a) Aug.

(b) Nov.

27. (c) April.

15324

Jan. 15. Reg. 23. Mar. 18.

the Clergy regu-lated.

yet unneceffary to Salvation. Howbeit, they would not deny, but divers points might be added, for the Ampliation, Conveniency, and Ornament of Religion, when they were deliver'd upon these terms, and not under those Condemnations and Penalties wherewith the more necessary parts were injoy'd. Whereupon also they concluded, that, if divers paffages in the Holy Scriptures might feem obscure, it was Gods will to have it fo, who thought not fit to reveal them otherways; as referving a full knowledge to a fecond and better Life. Yet, because divers, not content with this or any moderate Reformation, did (through the violence of their Spirits) run into those extremities, as they labour'd to draw all the Doctrine of the Roman Church into a perverse Sense; much occasion of Controversy was given; while they who endeavour'd a Peace fo little prevail'd, as, (for the most part) like those who part Affraies, they bore blows Hereticks on either side. In which doubtful times King Henry put in execution all former Laws against Heretical Perfons, and Books; whereby one Thomas Bilney, Batchelor of both Laws, declaring himself with great vehemoncy in divers Articles against the Roman Church, was (a) condemn'd to be burnt, and shortly after, for the same cause, (b) Bayfield a Priest, and (c) Bsynbam a Lawyer. The whole Narration whereof being extant in

The next year January 15th, the Parliament fate again till May 14th, where the Commons perfitting in their Grievances againt the Clergy, which they compris'd in a Book, and deliver'd by their Speaker; The King unfwer'd, He would take Advice, and bear the parties accust d freak? and then proceed to a Reformation; which follow'd in part, as appears in some Statutes of this Par-Abuses in liament. For, whereas it was usual in former times, that Clerks who committed Petty Trea-fon, Murder, or Felony, were (through a cer-tain priviledge of the Church) deliver d to their Ordinaries, who also thereupon, for lucre or other undue Motives, did suffer them to make their Purgation by fuch as nothing knew of their Misdeeds, to the great scandal of Justice; it was now enacted, that none should have the benefit of this recourse to the Ordinary, but those who were within holy Orders, and yet to find fuffi-cient Sureties for their good abearing. This Act yet not to extend to those, who being attainted of Felony, or Murder, are after admitted to their Clergy, and so deliver'd to the Ordinary. It was provided also, that Ordinaries having fuch Perfons in their Cuftody, might degrade them, and fend them to the Kings-Bench to he detain'd.

Mafter Fox, I shall mention no otherwise

It was enacted also, how Perjuries and untrue Verdicts should be punish'd. And this was to the fingular benefit of the Subject; there being no mitchiefs fo case to be done, so irreparable in their Confequence, or unlimited in their extent, as those of this kind.

And, whereas the Commission of Sewers, being about Sea-walls, Gutters, Banks, &c. and Dams, Weres, &c. in fresh Rivers, was not particularly enough fet down heretofore; it was now declar'd and interpreted. And this was much for the benefit of the Sea-Coasts, and making great Rivers Navigable.

Whereas also Statutes of the Staple were heretofore us'd only betwixt Merchant and Merchant, for fuch Merchandile of the Staple, as pass'd betwixt them; the use thereof was now permitted to others of the Kings Subjects upon certain Conditions. And this not only enlarg'd Contracts, but ftrengthned much the Sinews of Whereas heretofore the Kings Subjects were 15 ordinarily call'd by the Citations to appear, in the Arches Audience, and other high Courts of the Arch-Bishops of this Realm, to answer to many furmis'd Caufes; and that they who refus'd, were Excommunicated or Sufpended from Divine Service; it was now enacted, that none should be so cited but in certain cases declar'd in the faid Statute.

Feofments of Lands also to the use of a Church (as being little different from Mort-main) were made void.

Whereas divers, having the benefit of their Clergy, were afterwards committed to their Or dinaries, and did there break Prifon, it was now declar'd Felony.

Divers other good Statutes pass'd also this Ses fion; which yet, for being meerly legal, or li mited to certain places, are not here reci-

This year also an Act pass'd concerning Annates, or the first fruits of Bishopricks, paid usu-ally to the See of Rome, for the obtaining of Palls, Bulls, &c. The Preamble and Confideration whereof was (as I find in the Records.)
r. That great Sums of Money already paß'd out of the Kingdom that way, (being no lefs than one hundred and fixty thousand pounds steeling, fince the fecond year of Hemy VII.) Se-Records. condly, that more was like to be shortly transported, by reason many of the Bishops are Aged. Thirdly, that the first use and grant of them was for maintaining Arms against Insidels. So that it was enacted, that they should henceforth cease, and no more Money be paid to Rome to that in tent, except as is hereafter specified (viz.) left the Court of Rome should think themselves irremunerated for their pain, in making and fealing Bulls in Lead, &c. it was ordain'd, that there may be allow'd for the faid Bulls five pounds in the hundred, according to the rate of the Bishopricks clear value above all Charges. And if any Man, being chosen to a Bishoprick, and pre-fented by the King to the Pope, shall hereupon find any let or hindrance, by reftraint of his Bulls, upon convenient fuit for the fame; then he may be named and prefented by the Kings Highness to the Arch-Bishop of the Province; who fhall confecrate him; or, the faid Arch-Bishop delaying under pretence of want of Pall, Bull, &c. the Person so nam'd, shail be Consecrate, and invested by any two Bishops of the Land, whom the King shall appoint thereto; and shall be held and reputed thereafter as a compleat Bishop. But of this Act we shall speak again when we come to the 25th year of the King. For though it past the Parliament now, and the King gave his affent thereto; yet power was referred for him to annul or confirm the fame any time within two years next follow

Moreover, in this Statute, the King and his Parliament declare, that they do not intend to use any Extremity or Violence, before gentle and courteous ways have been attempted. But if it shall please the king to propose an ani-cable composition to the Pope, and his Heli-ness shall be content either to abolish or moderate those Amates; then the Composition so made, to fland firm. But if, upon the faid amicable Propositions, the Realm cannot be disburdued, and that, for the continuance of the fame, the Pope shall unjustly vex, and disquiet the King or his Subjects by any Excommunication, c Be it enacted by the Authority aforefaid, that the Kings Highnefs, his Heirs and Succeifors Kings of England, and all his Spiritual and I av Subjects of the fame, without any feruple of X2

Other Actsmade to regudry abu1532. Conscience, shall and may lawfully, to the homour of Almighty God, the increase and continuance of Vertue, and good example within this Realm, (the faid Censures, Excommunications, Interdictions, Compulsories, or any of them not-withstanding) minister, or cause to be ministred throughout this faid Realm, and all other the Dominions and Territories belonging or appertaining thereunto, all and all manner of Sacramenta, Sacramentals, Ceremonies, or other Divine Service of Holy Church, or any other thing or things, necessary for the health of the Soul of Mankind, as they heretofore at any time or times have been vertuoufly us'd or accuffom'd to do within the fame. And that no manner of fuch Cenfures. Excommunications, Interdictions, or any onares. Excommunications, interactions, or any o-ther Process or Compulsories shall by any of the Prelates, or other spiritual Fathers of this Region, by any of their Ministers or Substitutes, be at any time or times hereaster pub-lished, executed, or divulg'd in any manner of Ways.

This Act being pass'd, our King made use April 29. thereof to terrific the Pope, which also took effect; as I find by our Ambassadors Letters dated from Rome, April 29th. 1532. though together (as they were instructed from hence,) his Holiness was told by them, that our King had referv'd the whole business to his own Power and Direction; which however it appeared the Pope a while, yet as matters past afterwards, the Statute had his final confirmation, Anno 25.

Henry VIII.

Q Ksths. Shall begin this years History with the affairs of Queen Katharine; who, by her Proctor at Reme, affifted with the advice and power of the Imperialists, Negotiated puissantly with the Pope ; fo that, notwithflanding our Kings Indignation for her profecuting him in this manner, the urg'd fill the Appeal, befeeching the Pope to cite the King, by himfelf or Proctor to appear. But the Pope thought fit rather gently thus to exhort our King to take again his Wife Kathavine.

CLEMENS Pap. VII.

I he Popes persivade the K to Wife a-

Harissime in Christo fili noster, falutem 1 & Apostolicam benedictionem. pro nostra in te benevolentia, tuoq; honore & falute falsum esse cupimus, Relatum nobis cst, & à multis confirmatum, Serenitatem tuam, quæ non folum antea, verum etiam post motam litem inter te & chariffimam in Christo filiam nostram Catharinam Angliæ Reginam Illustrem, fuper validitate matrimonii inter vos Contracti, eam apud se, ut decebat, in fua Regia curia tenuerat, atque ut Reginam & uxorem habuerat, & tractaverat, à certo citra tempore cam non folum à se & sua curia, sed ctiam à Civitate seu loco suæ residentiæ separasse, alioque missiste, loco autem ejus quandam Annam in fuum contubernium, & Cohabitationem publice recepisse, eique maritalem affectum uxori tuæ debitum exhibere ; Quæ res, fili Charissime, fi modo vera est, tuq; parumper animum ab humanis affectibus collegeris, non dubitamus, quin, etiam tacentibus nobis, perspecturus sis, quam multis mobationem : Quæ omnia ita à recto & religio- 1532. fo Principe, qualem te femper habuimus, aliena funt, ut, tanquam tuæ naturæ & Confuetudini repugnantia, etfi nobis indies magis confirmantur, difficilius tamen credamus. Quid enim minus tibi, & tux probitati convenit, quam hinc apud nos, per Oratores & literas, fuper causa isluc remittenda, instare, inde te ipfum Tuo facto causa decidere? Quid simile tui, armis & scriptis olim Ecclesiam & fanctam fidem defendisse, Nunc tali facto Ecclefiam videri Contemnere? Jam vero communis falus & tranquillitas à nullo unquain nostri temporis Rege acrius quam à te custodita est, qui bellum pro Ecclesia olim susceptum, & gloriole confectum, pro communi quiete deposueris; semperque Arbiter quidam pacis & communis concordia inter Christianos Principes Conciliandæ Existimatus; Quo magis hæc nova de te audientes, admiramur fimul ac dolemus, unum hoc tuum factum, fi modo verum est, ab omni vitæ tuæ gloria & confuetudine discrepare. Quamobrem cum nec rem tantam non explorare certius, nec neglectam omittere debeamus, Hanc ad te, quasi amantis & folliciti Patris vocem præcurrere voluimus, antequam Judicis ullas partes tecum fumamus. Faciunt enim tuæ Celsitudinis dignitas, vetera tua in nos merita, nostraq; ex his erga te benevolentia, ut tecum omni re-fpectu & lenitate agere velimus, fumpta pa-rentis persona, & Judicis tantisper deposita, donce ex tuis literis conssium progrediendi capiamus. Cupimus quidem, fili, ut diximus, hæc penitus falsa esse, aut non tam aspera quam nobis referuntur, Teq; ipfum deinceps, pro tua fingulari sapientia, providere, ne cuiquam de Serenitate tua omni virtute conspicua in hoc tantum obloquendi detur occasio. Si quis enim vel ex Catholicis dolens, vel ex Hareticis gaudens audiat, te Reginam, quant in uxorem accepisti, Regumq; filiam, Casarifq; & Regis Romanorum materteram, viginti amplius annis tecum commoratam, prolemq; ex te susceptam habentem, nunc à tuo thoro & contubernio procul amovifle, aliam quoq; publice apud te habere, non modo fine ulla licentia nostra verum etiam contra nostram prohibitionem; Is profecto necesse est. ut fententiam quodammodo de optimo Principe ferat, tanquam Ecclesiam & publicam tranquillitatem parvi faciente, quod nos scimus ab intentione & voluntate tua longissime abesse; in tantum, ut si quis alius hoc idem in tuo regno audeat, quod à tua Serenitate factum dicitur, nullo modo te probaturum, sed etiam fevere vindicaturum pro certo habeamus. Quamobrem, fili, etiamfi tu rec'tifiime fentias, ut nos quidem constanter credimus, tamen caufam præbere rumoribus & scandalis non debes; hoc præfertim tempore tam calamitofo, plenoq; Hærefium, & aliarum perturbationum; ne tuum factum latius pateat ad exemplum. Sunt enim facta regum, præfertim illustrium, ficut tua Screnitas est, propofita quafi in specula, hominibus cateris ad imitandum. Nec præterea negligenda tibi est dis indigna te suerit, vel ob contemptum li-tis-pendentiæ & Judicii nostri, vel ob scanda-lum Ecclesiæ, vel ob communis pacis pertur-gum. Nec, sili, debes Serenislimes Custarem

1532. & Romanorum Regem, dictae Catharina ne- | afide Carnal Affections, and give your felf leatam gravi injuria, indecisa lite, afficere, & exinde pacem perturbare universalem, qua sola adversus imminentem nobis Turcam tuti fumus; ne scandali in Ecclesia, periculi in tota Christiana republica causam præbeas, proptereaq; Rex cœlestis à te irritatus, tantam suam erga Te benignitatem aliqua feveritatis amaritudine permifceat. Te igitur, fili, per eam, qua semper te sumus prosecuti benevolentiam, semperque, si per te liceat, prosequemur, omni studio & amore hortamur, & paterna charitate monemus, ut, si hæc vera sint, quæ tuam veterem pietatem & gloriam denigrant, tute ea corrigere velis, ipsam Catharinam Reginam ad te humaniter revocando, atq; in eo Reginæ honore, & uxoris quo decet affectu, apud te habendo: Ipsam vero Annam à publico tuo convictu & cohabitatione, propter scandalum, removendo, donec nostra sententia inter vos subsequatur. Quod nos quidem, etsi est à te debitum, tibiq; est maxime futurum honorificum, beneficii loco recepisse à tua Serenitate videbimur. Nam quod te in prislina tua voluntate erga nos, Observantiaq; erga hanc sanctam sedem, cum qua mutuis officiis & beneficiis femper certasti, conservare maxime cupimus; Summo fane cum dolore, ad ea descenderemus Juris remedia, quorum necessitatem non nostra privata contumelia, quam tibi libenter condonaremus, fed Dei omnipotentis honor, publicarque utilitatis, & tua animæ ialutis ratio ad postremum nobis, quanquam invitis, imponeret, Sicut Etiam Nuntius apud te noster hac Tua Serenitati uberius explicabit. Datum apud Sanctum Petrum fub annulo Piscatoris, die xxvo. Januarii 1532. Pont' nostri Anno Nono.

Blofius.

CLEMENT VII. Pope.

O our most dear Son in Christ, &c. Health and Apostolical Benediction. What in our tender affection towards you, for the fake ef both your Honour here, and your Salvation hereafter, we should be glad to find false has been reported to us, and by many hands contherine Dangueer in Chrift, the moje execution (24- lingular lysjaom, that no body may in this thing faid Catharine in your Palace, and livid with the have occasion to speak ill of your Astrons been so her as your Queen and Wife, as it was sitting Conspicuous. For if any Catholick to his great you should do; yet now of late you have not only removed her from your Person and Court, bear that you have now removed after off from that have banished her from the City, the usual your Bed and Presence, your Queen rehom you place of her Residence, and sent her to another Married, the Dangster of a King, the Annat least thing is her room publish to again Red of the European Ad King of the Bordyne. place, taking in her room publickly to your Bed of the Emperor, and King of the Romans, afand Conversation, a certain Lady Anne, with ter she had liv'd with you more than twenty potes, nulla te prosecutos contumelia, hac sure to think, we doubt not but that, although we were stlent herein, you would foon perceive upon bow many several accounts it is unworthy your Highness, either as it is a great contempt of our Judgment and Sentence, which you thus refuse to stay for, as it is a publick scandal to the Church, or as it is a manifest violation of the publick Peace; all which things are so contrary to the principles of a virtuous and religions Prince, as we have always effected your Highness, that though they have daily more and more been confirm'd unto us, yet we have found great difficulty to believe them as things wholly repugnant to your Nature, and perfectly contra-ry to your usage. For what can be more unna-tural to you, or less agreeable to your Integrity, on one hand, both by your Letters and by your Ambassadors, to implore our assistance in de-termining your cause, and on the other, by your actions to judge and decide it your own self? To repugnant to your Nature, and perfectly contracontemn the authority of the Church by such a proceeding, how unlike is it to the actions of him. who has so well defended by the power of the Sword, and by the strength of Argument, our most holy Faith and the Catholick Church? Surely the publick Peace and Tranquillity have by no Prince of our Age, been more carefully preserved than by you, who piously undertook a War for the Church, gloriously prosecuted it, and at length for the sake of publick peace and quiet delisted from it. from whence your Highness has been justly esteem d the Arbiter of Peace and common Concord among Christian Princes; wherefore when me hear these strange things concerning you, it raiseth both our Admiration, and encreaseth our Grief, that this one action of yours, if it be true, should cast a blemish upon the glory of your former Life and Behaviour. Wherefore as we could not but en-quire into the truth hereof more carefully, and ought not to pass by a matter of this weight with neglect, we were willing to send you this kind Admonition, as of a loving and affectionate Father, before we are forc'd to deal with you in the severer methods of an impartial Judge. The high Dignity of your Majesty, your most deser-ving Services to us, and our most tender love and affection to you, makes us choose to act to-wards you, with all respect and gentlenels in the person of a kind Parent, and so long lay aside our office as a Judge, till by your Letters we shall see what measures will be most proper for been reported to as, and of many mains con- plan jee more mengares and of many property you form'd, concerning your Highness, that although us to take. We wish, Dear Son, as we have not only before, but fince the Controversy has faid, that these things were safe, or at least not so been depending about the lawfulness of the Mariage Contrast between your self, and our most that you your self would take such care, of your dear Daughter in Christ, the most excellent Cafingular Wistom, that no body may in this thing whom you cohabit, and to whom you show that years, and had several Children by you; that conjugal Love and Assection, which is only due you have openly taken another Woman to your to your Wise, the said Queen. Which thing, Bed, not only without our License and Dispensions to fit be true, and you would lay sation, but also contrary to our express Probibi-

1532. tion; he cannot but in some measure make this judgment of the best of Kings, that he is one that little regards the authority of the Church. and nothing values the publick Peace, than which and nothing detection to the farther from your Highnesses Will and Intention; insomuch that should any one in your Kingdom dare to do this which is reported of your Highness, we surely know that you would be so far from approving, that you would most surely punish it. Wherefore, my Son, as we most certainly believe that your knowledge is rightly inform'd herein, so ought your Practice to be such, as not to give occasion to scandalous Reports; especially in these dangerous times, which so abound with Heresies, and other most grievous Calamities, lest what you do, should grow a Precedent and Example for others : For the Actions of Princes, efpecially those so Illustrious as your Highness, are looked upon as Marks and Patterns whereto others may direct their aim, and whereby they may form their Practice. Nor ought your Highness to neglect the common safety, and overlook the Peace and Tranquillity of Christendom, to which the best of Princes have never full'd to pay, as in Duty bound, a regard. Nor ought you, my Son, to offer this injury to the most Serene Princes, the Emperor and the King of the Romans, the said Queen Catharine's Nephews, who have never given you offence, by thus proceeding before your Cause is determin'd, thereby difturbing that Universal Peace among Chrifian Princes, wherein alone, our fafety from the Turks confifts; lest you give occasion of much scandal in the Church, and of great danger in the Christian World, and so provoke the Almighty so far, as to change the great bleffings he has fo long pour'd down upon you into Bitterness and Affliction. We therefore of our tender love and affection exhort you, and of our Paternal Duty, warn you, my Son, that for the fake of that kind indulgence and favour which we have always shewn, and shall continue ever to shew you, unless you hinder us, that, if these things be true, that turnish your former reputation of Piety and Glory, you your self would amend them by affectionately taking again to your self your Queen Catharine, by giving her the Honour and Respect due to a Queen, and the tenderness and affection due to a Wife: And by removing the said Lady Anne from your Bed and Conversation, so long at least till your Cause shall be determin'd, and we have given Sentence herein. Which, although it be no more than your Duty, and what will greatly conduce to your Honour, and advance your Glory; yet we shall take as a great mark of your Highnesses respect and good will towards us. For as our most earnest desire is always to preserve in you your good esteem of us, and your customary duty and affe-tion to the Apostolical See, which in your Regard and your Actions, you have never fulld to flew; fo we cannot without the greatest grief be-take our selves to the sharper remedies of Justice; to which the indignity offer'd to our own Person herein, which we can willingly pass by, could never prompt us, nor indeed can anything force us to it, but the honour of Almighty God, the advancement of the publick good, and the Salvation of your Immortal Soul, as our Nuncio 15 with you has orders more fully to acquaint your Highness.

Given at St. Peter's under the Seal of the Fisherman, Jan. 25, 1532, in the 9th year of our Pontificat.

But the Pope had no good Answer thereunto; for as the People for the most part exclaimed against the Match (as our Historians relate) so the King would have found perchance fome difficulty to appeale their Scruples, when otherwise he could have tarisfied his own. The Queen wanted not yet those who defended her Cause publickly, both in Books and Sermons (of whom the chief were Thomas Abel her Chaplain, and fohn Fisher Bishop of Rechester) and privately in Discourse, (especially Women) though not suf-Itismov'd ficiently either to clear all Objections, or to reCommons move the King from his affection to Mrs. Anne to petiti-Bolen. Among which I must not forget one the K noten. Among which I must not forget one the K to Temfe, of the Lower-House of Parliament; who take his motion'd that they all should Petition the King gain to take his Queen again; which being advertis'd to our King, he fent for Thomas Audley, the Speaker of the House, and told him to this effect. That he marvell'd any among them should med-April 30. The in health and the state of the House and the state of the House and the state of the House and the state of the sta dle in businesses which could not properly be determined that there. As for this particular, that it concern'd his K. Speech Soul so much, that he many times wished the Marrie to the Sous jo muce, that we many times why a two teachers come age bad been good, but finee the Defers of the Uni-Speaker versities had generally declared it unlamful, be could hereupon do no less than ablain from her Company. Which therefore he wish of them to take as the true reason, without instantial it was a superior to the contract of the contract therefore he rulph a toem to take as toe true reason, without impuling it to any number Appetite: Since, being in the one and fortieth year of his Age, it might be julfly prejum'd fuch Motions were not lo quick in him. All which, that they might the better underfrand, he had inform'd himself in all parts of Christians. stendom, concerning strange Marriages; and that, sa-ving in Spain and Portugal, he could never find that any Man had so much as Married two Sifters, if the first were carnally known. But for the Brother to marry the Brothers Wife was so abborr'd among all Nations, that he never heard any Christian so did but himself; and therefore will d them to believe that his Conscience was troubled. Shortly after which, May 11. the King sent for the Speaker again, and told Had him that he had found that the Clergy of his Realm were but his half Subjects, or scarce so much. Every Bihop or Abbot, at the entring of his Dignit, taking an Oath to the Popederogatory to that of their Fidelity to the King, which Contradiction he defir d his Parliament to take away: Whereupon these two Oaths by the King's Command being read and confidered, the Parliament fo handled the Bufinets, as it occasion'd the final renouncing of the Popes Authority about two years after While these things thus passed, King Hom, commands his Agents at Rome, (the Bishop of Worcester and Sir Gregory Crisaliz) to present unto the Pope the Opinion of divers samous Lawyers, in favour of his Cause; procuring also Learned Men from all parts of Italy, to come to Rome, to offer Disputation for the same. To second this again, King Hony, in Jamuny, 1532-Jin. sends William Benet, Doctor of Law, to Rome, with Instructions to this purpose. But because it was sound, that, by the continual intercession of the Queen and Emperor, the Pope intended shortly to cite the King to appear at Rome, cither in Person or by Proxy; he dispatches thither about February, Edw. Karne, Doctor of Liw, Litte be his Excusator, and to remonstrate, that his Grace is not bound by Law to to appear.

i iii

1532. March. April.

But the Pope making difficulty to admit this on colour of putting Johnmer Sepufiar in possessing from of that Crown, invaded Hungary, which al-Excufator, it was disputed in the Consistory, whether he ought to be heard or no? But much time being fpeut herein, the Queens Agents require the Pope to proceed in the principal Caufe. In the mean while our King, by Sir Francis Bryan, importunes Francis to intercede for him with the Pope; who, thereupon by Let-Mar. 16. ter, dated March 16. informs his Holineis, that ter, dated March 16. Informs his Homises, that the requelt of the King of England is jull, and he ought to relieve him. Or elfe they two, (being une meline choic, and who have fo well deleved of him) final he forch to feek fuch other Remders, as Juliu or pleafe him, &r. To enforce this most earnest Letter of the choice of ter, Francis funds Gabriel de Grammont, Bishop of Tarbe, lately made Cardinal) to the Pope, who yet, being continually urg'd by the Imperialifts Anril. June.

to proceed against the King, and hearing (befides) first the Prohibition of Annates above-mentioned, and afterwards that a certain Priest was committed for maintaining the Papal Authority, and that another Prieff (being put in Prifon by the Archbishop of Canterbury for favouring The King Luther) after he had appeal'd to the King tanquam Dominum Supremum, was fet at Liberty, proceeds to Citation; and calling a Confiftory (July 8.) commits the hearing of the Cause to Paulus de Capifucci Dean of the Ruota, and appoints the Month of October 1532. for the Kings Appearance, protesting alioqui procedetur, &c. In the mean time, he writes to our King, certifying him what was done, (yet omitting the Clause of alioqui procedetur) intreating him further to fend a Proctor; making also this Overture to our Agents, that he will be content that all the Pro-Iuly. cefs shall be in England, except only the final Decifion, which (because there is question of the Papal Authority and the Law Divine) he will referve to himfelf. The term prefix'd for our Nov. 4. Kings appearance being expir'd; Capifucci cites our King again, or his Proctors, or finally his Orators. To all which Edward Karne answered publickly, November 14. 1532. That the Proceeding was undue, both as the question concerning his Excufation was not decided, and that he Agent's answer to could not get a Copy of the Citation; and finally as it was not congruous to the Breve fent to the King concerning this business. Besides, that the Emperor was so powerful in Rome, that he could not expect Justice, wherefore, unless they defifted, he declar'd, that he must appeal from thence to the able Men in some indifferent Universities. And that, if this were refus'd, he protested then a Nullity in all that they did. But the Pope, as little regarding this, goes to Benonia shortly after, to meet the Emperor, according to an agreement made a good while fince betwixt them; promifing our Agents yet, that notwithstanding the Queens Proctors Sollicitation, nothing of Moment should be done in this Caufe, till the Emperor were departed. The Turk now threatning Germany, the Elector of Mentz, and Lodovicus Prince Palatine interpos'd Offices for reconciling the Emperor and the Protestants: The Treaty whereof began in April, and so continued until July. When News of the coming of the Turk being brought, both Parties condescended to this Capitulation concluded at Novemberg.

That no Man should be troubled for cause of Religion, till the Council be held, (which the the Enperiment Comperor will labour to procure to be fummon'd within fix Months, and held within a year fol-Protestant lowing) or some other way of determination of controverted-points be found.

Whereupon also the Protestants (being seven fo he profecuted in that peremptory manner, as without admitting any reasons from the Emperor, or indeed allowing him any other Titie than the King of Spain, (for he said there was no Emperor but himself) he brought in an Army of three hundred thousand Men into Hunga ry. And because his Equipage was fingular, I joooo presume the Reader will take well the Defeription of it, for his own Person he was cloath'd state that the property of the only in a rich Robe of Crimfon broider'd with Gold; but his Cimitary and Dagger, as also the Saddle and Bit of the Horle, on which he rid, was set with Stones of inestimable Value. Then follow'd his Visier-Bassas, and Abraym his Favorite, and Houshold Retinue; being about twelve thousand Men. Before him went four thousand Horse with the Standard Imperial, and four thoufand Janizaries of his Guard, four hundred Slaves on Horseback in a righ Livery, and fifty Chariots carrying his most pretious Treasure, Chariots carrying his most pretious Treasure, and some of the choicest Beauties of the Seraglio, and especially the admir'd Esp. nziel a Macedonian, and four thousand Horse to guard them, besides two hundred brave Horse richly furnish'd, which were led by the Hand. His Pages were a hundred on Horseback, whereof one more gorgeous than the rest, and his Lacquies one thousand, richly Apparell'd likewise in a Livery, all of these (last mention'd) wearing great Plumes. After which follow'd his Dogs and Hawks in no fmall proportion.

With this Train Solyman marches to Belgrade,

then turning to the left hand of the Danubins he befieges Giantz: Whence being repuls'd, he fend out his Captains to forage the Country; who after committing all forts of Cruelty, were at the last defeated and slain: And now Solyman Retire finding great forces rais'd against him, and pre-without par'd to give him Battel, retir'd, with as little Success. Success as he had three years fince at Vienna, this Army of the Christians consisting, as I find, Octob. 16. of ninety thousand Foot, and thirty thousand Horfe, was rais'd by the Emperor, who yet did not think fit to conduct them, in Person, as coming from Lintz, in Austria to Vienna, no sooner than that Solyman was departed from Hungary; whence he fent to Rome a Dispatch of the 4th of Ostober, defiring the Pope to meet him at Gonoun. About which time he receiv'd news from Octob. 4. Andrea Doria, whom the last Summer he had commanded to fcour the Mediterranean Sea, and to land where he thought fit. Whereupon Deria with a great Fleet, and ten thousand Soldiers, fetting forth from Messina in Sicily, August 18. Aug. 18. paffing by Cephalony and Zante, came to Morea, and landed at Coron, (anciently call'd Corone, not Libroux p. Cheromea, in Baotia, Flutareb's Country, as San-178.
dwal militakes it) and battering it both by Sea Sept. 21.
and Land, took it by Composition, Sept. 21. where leaving for Garrison fifteen hundred Spa-to Genoua.

This while our King finding he could obtain no satisfaction from the Pope, hastens the League with Francis, formerly projected, to a Conclu-fion; and the rather, that he heard this Meeting betwixt the Pope and the Emperor would shortly follow. In emulation whereof therefore an Interview betwixt him and Francis was concluded, Bellan, in that form which Cardinal Woolfey heretofore had fet down upon the like meeting projected, Anno 1527

niards, he return'd with great Spoils and Honour

The Articles of Treaty formerly concluded be-twixt Thomas Earl of Wileshire, and Ormand Lord Till. Princes, and twenty-three Cities) offerd him Privy Seal, together with Edward Fox, the Kings aid against the Turk, who, this year, 1532 up-Almoner, on the one part, and Gilles de la Pomeraye on the other part, were these.

cited to Rome. July 8.

Nov. 14 Kings

the Cita-

July 23.

Princes.

I. That all former Treaties shall remain in force, Calais, the Duke of Richmond, a goodly young so that, if any Conditions in this Treaty be not per-form'd, the former Treaties yet, especially that of per-lay 3; firm d, the farmer Treaties yet, especially that ef perbetween petual Peace, shall stand firm.

It That if the Emperor Charles any way shall inbetylini & wade each of them directly or indirectly, in the Lands they new bold, they shall be bound to send mutual did, (viz.) The King of France to the King of England (within three Months wavning) to the place appointed five bundred Men at Arms, (arm d à la Francoise), or any other less number, which the King of England shall pay according to the rate they side to bawe of the French King. The King of England to the King of France such a number of Archers en soot as be shall require, so it exceed not sive thoussand; to receive pay of the French King, according to the rate of England the French King, according to the rate of England. And if either the Horsemen or Archers pass the Sea, these into France, or those into England, then, befiles this Pay, there is such provision to be made for Victual, by the Prince under whom they ferve, that the Soldiers may well live and maintain themselves by their pay. And if the fail Emperor shall attempt any thing by Sea, the Prince invaded giving two Months notice to the other, shall receive for Aid a Navy, (in which shall be fifteen thousand Soldiers,) well arm'd and equipped, which Navy both Kings shall be bound to ya pen, monto Sico ento Ringo film e contin in maintain for fice Montos together, or longer if need be, at their corn Cofts, to difind and feetire against toe fail Empoore the Sea and Shores in buth files, from the life of Ulhant to the place call'd the Downs, between Sandwich and Dover.

III. If the Emperor or his Governors shall detain the 11. I the Lapton of the English Merchants in bis Dominions, the King of France flush surveys the King of France flush summines, the King of France flush summines, which if he dealies, he flush lay bold on and arrest the Emperors Subjects, and Goods in his Kingdom, &c. nor shall release them till satis-

in his kingdom, etc. has past release them till satisfication be given. Lind in like manner is the King of England bound to the king of France.

(But, if for any probable Cause, and particularly for any contain d in the Articles of the former Treaty between him and the Kings of England and France, or for Justice deny'd, after be hash requir'd it, the Emperor shall creeft any of the Subjects of the two Kings, or their Goods, then the other is not bound to fee bim indemnified, according to the former Article.
Provided, First, that the Emperor made it appear, that it is for a just Cause. Secondly, That he arrest no never than may countervail his presented loss. Thirdly, Provided also that the number of Ships arrested by the Emperor, be not above five or fix, and that for some particular interest or deed betwint them and him.) This third Article shall not be extended to the Merchants of Higher Germany, and the Subjects of Charles Jure Imperii.

Neither of the two Kings may make a new League, Friendship, or Affinity with any Prince or Estate, to Friendlip, or Alfanty with any trince or thate, to the prejudice of the other. If he do, it hall be counted void, and of no effect; This Treaty, being Minned 23 June 1532. was to be figured five Months after.

And now the time of the Interview approachment of the Control of t ing, our King pass'd the Seas to Calais, 11 of Octob. 1532. with a Royal Train, and Missress sinne Belen, (lately * created Marchioness of Pem-Vept. 1. Freke.) And going thence to Hologre, the young Octobes. Princes, the Children of Francis, meeting him, were recommended to him by the King their Fa-Who, after many Complements, conducted him to the Abbey; where they both lodg'd in the fame House. Many Courtesses were exchang'd, and many Defigns projected betwixt Affairs of Christendom, for the space of four days that they stay'd together; which being past, Octable 25 Francis return'd with our King to Calais, in this state. Order, that, while Francis was on French Ground

Gentleman, bravely attended, met them. All the Soldiers of the Town also, and Servants to the Nobility, richly Apparel'd, made a Guard for their entrance into the Streets. The Lodging which Francis was brought to, was most richly furnish'd with Cloth of Gold and Tiffue, imbroider'd in fome places with Pearl and precious Stone. And their feveral Services brought Oftob. 27. in a hundred and feventy Dishes all of Massive Gold. The Marchioness also made them a curious and rich Mafque, in which both Kings danc'd. After which Anne de Montmorencie, a noble Man of a most ancient and generous Family, Grand-Maifter, and Marefchal of France, and Philip Chabot Seigneur de Bryon, and Admiral of Oct. b.28. France, were accepted into the Order of the Garter. Francis himfelf (who was also of this Order) fitting in his Stall at their Election. And this was in lieu of the taking of the Dukes of Norfolk and Suffolk into the Order of St. Micha-Octob. 25-el by Francis at Boulogne. And here the two el by Francis at Boulogne. And here the two Kings advis'd what in their particular should be done against the Turk; for, though News were already brought of his Retreat, yet because that he had left behind him a great part of his For-ces, and that it was thought he intended to re-turn, it was agreed betwirt these Princes, the Bett. next year to bring an Army into the Field, of feventy thousand Foot, and ten thousand Horse, and not to part without mutual confent. That they should fend to the Princes in Italy or Germany, to require Passage and Victuals at a rea-fonable price, &c. This being settled, our King complaind of the ill usage the Pope gave him in the affairs of his Divorce, in regard he was cited to appear at the Court of Rome by himself or Proctor; whereas it was usual in these cases to send Judges to the place; it being not reasonable that either a Proctor should be trusted with the fecrets of his Conscience, or that himself fhould abandon his Realm to go in Perfon to fo remote a place. Whereupon they began mutual complaints against the Pope for the Annats and Exactions taken upon the Subjects in either Country, which they promisd to remedy, by funmoning him to a Council, and in the mean They towhile to fend their Ambaffadors to require Re-folve to paration, protefling, that otherwife (by calling fummon Provincial Councils in their feveral Kingdoms) him to a Councils they would give that order which was fitting. Act they would give that order which was fitting: And for this purpose that the Cardinals of Tournon and Grandmont, should be employ'd; who also were authoris'd to tell the Pope, that, whereas an Interview had been propos'd betwixt him and the French King at Aviguon or Nizza, that it might be, that the King of England his good Brother, could be perfuaded eatily to go along with him, for ending all Controveries, if his Holines were disposed thereunto. In the mean while, the Bishop of Auxerre, the French Ambassa-dor at Rome, should certifie the Pope, that the said Cardinals would be present at the Interview betwixt the Pope and Emperor, to the end they might mediate with the Pope, for giving King Henry Judges in his own Kingdom, to decide the point of the Divorce. After which, coming to speak, (as I find by our Records) concerning his intended Match with the new Marchioness, Francis incourag'd him to proceed; promiting, Francis in if the Caufe were question d, to assist him to courage the uttermost, whatsoever should come of it. Hurry to In which Difcourfes purpoing fier la Partie for mury the chief affairs of Europe, they pass'd four days at Calais. After which time the King conduct-Order, that, while Francis was on French Ground ing him to the French Ground, bid him farewel be gave place, but when he came to the English Pale, he received it. Being now come near the weather was then tempeftuous, he palsed

Nov. 14 Holings. Stow. He marday some write, he privately Married the Mar-(under whom it began first to be govern'd by the Laws of England) celebrating the Marriage in the prefence of Arch-biflop Cranner, the Duke of Nonfolk, and her Father, Mother, and Brothers, &c. which yet was not publish dill the Enflor following. Not long after which (or as fome have it in the beginning of the next Spring) the King fent George Bolen, Lord Rochfort, to Francis to acquaint him with the Marriage, and to defire him (if occasion were) not to fail his Promife. Furthermore he requir'd his advice, how it were best to publish it, since it could not be long conceal'd. He also acquainted him how the Scots under the Earl of Marray had done some Hoffile Acts in his Kingdom; wishing him therefore not to take it ill if he reveng'd himfelf on the Scots; intreating him further, that if the Interview betwixt the Pope and him (then fecretly projected) must needs follow (which yet he wish'd were protracted) that he would remember his Caufe, then depending in Rome, as he was often detir'd. The Emperor who was well inform'd of this Interview, haftned his with the Pope. And because the Pope could not be persuaded to come to Genoua by Sea, the meeting was agreed at Bononia, 20th December 1532. Where also the two Cardinals above-mentioned, were on the part of Francis. And now they treated of the general Affairs, but not with that intireness and satisfaction which formerly past; for the Pope re-tain'd still some grudge concerning the business of Ferrara above-mentioned. Therefore, when the Emperor (according to his promife given to the German Princes) prest him to call a Council, he deferr'd it; and, when he with'd him to renounce all Friendship with our King and Francis, he excus'd himself, saying, they were Christian to the control of the contr flian Princes. Again, when he requir'd that Catharine de Medicis, the Popes Niece (between whom and the Duke of Orleans, second Son to Francis, a Treaty past) should be dispos'd of to Francisco Sforza; he reply'd she was already promis'd. Only, it feens, he accorded all that could be requir'd concerning our King. Infomuch, that unless he would contribute puissantly for and against the Turk (for which purpose the Pope promis'd his Letters) the Emperor was then affur d that all that could be done in favour of Queen Katharine, should be immediately dispatch'd. Which also the Emperor (now more than ever offended at our Kings League with Francis) took fo well, that in Contemplation thereof, he not only withdrew his Forces out of Lombardy, but gave Peace to Italy, as by a League then concluded betwixt them more fully appear'd. Some Cardinals being made at this Interview, the Ambaffadors of France demanded a Cardinals Hat for Hierom, Bishop of Worcester; which the Emperor opposid, saying, he would have taken it less ill, that the French King should have su'd for four Hats for his own Subjects, than one for any appertaining to our King, especially for him who had been a diligent Agent in the Divorce. Many defigns here likewise were projected, and among them one by the Bishop of Come, who for deciding all Controversies, said it was necessary that the Pope, the Emperor and French King hould meet together, which, yet, was not finally approved unless our King made the fourth. But this also in regard of the little security those 1523. not the Seas before the 14th of Novemb. on which which, the Pope and Emperor took leave efeach other. During this Interview I find in our Re-Feb 2 chiones, though others place it on the 25 of cords a Peruguez, in the name of David King of Fea following, Rowland Lee afterwards Bithop of Coventry and Liebfield, and President of Wales, ed himself Ambassador to his Holiness; for authorizing of which charge he brought with him not only Letters of Credence (translated out of the es the Chaldee to the Italian and Portuge I Tongues , from the wherein the faid King declar'd himfelf to be de- 1200 feended from Queen Conduce mentioned in the Library Alls of the Apostles, but a Crucinx of Gold: the further effect of his Employment being to require fome excellent Artificers, and 2000 Arquebusiers, whom he would use in a War against the Turk in Egypt, when his Holiness would com pose the differences in the Western Parts, and joyn all Christian Princes for recovery of the Holy-Land; pretending thereupon in the Name of that King to render Obedience to his Holiness as the true Successor of St. Peter. But this as Augustino de Augustini an Italian there prefent, and fometimes Servant to Cardinal Worlfey, hath it in his Letter to Cromvel) made the reft suspect-ed; and the rather that other Circumstances made be accent it probable, that this Ambaffador was fuborn'd terfeit. partly by the Portugal to countenance his Monopoly of Spices towards those parts (much grudg'd at by his Neighbour Princes) and partly by the Pope to advance his Authority and Reputation.

Interview berween the Pope and Emperor. Dec. 20.

But to return to our History. Our King having notice of the forefaid Interview, and finding that the Emperor, who feem'd a while to defift from the eager profecution of his Aunts Caufe, was now more vehement than ever; fends Instructions to his Agents at Rome, to protest in his Name, that he was not bound either in his own Person, or by his Proctor to appear there, urging, for this purpose, the Determination of some Universities, and particularly of Orleans and Paris. Notwithflanding which, he permitted Doctor Bennet to make (as of himfelf) divers motions to the Pope, the principal whereof in our Records I find thefe. First, that feeing by the Opinions of Lawyers, and the Council of Nice, the matter ought to be deci-ded in partibus; and that by the Laws of England the Determination (it concerning the Succession) cannot elsewhere be made; it would please his Holiness that the Archbishop of Canterbury taking to him two eminent Bishops or Abbots, or the whole Clergy of his Province, should decide the same. But this being dislik'd by the Pope, Bennet fecondly propos'd, whether he would refer the Determination to Sir Thomas More, or the Bishop of London, to be nominate by the King, and let the Queen or Emperor name another, and the French King the third, and let the Archbishop of Canterbury be the fourth. But this also being rejected, Bennet came, it feems, to the last degree of the Instructions, which was, that if the Caufe might be heard in England, and that the Queen refus'd the Sentence, she should have the benefit of her Appeal before three Judges, one of England, one of France, and the third from the Pope, who also should discuss the matter in some indifferent place. But the Pope allow'd not this, faying, fince he faw the King would needs conferve his Authority, he would likewife conferve his, and proceed via ordinaria. Before yet I conclude this year, I shall relate some particular home-businesses. Among which, I find that our King having gotten Tork-House (now White-Weight-Hadl) upon the Cardinals Conviction in a Price and Se munire, did newly enlarge and beautifieit, buy- non its ing also the Hospital and Fields of St. James, Palaces and building the Palace there. For which pur-Princes could mutually give or receive, being pole he compounded with the Sifters of the judg'd improbable, was rejected. Shortly after House for a Pension during their Lives. Not Vol. II.

long after which, he suppress'd the Priory call'd they needed some more serious Instructions.

Christ-Chareb in London, distributing the Canons, that I cannot persuade my self for all this serious in the canons are being Franciscans, into other Houses of that kind, and beflowing the Church-Plate, and Lands, on Sir Thomas Audley, newly made Lord Keeper of the Great Seal. For Sir Thomas More, Lord Chancellor of England, after divers Suits to be dif-charged of his place, (which he had held two years and a half) did at length by the Kings good leave relign it. The example whereof be-My 16. good leave relign it. The example of the Six Thomas Ing rare, will give me occation to fpeak more figure the particularly of him. Six Thomas More, a Perfon figure the of fharp Wit, and ended befides with excellent the same of the same of the same refitting the same results the same refitting the same refitting the same results and the same results are same results are same results and the same results are same results are same results and the same results are same results are same results and the same results are parts of Learning (as his Works may teffifie) was yet (out of I know not what natural face-tionsness) given so much to Jesting, that it detracted no little from the Gravity and Importance of his Place, which though generally no-red and diflik'd, I do not think was enough to make him give it over in that merriment we shall find anon, or retire to a private Life. Neither can I believe him fo much addicted to his private Opinions, as to deteft all other Governments but his own Utopia, so that it is probable fome vehement defire to follow his Book, or fecret offence taken against some Person, or Matter (among which perchance the Kings new intended Marriage, or the like might be accounted) occasion d this strange Counsel, though, yet, I find no reason pretended for it, but infirmity and want of Health. Our King hereupon taking the Seal, and giving it, together with the Order of Knight-hood, to Thomas Audley Speaker of the Lower-House, Sir Thomas More without acquainting any body with what he had done, repairs to his Family at Chelfer, where after a Mass celebrated the next day in the Church, he comes to his Ladies Pew, with his hat in his Hand (an Office formerly done by one of his Gentlemen) and fays, Madam, my Lord is gove.

Life of Sir But she thinking this at first to be but one of his Jefls, was little mov'd, till he told her ferioutly, he had given up the Great Seal; whereupon she speaking some passionate Words, he call'd his Daughters then present to see if they could not but they after fearth, faying they could not their Mothers Dreffing, but they after fearth, faying they could find none, he replied, do you not perceive that your Merors Nofe femdets fomenthat away; of which Jeer the provok'd Lady was fo fenifole, that fhe went femalian in a Bayes the attack the femalians. from him in a Rage. Shortly after, he acquainted his Servants with what he had done, difmiffing them also to the attendance of some other great Perfonages, to whom he had recom-mended them. For his Fool he bestow'd him on the Lord Mayor during his Office, and afterwards on his Succeffors in that Charge. And now coming to himself, he began to consider how much he had left, and finding that it was not above one hundred pounds yearly in Lands, befides fome Money, he advis'd with his Daughters how to live together. But the griev'd Gentlewomen (who knew not what to reply, or indeed how to take these Jests) remaining asto-nished, he says, We will begin with the stender Die of the Students of the Law, and if that will not bold out, we will take such commons as they have at Oxon, we him the just commons as the pure a Ox-ford; subject, yet, if our Purfe will not fretch to maintain, for our left refuge we will go a Begging, and at every Mans Door, fing together a Salve Regi-na to get Alms. But thele Jells were thought to have in them more levity, than to be taken e-very where for current; he might have quitted his Dignity, without using such Sarcasms, and betaken himfelf to a more retir'd and quiet Life, without making them or himfelf contemptible. And certainly whatfoever he intended hereby, his Family fo little underftood his meaning, that

So 1532. that I cannot perfuade my felf for all this talk, that fo excellent a Person would omit at fit times, to give his Family that fober account of his relinquishing this place, which I find he did to the Archbishop Warbam, Erasmus, and others.

His year of 1533. February 4. the Parliament 1512. fat again.

The chief Laws enacted were; that all Victu-Feb. 4als should be fold by the larger kind of weight weight call'd Avoirdupois. That the price of a pound of ment fix Beef or Pork should be a lasti-penny at most, and makes and of Mutton or Veal three farthing and of Mutton or Veal three farthing and to for the state of the state o and of Mutton or Veal three farthings, and lefs, fever where it was usually fold for less. therefore remember that we may compare the Rate of those times with these. This Law yet Rate of those times with these. was finally Repeal'd in regard unfeafonable years did not permit a certain Rule in these things, and some of the Lords of the Council appointed to set the Prices; whereof in its due place.

That they who kill'd any Person attempting to Rob by or near the High-way, or that broke Houses, should be acquitted without forfeiting either Goods or Lands.

That no Appeals should be made out of this Realm for these Reasons (viz.) That whereas the Kingdom of England was a just Empire, furnish'd with such able Persons both Spiritual and Temporal, as could decide all Controversies arifing in it; and whereas Edw. I. Edw. III. Rich. III. Hen. IV. and other Kings of this Reaim, have made fundry Ordinances, Laws, and Statutes, for the Confervation of the Prerogative, Liberties, and Pre-eminences of the faid Imperial Crown, and of the Jurisdictions Spiritual and Temporal of the same, to keep it from the annoyance of the See of Rome, as also from the Authority of other foreign Potentates attempting the Diminution or Violation thereof; and because notwithstanding the said Acts, divers Appeals have been fued to the See of Rome in Cau-fes Testamentary, Causes of Matrimony, and Di-vorces, right of Tythes, Oblations and Obventions, to the great vexation and charge of the Kings Highness, and his Subjects, and the delay of Justice; and, forasmuch, as the distance of the way to Rome is fuch, as the necessary proofs and true knowledge of the Caufe, can-not be brought thither, and represented so well, as in this Kingdom; and that therefore many Perfons be without Remedy: It is therefore enacted, that all Causes Testamentary, Causes of Matrimony, and Divorces, Tythes, Oblations, and Obventions, either commenced or depending formerly, or which hereafter shall commence in any of the Kings Dominions, shall be heard, discuss'd, and definitively determin'd, within the Kings Jurisdiction, and Authority in the Courts Spiritual and Temporal of the fame, any foreign inhibition or restraints to the contrary notwithstanding. So that, although any Excommunication or Interdiction on this occasion fhould follow from that See, the Prelates and Clergy of this Realm should administer Sacraments, and fay Divine Service, and do all other their Duties, as formerly hath been us'd, upon penal-ty of one years Imprisonment, and Fine at the Kings pleasure; and they who procur'd the said Sentences, should fall into a Premunire. As for the Orders to be observ'd henceforth, it was enacted, that in Suits commenc'd before the Archdeacon or his Officials, Appeal might be made to the Bishop of the faid See. And from thence within 15 days to the Archbishop of Canterbury, or Archbishop of York, respectively in their Provinces, and so likewise to the Archbi-Thops in the Kings other Dominions. Or if Suit

Gives his Fool to Mayor & his Succuifors.

June 4.

Thoms.

1532. be commenc'd before the Archdeacon of any now he intended to give his Niece, together Archbishop or his Commissaries, then Appeal may be made within fifteen days to the Court of Arches, and fo to the Archbishops without further Appeal. In all which cases, the Prerogative of the Archbishop and Church of Canterbury was referv'd. That if any Suit arose betwitt the King and his Subjects, Appeal might be made within fifteen days to the Prelates of the Upper House in the Convocation then sitting, or next call'd by the Kings Writ, there to be finally determin'd. And that they who shall take out any Appeal contrary to the effect of this Act, or refuse to obey it, they, their Adherents, and Counsellors, shall incur the penalty of the Statute of xvi Rich. Secundi. And thus the Spiritualty finding the power invefted formerly in the Pope, to be deriv'd now in great part on them, did more easily fuffer the diminution of the Papal Authority.

All former Statutes also made against the excels of Apparel were repeal'd, and new Orders given, which yet flood not long; there being no measure it seems for things that depended so much upon Fancy and Opinion. It is now time that we return to our Hiftory.

Among the many things concluded at the late Interview at Bononia, we may remember one was that the Pope should write to our King to fend aid against the Turk, who having fail'd (accidentally) in his Intentions, he faid this Summer would puilfantly invade Christendom. But our King answer'd by his Ambassadors, that the Emperors Ambition was the cause thereof, and the raffiness of the Pope, who at the Emperors request had lately Excommunicated John Sepufe Vayvode of Transilvania and elect King of Hunga-ry, and so forc'd him to feek foreign Aid; which ought to put his Holiness in mind, that he be wary how he proceeded with potent Princes. Yet if the Pope in his own particular were afraid of the Turk, that he should come to Avignon, and that he and Francis would undertake his Protection, fince the Emperor was refolv'd to confent to the German Princes, about fome Innovation in Religion; only to diminish his Holiness Power. How the Pope yet relish'd this Motion, appears not; but certainly I find that as long as he was fo aw'd in Italy, neither did Francis think it fafe to treat, or our King to repose intire Confidence in him, though now the Cefarean Forces being withdrawn, a private Treaty betwixt the Pope and Francis took effect, infomuch that Francis now began fecretly to fall off from our King. For as the Pope together with giving Catharina de Medices (Daughter to Lorenzo, late Duke of Urbin) in Marriage to the Duke of Orleans, had promis'd his affiffance to him for recovering his Claims in Italy, which he passionately desir'd, so he was dispos'd now, though not altogether to forsake our King, yet at least to decline the Conventions betwixt them, at their late Interview. And to induce the Pope to draw Francis on his fide, it may be thought no fmall Motive, that he had upon his own Authority, not only levied fome upon the Clergy in France, but prepar'd Forces to affift the Protestant Princes; which so scan-daliz'd his Holiness, as he thought it safer to permit a War of Dominion (though in Italy) than of Religion in Germany affifted by the French. And certainly, as the times then flood, the Pope had reason to fear a defection in more than one Prince. The Pope also wanted not his designs upon Modena and Rheggio, wherein he hop'd Francis would fecond him against the Emperor, whom he hated ftill for approving the late Sentence in Henricum Octavum, Dei gratia Anglia & Fran-favour of the Duke of Ferrara. Which places ciæ Regem, Fidei Defenforem & Dominum Hi-with the Dutchy of Url., when it could be got-ten. For performance fall which, the French March Writers fay a Treaty was concluded. Our King Slote. (being well inform'd of all, and particularly knowing that Francis, notwithstanding both their late private Treaty at the Interview, and divers reiterated professions of Friendship, had upon the Popes Breve and Request executed some Persons in France, who it feem'd oppos'd the Papal Au-thority, and recall'd from Banishment one Bede a bitter Enemy to the Kings Divorce,) thought it now his best expedient to stand to the decision ne now ins best expedient to status to the action of his own Clergy: Whereunto it conduc'd much, that Warbam, Archbishop of Canterbury, Aug. 23, being lately dead, Thomas Cronner (an able Perform much favourd by the Nobility, as our Himade Cranner and Canada Conduction of the Canada Canad ftorians fay; and lately imploy'd in the Kings Archbifhbuliness in Italy, and at this present in Germany, op of Canwas, though absent, chosen to this Place. Nei-terbury. was, though abfent, chofen to this Place. Nei-ther indeed could the Kings Clandeftine Marriage be much longer hidden, the new Queen being quick with Child: So that he refolv'd shortly, both to publish his Marriage, and to require his Clergy to proceed to a Sentence con-cerning the Divorce. His Parliament, in the mean time, fo favouring his Intentions, that they made the aforefaid Act against Appeals to Rome, to the no little displeasure of Queen Katharine, who found thereby how dangerous it would be (in point of our Law) to infift on hers. Howfoever, I find, the had many openly favour'd her Caufe, without that our King thought fit to punish them.

Queen Katharine was now at Ampthil in Bed-Cites Q. fordshire; and because it concern'd the King to Cashorine acquainther, with the causes of this second Mar- at Dunariage, he sent again some grave Persons to pre-stable. pare her thereunto, wishing her together to sub-But she persisting still, Cranmer Archbishmit. op of Canterbury cited her to appear at Dunstable, being fix Miles off. Where for deciding this bu- May. finefs, he appointed a Court to be held; and with him came the Bishops of London, Winchester, (being Stephen Gardiner) Bath, Lincoln, and many great Clerks. Their first proceeding (as Sanders Sand Schil. hath it) was a Citation to our King to put a April 110 way his Wife Katharine, protefting otherwife that they would cenfure him. But the Records which I have feen, mention only that Cranmer demanded and obtain'd leave of the King to determine the matter, fince it caus'd much doubt among the common People, and fears of great Inconveniencies in matter of Succession. The Court May 10. being now held, and the Queen fummon'd fifteen days together, without yet that she appear'd, the Archbishop having first pronounc'd her Contumacious, proceeds to Sentence, which also he caus'd to be publickly read in the Chappel of our Lady in the Priory of Dunstable, before two May 23. Notaries, and then fent to the King, defiring further to know his mind concerning his fecond Marriage, as foon as he had advis'd with his Council.

The Tenor of the Sentence was this.

N Dei nomine Amen : Nos Thomas per Sentence missione divina Cantuarien. Archiepiscopus, pronountotius Angliæ primas, & Apostolicæ sedis ced a Legatus, in quadam Causa inquisitionis de & su- gainst her. per viribus Matrimonii inter illustrissimum & potentislimum Principem & Dominum nostrum Henricum Octavum, Dei gratia Angliæ & Fran-nam, nobilis memor e Ferdinandi Hispaniarum Regis filiam contracti & confummati, quæ coram nobis in Judicio ex officio nostro mero aliquamdiu vertebatur, & adhuc vertitur & pendet indecisa, rite & legitime procedentes. Visis primitus per nos & diligenter inspectis Articulis sive capitulis in dominica Caula objectis & ministratis, una cum responfis eis ex parte dicti illustrissimi & potentissimi Principis Henrici Octavi, factis & redditis, visifque & similiter per nos inspectis plurimorum Nobilium & aliorum testium side dignorum dictis & depositionibus in eadem causa habitis & factis; Visisque præterea & fimili modo per nos inspectis quamplurium & fcre totius Christiani Orbis principalium Academiarum censuris seu conclusionibus Magistralibus etiam tam Theologorum quam Juris peritorum Responsis & Opinionibus, utriusque denique Provinciæ Anglicanæ Conciliorum Provincialium assertionibus & assirmationibus, aliisque salutaribus monitis & doctrinis super dicto Matrimonio desuper respective habitis & factis. Visisque ulterius & pari modo per nos inspectis, tractatibus seu sæderibus pacis & amicitiæ inter perennis famæ Henri-cum Septimum nuper Regem Angliæ & dictum nobilis memoriæ Ferdinandum nuper Regem Hispaniæ, desuper initis & factis; visis quoque peramplius & diligenter per nos inspectis omnibus & fingulis actis, actitatis, literis, procettibus, instrumentis, scripturis, munimentis, rebusque aliis Universis in dicta causa quomodolibet gestis & factis, ac hic omnibus & fingulis ita per nos visis & inspectis atq; à nobis cum diligentia & maturitate ponderatis & recensitis: Servatisque ulterius per nos in hac parte de Jure fervandis; Nec non partibus prædiæs (viz.) præfato illustrissimo & po-tentissimo Principe Henrico Octavo per ejus Procuratorem idoneum coram nobis in dicta causa legitime comparente, dicta vero Serenisfima Domina Catharina per contumaciam abfente (cujus abfentia divina repleatur præfentia) de Concilio Juris peritorum & Theologorum cum quibus in hac parte communicavimus ad fententiam nostram definitivam, five finale decretum nostrum in dicta Causa ferendam sive ferendum fic duximus procedendum & procedimus in hoc modum. Quia per acta, inactitata, deducta, propofita, exhibita, allegata, probata pariter & confessata, articulataque Capitulata partis, Responsa testium, depositiones, & dicta, instrumenta, munimenta, literas, feripturas, cenfuras, conclusiones Magistrales, Opiniones, confilia, assertiones, assirmationes, tractatus & sædera Pacis, processus, res alias & catera præmissa corarn nobis in dica Causa respective habita, gesta, facta, exhibita & producta. Necnon ex eifdem & diversis aliis ex causis ac considerati- Said Cause; having also seen, and in like manonibus, argumentisque & probationum generibus variis & multiplicibus, validis quidem & efficacibus quibus animum nostrum in hac parte ad plenum informavimus plene & evidenter invenimus & comperimus dictum matrimonium inter præfatos illustrissimum Principem & Dominum nostrum Henricum Octa- land in Convocation affembled, and many other 1533- bernia, ac Serenissimam Dominam Cathari- vum, ac Serenissimam Dominam Catharinam, ut præmittitur contractum & confummatum, nullum omnino & invalidum fuisse & esse, ac divino Jure prohibente, contractum & confummatum extitiffe. Ideirco nos Thomas Archiepiscopus Primas & Legatus antedictus, Christi nomine primitus invocato, ac solum Deum præ oculis nostris habentes, pro nullitate & invaliditate dicti matrimonii pronunciamus, decernimus, & declaramus, ipíumque prætenium matrimonium fuisse & esse nullum & invalidum, ac divino jure prohibente contractum & consummatum, nulliusque valoris aut momenti esse, sed viribus & firmitate juris caruisse & carere, præfatisq; illustrissimo & potentissimo Principi Henrico Octavo ac Serenissimæ Dominæ Catharinæ non licere, in eodem prætenio matrimonio remanere etiam pronunciamus, decernimus, & declaramus, ipsosque illustrissimum & potentissimum Principem Henricum Octavum, & Serenissimam Dominam Catharinam quatenus de facto & non de Jure dictum prætenfum matrimonium ad invicem contraxerunt & confummarunt, ab invicem separamus & Divortiamus, atque sic separatos & divortiatos, necnon ab omni vin-culo matrimoniali respectu dicti prætensi matrimonii, liberos & immunes fuisle & esse pronunciamus, decernimus, & declaramus, per hanc nostram Sententiam definitivam, five hoc nostrum finale Decretum, quam sive quod ferimus & promulgamus in his fcriptis.

June 4. Records

Maii 23. 1533.

N the Name of God Amen: We Thomas by Divine permission Archbishop of Canter-bury, Primate of all England, and Legate of the Apostolical See, in a certain cause of enquiry of and concerning the validity of the Marriage contracted and consummated between the most potent and most illustrious Prince, our Sovereign Lord Henry VIII. by the grace of God King of England and France, Definder of the Faith, and Lord of Ireland, and the most serene Princess Catharine, Daughter of most frene Princess Cattanne, Dangster of his most Catabolick Migles, Ferdinand King of Spain, &c. of glorious Memory; we proceeding according to Law and Justice in the said Cause, which has been brought judicially before us in wirtue of our Office, and which for some time has lain under Examination, as it still is, being we are to fally determined and decided heritage. not yet finally determin'd and decided, having first seen all the Articles and Pleas which have been exhibited and set forth of her part, together with the auswers made thereto, and given in on the part of the said most illustrious and powerful Prince Henry VIII; having likewise seen, and diligently inspected the Informations and Depositions of many Noblemen and other Witnesses of unsuspected veracity exhibited in the ner carefully confider'd not only the Censures and Decrees of the most samous Universities of almost the whole Christian World, but likewise the Opinions and Determinations both of the most eminent Divines and Civilians, as also the Resolutions and Conclusions of the Clergy of both Provinces of Eng1533: wholsom Instructions and Doctrines which have said most illustrious and most powerful King 1533 been given in and laid before us concerning the Henry VIII, and the faid most illustrious Lafaid Marriage. Having farther feen, and with like dy Catharine, in as much as they contracted diligence inspected all the Treaties and Leagues and consummated the said pretended Marriage diligence inspected all the Treaties and Leagues of Peace and Amily on this account, entered of factor, and not de jurc, and they, so mortal Fame, late King of England, and the said Ferdinand of glorious Memory, late King pretended Marriage Eond, with regard to the foresail fail Ferdinand of glorious Memory, late King pretended Marriage, we do pronounce, decree and declare by this our destinitive Sentence, and fully weight all and every of the ATI, Defined Decree, which we now give, and by the bates, Letters, Processes, Instruments, Writs, Arguments, and all other things which have passed and heen transition in the Gild confe pair'd, and been transacted in the said Cause at any time, in all which thus seen and in-spected, our most exact care in examining, and our most mature deliberation in weighing them, our most manne deriveration in weighing toem, hath by is been us'd, referring berein whalforver of right ought to be by is referv'd. Furthermore the faid most illustrious and most powerful Prince King Henry VIII. in the foremention'd Couse, by his proper Protor having appear'd before us, but the faid most Serene Later the Contraction of the Protocologies. dy Catharine in contempt absenting her self, (whose absence may the Divine Presence always attend) by and with the advice of the most Learned in the Law, and of Persons of most eminent skill in Divinity, whom we have confulted in the Premises, we have found it our Duty to proceed to give our final Decree and definitive Sentence in the faid Caufe, which accordingly we do in this manner. Because by Acts, Warrants, Deductions, Propositions, Exhibitions, Allegations, Proofs and Confessions, Articles drawn up, Answers of Witnesses, Depositions, Informations, Instruments, Arguments, Letters, Writs, Censures, Determinations of Professors, Opinions, Councils, Affertions, Affirmations, Treaties and Leagues of Peace, Processes and other matters in the said Cosse as is above-mentioned before us laid, had, done, exhibited, and respectively produced, as also from the same and sindry alter Reason. fundry other Reasons, Causes and Considerations, manifold Arguments, and various kinds of proof of the greatest Evidence, Strength and Validity, of which in the faid Cause we have fully and clearly informed our selves, we find, and with undeniable evidence and plainness, see that the Marriage contracted and confummated, as is aforefaid, between the faid most Illustri-ous Prince King Henry VIII. and the most Serene Lady Catharine, was and is null and invalid, and that it was contracted and confummated contrary to the Law of God. Therefore we Thomas, Archbishop, Primate and Legate aforefaid, having first call'd upon the name of Christ for direction herein, and having God altogether before our Eyes, do pronounce, sentence and declare for the nullity and invalidity of the faid Marriage, decreeing that the faid pre-tended Marriage always was, and fill is null and invalid, that it was contracted and confummated contrary to the Will and Law of God, that it is of no force or obligation, but that it always wanted, and still wants the strength and always wanted, and fill wants the strength and fanction of Law, and therefore we sentence, decree and declare, that it is not lawful for the said most illustrious and powerful Prince Henry VIII. and the said most serve Lady Catharine, to remain in the said most served Marriage; and we do Separate and Divorce from each other the

May 23, 1533.

The King hereupon (according to the Decree K. ord of the last Parliament) commands strictly Kanbergon of the latt Parliament) commanus furcity Are not on tharine should no more be call'd Queen, but the Tries Princess Dowager, and Widow of Prince Are cost Dowager, and Widow of Prince Are cost Dowager, and Widow of Prince Are cost Dowager. thur; and dispatches Messengers both to Rome, sees, and to the Emperor (then in Spain) to declare and justifie the proceedings, not omitting together to fatisfie Francis thereof, as shall be told in his place. The Oration made to the Emperor (whether by Doctor Hawkins then resident in his Court, or Sir Thomas Wyat, as Fox hath it) did in effect remonthing to be that fince his Friend, Confederate thefe proand Ally, he thought good to acquaint him with ceedings his Actions, and among them, his Divorce, and fenterthe therein particularly the Juffice of the Caufe, Emperor and order of the Process, in which nothing being omitted, which might fatisfie himfelf or o-others, he hath found, at laft, that the Marriage with Queen Katharine was indifpentable, as being against the Law of God, Nature, and Man; yet that herein he us'd not his own Judgment alone, or his Subjects (though enough to quiet his Confeience) but requir'd it of foreign parts and Univerfities, and among them thofe of Benonia (though depending of the Popes) and Padua (though menac'd by the Venetium) and hath found them, and many other, fo confentaneous to his Divines, that (Iome few partial Places and Perfons only excepted) they all determin'd in favour of his Highness Cause; the further confirmation whereof, by publick difpu-tation and proof, he should willingly offer his Majesty, were it not too great an injury ro that which is pass'd in this Realm, to dispute it in any other Country; especially when it is contrary to the Laws of the Land: So that he trusted his prudency would take it as a thing done, and justly done, and not to marvel if the King his Mafter, for the weal of his Soul, as well as benefit and peace of his Realm, had taken a course which otherwise he would so little have thought of, as he wisheth no such occasion had ever been given him; wherein, he hopes it will appear, how much respect is given both to the Pope and your Self, fince otherwife his Highness should not have fent fo many Ambaffages to you both, or fpent fo many years in clearing these Points without receiving yet any fruit but delay and infatisfaction. Infomuch, that he perceiv'd, after the Cause had depended almost seven years space, he was in a Labyrinth, out of which he faw no likelihood to get, had he not flept right forth at once to the Mazes end. Yet if this were all, though a General Council hath long fince de- that way, than if both Kings joyn'd against him. termin'd that all matters should be ended, where they begun. So that if the Archbishop of Cantering as Metropolitan of the Realm had at length given Sentence on the Kings part, he thought the question should not be so much, whether it were done according to the common fashion, as whether init felf it were right, whereof therefore he would treat with the Pope apart, defiring his Majesty howsoever to take well this Declaration, fince his Highness reputing him still his friend, thought this accompt due to him, as hoping further, he would not be lefs friendly hereafter than he had been heretofore. To decights which the Emperor answer'd little more that I can find, than that he well knew how matters pass d, and that he wealld advise with his Council, what further was to be done; giving by this short and sharp Reply, just suspicion of preparing War against England, as he had more than once threat-

ned. For which purpose, as 1529. he had prachi'd with the Earl of Defmend in Ireland, so now he treated secretly with fames King of Scotland, to whom also he sent his Order. Our King not ignorant hereof, takes occasion (upon expiration of the late five years Truce) to give ear unto the complaint of the Earl of Angus, (then at Barwick) and to permit Sir Arthur Darcy to enter the Country and forrage it. Which he did April in April 1533, burning divers Towns, and car-farcod in rying away much Booty. Pretending for cause thereof, the Restitution of the Donglasses. But while James, a valiant Prince (as his many Expeditions in Person against the Out-Laws did declare) prepar'd to be reveng'd, the French King taking notice of this difference compos'd it, though not without fome difficulty. Notwithstanding which, the Treaty with the Emperor continued. For whereas the young King being not long fince defirous to match in France, found fome interruption, he hark'ned now to an offer from the Emperor. And his faithful Servants thought it time, as having run no fmall hazard in his Nightwalks. And now three Maries, all of the Empe-Wary Dowager of Hungary, Mary of Portugal his Niece by his Sifter Leonora, and Mary our Princefs. Neither will the Reader think it fo strange, that the Emperor prefum'd here fo far with our Kings Daughter, when he shall consider (as I I find in our Records and Bellays History) that he offer'd her afterwards to the Dauphin; as intending, together with troubling this Kingdom, to make this Princels a reward of their Ambition who affifted him. The answer which James return'd was, that he fhould most defire the Match with England, if conveniently it could be effected, faying yet that after her he would gladlieft have a Daughter of his Sifter of Denmark. But Charles faying, the was already promis'd, the bufines of Marriage ended so, for the present, the Treaty of friendship nevertheles being in some kind entertain'd. Whereof our King being advertis'd, labour'd to break it, propoling to his Nephew a Match with Islabel, Sifter to Henry King of Navarre. For which purpose he also sent Henry Knevet to Margaret Queen of Navarre, who gladly entertain'd the motion. This while, the Duke of Albany was fent by Frencis unto the Pope, to treat in appearance of a War against the Duke, but really to conclude the delign'd Marriage with Catharina de Medices, to whom the faid Duke was near allied. Which Match though the Emperor had heretofore oppos'd; yet now confidering how expedient it was for his Affairs to divide Francis from our

Before yet he would declare himself, he told the Pope he should require these Conditions from Francis. 1. To Innovate nothing in Italy. 2. To confirm again the Treaty of Madrid and Cambray.

3. To obtain fome affurance from him, that he Billing. should confent to the calling of a General Council. 4. That he would labour effectually with the King of England not to proceed any further in his Divorce. To all which the Pope gave no in his Divorce. To all which the Pope gave no other answer, but that he would mediate therein, being not able (as he alledg'd) to dispose otherwife of fo puiffant a Prince.

And now because the Reader may expect an account why this General Council, promis'd within a years space to the Germans, formerly by the Emperor, follicited by our King and Francis, fubmitted unto by the Protestant Princes, took yet no effect at the time appointed; I thought fit to deliver the chief paffages thereof: Since I dare fay no Age ever produc'd a juster occasion for the calling of it. Which therefore also I shall relate with more particularity, that none was more forward herein than our King, only when it might be held in fome free place and manner; as knowing well that nothing either formerly had, or now, could more authorife any folenn Error, than a factious and partial Affenbly, under what general or fpectious Title foever. Nevertheles, as it concern'd the Emperor in point of Honour and Advantage, chiefly to procure this work, our King and Francis were content a while to look on. And three Mo- B.Z.I. tives I find were prefented by the Emperor to the Pope. 1. The setting of the business of Religi- Emperors on. 2. Resistance against the Turk. 3. Accommodator for a General Charles of Religion of a General Charles of the Charles of tion of differences between Christian Princes. The Pope neal having received these, reply'd only, That be Council would commit the business to some principal Persons of bis Council, who making this following Remonbis Council, who making this following Remon-fitrance, the Pope thought fit to lend it to the Emperor; which finally was that concerning Re-ligion, they thought it a dangerous point to admit Pro-pose Ob-testants or Hereticks to displace any of the Opinions, selious-which Holy Councils have formerly determined. Since thereupon also they might take occasion to call in questi-on the Articles of Christian Faith. On the other side, when they were forbidden to defend their Doctrines, they might think themselves worse us'd than the Artians and other Hereticks heretofore, and pretend the were condemn'd unheard, and so return home more obfinate than ever. Secondly, If they have contradictjemate toan ever. Seconday, if they have contradici-ed the determination of former Councils, what hope is there that they should stand to this? And what a scan-dal would it prove to be discloyed? Besides, how un-seasonable and hard would it be for the Pope to compet them to a frist observation of the Decrees establish a there, when the Emperor and other Christian Princes, had so much to do both one against another, and a-gainst the Turk? Thirdly, That there was small likelihood of convincing the Protestants as long as they wholly adhere to the Letter of the Holy Scripture, without admitting the Interpretation of Fathers or Countill, who by Divine Inspiration may be thought to have clear d mmy doubtful Places: So that if once they call d in question the authority of the Church, there could be no ground for deciding Controversies. Fourthly, That it is probable, their demand of a Council was not so much with the intention to obey it, as to anot jo much with the intention to obey it, as to a-void the punishment due from the Mugifrate; fince their request was to have liberty of Religion till a Council had determin'd the Controversies, which could not be suddenly done. Fifthly, That the Protessans might find some excuse to depart before any Determi-nation, as they did from the Diet at Augsburgh. Besides, if there were difference of Opinious, and some soul condessant to an alternation in wort, it wishes could

TheFrench Kings Opinion herein.

permitted to them, or to the Emperor, it might take up more time and years, than the Emperor could spare to attend it. 2. As for the fecond Motive of calto attend it. 2. As for the recording works of eat-ling this Council, being the Invation of the Turk, it was answer'd, That the Hoftile preparatives being ready, and the Affembly of a Council in all likelihood fo flow, it was more fit to think of taking Arms, than of entring into School Disputations, especially fince under this colour, the Protestants might evade, alledging they were not oblig'd to contribute any thing till the business of Religion were setled, moreover, that this would but occasion the Turks coming, as knowing it would tend wholly to his damage and burt, and confequently, would but haften him the more to prevent confequently, would but boften tim the more to prevent it. Furthermore, that if the Council gave no content to the Protefliours, it might cause them to seek Protession from the Turk, as the Waywood of Transsivania bad lately done, and under pretence of Evongelical Liberty size on the Goods of the Church. These Motives from the Emperor, rougether with this political action of the Done, being brought to Firm. on promine, 1011s, as the way, one of Evampelical Libral that plants done, and under pretence of Evampelical Libral that plants of the Goods of the Church. These Motives from the Emperor, together with this politics and proper than those of a Cauncil, but of a quicker tick answer of the Pope, being brought to Frantsland. And for the other Point concerning the recis by the Seignew de Priet, and his Reply required thereunto, Francis after deliberation said, that notwithstanding there were Inconveniences in calling a Ambiglidar from all parts with so prove and sneed of the Church, and debeing certain there was never any other laughed and or fonce of Christophed, and definery way for decision of Controversies in Religion, that the Holy Gooff will assist and direct their Assimbly. dinary way for decision of Controversies in Religion. Infomuch, that all future Ages would condemn not on-ly his Holiness, but all the Christian Princes of the Informed, that all future Ages would condern not onInformed, that the fundament of the Informed of the Informed in Info pole any thing concerning their private differences and quarrels. For the better performing whereof, it should be agreed that no decision of former Councils should be urged to the bindrance of an ingenuous and free communication concerning these Points; when yet it should be alteled that the questioning of former Acts would but open the way to frustrate this. Since it would give eccasion unto meny to withdraw themselves, who otherwise would be presented to Council. For preventing whereof, therefore, it were expedient that each of them should lend their Ambassication or Counties with unimited Commission to treat concerning the Points in unlimited Commission to treat concerning the Points in Controversie. It hich also should be laid down in Writing, to the intent that by common vote and consent they might afterwards be determin'd. With this caution, get, that in the mean while all particular Enmitties on, yet, that in the mean white all particular samittes found be laid afide or quenched. And that till silvere done, and the fewral Superiors of the faild Ambalfladors or Deputies acquainted with the proceedings (for that abfolute power thereupon might be given then to conclude) it was unfeafonable to call a Council. But if they chose this way, it would follow that eight ther the inferior Number would submit to the greater, and consequently conform themselves to one common way in Religion, or at least they would remain without ex-against Cauncil, or of Pope against Pope, as bath formerly happened. And again, that whether the Pope twee declard above a Council, or a Council above the Counter sense; Inconveniencies would follow. Finally, That whether the Ambority of convoking this Council were Protestinas should project the Points and Annact Protestinas should project the Points and Annact Protestinas should project the Points and Acticles to be to it. terpret his meaning, taking all his Advice in a counter fence: First, Because he thought it unrus Empered schable, that the Ambifluors of Corifian Princes and Anisase Protessins should project the Points and Aricles to be to interest of in the faid Council, fonce it could be thought. no less than an Artifice and Invention, to refrain and diminish the Authority of the find Council, which together with all that could be treated therein, ought intirely to depend on the Inspiration of the Holy Ghoff, and not report be Opinions of Men. Secondly, Beauty Francis bud made no particular Anfror consisting Con-tribution for reffling of the Turk, as if he thought the Danger of his Neighbours in this kind did not con-

Which Remonstrance being brought (in form of a Reply or Complaint of the Imperor) to Francis: He answer'd, That he could not but marvel for thow the Emperor should so much mistake him, since to-Respire our we improve points of men angieste time, since te-gether with an ample Declaration of his Opinion con-corning the siffair of Religion, he had declar'd likewise that the Ambaffailors and Depaties should not nigled the other Point, whose Resolutions also concerning resizind homfoever that any thing concluded in this kind fatisfied herewith. For as he thought Francis would make use of this Assembly for contriving fome Defign or Enterprize against him, so he secretly declin'd it. Francis likewife, as he was wholly won to the Pope, and intentive to the bufiness of Italy, laboured not much to advance a business, so suspected and dangerous to the Roman See. So that the Diffidence and Jealoufy betwixt these Princes broke off the Council at this The time, when it feem'd fo necessary for the Peace Council and Welfare of Christendom. Howbeit the Empe-put off. ror (who departed from Genetia April 8, and was Apr. 8. now in Spain) left he should be thought not to comply with his Promife, obtain'd from the Pepe, that these following Conditions should be offered Au 1532to John Frederic Elector of Saxony in the room of to from Present Executed or small, in the Joeth of this Father, lately deceased. That it flould be feet soid land open to all, as in times paft. That afformed floudd Propolity be given on both fides to frand to whatfoever floudd be to the E. decreed there. That they who could not be prefer, of some a floudd for the land for the English Department of the prefer of some a floud for the land of the proposed for the second part of the proposed for the format of the prefer of th should fend their Deputies. That in the mean while, nothing should be innovated. That the Place should be in Retigion, or a leaf they round remain without extended to the Place found be immovited. That the Place found is cause of exception, when on so good and indiff in Each rearrange to the control ferent Terms the determination of a free Council bad been offer'd them. All which he signified by his them offer'd them. All which he signified by his Rounding to the Council found for the Emperor and other Princes it was now toward the end of February 1533. South for a finished fee fusible done. That if these Conditions were when the Emperor received this Answer, who

HaZ

Ambaffadors to fecond the Legat. The Duke of His Ana Saxony hereupon, after deliberation with the other Proteflant Princes and States at Smaleald, re-June 30. turn'd this Answer: That the Council could not be free as long as the Pope, who mad a Party, should fit as Judge. That the Cause of Religion, as being grounded on the Scriptures, should be determined by them, and on the Scriptines, junual be determined by them, and not by School-Opinions. That the Place ought to be (at the Emperor had promifed) in Germany, if it should be free and open unto all. Our Historians say also, that the Pope fent (in May) to our King to be > fhew'd a Commission, which had neither place nor time express'd, he was dismiss'd. While these thingspast, our King by a Dispatch to Francis requires him to fend hither fome trufty Person, to whom he might with all Confidence communicate fuch things as could not fitly be committed to Paper; intreating also that the faid Person might be instructed in all the Pasfages of Affairs (wherefoever) fince the Interview. For though the King by Meffage, fent formerly by the Lord Rockfort, had acquainted Francis that he was privately married, yet as he had many Particularities to speak of, and might besides have use of the affishance which Francis had offer'd, fo he defir'd one on that part to whom he might freely open himfelf. Hereupon Francis sends Guillaume du Bellay Seigneur de Langey with these Instructions: That he should persuade our King to be at the Interview betwixt the Pope and him, as being better able than any elfe to justify and defend his proper Caufe, affuring him, that he should be as safe, both in his passage to, and slay there, as in his own Kingdom. Nevertheless if he thought not fit to come, that at least he should fend one in whom he might repose intire Confidence. He was charged also to inform our King, how Francis had made those Ordinances concerning Horse and Foot, and Sea-businesses, which were agreed betwixt them. Lastly, he was commanded to defire our King's Advice concerning the Affairs of the Protestant Princes of Germany, who instantly crav'd their joint affi-present at the Council, or at least to send thither:

But when the Meffenger (being requir'd to it)

K. Henry ftiles the

When Monsieur de Langey was come, and had expos'd these Particularities, our King answer'd: Pope only That fince the Bishop of Rome (for so he now term'd the Pope) after many Diffimulations, and Delays, would not decide the business of the Divorce, he had for discharge of his Conscience referr'd it to the Archbishop of Canterbury, as being not able to support any longer the continual Vexations wherewith his Mind was afflicted. And that the faid Archbishop and divers Bishops and principal Persons of the Clergy having sentenced a Nullity in his former Marriage, and declared the Dispensation for it void, as given in a Cafe which being ex Jure Divino, could not be difpenfed with; he had thereupon privately married the Marchionefs, without yet that he had intention to disclose it before May next. About which time he hoped also that the Interview betwixt his Mafter and the faid Bishop would be, and that the faid Bishop therefore would do him Justice. If not, that he would publish his Marriage, and withdraw himfelf totally from the Yoke and Dominion of the Bishop's Church. cerning the Tyranny and Ufurpation whereof, he had compos'd a large and ample Treatife; the Title whereof was, De Potestate Christianovum Re-Bath, hist. gum in suis Ecclessis, contra Pontiscis Tyrannidem & horribilem impietatem, as Beutherus hath it; though Brown, and Sir Francis Bryan, followed with some Months following the date bertof (being towards the end of March, or beginning of April, 1533) and ceive it was that De vera differentia Regise Potesta. Writes a beld within a Tear after. For more authorising of which Propositions, the Emperor commanded his until was made about this ime; which neverthe-gainst the last An-Ambassadors to second the Legat. The Duke of less he said the would not publish, until he saw Papal. what Right the Bishop would do him; desiring the Vion faid King in the mean time not to abandon him, fince the Bishop had vaunted, he would fet all Christendom against him, which the Emperor alin his Discourse with the Pope had averred discovering how by the means of Scotland he would dicovering how by the means of Scaland he would revenge his Aunt's Quarrel. Some Intelligence whereof was brought our King by the faid Seigneur de Langey, who croffing the Scas from Boulogne to Dovers, was affailted by fome Scatchnen of War, who hovering in our Seas to effort of War, who hovering in our Seas to effort. their Advantage, fer upon the Gallion that Langey went in, so that had he not made use both of Sails and Oars, he had been overtaken or funk; their number being fuperior, and Ordnance playing continually on him. They overtook yet a Ship of his Confort, which having Sails only, and not Oars, could not escape them. Monsieur de nor Oars, could not elecape them. Monfteer de Langey being now diffunis'd, acquainted Francis with our King's Refolution. Whereupon also, he hasten'd his Interview with the Pope, which after variety of Places propos'd, was finally re-folv'd at Marseilles, the Emperor's Ambassadors at

> Anne Bolen, being come to the Pope's Ears, and together with it an Information concerning the

> Rome in vain oppoing it.
>
> And now the News of the Archbishop of Canterbury's Sentence, and open Marriage of Mistrefs

Book our King had compos'd against the Pope's Authority (which also more than any thing else offended him) the whole College of Cardinals, especially such as were for the Emperor, became Is prohumble Suppliants to the Pope, that he would ceded proceed rigorously against our King; which also against the Pope accorded, tho not in that peremptory vigorouf-and publick manner as was afterwards done; for June. I find that this Sentence was not definitive in the Con. Trid. principal Cause, (as the Imperials desir'd, and Records.

Sanders mistakes it) but only declarative in the July 11. Point of Attemptats, (as they call it) in that King Henry (the Cause yet depending) had divore d himself without the Leave and Authority of the Pope. Therefore it was declar'd that all his Actions herein were subject to a Nullity, and Himself to Excommunication, unless he restor'd things in integrum, for which time was allow'd him till the end of September following. These Proceedings being referved, and the Cenfures thus suspended, argued that the Pope was willing before he went any further to fee the fuccess of his Interview with Francis, which was accelerated by this means. For as the Pope knew well that the Emperor was already fufficiently incens'd against the King, so it was easy for him to collect, that if he could gain Francis, nothing afterwards could hinder him to fulminate. And he had reason to chuse this way of Treaty; for I find all his Interviews succeeded well with him. Nevertheless, the Emperor as he knew not how far this new Treaty might extend, labours by his Ambastadors to retard it. But they failing, he took another course; for being advertis'd that the Pope intended to make use of some of his Gallies for this Journey, he fends a Command that they should be employed against the Turk. But neither could this keep back the Pope, who rather than not go, refolv'd to commit himfelf to

Things being thus advanc'd, our King (in conformity to the Proposition of Francis) fends the

Duke of Norfolk, lately made Marshal of England, the Lord Roebsfort, Sir William Paulet, Sir Anthony

the French Gallies, and so to pass to Marfeilles. May 18

1533. hundred and fixty Horfe, to repair to Francis, and afterwards attend the Interview.

This while, our King being confident, that either by the Pope's good Permission, or his proper Authority, he should be able to justify a Cause which so many Universities had sentenc'd on his fide, proceeds to the Coronation of his new Qecen, which also was perform'd with much hone .1 Solemnity. And the rather that the murmur of those who objected against the Irregularity and Deviation of our King's proceeding herein, might be hidden and recover'd in the Pomp. Shortly une 23. after which, our Historians fay, Mary the Dowa-ger of France dy'd, and was bury'd at St. Edmunds-

The Duke of Norfolk being now come to Francis

The Duke of Norfolk being now come to Francis

Acres 20 Marfeilles) ac-(who was upon his Journey to Marfeilles) acquaints him with part of his Instructions, which were to diffuade him from the Interview and Marriage propos'd, or, at leaft, to fuspend it till the Pope had given our King fatisfaction; offering allo Aid for a War in Piedmont, if he would fuffer no more Monies to go out of his Realm to Rome, and inftead of the Pope to erect a Pa-erfwades triarch; which it feems was one of the private Articles treated betwixt them, at the Interview: But hearing, at the fame time, of the Declara-tion past at Rome against our King, he thought atriarch it too late to expect any Favour from the Pope, lecords. and therefore demanded leave to return. Notwithflanding which Francis defir'd his flay, promifing all the best Offices and Affistance to our King he could require, aftoon as he should come to Marseilles; protesting furthermore, that what Offence feever was done to our King, he would take as to himself. But the Duke being inform'd again, by our diligent Agents, what had past at Rome, would omit no longer to advertise the King. Therefore, he posted away the Lord Rochfort to acquaint his Highness with what was done, and to know his gracious Pleafure; whereupon, the King, upon advice with his Council, thought fit to revoke together with the faid Duke, the Duke of Richmond, then living in the French Court, commanding also his Ambassadors with the Pope to return. Nevertheless, as Francis infifted with our King to fend fome other, if for no other end, yet at least to witness the earnest-ness and follicitation wherewith he would pursue the King's Affair with the Pope; so our King thought fit to send Stephen Gardiner, not long before made Bishop of Winchester, and Sir Francis Bryan, together with Sir John Wallop, to attend him at the Interview. And here it is probable, that Francis had many Defigns, whereof also he refolv'd to prevail himself according to the occa-fion. For if he treated with the Pope, he no less entertain'd his former Correspondence with the Princes of Germany, who fent to him (then being at Tholouse) a Secretary of the Dukes of Bavaria, to tell him how, upon the Confignation of 100000 Crowns, which the faid King by Treaty was oblig'd to pay in aid, and for the Reflittion of the Duke of Wittenberg, whose Pol-fessions were witheld by Ferdinand, they now all agreed that it should be put into the hands of the said Duke, desiring nevertheless that it might be done with all fecrefy. To which Francis an-fwer'd: That the Interview being past, he would fend fome one to acquaint him with his Inten-

> This while the Duke of Albany being departed with the Gallies of France, to conduct the Pope to Marfeilles, News was brought to Frencis of the Death of one Merveilles, employ'd by Francis to Francisco Sforza (then in possession of the Dutchy of Milan, by the Emperor's Favour, though not as yet of the Daughter of Denmark, formerly de-ftin'd unto him ;) the occasion whereof also I have thought worthy my relation. This Merveilles being a Milanese, had ferv'd long in the French Court, and was now by the good leave of Francisco Sforza received as a secret Agent or Ambaffador for Francis; the terms on which Sforza flood with the Emperor, not admitting a more ouvert access. The Servants of this Merweilles having a Quarrel with one Castiglione concerning fome Words he had spoken against their Master, July ;did at last kill him in the Streets; which was reveng'd by the Magistrate on Merveilles himself, whose Goods he seised on, and afterwards by order of the Duke privately cut off his Head. Which being advertis'd to Francis, he fell into an extream Paffion, faying, he was his Ambaffador, and that July 5. herein the Law of Nations was violated. The refentment whereof also, as he rhought common to all Princes, fo he acquainted the Pope, Emperor, and other Potentates of Europe therewith, in high terms, not forgetting alfo to give our King a particular account thereof, together with his Intentions; protesting to them all, he would have Reparation. But when the Emperor had receiv'd his Letter, he return'd no other Answer, but that Merveilles had deferv'd death, and was juftly punished, he being no Ambassador, but a Subject of the Duke of Milan's. Whereupon the French Ambassador hoping to fatisfy the Emperor, shew'd him private Dispatches, by which it appear'd, that the Duke acknowledg'd him under that Title. Notwithstanding which, the Emperor made small account of them, as supposing the Quality of an Ambassador not wrong d, as long as the Person in question (besides that he was no Subject of the French King) did not openly fustain the Dignity of his Place: Whereupon also this Act was so far from being chaftifed by him, that it did but haften the Marriage of Sforza with Christine the King of Denmark's second Daughter, whom the Emperor immediately fent for, and gave much about the time that the Duke of Orleans matried Catha-rina de Medices. Notwithstanding which, Sferza fent his Chancellor to Francis, alledging by way of Excuse, that Merveilles was no more but a private Person, though authoris'd sometimes to treat; neither was he ever acknowledg'd pub-lickly by any other Title than his Vassal and Subject; fo that not to have done Right to another Subject kill'd by his Procurement, had been to the derogation of Justice and his own Authority. Befides, he faid Merveilles was fuch an outragious and mischevious Person, that he had been told divers times on the Duke's part, that he did not like of his abode there. As for the fecret manner of his being put to death, he faid, it was to avoid Ignominy, in case Francis for delivering some of his Messages (when there was occasion) fhould repute him his Ambaffador. But the Excufe (as it imply'd fome contradiction) did but exasperate Francis, who told the Chancellor, that if intire fatisfaction were not given, he would in fome fitting time and place procure it.

About this time, the Queen being brought to Sept 6. bed of the Princess Elizabeth, (who happily suc- Sept. 10. ceeded to this Crown) the Christening following Princess thorely after, with much Solemnity, where the sheadsthe Archbishop of Canterbury was Godfather, and the born. Dutchess of Norfolk and Marchioness of Dorfot Godmothers. Howbeit the divorced Katharine and her Daughter were not only much grieved but divers that favour'd her Cause, writ, and spoke against the late Marriage: A Nun of Kent Novemb. also, pretending to prophely thereon, of whom and her seigned Miracles (about this time discover'd) we shall make mention hereafter.

It was now in Octob. 1533, when the Pope, con-Octob 6. ducted by the Duke of Albany, came by Sea to Vol. II. Z Mar-lug. 8.

July.

et up a

Dec. 5.

11-6.

day after his arrival) was in a rich Chair, carry'd on the Shoulders of two Men, himfelf wearing his Pontifical Ornaments, (the Tiara or Triple Crown only excepted) before him a white Hackney was led, on which the Sacrament was carry'd. After him follow'd all the Cardinals, and his Niece Catharina de Medices (the Dutchess of Uchin) with a great Train of Cavaliers and Ladies. Francis at the fame time, that he might feem to give the Pope intire possession of the Town, going out thereof, but the next day returning thither, and after many Complements to the Pope, coming to business, the intended Marriage was concluded, the Pope himfelf marrying the young Couple. Her Portion in Money was but little, being only but 100000 Crowns, but in Expectation and Titles great; fince a pretence to Urbin in the Right of her Father Lorenzo de Medici, to whom Lto X. gave the Investiture to the difinherison of Francisco Maria Conte di Feltri, (who at this present was in possession thereof) as also the Donation of Rheggio, Modena, Rubieira, Pifa, Ligorno, Parma and Piacenza by the Pope, or fomething equiwalent to them, did make her thought a March worthy of the Son of Finneis, especially, when so potent a Prince should undertake her Cause, not without hope of uniting thefe places to the Rights he claimed in Italy. After which, the Pope was often follicited by Francis in the behalf of our King, that at least the time of declaring the Cenfures against him might be prorogu'd. But the Pope answering only, that the the term prefix'd for Fulmination were now past, yet he would omit further process till he came to Rome. Our Agents not content herewith, proceed in their Instructions, and Edmund Bonner (as I find by an Original of his to our King) getting Audience of the Pope, November 7. in respectful terms, and under protestation that his Majesty intended no contempt of the See Apostolick or Holy Church, intimated to him King Henry's Appeal to the next General Council lawfully affembled, exhibiting also the Authentick Instruments therefrom the of (made before the Bishop of Winchester;) at which the Pope being much incens'd, faid, he would which the Perce confighted intense of state, be would need to the Consistory. Which being held Nov. 10. he answerd Benner, That, concerning the King's Appeal, he rejected it, as being unlearful, and against a Constitution of Pope Pius. Secondly, for the Constitution of Pope Pius. Secondly, for the Constitution of Pope Pius. Selonging to his Authority, and not to King Henry's. Thirdly, for the Original Informations (which Bonner required back) he will be a pure of Altinish him, defiring Francis. denied them, and fo difmiss'd him; defiring Francis only, that he would perfuadeour King to conform him-felf to his ancient Devotion and Obedience to the Roman Church. Shortly after which, being the No. 12 twelfth of November 1533. the Pope return'd. I find moreover that the Archbithop of Canterbury at this time suspecting the Pope would proceed against him, by the advice of our King made his Appeal also to the Council: Which he desir'd our Agents to intimate to the Pope. The success whereof yet doth not appear in our Records.

Here also, at the requisition of Francis, he made four French Cu linals, which added to fix more, who held that Dignity, made the Emperor fee that the Pope intended to strengthen the French Party in Rome. Befides, as the Pope did fear left Francis should usurp upon the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction in his Kingdom, he gave him the Nomination of the Heads and Chiefs, not in Monafteries alone, but in all Elective Benefices in his Kingdom; which was politickly done; for he prevented thereby that Power which Francis might have aftum'd, efpecially when he had flood flian World; fo if you take it away, you fabreit to the Conventions he made with our King at that Equity and Confeience which should be the Marfeilles, where Montmorency received him. His their last Interview. By which means also, he publick entrance into the Town (being the next disposed Francis to oppose the Emperor about days after his arrival) was in a rich Chair, carry'd calling a Council, shewing together how inconvenient it would be to the Roman Church, as Affairs then flood.

Francis not forgetting, this while, to fend to Germany, both in favour of the Duke of Wittenberg. and to comfort the Protestant Princes in their Perfeverance, promifed to do all that he could for them in a detentive way: He omitted not alfo to fend feban du Bellay, Bishop of Paris, to our King, both to acquaint him with all the Paffages at Marfeilles, and to induce him to fend Ambaffadors to Rome to treat with the Pope concerning the fulpending of this Fulmination, which he faid highly concern'd him. But our King, who was in some part acknowledg'd already Supremum Caput Ecclefiæ in his Dominions, replying he would advise with his Council hereof, one who much favour'd the Papal Authority, fpake in this manner.

Sir, Your Highness is come to a Point which Debates in the Prineeds a ftrong and firm Refolution, it being not vy Counonly the most important in its felf, that can be cil conprefented, but of that confequence as will com- cerning prehend your Kingdom and Posterity. It is, off the whether, in this business of your Divorce, and Papal Suffecond Marriage, as well as in all other Ecclesia- premacy. flical Affairs in your Dominions, you wou'd make use of your own, or of the Papal Authority? For my part, as an Englishman, and your Highness's Subject, I must wish all Power in your Highness: But when I consider the ancient Practice of this Kingdom, I cannot but think any Innovation dangerous: For if in every Temporal Estate it be necessary, not only to keep or-der, but to come to some Supreme Authority, whence all inferior Magistracy should be deriv'd it feems much more neceffary in Religion, both as the Body thereof feems more fufceptible of a Head, than any elfe, and as that Head again must direct formany others. We should above all things therefore labour to keep an Unity in the Parts thereof, as being that facred bond which knits and holds together not his own alone, but all other Government. But how much, Sir, should we recede from the Dignity thereof, if we (at once) retrenched this his chief and most eminent Part? And who ever liked that body long whose Head was taken away? Certainly, Sir, an Authority received for many Ages, ought not rafily to be rejected; For is not the Pope Communis Pater in the Christian World, and Arbiter of their Differences? Doth he not support the Majefty of Religion, and vindicate it from neglect? Doth not the holding of his Authority from God, keep Men in awe, not of Temporal alone, but Eternal Punishments, and therein extend his Power beyond Death it felf? And will it be fecure to lay afide these potent means of reducing People to their Duty, and trust only to the Sword of Juffice, and Secular Arm? Befides, who fhall mitigate the Rigour of Laws in those Cases, which may admit exception, if the Pope be taken away? Who shall prefume to give Orders, or administer Sacraments, or grant Pardons, Dispenfations, Indulgences, and other Mysteries of the Church? Who shall be Depositary of the Oaths, and Leagues of Princes, or fulminate against the perjur'd Infractors of them? For my part, (as Affairs now fland) I find not, how either a General Peace among Princes, or any equal Mode-ration in Human Affairs, can be well conferv'd without him. For as his Court is a kind of Chancery to all other Courts of Justice in the Chri-

Nov. 12.

brings K

Council Nov 15 The P's

An fiver

Rule and Interpreter of all Laws and Conflicu- in this Kingdom, nor within a just distance to 1533. tions whatfoever. I will conclude, that I wish your Highness, as my King and Sovereign, all true Greatness and Happiness, but think it not fit (in this case) that your Subjects should either examine by what Right Ecclesiastical Government is innovated, or inquire how far they are bound thereby; fince, befides that it might cause Division, and hazard the Overthrow both of the one and the other Authority, it would give that Offence and Scandal abroad, as Foreign Princes would both reprove and disallow all our Proceedings in this kind, and together upon any occafion, be dispos'd easily to join against us.

To which was reply'd by one in this manner.

SIR, If he who propos'd this Queftion, had refolv'd it as well, I should not have needed to return an Answer. But since from Principles to return an Answer. But since from Principles we admit as true, he draweth Consequences which follow not, I shall according so common reason crave leave to examine his Arguments, without infifting upon any thing urged out of either Testament, or controverted by the Theologians of this time. Nothing is more certain, than that there is a necessity of establishing some Supream Power in Spiritual as well as Temporal Affairs; only the Question will be, whether they be better united in one Person, or divided into two? I am for one, especially while the Pre-cincts of both be of the same extent, and the Magistrate no way obnoxious: For can we suppose a Government without Religion, or a Religion without a Government? Will the bare Precepts of Theology contain People in their Duties, unlefs the Secular Arm concur? Or, the inflicting Punishment with a high hand fuffice to teach a good Life, or bring Men to Everlafting Happiness? Besides, can a Kingdom be safe, it the Secular Magistrate command one thing, and the Spiritual another? Must not the Subject on these terms be suspended betwixt his Obediences, or diffracted into fome Schifm or Rebellion Which Inconveniences as they cannot be deny'd, fo neither do Examples want thereof, both anciently betwixt Emperors and Popes, and of latter times as well in this Kingdom as divers others, where not only Scandal and Diffention, but even Ruins and Desolation follow'd on this occasion. It being manifest thus, how fitly both Powers are conjoined, the next Question will be Who is most proper to exercise them in this Who is most proper to execute them in the Kingdom? But it is clear that Popes are not. For besides that they want Title, Succession, Election, Possession, or whatsoever else may establish Government for the Temporal Part, they cannot fo much as aprly administer the Spiritual, while the distance betwirt us and them is fo great, that they neither can take timely notice of the Proceedings and Deviations of the Clergy, or give that order and rederest which is fitting; fo that although by a frequent admitting of Appeals to Rome, they strive to take away this Difficulty, it is rather increased. The Causesbrought thither being sometimes undecided for a long space, fomerimes wholly frustrated, while People had rather let fall their Sutes, than be at the cost of bringing their Witnesses with them to fo remote a place, as neither their Health or Means can reach unto. Of which, as also many other Inconveniences in this kind, the Germans in their Centum Gravamina have not long fince complain'd, without that the whole Court at Rome could devife a due Remedy, as long as the determination of Ecclefiastical Affairs was so commonly avok'd thither. Whereby it follows exercife the Spiritual, cannot lawfully pretend to an absolute Power in either Jurisdiction. It remains, that Princes of this Kingdom fucceffively affume it, both as their Person and Office hath in it a mixture of the Temporal and Spiritual Power, and as the Precincts they claim in Eccle-fiaftical Affairs are no longer than their Swords can reach to, and fecure, nor their Interests other than to conferve at home a perpetual Peace of Religion; which also will be with so much Advantage to their Subjects, as while the fame Authority animates and gives life unto all, none of the Members can eafily prevaricate, or fall away. If any yet will deny this Maxim, he may be convinced by Examples of Popes themselves, who practife this mixed Power not only in their Territories about Rome, the Patrimonio della Chiefa, but in their more remote Dominions, with that fingular benefit to their Vaffals, that they more than any other in Italy, are exempt from being drawn into contrary parts. So that if it be clear as well by Reafon as by Precedents, that both Powers may fubfift together, and be exercis'd by one and the same Person, I think none will deny, but that it will be so much the more equal, to place them in a Temporal than a Spiritual Monarch, as it imports more to give good Laws, and exhibite Justice, than to dispute Controversies (where the grounds of Religion are already fetled) and to refift Foreign Invations, than to declaim against Vice, and the Non-payment of Church-Duties: Out of which therefore may be con-cluded, That there is no more necessity of a Pope over us, or (if you will) over all Churches in the World (when they could be converted to Christianism) than to assign one Universal Monarch over it. There being in the Frame of Government as well as all other Bodies, a certain Symetry and Proportion, beyond which it cannot conveniently be dilated. These things thus appearing, it may be confidered now, whether the Pope have not yet another Incapacity for fwaying all the Ecclefiaftical Affairs of this Kingdom, in his being fo obnoxious to other Princes. But this alfo is evident, fince the French and Spaniard fo constraining him on either side, that he must submit to the stronger, or suffer such Imprisonment and Outrages as he hath lately done, it will be dangerous to constitute him our Supreme Judge in these Affairs of Religion, which regard matter of State. For fuppose he would be impartial between fuch Princes as may press him equally, Shall we presume he will be so to us, who stand not in the fame relation of Nearness and Interest unto him? Nevertheless, I shall easily grant that he may wish us well, or bestow his Bleffing on us; but where his Person or Estate will be concern'd I do believe it would be fo unfafe for him to do us Right, that it would be an unmannerly thing to ask it. But may he not in some Cases yet be retain'd as Judgein Ecclefiathical Affairs, and Arbiter of the Differences of Christmann? For my part I shall accord it, as long as he complies with his place of Community Pater. But if through Interdictions, Cenfures, Excommunications, Ful-minations, and the like, he proferibe, and exterminate those, who otherwise might give him a due respect, doth he not relinquish his Name? Especially while without regard to the Quietness of Men's Consciences, the Peace of Christendom, or the Unity of Religion, (which might eafily follow, when the unnecessary Points were laid aside) he (for the confervation of his Authority in this Kingdom only) procures Foreign Princes to invade it. Whereupon therefore, he so little exerciseth his Paftoral Charge, (inflituted at first for the Safeguard that the Pope as being neither Secular Magistrate and Ease of the Secular Magistracy)as he now di-Vol. II.

1533. flurbeth all, whereas he ought fo much rather in them, as it is not in the Power of any else to 1533. to use a discreet Moderation, as he sees that Princes can both reign without him, and contain their Subjects (whether Spiritual or Temporal) in their accustom'd Obedience and Devotion, out of which therefore he may collect, that until these Ecclesiastical Affairs be permitted to Princes, which cannot aptly be determin'd without them, there will be fmall hope of an accommodation. And for these Reasons also, we can as little admit him Arbiter of the Temporal Caufes betwixt us, and any other Christian Prince, though otherwise the Function be fo necessary, as (it seems) there is no fo good means for avoiding the many Wars, and deciding the Controversies betwixt them. But it is alledged still, That in deferting the Pope's Authority, some diminution of Religion may follow: Alas! if Religion flood not on firmer Principles than thefe, it were worfe grounded than any other Knowledge; For were not the Laws of Piety and Goodness o written (at firft) in the heart, as Mankind had no other Direction for attaining his everlafting Happiness, for about two thousand Years, and until the Decalogue was given? And is that again any thing elfe but an Explication of these Laws? Besides, is there not a Doctrine of Faith deliver'd us in some part of our Belief or Creed (and I say in some, for the beginning thereof, as well as certain Articles towards the end, are general Notions both writ-ten in our Hearts, and received in all Religions.) And have we not through the Reverend Authority of the Church for many Ages, declaring and confirming this Faith, accepted thereof, and the Ten Commandments, and therein fubmitted our felves to all that is required in either Testaments, and will they yet exact new Beliefs, and obtrude new Articles? When the Laws of God, only written in Men's Hearts, and the Decalogue, for fo many Ages were thought to fuffice for Salvation. Let them fay what they will; I find no reason to believe, that the Divine Wisdom im-I find no poseth more, or proceedeth by other Rules than those that were deliver'd to our Fore-fathers; or that fome fuch obliquation of Religion hath happen'd as the course of his Providence should be varied too. And therefore, though I shall be content, that the Illustration or Explication of some Points may be worth the Churches Labour, I can never agree that the Principles and Foundation of this Structure should be stirr'd, or exhibited on other terms. Neither indeed should the Roman Church in true Wisdom procure it, the Majefty of Religion being no ways fo well conferv'd, as by afferting fuch a Perfection, Antiquity, Univerfality, and Visibility in the more necessary parts thereof, as may argue the Care which God hath over Mankind in all Ages, without omitting, together, to represent the Doctrines of Faith, and of God's Mercy, in middle times after fuch manner, as may be for our Instruction. And thus their Auditors, being informed, not only what parts of Religion have been received in all Ages and Countries, but what his particular Providence hath added in sequent times, may glorify him for both. Nevertheless, if Popes thall be fo far from these charitable and temperate ways, as they will ftill intermix and trouble all things; if they shall confound and join together the certain, and the uncertain, and compel Men equally to the Belief of all they teach, ought not Princes in this case to prevent Distractions? Ought they not to extinguish Usurpa-tions in Religion, and together, vindicate her from Error and Neglects? While in giving a due Luftre and Protection with the Temporal Sword, they make her become more Reverend and Awful. Which Duty also is so much more requisite perform it. Neither should we fear, lest our periors it. Neither inouin we tear, left our Princes fhould grow too abfolute thereby; when it is the most affured way for conserving, not the outward only, but inward Peace in this kingdom. Not that this Authority may be at length devolved to such as would abuse it; there being a possibility of bad Popes, as well as bad Princes. And that Incommedum non folvit Argumentum. And thus, Sir, may all Innovation be taken away in Religion, and all Defects reftored by your Highness in your Dominions, without either suffering Sophistry or Pedantism to be taught instead of true Doctrine, or that the Hierarchy of your Kingdom should be devested from their ancient Dig-nities and Rights. Since as your Highness pretends not to create new Articles of Faith, they may continue still to expound the old, in their feveral kinds, and give light to the hard places in the Scripture, read Divine Service, administer Sacraments, and the like, and together, exhort Men to Piety, Charity, Good Life, Repentance, and whatever—elfe may conduce to Everlasting Happiness: Whereof also when the Pope would take fuch notice, as to confirm and approve our Proceedings, we might (if your Highness for pleas'd) return that respect to him, as, upon his Publick Declaration, that he doth not only rati-fy our Confession of Faith, but relinquish all his Pretences, which may derogate from your Regal Authority, and behave himself (for the rest) tanquam Communis Pater, fuch Points might be referr'd to him, as your Clergy could not conveniently determine, and his Dignity together, be so far forth acknowledg'd, as he might still retain a Primacy, according to his ancient Patriarchal Right, without intermedling yet with that Supremacy, which your Convocation-house hath already decreed for your Highnes. And now to come to the present Question concerning the Divorce; I must fay, I cannot find what the Pope should take ill. For is any thing done by our Archbishop, but what, not only the Pope himself, but the most famous Universities of Christendom have declared lawful? So that, if after fix Years fuspenfion of the Cause, we have determined the bufiness, as himself confessed he would have done, but for fear of the Emperor; What offence can he take? Will he complain, he is not able to do us Justice, and yet be scandalized if it be done by others? Or shall the executing of what he thought reasonable, be judg'd a Fault, when the not executing thereof mult (in all Equity) have made us the greater Criminals? Let us therefore fend to defire his Confent. It hath been already intimated unto us, that it was not so good to ask a Licence, as a Pardon, we will hope then from him a Confirmation of the Archbithop's Sentence. And thus both the one and the other Authority may be conferv'd, without that we should need to fear any Foreign Invasion, as long as the general Vote of our Kingdom shall establish what (in a fort) it hath agreed unto.

And to this Opinion our King inclined, and fo much the rather, that about this time the Pope's The Sentence againft him was openly fet up at Dumkirk in Flanders; fo that to prevent further Inagainft conveniences, the King (as our Records thew) the King advised with his Council December 2. First, To fet up at Inform his Subjects of his Appeal to the Council Control of the Council General, and the Inflice thereof. Seconds. cil General, and the Juffice thereof. Secondly, Of the Unlawfulness of the Dowager's Appeal to Rome, and the late Statute against it, which said Statute was (for that purpose) to be set upon every Church Door in England, as also his Majesty's said Provocation, or Appeal, whereof Transfumpts also were to be fent into Flander: Thirdly,

To command it to be taught, that the General Council is above the Pope, and that he hath no more Authority in England by God's Law than thority further for his Proctors to appear in that L. 1 any other Foreign Bishop. Lastly, to send into Germany, to confederate with the King of Poland, John King of Hungary; the Dukes of Saxony, of Joun King of Hungary; the Dukes of Saxony, of Beavaria, the Landtgrave of Hefs, &C. as likewife the Hanfe-Teuronick Towns, being Lubeck, Dent-fick, Nivemberg, &C. Thefe things being refolved on, for a final Answer, he defird the Bishop of Parit to certify Francis, That if the Pope would fuperfede from executing his Sentence, until he Bellar 4. had indifferent Judges fent, who might hear the business, he would also superfede from the execution of what he was deliberated to do in withdrawing his Obedience from the Roman See. But the Bishop, who thought this alone not enough to reduce things into good terms, made an offer Bp. of Ps. to Negociate the business at Rome; which our King gladly accepted, affuring him withal, that to negoaffoon as he had obtain'd what was demanded, tiate the he would fend fufficient Power and Authority to bufinefs confirm as much as was accorded on his part, as with the Pope. having entire Confidence in his Discretion and Sufficiency, ever fince his two Years Imployment as Ambassador in this Kingdom. Whereupon the Bishop, though in Christmas Holydays, and anextream Winter, posted to Rome: Where he came before any thing was done, more than what for-Decemb. merly paft: And here obtaining a Publick Audience in the Confiftory, he eloquently declared our King's Message, representing both what he had obtain'd of our King, and shewing withal how advantageous it would be to the whole Church. Which fo prevail'd, that they prefixt a Day for receiving from our King a Confirmation thereof. Infomuch, that a Courier was difpatch'd to our King Henry, defiring his Answer within the time limited. But the term being expir'd, and no Answer brought, the Pope resolv'd to proceed to Fulmination of the Sentence; which being advertis'd to Bellay, he repair'd to the Pope and Cardinals, (then fitting in full Confiftory) defiring them to ftay a while, it being probable that the Courier, either through cross Winds, or other Accidents in long Journies, might But with be detain'd; concluding his Speech, that if the out fuc-King of England had fix Years together been pacefs tient, they might attend fix Days; which space only he defir'd them to give him, for the receiving of our King's Answer; this Proposition being put to the question, the plurality of Voices car-March 19. ried it against our King, and the rather, that in Records. this mean time, News came to Rome, that the King had printed and published the Book written against the Pope's Authority, (which yet was un-true, for it came not forth till afterward, though it was not yet kept so close, but a Copy was now come to the Pope's hands) and that there was a Comedy represented at Court, to the no little defamation of certain Cardinals. By reason whereof the Sentence was fo precipitated, that, what March 23 in lefs than three Confiftories, was now dispatch'd in one: And so by a final determination (the Pag. 122. Copy whereof is in Fox) the Marriage with Marriage Queen Katharine was pronounced good, and King Henry commanded to accept her for his Wife, and between K. Henry in case of refusal Censures were sulminated against him. But two days of the six were not past, and Q Katharine prowhen the Courier arriv'd with ample Commission nounc'd and Authority from our King, to conclude and confirm all that the Bishop had agreed in his Name. Which was this, (as the Writer of the Concilio Tridentino hath it) that King Henry was content to accept the Judgment of that Court, upon condition that the suspected and Imperial Cardinals should not intervene, and that indiffe-form'd of the Merits of the Caufe ; giving Au- Concil. To Court. At which, the more wife and temperate Cardinals were fo aftonish'd, that they became humble Suppliants to the Pope, that he would advise how all things might be repair'd; where-upon the business was again discuss'd. But all Remedies being judg'd either late, or impossible, the Sentence flood, and the Emperor was made the Executor of it. The Bishop now returning toward France, met (as I find by our Records) Edward Karne and William Revet, who were employ'd by our King for folliciting this important April 7. bufiness. But as they understood by the Bishop, that the first Marriage was pronounced good, and the Issue by it legitimate, so they judg'd it lost labour to proceed, and advertis'd all to our King. who became fo fensible of the Indignity wherewith he was us'd in this important Affair, that he feparated himself from the Obedience of the Roman Church, but not from the Religion thereof The King (fome few Articles only excepted) as shall appear separate hereafter. And thus (according to the Relation from the of Martin du Bellay) did our King fall off. Who Obeditherefore in this prefent Condition found nothing not from fo fitting to be done, as to cherish the good affecti- the Relion of his Subjects, who in a Parliamentary way he gion of the Ch-found did many ways advance and fecond his De- of Rome. figns. I shall for a conclusion add only the Cenfure of Thuanus, concerning our King in this bufiness, Certe in reliqua vita ita se gessit ille Rex, ut eum, si æquiores & prudentiores Pontifices nactus susset, sponte se subjecturum ipsorum potestati fuisse app.1-The Emperor (now in Spain) being much troubled at the Interview at Marfilles, yet con-niv'd at it, as hoping at least, the Pope would diffuade Francis from favouring our King, or affifting the Protestant Princes: Therefore he did not much endeavour to hinder it: For as he knew the Pope was paffionately affected to the advancement of his Kindred, so he judg'd it lost labour to oppose him therein; since by ingrasting his Family now in France, as well as by his former Alliance with Spain, he might hold himself secure on either hand. Neither did he think that Terrors could prevail, at a time, when the Popemust Sandow. know, there would be use of all the Imperial Forces against the Turk, who besides that he threaten'd a general Invasion, had now particularly besieged Corron, taken a Year since by Andrea Doria, which a Spanish Garrison held till they April 1. were forc'd to leave it again to the Turk about 1534-

April 1534.

I will come now to the business of our Parliament, holden this Year from Jan. 15. till 30. of Jan. 15. March next, wherein these Statutes were ena-Rights at

That the Prices of Victuals should not be in-Several hanced without juft ground and reafon. If they Acts of were, then upon complaint thereof, the Lord ment Chancellor (and others, who had Authority given palled them benefit of the control them herein) should tax the faid Victuals how they should be fold, either by the Owners or by Victuallers. Also that no Corn or Cattel be carried beyond Sea without the King's Licence, unless either to Calais, Guisnes, Hammes, and their Marches, or for Victualling of Ships, &c.

That no Man indicted of Murder, Burglary, or other Felony, and upon his Arraignment flanding mute, to prevent the Process of the Law against himself, shall have benefit of his Clergy; but Law shall proceed against him for the Crime whereof he is indicted, as if he had pleaded to the same, and thereupon had been found guilty.

Buggery was made Felony.

Enoi-

the Pope and Cardinals.

Holy-Maid and her Accomplices at-Elizabeth Barton (call'd the Holy Maid of Kent) and Complices were attainted of High Treason, for conspiring to slander the Divorce between the King and Queen Katharine, and the late Marriage between him and Queen Anne. Because by the greediness of some, who have gotten into their hands much Cattel, and many Farms, which they have turned from Tillage to Pafture (especially for Sheep) old Rents are rai-fed, Prices of things inhansed, and so, much Poverty and Theft enfu'd; it was enacted, that no Man should have in his own or Farmed Lands above 2000 Sheep (yet that every Temporal Perfon may keep upon his Inheritance as many as he will.) Secondly, that no Man shall take and hold above two Farms at once, and those to be in the fame Parish; upon certain Penalties there fet

The Statute of Henry IV. concerning Hereticks was repeal'd. And it was Enacted, That Sheriffs in their turns, and Stewards in their Leets, may make Inquiry and Presentment of Hereticks; who being by two lawful Witneffes accufed, may be cited and arrested by an Ordinary, and being convict in open Court, shall abjure their Herefies, and refufing fo to do, or relapfing, shall be burnt.

Alfo the Statute of Richard III. permitting free Importation of all kinds of Books, was repealed. And (for the benefit of our Book-binders) it was Enacted, That no Bookfeller should buy any Enacted, that no bookiener mound buy any Books bound beyond Sea; nor any (though unbound) of any Stranger, but by engrofs. And if the Prices of Books chance to be raifed above reason, the Lord Chancellor, Lord Treasurer, the chief Justice of either Bench, or any two of them shall moderate the same, upon a certain Penalty.

Whereas the Clergy have truly acknowledged that the Convocation is always affembled by the Kings Authority, and have promis'd his Ma-jefly, that they will not henceforth make or allege any new Conflitutions, without his Highnels Affent and Licence; and whereas divers Conflitutions and Canons Provincial and Synodal heretofore enacted, are thought to be prejudicial to the Kings Prerogative, and contrary to the Statutes of the Realm, and enormous to the People; and the faid Clergy therefore hath humbly befought his Majesty, that the said Constitu-tions and Canons may be committed to the examination of thirty-two Men to be nam'd by his Majesty, viz. fixteen of both Houses of Parliament, and fixteen of the Clergy, who may annul or confirm the fame, as they find cause; it is enacted that all Convocations shall be henceforth call'd by the Kings Writ, and that in them nothing shall be promulg'd or executed without his Highnel's Licence, under pain of Imprisonment of the Authors, and mulct at the Kings will. And that his Highness shall at his Pleafure (feeing the time of this Parliament is too short) appoint thirty-two Men, as aforesaid, to survey the said Canons and Constitutions, for the Confirmation or Abolition of the fame.

And as concerning Appeals, they shall be made (according to the Statutes made the last year) from Inferior Courts, to the Archbishops, and for lack of Justice there, to the Kings Majesty in his Court of Chancery.

As concerning Annates us'd to be paid to Rome by Archbishops and Bishops, and Bulls and Palls to be had from thence, fince there hath been herecofore an Act pafs'd, and the Bifhop of Rome, otherwife call'd Pope, being inform'd thereof, hath as yet devis'd no way with the Kings Highnels for redrefs of the fame; his Highness hath now confirm'd and ratified the fame Act, and every Article thereof, and the Parliament doth enact the fame, with this Addition, that from henceforth no Bishop shall be commended, presented or nominated by the Bishop of Rome, nor shall fend thither to procure any Bulls or Palls, &c. but that at every vacation of a Bishoprick, the King shall fend to the Chapter of the Cathedral a Licence (as of old hath been accustom'd) to proceed to Election, which Election being deferr'd above twelve days next ensuing shall belong to the King, but being made within the time limited, shall be held firm and good, and the Person so elected, after certifica-tion of his Election to the Kings Highness, and Oath of fealty taken to him, shall be styl'd Bishop Elect; and so by his Majesty, be commended to the Archbishop of the Province, to be Invefted and Confecrate. And if the Persons to whom this Election, or Confecration belongeth, neglect or refuse to person the same, or admit, or execute any Censures, Interdictions, ϕ_c to the contrary, they shall incur the penalty of the Law of Pramunire.

Whereas the People of this Land hath been much impoverish'd by the usurp'd exactions of the Bishop of Rome, under the Titles of Peter-pence, Procuration, Expedition of Bulls, Delegacies, Dispensations, &c. It is enacted that such Impositions be no more paid; and that neither the Kings Highness, nor any Subject of his, shall fue for any Dispensation, Faculty, Delegacy, &c. to the See of Rome, but that any such Dispensation, &c. for Causes not being contrary to the Law of God, which were wont to be had from Rome, may be now granted by the Archbishop of Canterbury, as well to the Kings Highness, as to his Subjects: But in those things which were not wont to be granted by the See of Rome, the faid Archbishop shall not meddle, without the Kings Licence. Provided, that all Dispensations, &c. whose Expedition at Rome came to four pounds and upwards, shall be confirm'd by the Kings Seal, and enroll'd in Chancery, those below four pounds paffing under the Archbifh-ops Seal only. That the Fees for these Dispen-sations shall be limitted by the said Archbishop, and the Lord Chancellor, and a part of the fame (be they great or fmall) shall always come to the Kings hands. As for all Monatteries, Colleges, Hospitals, heretofore exempt, the King only, and not the Archbishop should have Authority to vifit them.

Laftly, upon the Suit of Parliament to the King K's Mar-for the establishing of the Succession to the single with Crown (the uncertainty whereof hath caus'd Castharine heretofore great division and bloodshed in this by A& of Realm) it was enacted, that the Kings Marriage Parliawith the Lady Katharine, Wife and carnally known ment, and to his Brother Prince Arthur (as was lawfully no more provid before Thomas Archbishop of Canterbury) as hyld contrary to Gods Law, shall be held void: and Queen. fhe flyl'd no more Queen, but Dowager to Prince Arthur, and the Matrimony with Queen shall be taken for firm and good; and the Issue thence procreate be accounted lawful; the Inheritance of the Crown to belong to the fame in Crown to manner following. (viz.) First to the eldest Son descend begotten by the King on Queen Anne, and to on the the Heirs of the said Son lawfully begotten; Heirs of and for default of such Heir, then to the second Son, o'c. and if Queen Anne decease without Iffue Male, then the Crown to descend to the Son and Heir of the Kings Body lawfully begotten, and the Heirs of the faid Son lawfully begotten, and for a default of fuch Issue, to the fecond Son in like manner, &c. And for default of Sons, that then the Crown shall belong to the Iffue Female of the King by Queen Anne; and fuse the

March 30

April 17.

Oath.

An Oath the Kingdom. And all Perfons of Age shall five a to be 12 to accept and maintain the same. They who maintain the same. They who maintain the same of the bright state of the Dright state of the bright state of the brigh Succession gainst the Marriage or Succession here establish'd, to be adjudg'd Traitors.

Besides all this, the present Statute express'd certain Degrees of prohibited Marriage; (amongit which, that between the Brother and the Brothers Wife, was one) which being against Gods Laws, could not be dispenced with by Man, and therefore no fuch Marriages shall hereafter be made; and those that are made already shall be by the Ordinary dissolv'd, and those that are already so dissolv'd, shall be esteem'd justly and lawfully diffolv'd, and the iffue thence proceeding Illegitimate.

The Parliament rifing, Commissioners were March 30. International transfer thing, Commitmoners were graded to require the Oath of Succession, Rash fler which nevertheless folin Fifter, Bithop of Rocheand Sir. Thoras More, late Chancellor, deny'd, yet fo as they both profess'd a readiness to fwear to the Succession, but not to the whole Act, (it conteining divers other things. First, the indispensability of the first Marriage, as being against the Law of God. Secondly, of the legal proceeding in the Divorce by Craimer: Thirdly, fome touches against the Popes Authority, &c.) But which of these in particular offended them, they would not discover; therefore though Archbishop Cranmer told Cromwel it were not amiss to accept the Oath as they offer'd it, both for fatisfaction of the People, and the Dowager with her Daughter, and the Emperor (who much rely'd on these Mens Authority,) they yet refusing, were sent to the Tower, where they continu'd till they were brought forth to their Tryal and Death, as will appear hereafter.

The Pope having proceeded in those Rigorous terms with our King (as is formerly mention'd) and for more authorifing his Sentence, made the Emperor Executor thereof, hop'd now to have his Revenge, but he was deceiv'd. For though the Emperor did gladly accept this Overture, for his Aunt Queen Katharine's fake, and the hope he had to dispose of the Princess Mury, as Inhetitrix of the Crown, yet as he had deeper defigns, in afpiring to the Conquest of Italy, and Charla V. indeed to an Universal Monarchy, he was no less appress a glad of the occasion to take off our King from the Done houstower and fide was a factor. the Pope; howfoever each fide prepar'd for War. The Emperor's intention was, to give the Princels Mary to fome one, who upon her Title might pretend to the Crown, whom therefore he promis'd to fecond. Our King and Francis not ignorant of the Emperor's defigns, agreed on the other fide, partly to joyn with the Duke of Gueldres for invading the adjoyning Territories to France, and partly to renew the ancient Claim to Navarre, and affail the Emperor in those quarters. Yet neither did that of the Emperor take effect, because there was no means to recover the Person of the Princes Mary. Nor this of our Kings, because Francis employing his thoughts wholly on the affairs of Italy, did not think fit to comply openly with one against whom the Pope comply openly with one against whom the Pope fleave the name of a Queen, and she would had Fulminated. Howbeit, our King for defence of his Authority and second Marriage, neglected not to obtain from the Parliament a faster her Appeal, which she made by your confirmation thereof, and of the Succession in Highness leave and consent, is of no value.

first to the first begotten the Princess Elizabeth, that Line (as is mention'd before;) fending also 1533 first to the first begotten the Princels Estrabath, that Line (as is mention a perore;) sending and 1535-ton. And for default of such liste, then to the infequence thereof, Edward Lee, Archbishop of World Facend Daughter in like fort, &c. And for default of all such liste, to the right Heirs of the such as the liste of the such as the such Asings Highnefs. It was ordaind that this Act claim'd the Title of Queen, each the paffages of quaint, the first of particular the paffages of quaint, each actual the procedured before May next throughout which Negotiation I have thought fit to tran-withting the Vision and Particular Actual Particular Actual Particular Control of the Particular Control o

Their Letter to the King, was this.

Please it your Highness to understand, that An acthis day we repair'd to the Princes Dowa-counted ger, and there I the Archbishop of Tork, for gottation an Introduction to declare to her the effect of herein our Commission, said to her, First, that your sent to the Highness had often fent to her divers of your King-Council, and amongst them me, one, to declare unto her the invalidity of the Marriage, between your Highness and her. Secondly, that Carnal knowledge, which is the great Key of the matter, is sufficiently provid in the Law, as also some that were of the Council do avow. Thirdly, that upon proof fo fufficiently made of Carnal knowledge, Divorce was made be-tween your Highness and her. Fourthly, that upon Divorce made by lawful Sentence, she was admonish'd to leave the name of a Queen, and not to account or call her felf hereafter your Highness Wife. Fifthly, how that after your Highness was discharg'd of the Marriage made with her, you contracted new Marriage with your dearest Wife Queen Anne. Sixthly, that for so much as (thank'd be God) fair If-fue is already sprung of this Marriage, and more likely to follow, by Gods Grace, that the whole Body of your Realm gather'd together in Parliament, hath for the stablishment of this Issue, by your dearest Wife Queen Anne, and the Succession coming of this Marriage, made Acts and Ordinances against all them that would in word or in deed withftand them, and that for these purposes, we were sent to her Grace, to the intent she might understand the true purpose of these Acts, with the pains; lest by Ignorance fhe should fall in any of them, and io I declar'd the Act. Which thing being thus declar'd to her, she being therewish in great Choler and Agony, and always interrupting our words to the aforesaid Points, made these Answers following. To the first, that fhe took the Matrimony between your Highness and her for good, and so always would account her self to be your Highness lawful Wife, in which Opinion the faid she would continually (till Death) per-fift. To the second, she utterly denied that ever Carnal Knowledge was had between her and Prince Arthur, and that she would never confess the contrary, and with loud voice when mention was made of that point, the faid, they ly'd falfly that so fay'd. To the third, she answer'd, that she is not bound to fland to that Divorce made by my Lord of Canterbury, whom she call'd a Shadow, and that although he had given Sentence against her, yet May 201 the Pope had given Sentence with her, whom the took for Christs Vicar, and therefore would always obey him, as his faithful Daughter. To 'the fourth, she answer'd, that she would never

And are impri-foned.

chy.

fhe is your Highness Wife, and not subject to your Highness whe, and not the test to your Highness, and also because these Acts were made by your Highness Subjects in your fa-vour, your Highness being party in this matter : with divers other unfeeming words. Unto which her Answer I the Bishop of Duresme replying, forafmuch as she had faid in her Communication, that both I and the refidue of her Council had always shew'd unto her, that her mat-ter is just and good; I said that all the question whereupon we were confulted at fuch time as the Legates were here, depended only upon the validity of the Bull and Breve, albeit I faid, that fith that time divers other questions had risen and been debated by many Universities, the 'chief of Christendom, of which one was Bo-'nonia, the Popes own Town; and by them concluded, that after the decease of the Bro-'ther, who had had Carnal knowledge with his Wife, the Brother living might not marry the faid Wife by any Dispensation of the Pope, because it was forbidden by the Law of God. And forafmuch as the Pope (albeit the faid Conclusions, have been by Learned Men fent ' from your Highness, declar'd unto him) never made answer to maintain lawfully his power to the contrary, but rather in confirmation of the Opinions of the faid Univertities, faid at Marfeilles, that if your Grace would fend a Proxie 'thither, he would give the Sentence for your 'Highness against her, because that he knew that your Cause was good and just, which his faying was according also to an Epistle Decretal sent hither by the Legat Campejin, where-of the effect was, that if Marriage and Carnal 'knowledge were had betwixt Prince Arthur and her, the Legates should pronounce for the according whereunto proofs were 'brought in before the Legats, and also fince, before the Convocations of this Realm, and the Bishop of Canterbury, and by them allow'd and approv'd as sufficient and lawful: Whereby doth plainly appear, that the Sentence given by the Pope to the contrary was not vailable, because it pronounced the Dispensation, (which he had no power to grant, feeing it was a-gainft the Law of God) to be good; therefore I had now chang'd my former Opinion, and exhorted her to do the femblable, and forbear to usurp any more the Name of a Queen; ' specially for that the Sentence she sticketh so greatly unto, was given after your Graces Appeal to the Council General, and intimate to the Pope, so that it could not be vailable. And that if she should so do, she might thereby attain much quietness for her self, and her friends, and that the being conformable to to do, doubted not but your Highness would suffer her to have about her fuch Persons as should be to her pleasure, and intreat her as your Graces most dearest Sister, with all liberty and pleafure, with divers other things which by her much enterlacing, I was forc'd to answer unto The specialties whereof, and of her obstinacy, that the will in no wife, ne for any peril of her Life or Goods relinquish the Name of a " Queen, we do remit for tediousness unto the "Wildoms and Discretions of my Lord of Che-fer, Mr. Almener, and Mr. Redell, who like as they have very substantially, wifely, and ef-' feetually, order'd themselves in the execution of the Premisses, so we doubt not, but that 1534. To the fixth, the answer'd, that the is not bound 'Honour, to his Pleasure, and your Hearts de1534. To the Acts of the Parliament, for so much as 'fire. At Hantingson the 21 day of May.

By your Highness most humble Subjects, Servants and Chaplains, > Edovard Ebor. Cuthbert Duresme.

Notwithstanding which answers of the Prin-Dec. 18. cefs Dowager, fuch was the gentleness of our 15 King, as betwixt the memory of his former love Hall, and pity on her prefent Condition, contenting himself to have diffollyd her Family, and removed from her all fuch as would not ferve her as Princess only; he pass'd them over with much calmness. Howbeit he resolv'd to punish rigocammens. However the retolve to pulmin floor-roufly her Adherents, and particularly Elizabeth Barton (call'd the Holy Maid of Kent) who had Mid of almost fittred up more than one Tragedy; for Kent and being suborn'd long since by Monks, to use compiese some fittings Gesticulations, and to exhibit di-pansid. vers feign'd Miracles, accompanied with some Wifardly Unfoothfayings, fhe drew much Credit and Concourse to her, infomuch that no mean Perfons, and among others Warbam, late Archbishop of Canterbury, and Fisher Bishop of Rochester, and Sir Thomas More, gave some belief to her; fo that notwithstanding the danger that was to give ear to a Prediction of hers, that Henry VIII. give ear to a Prediction of ners, that Henry VIII. thould not live one Month after this Marriage Hat., with Miftrefs Bolen, she was cry'd up with many Apponance, voices, Silvefer Darins, and Antonio Politori, the Novemb. Popes Agents here, giving Credit and Counter. J. 1531. nance thereunto. But the Plot being at last dif. Jan. 15. cover'd, fine was attainted of Treason in the April 216
Parliament, and executed with her chief Complices shortly after. At which time also she con-fess'd their Names who had instigated her to these Practices, and whom she had acquainted with her Revelations. Among whom were More More, and Fifter; whom yet the King pardon'd upon Mar. 5. their feveral Submiffions, not suffering the Bills Feb. 27. to pass, which were put into the Parliament against them.

After many bickerings betwixt the English and Sept. Secteb, a Truce first, and asterwards a Peace was 1534 concluded betwixt our King and King James. On the King of Seots part, March 23, came to March 25, London, William Stuart Bishop of Aberdeen, Robert April 12. Reid Abbat of Kinles, and Adam Otterburne, a Lawyer. To treat with these on our Kings behalf, were appointed T. Audley Chancellor, Cromwel Secretary, and Edward Fox Almoner.

the Pope, so that it could not be vailable. And that if she should so do, the might thereby attain much quietness for her self, and her friends, and a year after, and Sworn by King Homes, and that she being conformable for do, I doubted not but your Highness would suffer there to have about her fuch Perfons as should be to her pleasure, and intreat her as your Graces most dearest Sister, with all liberty and be to her pleasure, and intreat her as your Graces most dearest Sister, with all liberty and pleasure, with divers other things which by her much enterlacing, I was fore'd to answer unto. The specialties whereof, and of her obstinacy, that she will in no wise, ne for any peril of her Life or Goods relinquish the Name of a Queen, we do remit for tediousness unto the Wisdoms and Discretions of my Lord of Chefict, Mr. Alment, and Mr. Redell, who like as they have very substantially, wisely, and extension of the Premisses, so we doubt not, but that they will sincerely report the Circumstances of the Sing American and Crommel the Secretary, July 4 while sincerely report the Circumstances of the Sing American and Crommel the Secretary, July 4 where the sing fame unto your Highness, whom we beserve the Almighty God long to preserve in much standards and a lacented at Windlow the next year, July 28. he had Institution also acquaint him, with an Instructions also acquaint him, with an Instruction and continued turing their population and a percent was concluded May 20. during their joyne Lives, and and year after, and Sworn by King Homes, and the King July 9. It was also had, and year after, and Sworn by King Homes, factor the King May 20. And by King Homes, factor the King May 20. during their joyne Lives, and year after, and Sworn by King Homes factor to the King May 20. during their joyne Lives, and year after, and Sworn by King Homes factor to king Homes factor to king Homes factor to king Homes factor to king Homes factor the King May 20. during their joyne Lives, and year after, and such standard the field May our

our King and Francis, whereat he was intreated this Militia. Neither did the King misdoubt that 1534. to be prefent, and for this purpose to pass through his Kingdom, that they both together might go to Calais; which favour was acknowledged by Fames. But as the Interview in France was difappointed, fo our King who defir'd much to confer with his Nephew, invited him to Tork. Where-upon King James propos'd the business to his Council, who judging Newcaffle to be the fitter place, made an excuse for the present, promi-ling yer the year following to meet, if he so thought good. Nevertheless, as our King well knew upon what ground this meeting was deferr'd, the Lord William Howard, and William Barlow, Elect Bishop of St. Afaph, were sent to make certain Overtures and Propositions to that King, whereof in its due place. This year Charles the Emperor being in Spain, intentive chiefly to the proceedings of the Turk, and his Brother Ferdinand in Germany, defirous to govern without home-opposition, such a Peace was accorded with the Duke of Wittenberg, and fuch favourable usage given the Protestant Princes, that the Pope complain'd openly of Ferdinands Partiality to them. But Ferdinand excus'd all with reason of State. Which also the Pope accepted the rather, in that the Ambaptifts (who taught a Doctrine more contrary to Monarchy than the Lutherms) did then prevail in many places, and particularly held Munster in Westphalia. So that because the Duke of Wittenberg, promifed to contribute some Forces to the besieging of that place, he faid he had concluded an advantageous Peace. For as no Man knew how far the Innovations of these times might reach, greatly in- it was thought to be of much Importance, that they had drawn one fide to oppose the other. In France also about this time, the Doctrine of the Evangelicks began to take Root, though so covertly, that few durft openly avow it; yet as they found favour and protection from Margaret Queen of Novarre, and Jame Dutchels d'Estampes, fo the King himfelf, whether for deciding the Cause, or love of these two Ladies (whereof one was his Sifter, and the other his Favourite) refus'd not to confer privately with divers of the Reform'd, and to give fome fuch tacit affent to their Doctrins, as thereupon growing Audacious, Com. l. 7. they adventur d to fet up Papers in the Court, and publish Libels against the Church of Rome in fuch manner, as Francis being incens'd thereat, caus'd the Authors to be fought out, and burnt.

Not yet but that he could have been content to have had fome points reform'd, and the Papal Authority diminish'd a little, but that he fear'd it might cause a division in his Realm, as he faw it had done in the Empire. Therefore, grievoully following a violent courfe, and improper to convince those who are well persuaded of their Religion, he condemn'd the professors thereof to the fire. While yet on the other side (as the French Historians confess) he entred into a League with the Tark, to the no little fcandal of his own, and all the Christian Religion. But as this was not without fome great Defign, fo he inflirated certain Legionary Soldiers, or Regiments of Foot throughout France, to the number of 42000 and Halberdiers, who were commanded by twelve Captains (having 500 a piece) under fix Colonels; while to draw the People voluntarily to fupport this Charge, the King exempted the Gentry from the Service they ow'd the Crown, by reason of their Tenures and Fees, and the Roturier or Pefant from all Impolitions, faving produc'd against him by his Accusers (Sir Ralph twenty Solz apiece. Many good Ordinances al-Femvick and one Muserave) were some mean and the putting of Arms into so many of his Subjects Hands would redound to his prejudice, or the People fear that their Liberty should be opprest thereby. So that it gave not only Security at home, but Reputation abroad; all which was done, while the Emperor prepard for a Voyage to Tunis, the Relation whereof alfo, I shall fee down in its due place. This year (Sept. 26.) Pope Clement VII. took Sept. 26. his end. For as he had been troubled long with Dath of a weakness in his Stomach, which his Physician Pope Checurio advis'd him to remedy by change of Dyet, hand VI fo being not able in an infirm State to fuffer fuch an alteration, he funk under his Difeafe and died. This Pope was one, who having prov d the variety of good and ill Fortune, more than any other of his fort, had learn'd at last to make use of all; he was happy in his Interviews, as returning ever with some advantage, without that the committing himself to the power of those puissant Princes whom he met, did diminish his Authority, in a time when they wanted neither will nor occasion to bring it lower. He was a passionate lover of the advancement of his Family, for which purpose also he sometimes chang'd the whole face of the affairs of Europe. His Riches were rather in Jewels than Money, as being more proper to dispose unto them he affected. He was provident enough in conducting all Affairs where Arms did not Intervene, but withal fo timerous, that it was reproach'd to him. The Historians of those times besides note him to have been of little Faith. Both which properties feem the more credible, that he fo often varied in his Treaties with our King. Infomuch that he may be thought for more than one reason to have wilfully loft him. Into this place fucceeded A- P. sul III. lessandro of the House of the Farness, as being by succeeds a full Conclave immediately chosen; neither did him. his Age, being 67 exempt him, while every one Octob. 12. thus might hope in his turn to fucceed. Which Opinion also he so cunningly entertain'd, as he was thought to have us'd some Art to make himfelf thought still more fickly than he was. Our King who still suspected that the Pope and Emperor had their defigns upon him, did now labour every where to hinder them, and ftrengthen himself. For which purpose also this occasion was given; Frederick King of Dermark dying about this time, and leaving the Crown in competition between his Son Christian (yet a Child) and Frederick Count Palatine, who had married Dorothy, eldest Daughter to Christiern II. and the Emperors Sifter, the Lubeckers and Hamburghers offer'd our King for the Sum of 100000 Crowns to make a King in that Country which should be at his Devotion, and thereby exclude the Interest which the Emperor or his Niece had to that Crown. Concerning which our King taking advice with his Council, it was thought fit to propose the business to Francis, both that our king might experiment his Affection, (which he had lately found cold) and eafe himfelf of the Charge, half whereof therefore he defir'd Francis to support. But what answer Bowler. Francis return'd, appears not; only I find by a Men, each of the Legions being composed of Dutch Hillory, as well as by our Records, that May is, two thousand Harquebuliers, and 1000 Pikes, a great fum of Money was lent by our king, whereupon also they proceeded in their War, which yet at last being compos'd, our King demanded Repayment.

The Lord Duries of the North (July 9. as our July 9. Historians have it) was arraign'd at Wellminster of High Treason, but as the principal Witnesses produced against him by his Accusers (sir Ralph fo were made for the entertaining and ordering provok'd Scottish Men, so his Peers acquitted him, Tune 29. leid, 1. 9.

ffants rreafe in France.

1 7. Sleid.

Flor. Ramund

Novemb.

And ar erfecued. Dupletx De Serr, King of rance eners into a League with the Turk.

K. Hepri

three Monasteries.

Regn. 26. Nov. 3.

but might be eafily suborn'd against him, as one who (having been Warden of the Marches) by frequent Inroads had done much harm in that Country. And thus escap'd that Lord to his no little Honour, and his Judges, as giving example thereby how Persons of great quality, brought to their Tryal, are not so necessarily condemn'd, but that they fometimes may escape, when they obtain an equal hearing. The 11th of August, this year, our King, as he was watchful over the voice and affection of his People, so for the finding out how they would take his defign of putting down Religious Houses, began with the remove of some. And therefore suppress'd at suppresses Greenwich, Canterbury, Richmond, and other places the Observant Fryars, noted to be the most clamorous against him, and for them substituted the Augustines, placing the Observants again in the Holimshead room of the Gray-Fryars, as some have it, speed. though others mention not this latter Exchange; which paffages, though of no great Moment, in regard of that which follow'd, our King was glad to find no worse interpreted, since they serv'd to establish his Authority.

I shall come now to the Laws enacted in the Parliament, held Novemb. 3. this year, which were important, and fuch as testified the great respect and awe born by our Nation unto their

King.

He is by A& of Farlia-ment depream Head of the Church.

The first was to this effect: That albeit the King was Supream Head of the Church in England, and fo recognis'd by the Clergy of this Realm in their Convocation, yet for more corroboration thereof, as also for extirpating all Errors, Herefies, and Abuses of the same; it was enacted that the King his Heirs and Successors, Kings of England, should be accepted and reputed the Supream Head on Earth of the Church of England (call'd Ecclefia Anglicana) and have and injoy, united and annex'd to the Imperial Crown of this Realm, as well the Title and Stile thereof, as all Honours, Dignities, Pre-eminences, Jurisdictions, Priviledges, Authorities, Immunities, Profits, and Commodities to the faid Dignity of Supream Head of the fame Church belonging or appertaining. And that our faid Sovereign Lord his Heirs and Succeffors, Kings of this Realm, shall have full Power and Authority from time to time, to visit and repress, redrefs, reform, order, correct, reftrain and amend, all fuch Errors, Herefies, Abuses, Offences, Contempts, and Enormities, whatsoever they be, which by any manner of Spiritual Authority or Jurisdiction ought or may lawfully be reform'd, repress'd, order'd, redress'd, corrected, restrain'd, or amended most to the pleasure of Almighty God, the increase of Vertue in Christ's Religion, and for the confervation of the Peace, Unity, and Tranquility of this Realm, any Usage, Cu-flom, foreign Laws, foreign Authority, Prescription, or any thing or things to the contrary hereof notwithstanding. Which Act, though much for the manutention of the Regal Authority, feem'd yet not to be fuddenly approv'd by our King, nor before he had confulted with his Council (who shew'd him Precedents of Kings of England, that had us'd this Power) and with Lis Bilhops, who having discuss'd the point in their Convocations, declar'd, that the Pope had no Jurisdiction warranted to him by Gods Word in this Kingdom. Which also was seconded by the Universities, and by the Subscriptions of the feveral Colleges, and Religious Houses so far as they bound their Successors thereunto. the Pops they bound their Successors thereunto. The has no Ju particulars whereof are to be seen in our Records. Howfoever, the business was both publickly controverted in foreign Countries, and 1534. as believing they not only spoke maliciously, defended here by many at this present, while they produc'd Arguments for rejecting the Popes Authority, and together maintain'd it necessary, that fuch a power should be extant in the Realm for supporting and strengthning of the Religion profess'd in it, and excluding the impertinent and ill-grounded Reformations of many Sectaries of those times. The Arguments of all which, may be seen in the Kings Book De vera differentia Regia, & Ecclesiastica Potestatis (which we have formerly mention'd) as being printed, and publish'd on this occasion; whence also the Learned Bishop Andrews in his Tortura Torti, seems to have drawn divers affertions of the Regal Authority, to which therefore the curious Reader may have further recourse.

It was also declar'd Treason to attempt, imagine, or speak evil against the King, Queen, or his Heirs, or to attempt to deprive them of their Dignity or Titles.

Alfo, that no Traytor shall have benefit of Sanctuary. And though he be out of the Realm, yet upon Commission given by the King for his Tryal, if he be found guilty by the Jury, the Law shall proceed against him as effectually, as if he were present.

An Act also made the last Parliament for an Oath of Oath to be taken by all the Kings Subjects for Succession the surcession by Queen Anne was to be contained and the Outh prosperied for the firm'd. now confirm'd, and the Oath prescrib'd, for the more validating whereof also, it was declar'd that all former Oaths concerning Succession taken by the Kings Subjects, should be reputed thenceforth vain and annihilated.

That towards the Augmentation, Maintenance Firstand Defence of the Kings Royal Estate and Dig-fruits giv-nity of Supream Head, the First-fruits of all ento the Benefices, Dignities, Offices, &c. Spiritual, shall King. be paid to his Highness. As also a yearly Revenue, being the tenth part of all fuch Livings (the Prior and the Brethren of St. Johns of Jerufalem not excepted.)

Whereas also it was doubted, lest in these troublesom times some Commotion might sollow in this Kingdom, and that particularly Wales, as being a strong and fast Country, might be a refuge for ill affected Persons, and the rather that there were so many Lordships Marches in those parts (the feveral Lords whereof having ampler power than they now enjoy, did protect Offenders flying from one place to the other) Divers Laws were enacted against Perjuries, Murders, Felonies in Wales: Passage over Severn also at unlawful times was prohibited, and Clerks convict in IVales, not to be released till they found Sureties for their good abearing. Notwithstanding which, Wales unithe year following upon mature Deliberation, ted to Wales was united and incorporated totally unto England. the Crown of England, it being thought better to adapt that People into the same form of Government with the English, than by keeping them under more fevere and firict Laws than others in the Island were subject unto, to hazard the alienating of their affections.

An Act alfo was made, declaring by whom; and in what manner Bishops Suffragans should be nominated and appointed, and what their Authority and Priviledges should be.

And thus after a free and general Pardon A Gene-from the King, enacted, the Parliament was sal Par-prorogu'd. The Act of Supremacy being thus den. pass'd, the King proceeded more confidently to abolish by Proclamation, the Popes Authority out of his Kingdom, and establish his own, the Doctrine whereof he commanded not only to be often preach'd in the most frequent Auditories, but taught even to little Children, injoyning further that the Popes Name should be raz d out of all Books, his Refolution being after this time to treat with him no otherwise than as an ordinary Bishop. In sequence whereof also, he not only proceeded with an high hand against all the oppofers of his Supremacy, (as shall be related in its due place) but accepted a voluntary Oath or Promise, under their Hands and Seals, from his Pithops, declaring their acknowledgment of the fame, together with Renunciation of the Popes pretended Authority, and any Oath or Promise made to him heretofore. The form of this Oath or Promise given by Stephen Gardiner Bishop of Winchester, Feb. the 10th 1525. may be seen in F(x), to which we remit the Reader.

Records.

And that in this Kingdom. 1535.

Feb. 10. 1:350

Emperor offers the Princels Mary to the Dauphin in Marriage without Mar. Bell. 1.4.

Records. Refent-

N the beginning of this year Philip Chabot Seigneur de Bryon, Admiral of France, being fent to our King, acquainted him how the Count of Naffan had been on the Emperors part with the King his Mafter, and among other Overtures of agreement, propos'd to him two Marriages; to which yet he would return no answer with-K. Henry's out our Kings Advice. One was betwixt the confent. Dauphin and the Princess Mary our Kings Daughter '(which also Bellay mentions, adding that notwithflanding the Inflances which Francis made, the Emperor would not declare his further intentions herein;) the other was betwixt the Emperors Son and the French Kings youngest Daughter. To which points, as also some others here following, our King commanded his Agents K. Henry's in France to return this Answer. That he marvel'd much at the Emperors Malice, in medling ment of it with things which belong'd not to him; and therefore defir'd Francis to furcease this Treaty, fince he knew well enough how to keep his Daughter out of the Emperors reach. Secondly, he commanded them to tell Francis that the Emperors intention (notwithstanding all his promises) was to divide him first from his League with England, and afterwards disappoint him; for though he had understood by the said Bryon, that the Emperor upon some Conditions had offer'd to Francis (for one of his Sons) a Pension of a hundred thousand Crowns, payable yearly out of the Dutchy of Milan, and Milan it self after the death of Sforza, he desir'd him to give no credit to such Improbabilities. And here, I must observe that Bellay who speaks of the Penfion, faith nothing of the Dutchy it felf, fo that it may be that Bryon stretched this point. And whereas the faid Pryon had told him thefe things should be treated of by the two Sisters, Queen Leonora, Wise to Francis, and Mary, the Widow of Hungary, (now Regent of the Low-Countries, who, I and by the Spanish History did afterwards meet at Cambray) he thought he disparaged this Business, to commit it to Women. After these points, and fome others (which as they follow'd not, I spare to rehearse) he commanded them to intreat Francis to procure a Revocation of the censures of Clement, late Pope, against him. And to tell him, that he would fend Commissioners fhortly to treat of a Match betwixt the Duke of Angoule (me (his third Son) and the Princes's Elizabeth our Kings Daughter, which should be more advantageous than the Emperors Offer. Whereupon, this year in May, our King who Ambaffa- knew there was no fo good way, to prevent the danger on the part of Scotland, as by taking off the French, and besides would have been glad that the Popes Censures were retracted, sent with Fran- the Duke of Norfolk, the Bishop of Ely, Sir William Fitz-William, and Doctor Fox, to treat with the French Kings Commissioners, being Philip their Instructions.

To require Francis together with his Childre, as also his Spiritual and Temporal Nobility, to enter into bond to revoke the Cenfures given at Rome, (which I conceive had his Original from some proposition which Francis made of Reconcilement with the Pope.) That he, his Nobility and Universities should declare the late Marriage to be good, and bind themselves to maintain the fame, which if granted, then oproceed to the Treaty of Marriage, upon certain Conditions, whereof these are the Principal.

That all former Treaties shall stand in force. That when the Parties came to fufficient years they should ratifie the Marriage. That Monfield de Angoulesme should be presently sent to our king to be brought up in England. That if he succeeded to the Crown, the Dutchy of Angoulefme should be free from homage to the French Kings. That he should not change the Laws of the June, Realm, and that sufficient security and caution should be given for this purpose. But some of these being thought to be high demands, our King fent shortly after George Bolen Lord Rockford with power to modifie and allay fome Points. yet so as he insisted still, Francis should bind himself and his three Sons to revoke the Cenfures; and to declare, that it was enough if the Duke of Angoulesme came hither when the espoufals were to be made. At last by third Instructi-June 6 ons our King said, he was content to accept the fingle Bond of Francis for Revocation of the Censures, and that he was pleas'd that the Duke of Angoulesme came six Months only before the compleat Marriage. To the first of which Points the French Commissioners agreed, but the latter they refus'd, affirming that it was fufficient, if the young Duke came to confummate the Marriage. This while Sir John Wallop (Ambassador in France) being commanded to propose the same Conditions to Francis, was so sharply answer'd, that our Commissioners resented it. Nevertheless, as some Articles were agreed on the part of the French Commissioners, so they again demanded what help our King would give to the King their Master towards the recovery of his Mothers Land in Savoy. Whereupon, as also about the Pension usually paid to our King, some wrangling words were interchang'd, while we demanding that which was in Arrear, they defir'd to be exonerated of the whole; and thus the Treaty remain'd imperfect; yet so as I find by a Letter of Sir Gregory Cafalis, how Francis had propos'd this Renuntiation with much earnestness, and not a few threats unto the new Pope. Though as Paulus III. was by nature slow (as Cafalis observes) and that the Emperor, be-fides, had his designs in Scotland and Ireland at May 14. that time against our King, so no effect followed. For which yet none fuffer'd fo much as the Pope himfelf, it being certain our King hitherto paffionately, desir'd to be, if not reintegrated, yet at least in good terms with the Roman Church, as far as with his Dignity he might.

This while, Haradin Barbaroffa King of Argier, Barbaro To that famous Pirate (who for commanding in an the Pirate unbounded and higher Element than the Earth, vours to gloried in some fort to be Superior to the Prin-ferre Julia ces thereof) obtain'd the Kingdom of Tunis, to Gnega. true is the ancient Verse, Ille Coucem pretium Sec-Sandov. leris tulit, bic Diadema. This Man being sent for by Solyman, and constituted Admiral in the Spring, 1534. with 100 Sail of all forts; 8800 Soldiers, and 800000 Ducats, began his expedition for Christendom the same day that Solyman Chabet Admiral, and Guillaume de Poyet, afterwards undertook his for Perfin. His principal defign Sandre. Chancellor of France, to this effect, as I find by was upon Genoua, as being incited thereunto by Francis, as the Spanish History hath it; in his Vol. II. A :: 2 way

dors fent clude a Treaty

Aug 1. Aug. 7.

Sandor

Nov. 14

Sandon.

Sandov.

1535. way to which, he burnt or took many Ships in caping out of it, and taking Arms at the fame Sicily or Italy, facking divers Towns, and making many Captives; yet as he knew all this would not be fuch a prize for Salyman as the would not be the last a piece for surymin as the beautiful fulls Genzaga, he commanded two thousand Turks to land by Night, and seife on her Person, being then in Fendi in the Kingdom of Naples, but she half naked cscap'd them.

Some difficulties yet appearing about the defign of Genoun, Barbaroffa makes for Tunis, which at last between Stratagem and force he took 22 August 1534. and made himself King thereof, Mulcy Hazem the true Prince flying for his more security unto the Mountains. Which being adfecurity unto the Mountains. vertis'd to the Emperor, he thought fit to prevail himself of the occasion. As hoping that Solymans being in Persia, and the troubles and confusions, which are incident to unsetled and ufurp'd Governments, would make his defign eafie. And as he was one who knew the use of Spies in any great Enterprise, he descended so low, as to give particular Instructions to one Luys Presender, a Genonese, well acquainted with Africa, which are at large set down by Sandsval. The effect of which were, that he should have certain Moneys given him, wherewith he should buy a Ship and Commodities to traffick with Tunis, and by those means infinuate himself into the acquaintance of the principal Persons both in the Town, and about Barbaroffa, and thereupon either to make a Party with the dif-contented Citizens, with whom the Emperor might joyn, or elfe to penetrate the defigns of Barbereffa; for which purpose also he had liberty, and Letters of Crodence to make himfelf Ambaffador and Negotiate with Barbareffa, when he thought it expedient for the Emperors Service to proceed that way; giving him Authority further, to promife Affiftance to Barbaressa for the Conquest of Africa, when he might be drawn to depend on the Emperor. But whether through want of dexterity to use such different Instructions, or that otherwise another who was privy to his Imployment did discover him (which fome affirm) he was feiz'd on by Barbaroffa and put to Death. Which being related unto the

Emperor did but haften his Expedition, wherein

he refolv'd to go in Perfon.

This while, Francis, who was intentive to the Actions of the Emperor, both as himfelf had his defigns in Italy at that time, and that he had entred into a fecret League with the Turk, thought fit to acquaint Barbaroffa therewith, by the means of one Monsieur de Forrest a Frenchman, who from thence was commanded to go to Constantinople, and procure Succours for him the Success whereof we shall tell hereafter; and now the Emperor being affilted by the Pope,
The Employs and John King of Portugal, and attended by Don perors Experiment the prime Nobility of Spain, fet fail from Barren to Taul. long, May 31. and coming to Calari in Sardinia, departed thence 13 of June, 1535, with twenty-five thoufind Foot, and about two thouland Horfe, bendes the Nobility and Adventurers, and ten thousand Scamen. All which being carried in two hundred and fifty, or three hundred Sail. came before Goleta, a Fort of fixty paces one ly, was at laft taken, together with a great part him fo much the more againft the Duke, fo ly 14 of the Flect of Barbaroffa. After which, the Employee perfor leaving the Lake or the left of that he commanded his Army to arrange for 10 much living the Lake or the left of that he commanded his Army to arrange for 10 much living the Lake or the left of that he commanded his Army to arrange for 10 much living the Lake or the peror leaving the Lake on the left hand, march'd to Tunis, (where Barbaressa was) being a City of about ten thousand Houses, and three Leagues time that the Forces which Barbaroffa fent to defend the Passage were routed by the Imperialists, flies. Barbaressa with about seven thousand Men, and much Riches, fled out of the Town, quitting his Reign fo, after that he had enjoy'd it not a full year. Some of the Townsmen hereupon coming to the Emperor, and acquainting him herewith, Muley Hazem interceded with the Empe-July 22, ror, that two hours space might be given before he permitted the Army to enter, alledging for this purpose also some probable Inducements; when yet the crafty Moor, intended nothing thereby, but the gaining fo much time for the Townsmen to hide their most precious Riches, from the rapine of the Soldiers: To which purpose also, he gave them private warning. The The I Emperor at last entring, and together giving li-peror The The Emberty to many Slaves, restor'd it to Muley Hazem nur upon these Conditions, That he should suffer Aug 6. him to retain Goleta, Rona, Vizerta, and fome other places belonging to the Kingdom of Tunis. That certain Churches for Christians should be allow'd. That he shall no more make Christian Slaves, or protect Pirats, from whom that King drew a great Revenue, being a fifth of all they took. And now Charles finding no more to be done in those parts, the year being far spent, and his Men fick of Calentures, and being not ignorant besides of the designs of Francis in Italy, came to Trapaca in Sicily the twentieth of August, 1535, from whence he went shortly to Naples.

During this Expedition Francis fell fick, the Aug. 28, fuppos'd cause whereof (as I find by our Records) was a grief he took, that a Servant of Monsteur de Forrest, returning with a dispatch concerning his Negotiation with the Turk was intercepted by the Duke of Urbin, and all the Treaty by this means discover'd to the Empeing, he fent our King word thereof, who there-upon commanded a folemn Proceffion to be made in London.

While the Emperor was at Tunis, Francis having provided a great Army under the command of Philip Chabot, Admiral of France, fent to his Uncle Charles Duke of Savey, for paffage through his Country, giving out that he defir'd it only to revenge the death of his Ambassador Merveilles upon Francisco Sforza. But the Duke conscious that he had lent Money heretosore to Bourbon, and bought lately the Contado of Afti (belonging to the House of Orleans) of the Emperor, and befides, had accepted the Emperors Order, when he refus'd the French, wanted not oc-casion to suspect the entrance of so potent an Army into his Country: Therefore he denied Paffage. Whereupon Francis incens'd, fends to require of the Duke the Inheritance, falling to him by Louisse of Savoy his Mother. Demanding also Restitution of a great part of Piedmont, Dupleix. and the Marquisare of Saluzzo as belonging anciently to the Counties of Provence and Dauphine, and Seignory of Arles. The Duke (as being allied to Charles, by his Wife Beatrix, Sifter to Ifabella the Empress) fends to him for Aid, being came before Galeta, a Fort of fixty paces one way, and fixty-five the other, fittate on a first offerd to give him all the Lands he held on at the Mouth of the Lake or Bay within which this fidence, though defended braveling the state of t that he commanded his Army to enter Savoy; whereof in his place.

Charles feeing these preparations of Francis, and about ten thousand Houses, and three Leagues being unable for the present to resist them (his South from Goleta. But certain Slaves whom the Moors intended to burn with their Prison, est- from Tunit) for gaining of time, thought fit to 1535. renew the Propositions of Allyance and Accord, ferv'd; infomuch, that if he had tarried three 1535. formerly mention'd to Francis, not omitting the while to levy Forces in Germany. Neither did he think to find any fo ftrong opposition in Francis, as long as he hop'd that he had given our King enough to do in the parts of Scotland and Feland. But as that of Scotland by our Kings industry took no effect, so that of Ireland was prevented, as by this Narration drawn chiefly out of our Records may appear.

The Earl of Kildare being (as is abovefuld) now restor'd again to his Liberty and Pardon'd, return'd into Ireland, conducted by Sir William Skeffington, Mafter of the Kings Ordnance, who 1530.

Campion.

1534

August

Holing f.

Sept. 24.

was also made Deputy there about 1530, and But fome flirs arifing, which Offery displac'd. Skeffington was not able to quiet, the King thought fit to reinplace Kild.re, as a Man much esteem'd by his Countrymen. Thus was he made Depuby his Countrymen. ty in Ireland again, about 1522, where he pacified the Country, and May 19. 1533, under the Title of Deputy to Henry Duke of Richmond and Somerset, Lieurenant of Ireland, held a Parliament Irish Stat.

The Earl mily and Offiry's, beginning to break out anew, and himfelf being accus'd to have invited O Neale Rebellion and others to fpoil the Country's of Offery, not in Ireland without sufficient of further design, he was sent for by our King, with command to substitute at his departure some able Man, who might govern during his absence. This charge was committed to Thomas his eldest Son: Who shortly after (hearing that his Father was convict, and to be put to death in England) rose up in Arms, and combining with O Nesl, O Carol, &c. of the his Nobility, committing divers Outrages, and particularly July 26. 1534. murder'd Doctor John Allen Archbishop of Dublin, heretofore Woolfey's

Chaplain and Commissary, and forc'd the Citizens of Dublin to take Truce with him till Miballwas, and in the mean time to admit some Bards of his Men into the City, to lay siege to the Castle, (which was defended against him) while himself with the rest of the Army depopulated the Country of Offery. The news where-of being brought into England, the old Earl then in Prison, died as is thought of Grief, and the King appointed Sir William Skeffington by the Name of Lord Deputy of Ireland, under the Lieutenant thereof the Duke of Richmond, with a wellprovided Army to suppress the Rebel. For tho' some of the Irish Nobility stood firm to our King, and particularly the Earl of Offery, and his Son James Lord Butler, whom Fitzgerald had in vain follicited; yet they were not able to make head against him. And here it is remarkable how politically that Family strove to preserve it self: For though three of the five Brothers of the late Earl of Kildare were against our King, two others offer'd their Service to him: Who yet d. (as it was danger either to receive or refuse them) Records. were but coldly welcom'd. Michaelmas now approaching, (when the Truce with Kildare expird) Francis Herbert having been fent from Dublin at the beginning of these Stirs, to give notice thereof to King Henry, return'd with a com-fortable promife of Succours, and a command to defend themselves; whereupon the Citizens suddenly laying hold on the Rebels, who befieg'd Dublin C1 the Castle, shut their Gates, and stood upon steed their Guard. Which Fitzgerald understanding, comes with an Army of 15000, and affail'd the fieg'd by theRebels. City, which yet was floutly maintain'd by the Townfinen, and particularly by Francis Herbert, who behav'd himfelf fo well, that as I find by feveral Original Dispatches of Finglas, Chief Ju-Records.

flice of Ireland, dated in November 1534, the City by his politick and manful Defence was pre-days longer, it was faid, both it and the Castle had been lost. I find also by their Original Dispatches, dated in the same Month, that he shot and kill'd twenty-four of the Rebels with his own Hand, whereof twenty in one day. For which Service also, he was afterward made Knight, and one of the Kings Council in Ireland. Notwithstanding which, as he was single, and the City much press d by Kldare, who had intercepted all Victuals, Water and Fewel, so at last they were inforc'd to treat upon certain Conditi- Octob.14

ons, which were, That the Citizens flould fet at liberty such of his Men, as they had taken, and labour to procure his Pardon of the King, within fixteen Weeks; and he on the other fide should desit from Hostility, during the faid Space, and redeliver their Children. Being thus departed from Dublin; two days after Sir William Skef-Octob 16.

fington arriving on the Coast of Ireland with his Army, a falle report came, that the City was yielded, whereupon a Council of War being affembled, the Resolution was, that John Salisbury and Sir William Breveton (two of the Captains newly come over) should be fent to Dublin with some Forces, being about five hundred Men, to relieve it (if it were possible,) and that the Lord Deputy should fet Sail for Waterford, where, a-bout the same time, Sir John Saintle, and Sir Rice Mansel, landed with five hundred Soldiers; who, joyning with the Earl of Offory, spoil'd the Country of Kildare; while Brereton and Salisbury comwith the state of the state of Country adjoyning, contrary to his Promife. While affairs pass'd thus, the Generals on either fide made use of the time. For as Kildare fent to the Emperor for obtaining Supplies, (in which bu-finess a Servant of the Earl of Desimond, in whom the Emperor had a special Confidence, was employ'd) fo the Lord Deputy (being now come to Dublin) treated with the Nobility, to difco-Odob, ver their Affection, as not knowing otherwise, how to form a Party amongst them, on which he might rely. For which purpose also he thought it not amis to conclude a Truce with Kildare, until the fifth of January. Kildare in the mean time incouraging his Soldiers with hope of Succours from Spain; the affurance whereof being Dec. 142 brought him by the the Earl of Defmond's Ser-vant, he forgot not to write unto the Pope, complaining of our Kings defection from the Roman Catholick Faith, and together desiring that he might hold the Kingdom of Ireland from that See upon payment of a yearly Tribute. In Dec. 26, these uncertainties, Sir John Allen Knight, formerly Secretary to the Archbishop of Dublin, now Master of the Rolls there, a dexterous Perfon, gave the King this Advice, that he should quickly publish, whether he would pardon Kildere, and so save Charges, or otherwise profecture War against him; since he said, that until this were declar'd, the Gentry of Ireland durft not oppose Kildare, as scaring that when he were reftord, he would revenge himself on all those who opposed him. In the mean while the Earl of Desmond dying, leaves his Estate litigious betwixt his Brother and Grandchild. The Truce now expiring, our Army (which took fome few places at their last landing, and made fome light Skirmishes) lay idle for the most part; insomuch that having gotten Kildure Castle, they suffered it to be lost again. At last, being commanded to proceed, the Lord Deputy in Merch following took Maynoth or Mynwoh Caffle, strongly forti-fied and defended by a hundred of the choicest and his

Feb. 3-

cy and Succeil

Nov. 3

Servants and Soldiers of Kildare. Which place fent unto him, defiring his Opinion of his late 1535.

Actions freely, and in few words; whereupon our Records fay was gotten by Battery and Actions freely, and in few words; whereupon May 3. Mich 2, fault, fo that Hollinshead feems to be mistaken Poole writes, and dispatches to him his Book Pro when he writes, it was betray'd by one Parefe, Fofter-Brother to Firzgerald, the Garrifon being by him made drunk the Night preceding, and that for this Treachery, inflead of Reward, the Deputy commanded him to be hang'd. And further our Records tell us, that one of the faid Garrison depos'd, that not only the Emperor had promis'd to send thither 10000 Men, but that the King of Scots had affur'd them of Aid; Arms in the mean time being brought in a great quantity from Flanders, and other places. Some de-leats also were given to those Troops of the Rebels which appear'd. Nevertheless as they daily increas'd, and Skeffington was old, weak and flow in all his Enterprifes, the Lord Leonard Gray, June 22. Brother to the Marquis Dorfer, though ally'd to to Kildare, was (under the Duke of Richmont, who died fhortly after) authoriz'd to execute the place of Deputy Lieutenant of Ireland, to the no little grief and discontentment of Skeffington. Whereof Kildare being advertis'd, and for the reft finding himfelf reduc'd to some necessity, by the delay of the Emperor, and uncertainty he found in some of his Complices, thought fit to yield himself to the Kings Mercy; yet soas the Lord Gray together with the other Commanders promis'd to intercede effectually with the King in his behalf. Which I find they perform'd, and particularly the Lord Gray, whose Sifter the old August. Earl had married. And thus Kildare was brought by the Lord Gray to London, and his five Uncles not long after; where, upon Examination, the bufive Uncles exefine's being found to merit Punilhment, they were at last executed. Notwithstanding the carnest mediation of the Lord Gray and others. And now these Troubles of Ireland being ended, our King commanded the Deputy to make Peace Suprema- with O Neale for a year or two, and together to fummon a Parliament, both for giving order to those Grievances whereof the Irith complain'd, on fettad and for fetting the buliness of Supremacy and Succession in that form it was establish'd in England. Whereupon it was affembled, May 1. 1536. And in it the Acts of Succession, of Supre-Regn 28. Irijh Stat, prorogn'd till the year following. 1534. Fox.

The Supremacy being (as is abovefaid) invested in the King, by the approbation of his Parliament. The Universities and Bishops of this Kingdom did not a little fecond him; (and particularly Stephen Gardiner, whose Latin Sermon, De vera Obedientia, to this purpose, with the Preface of Doctor Banner, (Archdeacon of Leicester, and about these times Ambassador with the King of Denmark) being yet extent in Print, and by John Fox digested to a Sum) I shall not mention otherwise; my intention being not (in a History) to discuss Theological matters, as holding it fufficient to have pointed at the places where they are controverted, as far as the notice of having made the Offence to be Death, it was need them is come to me. Notwithstanding, as our fafe to go less, especially when some exempla King defir'd to give and receive all Satisfaction pinion de herein, fo knowing that the effect of Reginald herein, fo knowing that the effect of Reginald Pada was great in foreign Countries, and effective to the countries of t prinonges herein, fo knowing that the effect of Reginald our King, who needed now no motive to feet the king.

Poole was great in foreign Countries, and effectively in Italy, where he now liv'd at Padua; he Therefore fome Priors, and other Leclenatical

Unitate Ecolefie, inveighing therein against the kings Supremacy, as also against his new Marriage, and Divorce of Queen Katharine; exciting the Emperor to revenge the injury offer dher, concluding with an advice to Henry to reconcile himself to the Catholick Church, and the Pope as head thereof. Our King having perus'd June 15 this, and knowing it could not long lie hid in Italy, (though Poele had promis'd not to publish it,) fends for him by Post to come into England, to explain fome Paffages thereof. But Peole July reknowing that it was declared Treason there, to deny the King the Title of Supream Head, which he had principally intended in his Book, refus'd, Records. defining the King nevertheless, as being now freed from her, who had been the occasion of all this, to take hold of the present time, and to the Council now furmion'd, whereby he might have the honour of being the cause of a Reformation of the Church in Doctrine and Manners, and that otherwise he would be in great danger. He wrote also to Cuthbert Touffall Bishop of Duresme to incline the King hereunto. But this Bishop (as appears in our Records) reproving him for the bitterness of his Book, and counselling him to burn the Original, denies that King Heury hath separated himself from the Roman Church, but only freed himfelf from the unjust usurpations of the Bishops of that See. (And to this purpose, another large Letter joyntly written after, from the Bifhops of Durefme and London may be feen in Fox.) But Poole being at this time invited to Rome by the Pope, and utterly refufing to burn a Catholick Book (as he faid) like July 26. an Heretick, our King haftned the publishing at home of a Declaration, call'd the Bithops Book, fign'd by the Archbifhop of Canterbury and York, and nineteen other Bishops, wherein is alledg'd out Declatation of ancient Histories and Councils, how many hundred the Pope's years had past, before the Pope took on him this Supe-Utupati-riority over other Bishops, and that it vals contrary to onstigned Succeffion in that form it was established in lyiority over other Billoops, and that it was contrary to ensigned England. Whereupon it was assembled, May 1. the Oath given, when any of them enters the Papa—by the Bi1536. And init the Acts of Succession, of Supremacy, of First-fruits, against Appeals to Rome, &c. by the first eight Councils, that deere a limited power as also an Act for the attainder of the late Earl to all Billoops, and particularly the first eight Comeil of Rillare and his Complices, were passed. And because the King had spent in this War forty diction every where, and allows Billoops in Truisibutional pounds, he demanded together with a special configuration of the second of the secon venue for the future, which the Lords Spiritual been bount to transactionary was just across a from and Temporal accorded in great part, the Clerities in the Emperors of those times, and not from Christ, whose gay particularly giving him a twentieth part of Kingdom they said was Spiritual and not Carnal; setting down they faid was Spiritual and not Carnal; setting forth this Doctrine further by Arguments drawn and at last for ever. And thus the Parliament was from Holy Scriptures and fome Eathers. But to return to 1535, neither the Example of others which fubfcrib'd, nor the Terror of the Statute could hinder divers Religious Persons to continue in their sormer Opinions; infomuch, that they openly fpake againft the Kings Supremacy. Which being made known, caus'd him to advife with his Council concerning their Punishment, some indeed thought that Imprisonment, Banishment, or the like, was chastifement enough for those, who confessing the Kings Supream Authority in all Temporal Matters, did out of Scrupulofity rather than Malice, impugn the reft. But when it was objected again, both that the Number was too great for either of those Punishments, and that the Law having made the Offence to be Death, it was not ry Justice might contain the rest in Obedience

Suprema-cv. olent Courfes; therefore he not only mourn'd

May 4 Sanders. Schim. Angl.

July 22.

May 25.

Apr.1534 No. 1534. Of Roch ster, who having been impriored to the Act of Richgris Succession, and attained therefore by Parliaments. May 2.

May 21. Is offer'd a Cardi.

ed. June 22.

the Author of the

feen, but only that on the feventh of May laft in the Tower of London before divers Persons, he had Falfly, Maliciously and Traiterously said, that the King is not Supream Head of the Church of England,) was by the Kings command openly Rehead-Beheaded the 22d of June, 1535. Thus did the ed.
Popes favour but precipitate the Bishops Ruine; against whom notwithstanding, I find, the King did but unwillingly proceed, as having held him ever in fingular effects, for his Learning and By fome good Parts. All which cannot make me believe thought yet, that he was Author of King H.my's Pock the Au. spaint Live Kings favour, and where it was needful also interpose their Judgment. This while, the Pope, it is in my Copy if it be not missiaken) Et quanquam who suspected net perchance that the Bishops Rex sic acceptus sit in Anglia, plurimat tamen who impected not perchance that the binops lex he accepts it in Angua, putanta cancer end was fo near, had for more reflinency of his partes extern idem non affirmant. All which favour to him, as disaffection to our King, fent being produced together, and added to his rehim the Cardinals Hat, but unfeasonably, his fusal of the Oath of Sucception, for which in Head being off. Nevertheles, as he had first the Parliament of Nevertheer, 1534, he was atdefired Francis to mediate for him, he omitted not rainted of misprision of Treason, as I find by the inwardly, but caus'd his Head to be poll'd, and his Beard formerly flaven, to be cut round, though others facetiously interpret it to be nothing elfe, than the putting upon a new Dignity, a new Countenance; but if he proceeded thus rigorously against the Opposers of his Supremacy, he did no less punish the many pre-tended Reformers and Contradictors of the Roman Catholick Religion. Therefore, as the laft year he had condemn'd felm Fith, a Sacramentary, to the Fire, so he now caus'd divers Hollanders in London, who had devis'd fome different Opinions by themfelves, concerning certain Articles of Christian Religion, to be burnt in Smithfield. Shortly after which again, fome others were executed for denying the Supremacy. So that on both fides it grew a bloody time. On-ly, as our King found the terrors already given, did not fuffice to keep the rest in awe, he re-Therefore, he laid hand on John Fisher Bishop of Rochster, who having been imprison'd now a ment, was now urg'd with the Supremacy; which he difallowing (as having not given his voluntary O2th or Promise thereunto the last year, regether with other Bishops) incurr'd the danger of the Law. Which also was taken the worse, that in the Convocation, 1530, he had yielded the Title of Supremum Caput Eelefie Anglieme guantum per Christ Legem lieet. Yet as the Pope for more confirming him in his Opinion, had declar'd him Cardinal of St. Vitale during his faid Restraint though he profess'd that if the Hat lay at his Feet, he would not stoop to take it up.) So our King understanding thereof was much more incensed, both as the Pope had conferr'd his most eminent Honours on a Man kept by him in Prison, and guilty of the highest pu-nishment his Laws could insict, and as he knew of what confequence it would be, if his Subjects were thus incourag'd to contemn his Authority: Therefore he refolv'd now to defer his

Justice no longer. Whereupon, the faid Bishop as publickly convicted and condemn'd for divers Points (the particulars whereof yet I have not 1535. Persons, that were Criminal in this kind, being afterwards publickly to justifie his Actions, calling him by the name of Sanctiffinum Episcom, and Economic fflice was not yet grown fo familiar to our king, menioned in our Records, earded by Sandon, but that it troubled him much, for he would and extant in the Bullarium,) of which hereafter and extant in the Bullarium,) of which hereafter) both that he was Innocent, and our King an Heretick, ϕ_c . But this again was defended in an Apology written here in Elegant Latin, whether by Stephen Cardiner (who as I find in our Records wrote a Justification of the King herein) or fome other; which I should have inserted but for the length, and as fome would judge it for the vehemency. Though, as the King retain'd still all the chief Articles of the Roman Church, it cannot be wondred if the Author thereof did the more bitterly inveigh against one that had given his Sovereign that odious Title.

Our King being thus many ways exasperated against the Pope, neglected no means of extirpating his chief Agents and Favourers, and, with them, all his Authority in this Country; therefore he proceeded against Sir Thomas More, com- Sir Thomas mitted at the fame time, and for the fame canfe, with Fisher. For though (as Sanders faith) he the same would by the Bilhop of Rockelfers exemplary Death account. have brought More to a Conformity, yet finding that it was impossible, he commanded his Counfel in the Law to examine him concerning the Supremacy (now enacted) more particularly. But May 7: Sir Thomas More, (as his Indictment hath it) malitiese silebat, saying yet afterwards, I will not meddle with such matters. He was accused also for holding fecret intelligence by Letter with the Bishop of Rochester, during their Imprison-ment; which appeared both by the consession of the faid Bishop, and in that they held the same Language. It being observed that both of them June 12. faid, in their Examinations, the Act about Supremacy was like a two-edg d Sword, for if one answer one way, it will confound his Soul, and if the other way, it will confound his Body. Yet Richard Rich June 12. the Kings Sollicitor (made afterwards Lord Rich) comes to him again, and having first protested that he had no Commission to talk with him of that matter,) as believing perchance his former Answer, or Silence had sufficiently convinc'd him,) did, as is in the Record, demand then, if it were enacted by Parliament, that Richard Rich letence should be King, and that it should be Treasonfor any with the to dony it, what offence it were to contravene this Solicitor. Act? Sir Thomas More answer'd, that he should of- General. fend if he faid no, because be was bound by the Act; but that this was Calus levis; Whereupon, Sir Thomas More faid he would propose a higher Case, suppose by by Parliament it were enacted quod Deus non fit Deus, and that it were Treafen to con-Detts non itt Detts, and that it were Ireafen to con-travene, whether it were an Offence to fay according to the faid Act; Richard Rich replied yea, but faid withful, I will propofe a middle Cafe, became yours is too high. The King you know is conflicture Suppream Head of the Church on Earth, why floudd not you Mufter More accept him fo, as you would noe if I were made King by the fuppolition aforefaid. Sit Tho-mas More answered, the Cafe was not the fame, becaufe (faid he) a Parliament can make a King and against Luther (as Sanders and Bellarmine will have Derose him, and that every Parliament-man may give it) or Sir Thomas Mere (as others fay) though I has confent thereunto, but that a Subject cannot be bound doubt not but they might both revite it by the fo in the case of Supremacy, Quia Consensum ab 1535. Parliament Rolls, was thought fufficient to con-dem him. So that notwithflanding many fub-they neglected, he Excommunicates them all, The king til defences made by him, while he contended to have given no offence but in Silence, (unless it were in comparing the Statute to a tworumin of edged Sword, which yet he faid, he alledg'd no restriction of conference, than to shew how dangerous it was to answer our to answer our changes out it was to answer our to answer, and notwithflanding also his denying the first the passage between the Sollicitor and himself in that sense (perchance he meant the Iatin) which is above related, the Jary in his Tryal, July 1. before the Lord Chancellor, the Duke of Norfolk, &c. deelar'd him guilty of imagining to deprive the King of his Title and Dignity, which by a Statute, Regni 26. was made High Treason. This great Person hereupon go-Il face ing shortly after to the place of Execution, met to dinefs among many Friends one only Enemy, who oopenly revird him, for a Sentence heretofore Execution given in Chemoery, to which, yet, he made no answer, but that if it were to do, he would do fo again. And, new being resolved to die, he return'd to his wonted sacciousness. Therefore, being to go up the Scaffold, he faid to one; Friend help me up, and when I go down again, let me flift for my felf as I can. Being now mounted, the Executioner (as the cuftom is ask'd him forgiveness, which he granted, but told him withal, he should never have herefy by enting off his Head, his Neck was so short. Then laying down this Head on the Block, he bid the Executioner fley till be bad laid efide his Beard, for (faid he) it never committed Treefen. After which, ceming to some private Devotions, he receiv'd his Death. Thus ended Sir Thomas Alore, with fo little Con-flernation, as even the terrors of Death could not take off the pleafure he had in his conceited and merry Language, which many attributed to his Innocence. For certainly though he fell into the danger of the Law, they thought his intentions were rather to elude it with ambiguous Answers, and an affected Silence, than to declare himself any way. Beside, by an Original of his, (about this time, written to Cromvel) it Match 5: appears that heretofore upon perufing the Kings Mach 5 appears that necession upon perming the Amgs Book against Luther, be difficulted him to exalt for the Popes much the Papal zimbority, jed it disnissifyad his countries.

July 1

Supreme that Each, as well as his private findy of that questioned the Pope Permission. that trees, as wen as us, private pumy of some your on officerwards, be could not dony the Pope a Primacy, bonever yet be could not hold it fitch, as that the Authority derived to him thereby, was to be preferred. above a General Council.

This while (as I find in our Records,) our King upon the death of Clement VII. hoping better of Paulus III. gave Sir Gregory de Cafalis new Instructions to advise him, to regard the King of England, and to confult with some Learned Men, in his Caufe, (not imitating Clement, who knowing the truth conceal'd it) and thefe Learned Men to be chosen out of France. To this also the Pope sear, until News came to Rome, first, of the Execution of divers Monks in England for denying the Supremacy, and then of the death of More and Recbefer. Whereupon the Pope resolving to proceed against our King, begins to minute terrible Bulls, whereof I find there were five feveral forms. But this which I find in the Bullarirai forms. But this which I find in the buttarium, and extracted by Sanders (dated Aug. 30.) was that which was approved and made afe of, being to this effect. First, objecting to him, as well the Divorce of Katharine, as the Marrying since, and making Laws against the Pepes Authority, and punishing those who contradicted (as lately the Bishop of Rochester.) He warns and deprives the King of his Realm, subjects the Excomwhole Kingdom to the Interdict; declares the munica-Issue by Anne, Illegitimate, forbids Allegeance to ted at his Subjects, commerce with other States; dif-Rome folves all Leagues of Princes with him; Commands the Clergy to depart out of England, the Nobility to take Arms against him, &c. Having refolv'd this Cenfure, yet I find, it was not openly denounc'd, till he saw all hope past of reclaiming King Henry, or at least that the Empeclaiming King Hamy, or at least that the Emperor was at leifure to execute it, of which hereafter. Our King hearing of this, entertains friendship with the Protestant Princes of Germa-Makes 2, 3, and the rather that intelligence was brought, with the how the Pope had declar'd he would give away Protestant his Kingdom to some Roman Catholick Prince of Princes of that Country, as being (it feems) unwilling to Germany. greaten France or Spain therewith, left afterwards himself should not be so able to sway the Ballance. Which I mention not, yet, as if it were probable to be effected, or that our King fear'd any fuch Attempt, as long as he flood upon good terms with his Subjects, but that by ftrength-ning himself in Germany, he might the better chastise that Person, who upon the Popes Incouragement durst undertake the Enterprise. I do find also, that the French King did concur in this Treaty with the Protestants, both, as upon the death of Pope Clement, the chief support of the great defign in Italy did fall, and as he began to give fome ear to the Evangelicks in Gormony, as appears by his fending for Melanelben, and other reancist. pailages in Sleidan, which I shall hereafter fer fends for down. Howfoever, our King as he found that Melants with no little asperity he maintain'd his Authority at home, so he thought his care should be the greater to justifie it abroad. Infomuch that he fent unto all places, (where he held Correfpondence) to give, together with an account of his Adtions, the reason why he had taken on him the Supremacy. Therefore, Doctor William Barlow the Kings Chaplain, and elect Brother of St. Alaph, being joyn'd in Commiffion with Thomas Helevefi to James, labour'd to give him all manner of Impressions, which might bring him to a Conformity; which Buchanan al- Buch. fo mentions, faying that James was intreated to read over their Arguments, and confider them. Notwithstanding which, as they were referr'd by him to his Clergy, so (as, the same Author hath it) they together with some Learned Men, whom our King offer'd to fend, for further Dewhom our King oner a to rena, no nutrier De-claration of this Point, were for the prefent Re-jected. Which again, being advertis'd to our King, he thought fit fuddenly to employ the Lord William Howard, Brother to the Duke of Norfolk, and the faid Bishop, to James, to make him divers advantageous Propositions, and withal to draw him to an Interview. Whereunto, therefore, being press'd by them, and the rather that it was in sequence of a former Proposition; fames, who had no disposition thereunto, sent (as our Ambassadors write) to procure by a private Meffenger, a Breve from the Pope, inhabiting this Journey, fo that until the receipt thereof he was forced to make other excuses; by which, yet, I find he denied not a meeting with our King, but defir'd him only, it might be in France, and the Franch King prefent, as hoping, thereby (it feems) to be less conftrain'd, than it he came fingle into our Kings Dominions; all which, as it did but increase our Kings Jealousie of his Nephews Intentions (for he expected War (as lately the Bishop of Reduction.) He warns from many hands, as the Pope had threatned the King, to reform these faults; or upon refufal cites him, and all that favour him, to appear him on his fide, as knowing of what confequence

1535. it was, to keep his Kingdom safe on that part; and therefore, labour'd still, not only to induce him to abrogate the Papal Jurifdiction in his Dominions, but made some other Overtures; both of creating him for the present, Duke of York (as Buchanan hath it) and for leaving him Succeffor in this Kingdom, in cafe he conform'd himself for the rest. But his Clergy (however Queen Margaret had given hope thereof) being utterly averle, diffuaded him; yet fome Operation I find it feem'd to have. For by an Original Dispatch in May following, 1536. James cer-May 2 May 2. ITAL DITISECT IN 1867 19 OHOWING, 1336. JAMES GET-1336. The do ur King, that be had fent to Rome to get writes to metrations for reformation of some Enormities, end though two estimates of the state of the state of the far he had fellows, and Temporal Lends given to the Kirk by own shridgd noble Predecissor. To which as our King not onthe Popes ly gave credit, but a fafe conduct to the Mef-Power. fenger, as was defir'd, fo he feem'd to receive fome Satisfaction, and together hop'd, he would not, at least so soon, be drawn to affist his Enemies, and therefore forbore a while to folicite this Point, pursuing, nevertheless, the propos'd Interview, but more flackly than before; but Fames had other defigns, as shall be told the year

> Our King finding thus, that bufineffes were fafe on this part, proceeded more confidently in his intentions of suppressing, together with the Popes Authority, all those who chiefly supported it. And because he thought Monasteries did furnish more able Men to contest with him in this Point, than any part elfe, he advis'd how to proceed with them. Whereupon, one faid thus:

following.

F in all Affairs, betwixt your Highnels, and any elfe, at home, or abroad, it be the part of a Counfellor to give a free and impartial Advice, I shall, under favour, crave the same liberty in those things that intervene betwixt God and your Highness, both because the Duty we owe unto that Supream Majesty is transcendent, and that general and publick Errors committed against him, are of a more pernicious Confequence than any else. In confidence of Pardon, therefore, I shall presume to opine concerning the business of Monasteries now in question. SIR, if it were first propos'd now, whether it were fit to erect them, I must confess I should give my Affent, not yet that I should allow any exceffive number, or perchance approve all the rules observed in them. But wholly to exclude fo pious a Retrait for Men unapt for fecular Bufiness, or otherwise retir'd from the World, were, in my conceit, to leave those unprovided for who of all other were most proper in a devout life to ferve and glorifie their Creator. is in my Opinion, therefore, a due place left for Monasteries; yet, when they grow to that Multitude, that either the just proportion they should bear in a State, is exceeded, or that, in effect, they should become a Receptacle only for lazy and idle Perfons, I should wish to apply fome convenient Remedy. But Sir, who shall give it? For if we refer all unto the Pope, how could we ever hope of a Moderation, especialcould we ever nope of a Moderation, especially while they are but Retraits for fo many Servants entertain/d for him at other. Mens cofts. And if your Highness (especially fince you have taken upon you the Supremacy) floudd suppress them, what a Scandal would follow? Fer who would think, Sir, at home or abroad, that your Highness exercis'd your new charge therein, as you ought, or complied with your place? Again, Sir, what a wrong would it be to the Foun-

fome of their Lands to that uso, as their Heirs 1535 have to enjoy the rest? Would they not fay this were to trench on the publick right, and to fruffrate whatfoever either Divine or Human Lawshave establish'd? Therefore, Sir, be pleas'd not to think so much of their Overthrow, as Reformation; or if there be occasion to suppress fome, as being Supernumerary, yet fince they are Houses dedicated to God, be pleas'd, by all means, to convert the profit ariling thence, to fome other pious use, and howsoever, to referve a fufficient number in every Shire for either Sex; and fo shall your Highness both excuse all Obloquy, and together manifest the care you have to keep up those ancient Monuments of Devo-

To which another, who better underfood the Kings mind, answer'd thus:

IF it be true, that they speak enviously (that Answerd I may fay nothing else) who would reduce by ano-all reason of State to the sober Principles and Board. Doctrines of Faith, it is no less certain, that they ipeak prophanely who wholly exclude them. In State there is use of all: Only as it is a Symmetrical Body, nothing in it must pass proportion. Infomuch, as neither the Secular Magiftrate or Clergy, on the one fide, nor the Soldier, Merchant, Artificer and Husbandman on the other, shall exceed a just quantity. The due Composition of it being such, as there may be those who may labour and fight, as well as pray for it. Elfe, who would not change our Generals and Captains to Bifhops and Deans, and our Shipping and Forst, to Chappels and Religious Houses? But what a proportion, Sir, definition of the second the Clergy now hold, when the fourth part of the Revenues of the Kingdom is imployd that way. For Sir, when the Tenth we pay them in one kind, and the Lands they hold in another, are estimated, they amount to this rate or more, as I am inform'd, I shall not yet be hastly to suppress them. I consess all true which was now faid, and do not only admit the piety of their Institution, but the use that may be made of fome few, as two or three in every Shire. Neither, shall I ever confent that more should be fupprest than were needful, and yet the Money imploy'd for your Highness's most urgent occasions only. The Supernumerary part of them, and your Forrests being by me held like Jewels of your State, which though they yield not ready Coin, may ever be converted to it; I should for this reason (when there were no other) conferve them as much as were possible. But Sir, when I consider again, how the Pope or Bishop of Rome (as your Highness commands him to be call'd) hath threatned to joyn all Christian Princes against your Highness, and that in these Monasteries he nourishes a Seminary of factious Perfons that oppose your Supremacy; and what Influments they may be of thirring sedition in your Highness's Kingdom, at the same time that some foreign Power should invade it, I cannot but wish some good order were given. I should think fit therefore they were instantly visited, and those who were unable to keep the Vows they made at their entrance, to be permitted to go to fome more active life, and the vices of the rest, not only chastis'd, but care taken to punish those who henceforth speak or behave themfelves licentiously. And, so far forth, certainly your Highness will make but lawful use of your Supremacy. As for the suppression of any, not I, but some violent and inexcusable necessity ders of them, who had as much right to give must be the Counsellor. If your Highness have Vol. II.

Speech in Council againt fuppref-fing Mo-nasteries.

ries.

1535. any other way to defend your felf against the threatned Invasions, I shall never advise you to this; and yet that, no further than to bring your Estate to a just temper.

Our King confidering the reasons on both sides, faid he would cause the Monasteries to be severely visited, and the enormous Crimes of them, (having been formerly rather fubject to Pecuniary Mulcts, than corrected as they ought) to be exemplarily punish'd, and a Reformation given to all Abuses. Protesting nevertheless, that he would suppress none, without the consent of his Parliament, among whom, he did politickly foresee, that some for Conscience sake, (the Roman Religion being now much cried down) and others for avoiding the charges of War (then menaced) would fooner lay the burden on those Monasteries, than take it on themselves; where-Secetrary of in its due place. And now Cromwel the Semade Vias he was thought a favourer of the Reformers, fitor General of the Reformers, being made General Vifitor, imployd Richard Monafle Layton, Thomas Leigh, William Detre, Doctors of ries. the Law, Doctor folm London, Dean of Walling-Records. Histoffun Articles for vifiting Managharia and State of the Law, The State of the Law of the L Articles, for vifiting Monasteries every where; his Depu- by which they were to enquire into the Government, Behaviour, and Education of the Persons of both Sexes. To find out all their offences, and to this purpose give them incouragements to accuse both their Governors and each other. To command them to exhibit their Mortmains, Evidences, and Conveyances of their Lands; to produce their Plate and Money, and give an Inventory thereof. Together with which the King gave forth Injunctions to be observ'd, some tending to the establishing of his Supremacy, some touching the good Government of the Houses; as that no Brother go out of the Precinct; that there be but one entrance; that no Woman frequent the Monks, nor any Man the Nuns, &c. And fome for Education, as, that a Divinity Lecture be every day read and frequented. That the Abbot daily expound some part of the rule of their Order, shewing yet that these Ceremonies are but Introductions to Religion, which confideth not in Apparel, shaven Heads, &c. but in purity of Mind. That none shall profess or wear the habit till twenty-four years of Age. That no feigned Relicks nor Miracles be shew'd.

No offerings to Images, &c.
Upon these and other Injunctions, joyn'd to the Liquilicion aforefaid, the Commissioners found means to make divers Monasteries obnoxious, for upon the Petition of divers Monks who were weary of their Habit, fome alledging for their excule, that they were profess d before they came to the years of Discretion; others, that the late Injunctions were too flrict to be observ'd; the King feizing on the House, commanded that they who were profess'd under twenty-four, flould be fet at liberty, as being thought too young to make a Vow as they ought, or in-deed to keep it. That they who were above twenty-four, when they made their Vow, might have leave to depart if they would. At which time the Men, if in Orders, should have a Priefts Habit given them, and forty Shillings in Money; the Nuns should have only a Gown, fuch as fecular Women ware, and liberty to go whither they would. The Condition yet of fome being better, who for furrendring their Houses to the King (to which by threats and fair words they were induc'd) got finall Pensions during their Lives. Others, by paying great Sums to the King and Cromvel, redeem d their Monasteries from the present Calamity; yet so, as even from these also, divers Jewels and Church-

Ornaments were taken away to the Kings use. 1535. Which being done, Leigh and the reft at their return, gave that accompt of their Imployment, and particularly of their feigned Miracles and Relicks, as well as finful and fluggish life of the Religious Orders, as not only Cromwel with much violence faid, their Houses should be thrown down to the foundation, but the whole body of the Kingdom when it was publish'd to them which I find industriously procur'd) became to The Nafcandaliz'd thereat, as they refolv'd if the King tion ge-ever put it into their hands, to give remedy fcandathereunto: Yet were not all alike Criminal; for liz'd at fome Societies behav'd themselves so well, as this Ville their life being not only exempt from notorious tation. faults, but their spare times bestow'd in writing Books, Painting, Carving, Graving, and the like Exercises, their Visitors became intercessors for them. But of those, as I find not many mention'd, fo they were involv'd at laft in the common fate, it being thought dangerous to use diflinction, both left the fault of Manners (which might be corrected) should be taken by the People as the fole cause of their Dissolution; and as it was pretended that the Revenues should be imploy'd to some better uses. Not long after which again, the King caus'd all Colleges, Chantries, and Hospitals to be visited, not omitting to take a particular furvey of all the Revenues and Dignities Ecclefiaftical within his Kingdom, which was return'd to him in a Book, to be kept in the Exchequer.

Our King having thus omitted nothing which might prevent or frustrate their designs who were most able to offend him, thought it his part now, to affure those who he thought might be of most use. Therefore he sends Fox, Bishop Dec. 4. of Hereford, to the Protestant Princes in Germany, Dec. 6. affembled at Smaleald, to exhort them to an Unity Bifhop of in Doctrine, wherein he offered his best affistance Hereford by conference with their Divines, as being the fent to the only ground of establishing either Peace at home, Protestan or Correspondence abroad; that unless this were Garnany. done, it would be a great prejudice to them in the Council now propos'd, which yet he took to be pretended only as an Intention and Artifice of the Popes to entertain time, and in the mean while to fow Division among them, as he doth now incite Christian Princes against England for rejecting his Tyranny. Therefore they were not to expect a free Council how much foever promis'd, yet if they defir'd a Council, they should attend till all Christian Princes were at peace with each other; and that it ought to be held in an indifferent place, it being impossible otherwise, but that it should be partial and factious. That this being done, as he had expell'd the Popes Authority out of his Dominions, fo he would joyn with them to restore God'strue Worship. And so the Bishop concluded, desiring only some might be appointed to whom he might fpeak of these businesses privately. which after due thanks, they answer'd, that really there was no difference among them, there being none who would not fland to the Augu-tan Confession: That they took well his Highness's Admonition about the Council General, now promis'd at Mantua. But that, (as they had Dec 21. answer'd Vergerius the Popes Legate) they did not think either that the place was fit, or that the Pope had the fole right of calling or ordering of it, which belong'd as well to the Emperor and other Princes. For the rest, they faid, they would appoint fome who might communicate privately with the Bishop, as was required, of which we shall speak more hereaster.

In the mean while Ferdinand, who more defir'd to hear of Peace in the Empire, than Schoollefolurin of the lants.

Argu-

Ambassadors af-

1535

Arguments, how well foever diffuted, confirm'd tofore committed by Clement to the Cardinal de the Treaty made 1532. of which the Duke of la Cruz, though not with any good Success. In Saxony (who came from him to Smaleald) advertis'd the Protestants, who (Decemb. 24) decreed, That the League betwixt them, made 1530. for mutual defence in the cause of Religion, now shortly expring, should continue ten years longer, and that they would take into their Confederation, all who received the Augustan Confession. To this Diet Guillaume de Bellay Seigneur de Langey (imploy'd from Fran-cis) came likewife. But his advices, though for the most part conformable to our Kings, were not fo acceptable. For as Francis by confederating himfelf with the Turk) that formidable Enemy of Germany) had disoblig'd the whole Nation on the one side, so by burning divers Evangelicks in France, he had on the other side much incens'd them all against him; which displeafure, being fomented many ways by Ferdinand, had intercluded almost all Correspondence betwixt them, till by Monsieur de Langeys industry it was reviv'd. Who to appease them alledg'd not only some Excusatory Letters formerly sent, but faid his Master could not make any Alliance, nor lend any Aid to any Prince against them. Nor would burn any for holding the Tenents of the Augustan Confession, unless they were both Authors of dissension in his Kingdom, and despighted the ancient Ceremonies of the Church. After which in private Conference with their Divines, he declar'd that the King his Master, was not averse to most of their Tefrants that and particularly that he did not hold the Popes nents fet down in Melancthons Loci Communes; Founds is supermacy to be founded fure Divino, but humano; though Henry VIII. (he faid) denied it eitheir Opither way. That Purgatory, being the ground shirt.

Shirt.

The Wals, and all their gainful Doctrine, he had required by what place in the Scripture they prov'd it: To which all the answer they made after divers Months space, was, that they would not give their Adversaries Weapons which might afterwards be return'd or retorted on themselves. As for Monasteries, he said, that he thought it might be obtain'd of the Pope, that none who were not of some ripe age, should vow them-felves to that Life. Or if they did, they might leave it and marry if they would. But by no means, that his Master would have them thrown down, or the Revenues taken away, but rather imploy'd towards the bringing up of Youth in Learning and Piety. And for marriage of Priefts, he thought this the best expedient, that Men already married, might (notwithstanding their Wives) be admitted to execute the Priefthood; but for others, they should not marry, or if they would, they should relinquish the Priesthood. As for Communion under both kinds, that the King had heretofore spoken with Clement VII. at Marfeilles, and that he thought it might be obtain'd of this Pope, that free use of both might be granted according to the Confcience of him that took it, alledging for this purpose from the King his Master, how he had heard from ancient Men, that about 120 years ago, it was the manner to communicate in both kinds, in the Chappels or Oratories, but not in the body or middle of the Church. Nevertheless, that the Kings of France receiv'd it ever in both kinds. Which when his faid Mafter urg'd, the Priefts did anfwer him, that Kings were anointed, and therefore might communicate in both kinds as well as For the Scriptures fpeak of the Royal Priesthood, but it was not lawful for others to do fo. That in the common and ordinary Prayers, the King did acknowledge that many things might be cut off, many things should be wholly into whose hands they put the arbitrement of taken away. And that the care hereof was here their Differences, soboth Princes sought to make conclusion, he exhorted them to fend fome of their chief Divines to confer with those he had in Paris; and that he would make fuch a choice, and eager, he would also joyn others that were mild and temperate Persons to treat with them; to the intent that all parts being difcufs'd the truth might appear. In the mean while he exhorted them by no means to give ear, or agree to any Council, until they knew his mind and the Kings of Englands, who both were refolv'd to do nothing but by a mutual confent. As for those who had power to call it, that his Predeceffor Louis was of Opinion, that it belong'd to the Emperors and Kings, and that the King of Navarre was of the same mind, but that Pope fulius Profesibing or Excommunicating them both, Ferdinand of Spain took that occasion to conquer Navarre. Nevertheless that the King his Mafter confest no Council was Authentical, unless it were both affembled in so safe a place, and held in fo free a manner as no Man might fuffer for speaking his Conscience. After all which, the said Monsieur de Langey did sollicite them much, to enter into a strict League with them much, to enter into a first League with the King his Mafler. But they, whether out of The Frestavour for Ferdinand and the Emperor, with whom fedinates had lately made their Peace, or, that 0- field with therwife they were not fufficiently fatisfied of the Fench therwife they were not fufficiently fatisfied of the Fench therwife this. So that Manfeur de Langey, fions. (though professing on the prefer Poves page) (though professing on the present Popes part, that if matters were orderly carried, he would be content to comply in many things for a common Good and Peace) return'd without effeeting any thing. And thus out of I know not what mistaking or obstinacy, this great overture for bringing all the differences in Religion, to a moderate and uniform accord, was interrupted and broken off, it being probable that Francis would have subscrib'd to the Tenents of Religion, which himself propos'd, when he had found them conformable for the reit. But as Monsieur de Langey told them, they might after-wards repent their neglect of so great an offer; so it prov'd true, as by the fequence will appear. For Francis who would have been glad, both that the Power which the Pope ufurp'd over Kings were fomething diminish'd, and the abovesaid Articles in Religion effablish'd, finding there was now no probability of an Union, thought it fafer to rule by his ancient Maxims, than to run the trouble and hazard of a Reformation. Yet Sept. 7 I find by an Original from Christopher Mount a German, and Agent of our Kings, then in France, that Monsseur de Langey did once receive from the Protestants certain Articles concerning Pacification in Religion, which he deliver'd the King his Master; which thereupon being perus'd, mitigated and chang'd by the Sorbon or Parissan Divines, were again return'd to the Protestants who likewife advising of them, said they would tolerate this change, Modo fpes Concordice bine accessura sit. But this was before Langer's Oration above-mention'd, and perchance before they knew or had taken particular notice of the French Kings Actions formerly deliver'd. I find also by the same Original, that Mount was commanded by our King to haften to Germany, and to dehort Melantibon from going to France, whether he was invited by that King, and to perfuade him hither. For as about this time the German Protestants desir'd both friendship and accommodation in Religion with King Henry and Francis, Vol. II.

1537. ufe of Melanethon; especially our King; having, must intreat you also, to respect my Maids, and give as I find in the Instructions to Mount, a great opinion of his Vertue, Learning, Temperance and Gravity, and therefore desir'd his presence here, both for framing an accord with the Germans, and (when that succeeded not) for appearance for: Lastly, I make this Vovy, that mine eyes desire you above all things. fing the differences of Religion in his Kingdom, it being thought a fit work for that pious and modest Man, however he be branded by some, tanquam De omni Religione securus. But if Mount's Relation of his Conference with Monsieur de Langey may be intirely believ'd, or (if you will) Monsteur de Langey himself; one of the Points the faid Protestants would have agreed to, was, Se ferre Posse primatum Episcopi Romani, ad servandum Doctrine Consensum in Ecclesia, modo secundum Dei verbum omni judicet. Langey himself consessing Impossibile esse probari Primatum Episcopi Romani ex Des verbo, And that this Point was so far acknowledg'd by Clement VII. that he faid he was content, Ut Primatus hic positius jure deseratur; and that the more learn'd Cardinals in Rome were of this Opinion. But thefe things I leave to the ordit of Mount, the different and diligent Sleiden not mentioning any fuch moderation on either fide, and Mount himself giving indeed no other Authority for this, but Monsieur de Langey's word by way of Discourse, who yet when he was de-manded for a fight of the Articles and Censure above related, excus'd himfelf.

This year some Letters from Sevil in Spain, extant among our Records, advertis'd our King, that a Million of Gold was brought the Emperor from Peru, yet that it was thought to be gotten rather out of the spoils of the Country than otherwise, no rich Mines being then found. Nevertheless, that the Inhabitants of zindaluzia flock'd thither in fo great numbers, that the Country was almost left empty. Which Intelligence, though of great Confideration, was yet pass'd over; the King being intentive wholly to the fetling of Religion, and the right of Succession, which I find he did with all industry procure.

Brafs Canon first

England

Jan. 29. 1536.

It appears by our Histories that this year great brafs Ordnance, as Canon and Culverins were first cast in England, by one John Owen, they having been formerly made only in other Countries, and far from the perfection of which they are at this prefent, as may be feen in Tartaglia, and fome other ancient Authors.

Queen Katharine, or (as the King commanded her to be call'd) the Princess Dowager, finding now no affiftance but spiritual from the Pope, now no alutance but intritud from the roots, nor reparation procury'd by the Emperor but incertain and flow, and for the reft grieving at the profeserity and fruitfulness of Queen anne (now with Child again, whereof yet flee mif-carried) fell into her laft fickness at Kinbelton in Hunting donshire, in the fiftieth year of her Age, and the three and thirtieth fince her coming into England; during which time, though comforted by the King and Eustachio Chapuys, Do-Aro of both Laws, and Amballador refident from Q. Katha. Charles, fine fell to desperately ill, as finding run falls death now coming, the caus'd a Maid attending desperate- on her, to write to the King to this effect:

My most Dear Lord, King and Husband,

PolytVirg. THE boar of my death now approaching, I cannot the king.

Souls Health, which you ought to prefer before all confiderations of the Worlder Flyhrubatfoever. For which you have cast me into many Calamities, and your Self into many Troubles. But I forgive you all; and gray God to do so likewise. For the rest I commend

Farewell

Besides which Letter she dictated another to Eustachius, desiring him to procure that the Emperor might put our King in mind of her request, when otherwise he forgot it.

The King having receiv'd her Letter, became fo compaffionate, that he wept; but her death J. being related floorly after, he caus dher Goods HerDath (which I find estimated to 5000 Marks) to be and Fune-imploy'd towards the Funeral chiefly, and after to those that deserv'd recompence; and her Bo-dy to be buried with due solemnity in the Monaftery at Peterberough, which for the honour of her Memory, King Hemry referv'd (when all the Holimbed) reft fell) and erected it to a Bishops Sec. The News whereof, not long after, being brought to the Emperor, troubled him much, as holding his Aunt in fingular efteem. But as he confidered, that in her death all causes of Hostility were ceas'd, and that besides, it concern'd him more to defend himself against the Turk. than to purfue the execution of the Popes Ban (though once undertaken by him) he endeayour'd nothing more than to close handsomly with our King. Nevertheles, as he was discreer and magnanimous, he would not fully discover himself till he had sounded first our Kings Disposition. After which (as I find mention'd in Records the instruction of our King to Doctor Richard Pace) Charles (by his Refident Ambassador here) propos'd a Renovation of the ancient Amity, upon these Conditions. First, that our King would The Emperor be reconciled to the Pope, wherein he offer'd bis Medi- fers to rene reconstruct to the tope, mention be option to mean ferstone action. Secondly, that our King would aid bin a new gainft the Turk. Thirdly, that (according to the finedship Treaty 15.18.) be would belp him againft the French, with King who now threatned Milan. To which our King who now threatned Milan. To which our King Honr, answerd; That the first breach of Amity proceeded Kings and from the Emperor, which if he will acknowledge, and live to those of from the emperor, which if he will acknowledge, and wet to excuse, King Henry is contented to renew it, simply those of and absolutely; as for the Cenditions proposed: First, touching the Bishop of Rome, the proceedings against him have been so just, and so ratisfied by the Parliament of England, that it cannot be revoked. Therefore, though the Bishom himself the Nelton the Bishom the Riben simple the site of t ment of England, that it cannot be revok a. Lacre-fore, though the Bishop himself bath mide means to him for Reconciliation, yet it hath been refus d. Se-condly, for aid against the Turk, when Christian Princes shall be at Peace, then King Henry will do therein as to a Christian Prince belongsth. Thirdly, fer aid against France, he cannet resolve on that, till the Amity be renewed with the Emperor, that so being indifferent friend to both, he may freely travail either to keep peace between them, or aid the injurd Party. And these answers of the Kings, Pace April. was to fignifie to the Emperor then at Rome, and to urge him to renew the Amity without any fuch Conditions; but, as the Emperor hearkned not thereunto, fo King Henry, thinking of nothing less than embracing his friendship on those terms, imploy'd his care chiefly how to defend his Kingdom against the threatned Invafions. And therefore as he had often experi-mented the Love and Obedience of his Subjects, fo in his important occasions at this time, he refolv'd to make use of them, commanding thereupon, the Parliament, which had been Prorogu'd, Feb 4. to fit the fourth of February: In which many Reg. 27. Acts pass'd, the most material whereof I have set ment see unto you Mary our Daughter, befeeching you to be a down briefly, not always according to the order and page good Father to her, as I have heretofore desir'd. I observed in the Statute-Book, but rather accor- feveral Ads. ding Ads.

der for the rest to the Statutes themselves. Mv intention being not to make an abstract of them otherwise than may serve for the illustration of

Whereas the trial and punishment of Pirats was heretofore according to the forms of the Civil Law, it was now order'd, That it should be determin'd by the Kings Commission, in like form as offences done upon Land, no benefit of Clergy yet being permitted to those who were convicted: Nevertheless, distinction to be made between Pirates, and those who took something at Sea out of necessity: As is to be seen in the Statute more largely.

Order also was taken upon Penalty, that all they who had Parks, should keep two or more Mares, according to the greatness of the Parks, of thirteen handfuls high, for breed of ftrong Horses; and that the Stallions should be fourteen handfuls high at least: And this was much to the increase of good Horses.

The courle of fuing forth Gifts and Grants made under the Kings Signet Manual, and the Clerks of the Signets Fees also were set down.

Also because many Men by Will made Feoffments of their Lands to fecret uses, whereby the King and the Lords loft their Wards, &c. It was order'd, that the poffession of Lands shall be adjudg'd to be in him that hath the use

Order also was taken, that no Land should pass by bargain and fale, unless it be by Writing indented, feal'd and inroll'd. And this prevented many missakes, and took away much deceit.

Wales.

And now because some Statutes following give me occasion to speak of Wales, it will not be displeasing to the Reader (I hope) to set down those Reasons, which I conceive were the true motives of them.

Wales and the Marches thereof now having History of been for a long time fo distinguish'd, as the Maritime parts thereof were held by the remnant of the ancient Britains, or Natives of this Island, the other by those who had got ground upon them, much diversity of Government was us'd. For as the Kings of England heretofore had many times brought Armies to conquer that Country, defended both by Mountains and a ftout People, without yet reducing them to a final and intire Obedience; so they resolved at laft to give all that could be gain'd there to those who would attempt it. Whereupon many valiant and able Nobles and Gentlemen won much Land from the Welsh: Which, as gotten by force, was by permiffion of the Kings then reigning, held for divers Ages, in that abfolute manner, as Jura Regalia were exercised in them by the Conquerors. Yet, in those parts which by the Conquerors. Yet, in those parts which were getten at the Kings only charge, (being not a few) a more regular Law was obferv'd. Howfoever, the general Government was not only fevere, but various in many parts: Infomuch, that in about fome 141 Lordships Marchers which were now gotten, many ftrange and discrepant Customs were practis'd (as will appear hereafter.) Howbeit, in the greater part, which was the Kings, and particularly those in the East, West, and North-Wales, being about this time administred by my great Grand-states Sir Richard Herbert (Son of Sir Richard Herbert, renown'd for that alone he pass'd and return'd twice through an hoftile Army at the Battel in Banbury-Field, 8 Edw. IV.) fuch Juffice was us'd, as I find him in our Records highly commended to the Kings Council by Rowland Lee, now Pre-

15 ding to the matters handled, remitting the Rea- | fident of Wales. So that they were govern'd in 15 ?.. general according to the Laws of England; the Lords Marchers (who conquer'd at their own cost) ruling yet by their own Laws and Cuftoms, and fubflituting Officers at their pleafure. who again committed fuch Rapines, as nothing almost was fafe or quiet in those parts: whereupon this Statute was made.

Whereas manifold Robberies, Murders, and other Male-facts be daily practised and committed in the County-Palatine of Chefter and Flintflire in Wales, and also in Anglesea, Caernarum, Merionch, Cardigan, Carmarthen, Pembroke and Gla-morgan, because Justice is not ministred there in fuch form as in other places of this Realm. For remedy whereof, it is enacted, that the Lord Chancellor of England, or Keeper of the Great Seal, shall nominate and appoint Justices of Peace, Juffices of the Quorum, and Juffices of the Goaldelivery in the faid Counties, and that they shall have like Power and Authority as those in England, &c. And by this means one kind of Justice was established in the said County-Palatine of Chefter, and the Shires aforefaid: So that Offenders now were kept in awe, being not able, as before, to escape and fly from one Lordship Marcher to another. Another Act also was made to this purpose.

Whereas in Wales and the Marches, there were Regn. 27. divers and many Forrests belonging either to the Cap. 7-King or the Lords Marchers, wherein fundry actions had been us'd a long time, contrary to the Law of God and Man; infomuch, that if any enter'd the faid Forrests without a Token given (by fome of the Forresters or Walkers of it) to let him pass, or unless he were a yearly Tributer or Chenfer, he was forc'd to pay a grievous Fine; but if he were found 24 food out of the High-way, then to forfeit all the Gold or Money about him, and a joynt of one of his Hands, unless he fined for it at the discretion of the Forrester, or Farmer of the same.

And whereas likewise, if any Cattle stray'd into the faid Forrests, it was the custom of the Foresters to mark him for their own with the mark of the Forrest; Order was now given, that Peo-ple should be suffer'd to pass freely, as in other places, and estray'd Cattel within a year and a day to be restor'd again, the Owners paying for the Herbage.

That whereas by the gifts of Kings of Eng-Regn. 27. land, heretofore, divers of the most ancient Pre- Cap. 24.

rogatives and Authorities of Justice appertaining to the Imperial Crown of this Realm, have been fever'd and taken from the fame, it was now enacted, that no Person from the first of July, 1536. should have Power and Authority to pardon or remit, Treafons, Murthers, Man-llaughters, or any Felonies, or their accessaries in any part of England, Wales, or the Marches of the fame. That likewise none should make Justices of Oyer, Juffices of Affize, Juffices of Peace, or Juffices of Goal-delivery, but they should be made by the Kings Letters Parents: And that all Original Writs, and Judicial Writs, and all manner of Indictments of Treason, Felony, and Trefpass, and all manner of Process should be made in the Kings Name; and things done againft the Kings Peace, flould be fuppos'd as done againft the Kings Peace, and not againft the peace of any other Person. Notwithitanding which, divers Priviledges were permitted, as is to be feen in the Statutes. By all which, as the vaft power invefted anciently in these who had Counties Palatine, and Jura Regalia in Lordthips Marchers may appear; fo we may observe how the restoring of them to the Crown, hath eftablish'd an uniform Justice, and taken away

8 E. IV 8 E. IV.

Jurisdictions and Precincts of the said Counties Palatine, and Lordships Marchers, as is before recited; which though a great benefit and eafe to the Welfh, yet as they were under many confirmants, they hop'd his Highness would further extend his goodness to them: And thus some (as in their name) speak to this effect;

Speech of Gentle-Wales.

May it please your Highness, E, on the part of your Highness Subjects, inhabiting that portion of the Island which our Invaders first call'd Wales, most hummantothe bly profirate at your Highness feet, do crave K. in fa-to be receiv'd and adopted into the same Laws, and Priviledges which your other Subjects enjoy: Neither shall it hinder us (we hope) that we have liv'd so long under our own. For as they were both enacted by authority of our ancient Law-givers, and obey'd for many fucceffions of Ages, we truft your Highnefs will pardon us, if we thought it neither eafe nor fafe fo fuddenly to relinquish them. We shall not prefume yet to compare them with these now us'd, and less shall we contest how good and equal in themselves they are. Only if the defence of them and our liberty against the Romans, Saxons, and Danes, for so many hundred years, and lastly, against the Normans, as long as they pretended no Title but the Sword, was thought Just and Honourable; we presume it will not be infamous now; and that all the marks of Rebellion and Falfhood, which our revilers would faften on us, will fall on any, fooner than those who fought for so many years, and with fo different Nations for our just defence: Which also is so true, that our best Histories affirm the Christian Religion to have been preferv'd only by us for many years, that the Saxons (being Heathen) either attempted or pof-Regn. 27 feß d this Country. May your Highness then graciously interpret our Actions, while we did but that duty which your Highness would have now done by all your Subjects on like occasion; for when any should invade this Country henceforth, we know your Highness would have us to behave our felves no otherwife. Befides, had not the Affailers found fome to refift, they might have despis'd a Country, that brought none forth able enough to affert it: So that we crave pardon, Sir, if we fay it was fit for the honour of your Dominions that some part of it should never be conquer'd. We then in the Name of whatfoever in your Highnesses possesfion hath in any age held out against all Invaders, do here voluntarily refign, and humble our felves to that Sovereignty, which we acknowledge fo well invetted in your Highness. Nor is this the first time; we have always attended an occasion to unite our selves to the greater and better parts of the Island.

But as the Kings of this Realm, weary of their attempts in Person against us, did formerly give not only our Country to those who could conquer it, but permitted them Jura Regalia, within their feveral Precincts; so it was impossible to come to an agreement, while fo many that un-dertook this work, usurp'd Martial and abfolute power and jurifdiction in all they acquir'd, without establishing any equal Justice. And that all Offenders for the reft, flying from one Lordship Marcher (for fo they were term'd) to another, did both avoid the punishment of the Law, and easily commit those Robberies, which have formerly tainted the honour of our parts. So that until the rigorous Laws not only of the several Conquerors of England, but the attempters on the occasions of many mischiefs done within the | no Union, how much soever affected by us, 153 could enfue.

Therefore, and not fooner, we submitted our selves to Edward the First, a Prince who made both many and equaller Laws than any before him. Therefore we defended his Son Edward the Second, when not only the English forfook him, but our felves might have recover'd our former liberty, had we defir'd it. Therefore we got Victories for Edward the Third, and flood firm during all the diffentions of this Realm to his Grandchild and Successor Richard the Second. Only if some amongst us resisted Henry the Fourth, your Highness may better suppose the reason than we tell it, though divers foreigners openly refusing to treat with him as a Sovereign and lawful Prince, have sufficiently publish'd it. We did not yet decline a due Obedience to Henry the Fifth, though in doubtful times, we cannot deny, but many refractory Persons have ap-pear'd. Howsoever, we never joyn'd our selves with the English Rebels, or took occasion thereby to recover our Liberty, though in Richard the Second's time, and during all the Civil Wars betwixt Lancafter and York, much occasion was given. For adhering to the House of York, which we conceiv'd the better Title, we conferv'd our Devotion still to the Crown, until your Highness Fathers time, who (bearing his Name and Regn. 27) Blood from us) was the more chearfully affilted by our Predeceffors in his Title to the Crown, which your Highness doth presently enjoy. And thus, Sir, if we gave anciently proof of a gene-rous courage in defending our Laws and Country, we have given no less proof of a loyal Fidelity fince we first rendered our selves. Info-much, that we may truly assirm, that after our acceptance of the Condition given us by Edward the First, we have omitted no occasion of per-forming the duty of loving Subjects. Neither is there any thing that comforts us more than that all those controversies about Succession (which fo long wafted this Land) are determin'd in your Highness Person; in whom we acknowledge both Houses to be happily united. To your Highness therefore we offer all Obedience, defiring only that we may be defended against the infulting of our malignant Cenfurers: For we are not the Off-spring of the Run-away Britry, which, besides defending it self, received all those who came to us for Succours. Give us then (Sir) permission to say, that they wrong us much, who pretend our Country was not inha-bited before then, or that it fail'd in a due Piety, when it was fo hospital to all that fled thither for refuge: Which also will be more credible, when it shall be remembred, that even our high-est Mountains furnish good Beef and Mutton, not only to all the Inhabitants, but supply England in great quantity. We humbly befeech your Highnels therefore, that this Note may be taken from us. As for our Language, though it feem harsh, it is that yet which was spoken anciently, not only in this Island, but in France: Some Dialects whereof therefore remain still amongst the Bas Bretons there, and here in Cornwal. Neither will any Man doubt it, when he shall find those words of the ancient Gauliff Language repeated by the Latin Authors, to fignific the fame thing amongft us at this day: Nor shall it be a disparagement (we hope) that it is spoken so much in the Throat, since the Florinsime and Spaniard affect this kind of Pronunciation, as believing words that found fo deep, proceed from the Heart. So that if we have retain'd this Language longer than the more Northern Inhabiour parts, were brought to an equal moderation, tants of this Island (whose Speech appears manifeitly feftly to be a kind of English, and consequently introduc'd by the Saxons) we hope it will be no imputation to us; your Highnes will have but the more Tongues to ferve you: It shall not hinder us to study English, when it were but to learn how we might the better ferve and obey your Highness: To whose Laws we most humbly defire again to be adopted, and doubt not, but if in all Countries the Mountains have af-forded as eminent Wits and Spirits as any other and imployment may receive that efteem. The King now confidering that it was but A& for an union be reasonable to unite this part of the Kingdom to the rest, and that their Loyalty besides had England deferv'd as inuch as they were Suitors for, caus'd an Act to be past for executing Justice in Wales, in manner as is in England, and reduc'd the Lord-ship Marchers to Shire-ground. The Statute is to part, ours also by your Highness's good favour

this effect:

That albeit the Dominion, Principality and Country of Wales be a Member and part of the Temporal Crown of this Realm, whereof therefore the King is Head and Ruler; yet as it hath divers Rights, Usages, Laws and Customs difcrepant from the Laws and Customs of this Realm, and because their Language is different from that which is spoken here, and that many rude People hereupon have made diffinction and diversity betwixt his Highness's other Subjects, and them, to the cauting of much Dif-cord and Sedition; his Highness therefore, out of his love and favour to his Subjects in Wales, and for reducing them to his Laws, doth by advice and confent of his Parliament ordain and enact, that Wales should be unite and incorporate henceforth to and with his Realm of England; and that his Subjects should enjoy and in-herit all singular Freedoms, Liberties, Rights, Priviledges and Laws which his Highness's Subjects elsewhere injoy and inherit. And there-fore that Inheritances should descend after the manner of England, without Division or Partition, and not after any tenure or form of Welsh Laws or Customs. And forasmuch as there are divers Lordships Marchers within the faid Country or Dominion in Wales, being no parcel of any other Shires where the Laws and due Correction is us'd and had, and that in them and the Countries adjoyning manifold Murders, Robberies, Felonies, and the like, have been done, contrary to all Law and Juffice, because the Offenders, making their refuge from one Lordship Marcher to another, were continued without Punishment and Correction: Therefore it was enacted that the faid Lordships Marchers should be united, annexed, and joyn'd to divers Shires specified in the faid Act.

Whereupon 24 Lordships Marchers were united to Monmouthshire, and the Laws of England enjoyn'd in them: 16 to Brecknockshire; 16 to Radnorshire, eleven to Montgomeryshire; and ten to Denbigbshire: feven to Stropshire, which were reduc'd again to certain Hundreds, as Down to Cherbury, &c. ten to Herefordshire, and they likewise reduc'd to Hundreds three; and all the Lordreduc d to Fundreus three; and an the Londhips, &c. betwixt Chepfowbridge and Glouegherfire, to Gloeghershire; and they again reduc'd to one Hundred; feventeen to Glamorganshire; eight to Carmarthenshire; thirteen to Pembrokeshire; four to Cardiganshire; one to Merionethshire: By which it appears how much of Wales is continued intire, and how much was gotten by the Lords Marchers. After this again, many Priviledges were given to the Lords Marchers, in regard of the Service their Ancestors rendred the Crown the Service their Ancestors rendred the Crown the Right of the Heirs and Successors of the heretofore, in conquering those parts at their Founders, Patrons, or Donors to any Possession, own cost, concerning which Histories, Re-Rent, Fee, or Office, according to the true in-cords, &c. may be feen, to which I refer my Alfo power was given to the King to alter Regn any thing in this Act, within the space of three years next enfuing, whereof we shall speak again 34 Hen. viii. c. 26. More also is extant hereof, that Kings goodness all power for altering the Laws in Wales is repealed.

I will now come to certain A&s of Parliament concerning Ecclefiaftical Matters, of which kind there are four chiefly :

The first, having relation to one formerly recited out of 26 Henry viii. whereby the Firstfruits and Tenths were given for more augmentation of maintenance of the Kings Royal Digmity, of the Supream Head of the Church of England, doth now declare, that no Tenth shall be exacted that year wherein First-fruits are paid.

Secondly, whereas 25 Hin. viii. it was enacted, that the Clergy in their Convocations shall make no Constitutions without the Kings affent, as alfo that the King should have authority to nominate 16 Spiritual, and 16 Temporal Persons to examine the Canons and Constitutions aforefaid, the said Acts were now confirm d.

Thirdly, Order was given about Sanctuarymen, that they should wear Badges to be known by, and no Weapons; that they should not go abroad but at due hours, and not refift their Governors, &c.

Fourthly, A Court of Augmentation was erected, whereby order was taken concerning the Religious Houses that were surrendred or sup-press d; and how the Kings Revenue should be increas'd thereby, and Officers for this purpote

These Marks of the Kings Sovereignty being Parl Rolls.

thus premis'd, I shall come to the Act of Sup- 27 Him 6 preffion of Religious Houses under 200 !. year- Religious ly. Which though lamented by many, and no Houses appointed.

y. Which though lamented by many, and no under ways fo excus'd, that I know, as by the Kings and the recefficies. had yet those Motives. The vicious Ann. supnecessities, had yet those Motives. The vitious Ann. in and incorrigible life of Monastical Persons, con-preside fefs'd, by the whole Parliament: The Lands not imploy'd according to the intent of the Donors and Founders; divers Superflitions and forgings of Miracles practis'd amongst them: That when these under 200 l. yearly were taken away; there remain'd yet many great and Religious Houses: That they were the Seminary of those that oppos'd the Regal Authority in Écclefiasti-call Matters; to which some have thought the reason formerly touch'd might be added, that the Parliament was willing to lay the burthen of furnishing the Kings neeefficies from them-felves. And the rather, that the King promised to imploy fome of the Revenues to other Religious uses: As founding of Bishopricks, Deanc-ries, and Chapters, and the like, Which indeed ries, and Chapters, and the like. Which indeed follow'd, though not mentioned in the Statute. Howfoever, the Statute without any formal Preamble in the publish'd Book, begins bluntly thus : His Majesty shall have and enjoy to him and his Heirs for ever, all Monafreries; Priories, and other Religious Houses of Monks, Canons, and Nuns of what Habit, Order, or Rule soever, which have not in Lands and Revenue above the clear yearly value of 200 L as also an fuch Religious Houses which at any time within one years fpace preceding, have been given up and granted by any Abbat, Prior, Abbels, or Priores under Registrate Covent Seal; (referving yet all Right to others by Leafe and otherwife, and parricularly 15 tention:) As also all Ornaments, Jewels, Goods, it, without the others Consent; yet that if such a Coun-Chattels, and Debts, belonging to the faid Religious Houses: Nevertheless, that Hospitality and Husbandry should be kept by the Farmers of the faid Religious Houles, and the Lands be-longing to them, upon the penalty of paying every Month fix pound thirteen shillings and four pence. The King also (as I find in the Par-liament Rolls) allow'd the Governors of these Houses Pensions during their Lives, and translated fome of the Religious Persons into other greater Foundations.

Feffer Monasteries dif-tolv'd.

advice to the king

herein.

And thus were the leffer Monafteries diffolv'd, with care yet that Hospitality should be preferv'd; for which reason also our King did pass them away at fuch easie rates. Nevertheless, as the Penalty being not ordinarily requir'd, due Hospitality was for the most part neglected : So the Forfeitures being great, were at the Suppli-cation of the Parliament, 21 Jacobi, wholly abo-lish'd, at length, by the indulgence of that King. Notwithstanding, it is probable, that not on this occasion only, the Abbey-Lands were scarcered Gromwell's and distributed into so many hands, since Cromwel forgot not to tell his King, that the more had interest in them, the more they would be irrevocable. But whatfoever the reasons were, it is certain, that use was not made of them which might have been, while the Revenue of the Crown was fo little improv'd thereby. Since of the Land, might have been easily done) our King without having recourfe to any other means, might (besides securing his Ream) have given the Law in great part to all his Neighbours. And now of these ancient Monuments of Devotion, 376 being diffolv'd, a Revenue of about thirty or thirty two thousand pound yearly, mean while being griev'd to fee the Monks and Nuns wandring abroad, and the Churches and Chappels perverted to fecular and prophane uses; so that they began to murmur; which being again fomented by fome Religious Per-fons turn'd to Rebellion, as shall be told hereafter. The respect also given to the Relicks there, and some pretended Miracles fell; inso-

at it.

murmur

376 Monafteries

diffoly'd.

Stone People

return the price again. This fall of Abbeys yet did but fet forwards Regn. 27. This fall of Abbeys yet did but let forwards Proteffant the Kings defigns with the Confederate Princes Princes in and Towns in Germany; who understanding here-Germany of, and believing now the King would wholly renounce all Papiftry, and knowing besides that pofals to Queen Anne was difaffected to their adverse Parthe King. ty, as her greatest Enemies, thought fit to make our Kings Orators (yet at Smalcald) these Pro-

much as I find by our Records that a piece of

St. Andrew's Finger, (cover'd only with an ounce of Silver) being laid to pledge by a Monastery for forty pound, was left unredeem'd at the Dif-folution of the faid House; the King Commif-fioners (who upon furrender of any Foundation, undertook to pay the Debts thereof) refusing to positions, as our Records shew. I. That he should approve and imbrace the Augustan Confession, unless some things shall be alter'd therein by common confent according to the Scripture.

II. And, Secondly, in a free Council, if any be, shall defend it wish them.

III. That neither part should admit any Summons for a Council, or agree upon a place for the sitting of cil were offer'd, as Vergerius the Popes Legate now propos'd, that is to say, free and pious, that it should not be refus'd.

IV. That if the Pope proceeded otherwise, that they should oppess and protest publickly against him.
V. That the King should joyn himself, as to their Doctrine, so to their League; and thereupon accept the Title of Patron and Defender of it.

VI. That the vulgar Opinion de Primatu Pontifi-cis should be rejected for ever.

VII. That if either of the Contrahents be invaded for Religion, the other shall give no Aid against

VIII. That the King shall pay 100000 Crowns to-wards the defence of the League, and if the War be leng, 200000 Crowns, upon Condition, that what was remaining should be restord when the War was en-

IX. That when the King hath declar'd his mind herein, they will fend an Amhassage of Learned Men to him.

These Propositions being communicated by Records. Cromwell to the Bishop of Winchester then in France, Gardner's the Bishop return'd this Advice: That if the first advice about this Article were accorded, the King shall do nothing with Proposal. cut their confent, though otherwise he be bound in conscience to reform his Church. To the rest, that he concsives no good nor honourable League can be made with those Inferior Princes for Religion, without the were diffored, had been imployed for a feeled Had of Germany, as his Majely is of England entertaining and payment of a Royal Army at Again, that they could give King Henry no Reciproke, Land, and a great Fleet at Sea, (which as they loss lying at that diffence: Finally, he admonifhed, that of the Land, might have been could do expressed the provided that they be moved to expresse the King Tell. understood in France, that they would not agree therein a lates, the lates of mount of mount of age that of a left bey should thereby great the Emperer the fine Authority over their Perfons. In sequence whereof, on the twelfth of March following (1536.) the Bishop of Hereford, and the other Reign, 27. Orators now at Wittemberg return d the Protes March at this answer: That the King their Sovereign The K's about thirty or thirty two thousand pound yearly, it all the anilwer: 10st the King their sovereign The K's Chattels; which at low Rates were valued at though all were quiet here, and no cause why he this Proone hundred thousand pound. The Pcople (ef-should fear any Attempts, or when they were, that it possible pecially they that got nothing thereby) in the lowas taken away by the death of the late Queen; jet mean while being oriend to least head Morked and the relation to the Thirty he for restoring as well as retaining the true Destrine, he was content to disburfe the fum requir'd, if once the League were made: Whereof therefore he would treat at large with their Commissioners, whom they promised to send: As for the honour they did him, in constituting him Patron and Defender of the League, that he render'd them due thanks, and acknowledg'd their good will. And though he underflood well, to then much every this Charge was expert, yet that for the publick good he would not refuse it, when they could agree among themselves concerning the First and Second Article. For unless there were an Union and Confint in Delivine, that he should get no Honour by undertaking it. Therefore that he desir'd their Learned Men and his should concur; for until some places of their Confission and Apology were mellified by private Conference, that there was small hope of an Agreement. Therefore, that he defir'd much that they weuld send seme Commissioners for this purpese, and among them, seme one eminum for his Luming, who might confer with his Divines of the Delvine and Effectial part of Religion, as well as Commentes of the Church. That since he was so liberal to them, he hoped they would not refuse, if any made War egainst him, to summiss for four Months, 500 Feet, or 10 Ships equipped at their cost; and at his cess 2000 Herse, and 500 Foot, or in lieu of these Foot 12 Ships equipped; which the King shall keep and maintain as long as his occasions require. Lastly, that they should approve the Sentence given by the Divines of Wittenberg in favour of his Divines, and second Marriage, and if any would send some Commissioners for this purpose, and favour of his Divorce, and second Marriage, and if any Council General were holden, should there defend it.

15 ! ... The Pro-Anfwer. April 24.

Reg. 27.

To all which the Duke of Saxony replying, that he would advise hereof with the other Confederates, this Answer finally at a meeting at Francfort on the 24th of April, 1536. was return d, That although divers were entred newly into the League, and divers who were at a distance from home, League, and avery how were in a my and plot plot bombons, bad no Commission for growing any definitive Sontence:
Notwithstanding, that in this meeting it should be related concerning an Ambosthador to be four his Highness, and they who could not resolve for the present, hely and they must come now reverse to the flace of one Month.

And that there was no question but they would conform themselves to the Opinion of the major part.

Whereupon Instructions were given for certain Orators to be fent to England; in which yet it was (faith Sleidan) especially provided, that nothing should be rreated of to the prejudice of the Emperor, or Empire. And thus in the Name of the Confederate Cities, Jacobus Sturmius was appointed; the Divines being Melanothon, Bucerm, and Georgius Draco. But as shortly after the death of Oueen Anne followed; so all their prodeath of Queen Anne followed; to an then pro-ceeding (as Sleidan notes) was ftopt, until upon occasion given, it was revived. As for the ap-probation of the Divorce propos d to the German Divines, Luther, Jonas, Philip, and others, the King was judiciously advis d by his Agents from thence, not to require any thing of them which would be too hard to grant; the King having attain'd his principal intent concerning the Council and Pope, and the Princes being then in fuch terms with the Emperor and Ferdinand, as they defir'd not to offend them without an urgent necessity. Affairs of Scotland

James King of Scotland, having the year before been inflall'd of the Garter, and in fequence thereof instructed with the causes of those changes which had follow'd in Religious Government, did not yet altogether incline to our King. For as he had an eye to the troubles that might enfue in England concerning Succession, as long as the Issue of both Queens surviv'd; so he defir'd to ffrengthen himfelf by the advice and affiftance of Francis: Yet being defirous withal to conferve our Kings affection; and knowing alfo his defigns on that part could not be long conceal'd, he thought fit to advertise our King thereof; difcovering himfelf no farther yet, than that he intended to match in that Country: Who al-fo approving this, rather than that he should bestow himself in the Emperors Family (which he still suspected) gave his confent thereunto, as I find by our Records; yet fo as he defir'd the Match might be betwirt him and the Daughter of the Duke of Vendolme, rather than of Francis; upon condition still that the Enterview might precede. But King James, who had no disposition thereunto (though I find in our Records, the Queen his Mother once perfuaded him,) refolves to go fecretly and in difguis'd habit to France. Whereupon alfo, commanding fome Ships to be made ready, he fet fail from Lieth, not acquainting any yet with his Journey; fo that divers thought he purpos'd to land in fome part of our Kings Dominions. But contrary winds arising, he being demanded what courte his Pilots thould hold, antwer'd, to any place but England; wherewith falling affecp, he was ere he waken'd, by the advice of one of Ken Stots the Hamiltons (as Buchenan hath it) carried back. But at last, opening his eyes, and finding himself at home, he was much offended with the Author of this Council, and the rather, that he was thought fecretly to oppose the Match: So that he commanded to fet sail again. Coming thus at length to the Duke of Vendesn's, and his Daughter not pleasing him (or rather, the Daughter of Francis liking him better) he år-rives at Paris, and pofting thence to the Lionnois, where Francis was raising an Army against the Emperor (as shall be told hereafter) he obtain'd the confent of Francis (though not without fome reluctancy on his part, and wholly against our reflictancy on ins part, and whomy against on Kings will) for his Daughter Migdalen, whom he married Jan. I. 1537. The news whereof be-ing brought to our King, troubled him to much, that he writ to Francis, (whom he perfectly lov'd at that time) that his late Enterview with the Pope, and Alliance with the Scottish King vexed Regn. 27. him no less than it would do a persect Lover, De voir sa Dame entretenir son mortel Enemi: Whereof more at large in its due place. But as Franof more at large in its due place. Due as Irinacis excuse (alledging it was better he match'd there than with his Adversaries) did in some part July 7. farisfie our King; fo the new married Lady falling into a Hectick Fever, and dying the year following, they both foon return'd to fome part

Our King now, thought by fome to be various in his appetite of Wives, by others to be only unfortunate in them, had, or found, occasion to cut off Queen Anne; I shall not yet determine The trou-whether Princes secret Actions be beyond any bles of Q. Scrutiny. I will only lay down the particulars, as far as by Records, or otherwise I could gather them, remitting the rest to the equal of their former Correspondence.

Queen Anne being now without Competitrix Cap. 24, for her Title, thought her felf fecure, But Profperity is a dangerous estate to those that use it not reverently. Again, Beauty is not always the best keeper of it self. It may be doubted yet whether either of those did concern her; fince fhe was thought both moderate in her defires, and of discretion enough to make her capable of being trufted with her own perfections, as ha-ving liv'd in the French Court first, and after in this, with the reputation of a virtuous Lady; informuch that the whifperings of her Enemies could not divert the Kings good Opinion of her, though yet he was in his own nature more jeathough yet was in sown that had be not part to be farisfied eafily. I do reject all those, therefore, that would speak against her Honour in those times they staid in France; but I shall as little accuse her in this particular of her Affairs at this time; it is enough, that the her Alfaris at this time; it is chough, which Law hath Condemn'd her; and that whether file, or any elfe were in fault, is not now to be difculs'd. This is certain, that the King had caft love with his affection already on Jane Seymer, (Daugh- Jane Seyter to Sir John Seymor Knight) then attending on mr, Serthe Queen. But whether this alone were enough vant to Q. to procure that Tragedy which follow'd, may Anne be doubted in this Prince; for I do not find him bloody, but where Law, or at least pretext drawn from thence, did countenance his Actions. But fuspition in great and obnoxious Minds, is other than in the mild and temperate; and therefore isto them like a Tempest, which though it scarce ftir low and shallow waters, when it meets a Sea, both vexeth it, and makes it toss all that comes thereon. So that I dare fay nothing hath been Author of fo much Confusion; fince aggravating fometimes that which is ill, fometimes misinterpreting that which is good, it perverts all, and finally leaves the mind without Remedy; how far yet suspition wrought on our King, is not for me to define. To come then to the Narration, I find by our May 15 Authors, that on May-day there being a folemn Store Justs at Greenwich (wherein George Viscount Rochford the Queens Brother was chief Challenger, and Huny Noreis Principal Defendant) the King fuddenly departed. This much troubled the whole Company, especially the Queen. No Rega. 27. cause hereof is related yet, unless (as Sanders hath

Vol. II.

July 26.

varely to France.

Others commitred

to help her, as she was not guilty of that where-of she was accus'd. This was about five in the Afternoon on the second of May. After which, one William Brereton Esquire, and Sir Francis Weston of the Kings Privy Chamber, and one Melton of the Kings Privy Chamber, and one Mark Smeton a Mufician were Committeed on the fame occasion. The Queen being thus in the Records: charge of Sir William Kingfon, Constable of the Toner, much Speech path betwitt them, as appears by an Original of his: Yet as her Language of the Constant of th guage was broken and diffracted betwixt Tears and Laughter, (for she us'd both,) little can be inferr'd thence, only she feem'd to exclaim on Norreis, as if he had accus'd her; when yet she faid, they both should die together. She nam'd others allo, and thereupon confess'd, though not enough to condemn her, yet fuch Paffages as might argue she took the utmost Liberty, that could be honeftly allow'd her: But whether she extended it to any further Act, is not there de-For amidst all her Discourses she still protefted her felf Innocent. By other Originals alfelled her leit innocent. By other Originas air of Kingfons, it appears that he had made fome difficulty to carry a Letter from her to Mr. Secretary, and that she wish'd her Bishops were there: For they (she said) would go to the King for her; and that the most part of England would pray for her; and that if she died, a Punishment will fall on the Land; and in effect I find divers Bishops and Learned Men did much honour her, and particularly the Archbishop of Canterbury, who in a Consolatory Letter to the Archbish King, (which I have seen) wrote as much in her behalf as he durst; yet so as he made no Apology for her, but rather confesseth that divers of the Lords had told him of fuch faults as he was forry to hear of, defiring howfoever, that he would continue his love to the Gofpel, left it should be thought it was for her fake only he had so favour'd it. After which another Letter in her Name, but no Original, coming to my hand, from more than one good part, I thought fit to transcribe here, without other credit yet than it is faid to be found among the Papers of Cromwell then Secretary, and for the reft feems ancient and confonant to the matter in question.

May 6 Archbifhop Cranfhops ap-pear in her behalf-

SIR,

May 6. The Queens Letrer to

Our Graces Displeasure, and my Imprisonment are things fo frange unto me, as what to write, or Queens what to excuse, I am altogether ignorant. Whereas the King. To check you find not me, (willing me to confess a truth, and it) file let fall a Handkerchief, wherewith fome and to speak a truth, never Prime had Wife more one (supposed her Favorite) did wipe his Face, and that this was perceived by the King. But our Histories mention not this Passage. The Queen sinding the King thus gone, retires her felf. He again hashning to Westmisser, takes order to commit the next Morning George Lord Miys.

Miys.

Mys.

M bad comfel of mine Enemies withdraw your Princely fiveour from me; neither let that flain, that unworthy flain of a difforal heart towards your good Grace, ever caft fo foul a blot on your most Dutiful Wife, and the Infant Prince's your Daughter: Try me good King, but let me have a lawful Trial; and let not my fworn Enemies fit as my Accefers and Judges; yea, let me receive an open Trial, for my truth flash fear no open shames. Then shall you see either mine Innocency clear'd, your Suspition and Conscience saiffood, the impanius and lander of the World through fied, the ignominy and flander of the World stopped, or my guilt openly declar'd. So that whatsoever God or wy guilt openly declar'd. So that urbatjoever God or you may determine of me, your Grace may be freed from an open Censiure, and mine Ossence being so lawfully prov'd, your Grace is at liberty both before God and Man, not only to execute worthy puriliment on me as an unstallight Wife, but to follow your affection already settled on that Party, for whose sake I am now as I am, whose Name I could some good while since the same was the same was a same and the same was the have pointed unto, your Grace being not ignorant of my suspition therein.

jupition toeven.

But if you have already determin'd of me, and that not only my Death, but an infamous flander must bring you the enjoying of your defor'd Huppiness: The 1 defire of God that he will parden your great Sin therein, and likewise mine Enemies the Instruments Determ, and incompte mine Enomies the infruments the thereof, and that he will not call you to a friet account for your unprincely and cruel ufage of me at his General Judgment Seat, where both you and my felf must flority appear, and in whose judgment I do not (what see we will not appear).

not (what lever the worna may tunns of me) mme su-nocence shall be openly known, and sufficiently clear'd. My last and only request shall be, that my self may only bear the burthen of your Graces Displansure; and that it may not touch the innocent Souls of those poor tout many out touch the innocent souts of rhole poor Gentlemen, who (as I understand) are likewise in strait Impisomment for my sake. If ever the name of Anne Bo-ten hath been pleasing in your Ears; then let me ob-tain this Request; and I will so leave to trouble your Grace any further, with mine earneft Prayers to the Timity to have your Grace in his good keeping, and to direct your in all your Actions. From my doleful Prison in the Tower, this 6th of May.

> Tour most Loyal and ever Faithful Wife,

> > ANNE BOLEN.

But whether this Letter were elegantly written by her, or any else heretostore, I knew as little, as what Answer might be made thereunto:

Only I cannot omit to tell, that the King was for distant year favours, by fuch an one whom you found the mine ancient prefet de Enemy, I no fooner received this Message by him, than I rightly conceived that not content to have gotten proof enough year meaning; and as if as you say, confession at a content to have gotten proof enough year meaning; and at if as you say, confession at the not content to have gotten proof enough to put her to Death, he would further be divorced from her; which also by due Order and willingness and duty perform your Command.

But let not your Grace ever imagine that your poor Wise will ever be brought to acknowledge a fault, there not so much as a thought thereof ever preceded. that not content to have gotten proof enough to put her to Death, he would further be di-The King vorc'd from her; which alfo by due Order and divorc'd Process of Law (as an Act of Parliament hath Princes made illegitimate.

1536. ful impediments of Marriage: I know not how to fatisfie the Reader therein; especially fince the Lady Elizabeth their Daughter is thereby pronounc'd Illegitimate. For as concerning Precontracts, I find by an Original Letter of the Earl of Northumberland (who it feems, might mest be suspected) that he disavows it on his part. So that unless he retracted this Protestatien, or that the contrary were prov'd, I cannot fo much as imagine a reason. The Letter is thus to Cromwel.

May ra. Records. nies any

May 15.

condemn'd.

others

con-demn'd

Perceive that there is supposed a Precontract be-tween the Queen and me. Whereupon I was not Northum-berland de- only heretofore examin'd upon mine Oath before the Archbishops of Canterbury and York; but also receiv'd the bleffed Sucrament upon the fame, before the rad between the of Norfolk, and others the Kings Council learnand himed in the Spiritual Law; affiring you (Mr. Sceretaleft. ry) by the faid Oath and bleffed Body, which afore I received, and hereafter intend to receive, that the Same may be to my Damnation, if ever there were any contract or promise of Marriage between her and me.

But if this were not fufficient, I believe fuch other cause was produc'd for the Divorce, as might fatisfie the People, fince the A& was publick. Neither is it much material which Hall faith, that the validity of this Marriage was questioned, because the King married this second Wife before he was divore'd from his first : For it feems contrary to the A& of Parliament, which faith, That the impediments were, till of late, unknown. Shortly after which she was Arraign'd the 15 of May, 1536, before the Duke of Nor-She is folk, High Steward of England for the day, the Lord Chancellor, the Duke of Suffolk, and others of the Peers: And there, notwithstanding her discreet Answers, (as our Historians term them) found guilty, and Judgment pronounc'd accordingly. Immediately after which, the Lord Rochfort her Brother, was Arraign'd and Con-Her Brother and demn'd, as also Henry Norreis Esquire, Mark Smeton Groom of the Kings Privy-Chamber, William Brereton Efquire, and Sir Francis Weston Knight, Gentlemen of it, (the Lord Mayor and divers addern and Cirizens being prefent) and the May 17.

17th of May beheaded: The Queens death yet was respited till the 19th of the same. About which time order being taken that all Strangers in the Tower should be remov'd, King ston in an Original to Cromwel writ these words, viz.

May 19. If we have not an hour certain, as it may be known The Lieu in London, I think here will be but few: And I think a reasonable number were best; for I suppose she the Tow-toink a reasonable number were easy, your all Men, er's Letter will declare ber self to be a good Woman for all Men, concern-but for the King, at the hour of her Death: For this ingher.

Morning the fent for me, and protested her Innocency: And now again, and said unto me, Mr. Kingston, I beard say, I shall not die afore Noon, and I am formy therefore; for I thought to be dead by this time, and pail my pain. I told ber it flould be no pain, it was fo fotell (for fo is his word.) And then file faid, she heard fay the Executioner was very good, and I have a little Neck, and put her hand about it, laughing heartily : I have feen many Men and Women executed, and they have been in great Sorrow; and to my knowledge, this Lady bath much joy and pleasure in death.

The 19th of May being thus come, the Queen, according to the express order given, was brought to a Scaffold erected upon the Green in the Tower of London, where our Historians say, she spake before a great Company there assembled, to this effect:

Good Christian People, I am come hither to die; for according to the Law, and by the Law I am 1536, judy'd to die, and therefore I will freak nothing a lier gainfi it. I am come hither to accuse no Man, nor to speech at freak any thing of that whereof I am accused, and Execution condenned to die. But I pray God fave the King, and find him long to reign over year; for a gentler nor a more merciful Prince was there never; and to we be now cover a good a write and a Sequence. me he was ever a good, a gentle, and a Sovereign Lord. And if any Person will meddle if my cause, I require them to judge the best. And thus I take my leave of the World, and of you all; and I beartily defire you all to pray for me.

After which coming to her Devotions, her

Head was stricken off with a Sword.

And thus ended the Queen, lamented by many, both as she was defirous to advance Learned Men, in which number Hugh Latimer Eishop of Worcefter, and Nieholas Saxton Bishop of Salisbury are recounted; and as she was a great Almi-Her Chagiver; infomuch, as she is faid in three quarters rity. of a year to have bestow'd fourteen or fifteen thousand pounds in this kind, besides Moneys intended by her towards raifing a Stock for poor Artificers in the Realm. Sanders faith her Father died shortly after for Grief; but our Heralds affirm, it was not till about two years after, 1528. But that we may leave them both to their Grave and Silence, I find by our Records, that the Princefs Mary did about those times much endeavour Princess to be restor'd to the King her Fathers good fa- Mary vour and opinion, as hoping now that the Prinking's cess Elizabeth was declar'd Illegitimate, she should savour. be receiv'd as Heir to the Crown: Therefore by frequent and earnest Letters written with her own hand, she both acknowledgeth her fault of own hand, the both acknowledgeth her hant of obtlinacy heretofore, and craveth inflantly from the King to write to her, or fend fome token as a fign of Reconciliation. Upon which Submiffion, our King, by the Duke of Norfalk encentain Articles for her to fubfcribe; which

First, whether she doth Recognize the Kings High- Articles ness for her Sovereign Lord, and King, and will fint he submit her self unto his Highness and all Laws of the seribe.

Secondly, whether she will with all her Power obey and maintain all the Statutes of the Realm. Thirdly, whether the will Recognize the Kings Highnels to be Supream Head in Earth of the Church England, and utterly refuse the Bishop of Rome's pretended Power, or any Interest she bath or may have thereby.

Fourthly, whether she doth freely Recognize and knowledge both by Gods Law and Mans Law the Mirriage heretofore had between his Majesty and her Moto be unlawful.

Fifthly, for what easfes, and by whose motion and means she hath remaind in his oblitions of long. Sixthly, what is the easile she at this time e-bove all others submitteth, and who moved her here-

In fatisfaction to which the return'd a Sub-She fubfeription, figning with her own name the four mets to first Articles, but concerning the other two, she them demurr'd; fome Persons being interested therewhom the would not discover.

What effect follow'd hereupon appears not otherwise, than that notwithtlanding this and other Submissions, the King proceeded to his intended Marriage; which also he so hastned, as some fay the day following Queen Ann's Death, others not till three days after, he caus'd it to be Solemniz'd; as not thinking it fit to meurn long, or much, for one the Law had declard Criminal; concerning the Ceremony whereof, as well as the Opinion held in these times of The King the different perfections of the King, and his two marries Queens, I shall out of our Records produce the land Nol. II.

1536. censure of Sir John Russel (afterwards Earl of Pope, and advise him not to be so bold with Princes, 1536. who having been at Church, observ'd the King to be the goodlieft Person there; but of the Queens gave this nore, that the richer Queen fame was in Cloaths, the fairer the appeard, but that the other, the richer she was Appeard, but that the other, the richer she was Appeard, but that the other, the richer she was Appeard. pareld, the worfe she looked; but this Queen certainly deferred all the favour done her, as be-ing reputed the Differentell, Fairest, and Humbleft of the Kings Wives; though both Queen Ratherine in her younger days, and the late Queen, were not early parallel d. But we will leave them a while, and come unto foreign bufinefles now a long time intermitted.

Bufineffes betwixt our King and the Roman See were not fo desperate, but that divers Overtures on either fide were made for an Accommodation; for while the Pope fear'd, left our King together with renouncing the Roman Churches Authority, would relinquish the Reli-Churches Authority, would reiniquin the Keli-gion, he not only cover'd his inward and deep Dipleature, but feererly permitted Treaties in divers kinds with our King, and particularly in-vited him to a War againft the Turk; who alfo gladly entertaind the Motion, as hoping the Pope would not fo foon joyn Chriftian Princes against him. Insemuch that Sir Gregory Cosalist ThePope new residing Agent at Rome, the Pope about new residing Agent at Rome, the Pope about May 20 sent for him, and told him that he heard of the Queens Inprojement; and must glad that God being freed the King from this megual Matrimony, and offered his Mijefty occasion of gaining eternal Hoto the Kee mer, by making Peace between the Emperor and but to no French King; which might be now done by joyning purpose. with the Roman See. As for himself, that he ne-ver did him but good Offices, as having urg'd Cleour did him but good Offices, at having ung a Cle-ment VII. to right him in his Diverce, and at Bo-nonia, (being then Cardinal) perfuaded the Emperor to fuffer it with Patience. As for Rochefter, that he made him Cardinal only to ufe him in the enfuing Council; and when his death was related, being follows cited and compell'd to revenge it, he could not but yield for the time to do those things quæ tamen nunquam in animo habuit ad exitum perducere. Where-fore that he purpes d to fend a Nuntio into England to treat of a Peace in Christendom, when our King weald hasken thereunto; whence hall follow a Greeneral Council, and a War against the Turk: And all this he wish'd Sir Gregory to write (as of himlelf) to our King; as appears by the Origi-nal, May 27. Shortly after which, I find that Cardinal Compejus lending hither his Brother Marco America about other business, as regaining his Bishoprick of Salisbury, and the place of English Protector in the next Council, attempted to induce our King to a Reconciliation: But as the terms propos'd pleas'd not; fo the Pope conceiving now all further Treaty to be vain, la-bourd to unite all Christian Princes in a War against him, as a deferter of all Papal Authority, and an Heretick. Therefore he both gain'd Charles (who had long folicited a Council) by fummoning one to begin at Manua the year following, May 22, and to oblige James V. he fent him a rich confecrated Sword. He found not yet in France that disposition he hop'd for, the overtures of War being thought unseasonable, in a time when a general Reformation was expected on the Roman Churches part. Therefore I find by an Original dispatch of Mount's, how the Bishop of Charless in Campagne told him, (upon notice taken in France of the Breve of the Pope, whereby (as aforefaid) he excommunicated our King, and deprived him of his Kingdom, and absolved his Subjects of their Oaths of Allegiance, unless he return'd to that See, and abrogated

unless he would become a Langhing-steck to the World, (for these are Mount's words;) yet did not Francis fully comply with our King, but held a middle way: For as he approved not the Popes harfh proceeding, fo when our King by his Ambaffador gave him account of his Actions, expecting his Approbation, he return'd this Anfwer: That notwithstanding all the Kings Realm Fox 2 35. should agree and condescend never so much to the Right Should agree and condescend never so much to the Right and Title of Succession in the Islue of his second Mirriage, yet when sowing parts shall conceive any other, and contrary Opinion thereof, great troubles might enfue. Whereupon Stephen Gardiner Bishop of Winebester then resident in France, was commanded by our King to tell Francis, that he mirves wild much the King lis Brother, being a mife Prince, should so long insist upon these Points, since it was ever the manner of lawful Kings to pursue their Right without demanding the approbation of others. For proof whereof, he said he could give particular instances in Francis bis Predecessors, who had done many things contrary to the advice of the Popes (when they were beneficial to the Kingdom,) and that notwithstanding all opposition they had been happily atchiev'd. Our King was not ignorant, yet, how much it concern'd him to keep Francis in good Correspondency, as knowing the defire he had to recover Milan (for his fecond Son the Duke of Orleans) was fo vehement, as it would incline him wholly to the Emperor, when it might be obtain'd. And in effect I find by Bellay, that the Treaty hereof begun the last year, as aforefaid, was still profecuted; infomuch that Charles gave hope of restoring Milan now upon Sforza's Death (who Death of being thought the last of the Line of Aneas of Milan, and Mutins Scavola, dyed about the end of Octo-ber precedent) to the Duke of Angoulesme the third Son of Francis, when he would fend the Duke of Orleans his fecond Son to affift him in an intended Expedition against Algier, and help to reduce the Protestant Princes in Germany, and the King of England to an union with the Church; but Francis reply'd, that to give Milan from his fecond Son to his third, was to cause a perpetual War betwixt two Brothers. Therefore that Bellay, he desir'd it for the Duke of Orleans, in which Jan cafe also the faid Duke should renounce all claim to Naples, Florence, Urbin, &c. That to fend him to the Emperor, upon what pretence foever, was in effect to do nothing but put an Hoftage into his hand: As for the Reformation and Re-union of those who had any way feparated themfelves from the Church, he should be glad to fecond him as well in Germany as in England. And that for Henry the Eighth in particular, he thought fit the Emperor should summon all Christian Princes and Potentates to affift him, and as Bellay hath it Donner main fort to constrain the faid King to obey the Sentence and Determination of the Church.

During thefe Treaties, the French Army un-Billsy. der the Comte de St. Paul, advanc'd fo far in Sa-voy, as they had taken all but Montmelian, which yet at laft yielded: While those of Geneva, think-Guseva af-ing the occasion fair, shook off their Obedience liberty to the Duke, and by the help of the Proteslant and ex-Swifs, afferted themselves into the liberty they pells its now enjoy: Expelling together their Bifhop, and Bifhop, changing the form of both their Civil and Ecclassified Policy. Of all which the Emperor being advertis'd, thought how to gain time, cf-pecially till he had reinforc'd his Army, not yet fully made up fince his late Voyage to Turis, and affur'd himself of the Pope: Therefore he promised the Dutchy of Milan to the Duke of Orleans, fo that the Dutches, being the Relict of Sforza, might be provided for, intending those Laws were made against the Papal Authority,) that the Cardinal of Lorain would warn the

May 27. June 6.

bring the

Undeavours therefore Christian Princes againft

Records.

March

of the Fr.

in Savoy

mont

1536. thereby (as my Author hath it) that she might be given the Scottish King: Yet in the manner of performing thereof, so much caution and delay was propos'd, as their former jealousies did but increase. And indeed, neither was the overture of Francis his requiring the Emperor to prefs the Pope against our King, more than device to make our King more firm unto him: Nor the Proposition of the Emperor for restoring Milan, other than an invention to gain time, he being refolv'd to fuccour Savoy at what price foever : And the rather, that (as is before faid) there was a project of giving all that Country to the Emperor for fome other Lands in Italy; whereby also the Emperor should have wholly invironed France: So that all was but distinulation on either part. For while these things were treating, the Emperor (though injoyning filence to the French, and promiting it himfelf) yet both acquainted the Pope with divers Passages, and together made him jealous of the intentions of Francis to invade Italy, and drew the Venetians to his fide, and made fundry Propositions of Allyance and Friendship with our King, (some whereof we have before shew'd) and rais d great Forces by Sea and Land, upon pretence of imploying them against Infidels : While Francis on the other part, being well inform'd hereof, re-folv'd fo to proceed in his War, as he neglected nothing which might firengthen himfelf, or weaken his Enemies. Therefore, having with a choice Army of fifteen or fixteen thousand under the command of Chahot Admiral of France, taken the chief places in Saway, he commanded it to advance over the Alps towards Turin in Piedment, which was rendred to him, as also divers other places there. And thus it is probable they might have enter'd and taken Milan; for as the and Pied-Duke was newly dead, and the Government unfetled; fo there wanted all things which might ferve to defend the Country. Nevertheless, out of I know not what scrupulosity or prefumption, Francis commanded Chabat to flay until he had fent to demand again the Investiture thereof from the Emperor in the name of his Son the Duke of Orleans. I am not ignorant yet, that some French Writers say, that Francis checkt this command by private Inftructions: But Chabot thought it fafer to follow those directions he had under the Hand and Seal of Francis, than to comply with an intimated and contradictory Advice Howbeit, the overtures of Peace continued fill (at Naples, where the Emperor then was) betwist both Princes, the French Ambassador Monsieur de Velly alledging, that the business of Savoy was but a particular difference betwist their King and that Duke, and that it should not hinder the General Treaty. To which the Emperor fceni'd to give ear alfo; not omitting yet to raife Forces daily, nor to march towards Rome, where the Pope attended him: Having for the more enlarging his entry to that City, thrown down the Relicks of the Temple of Peace built by the Remans: And indeed, the Popes defire was he should never put up his Sword, till he had reduc'd our King, and the Protestants to their former Devotion, and afterwards invaded the Turk. Of which our King being well inform'd, (for no Prince had better intelligence) commanded Richard Pace his Ambaffador, to treat with the Emperor, though not with intention to joyn with him, so much as to discover his defigns. For I find by Bellay, that our King had

ing our King further to interpose Oshces with 1536-Francis for restoring all he had taken in Saver, Emps. and to divert him from attempting Milan. For the rest, desiring our King to forget not only renew his what difcontentment foever had paft betwixt and the them by reason of the Divorce with Queen Kar Treate, tharine (fince she being dead, all cause of offence Henry. was ceas'd) but to renew their ancient Treaties of Confederation and Amity, and together to affift him against the Tirk. So that by this free communication of the Emperors I etters, as well as by an Advertisement which I find Francis gave our King of certain following passages at Rome, one may perceive what strait Correspondence was then held betwixt them. Howfoever, Pace in his Negotiation found that the Emperor took nothing fo ill as the Illegitimation of the Princefs Miry: For though our King had given Succours in Denmark against his Niece, and encourag'd the Princes in Germany to take Arms against him; yet these affronts the Emperor faid might be pass'd over, but not the Princess M .:ry's Illegitimation; whom therefore he defir'd our King to restore, giving hope (as Pace writes Records. from Rome) on that condition to procure a Ge-April 12. neral Council which might give the King con-tentment in his defires; or if he would refer all things to the Popes Authority, to make his Peace with him, to validate his laft Marriage, and together establish his Succession, Honour and Conscience in all he could wish. These were indeed thought great offers: But our King, confidering that they were little more than Sollicitations and Difcourfes of Granvele, and that to legi-timate the Princess Mary, was in effect no less than to declare her his Heir, what difguise foever the Emperor would put on it, and defiring, for the rest, nothing so much, as to settle the Succession in his future Issue, (which he hop'd would be Masculine) gave no good Audience hereunto

The Emperor having now at Rome faluted the Emperor Pope and Cardinals, and communicated his Rea-comes to fons in private, Monsieur de Velly was referr'd again to them for an answer concerning his Demand of Milan. But the Pope gave him no hope thereof; adding, that the Emperor had no fuch intention; and when he should affent, the Fimetians would not, who had enter'd into a League defensive for that Dutchy. Whereupon Felly Boars, goes to the Emperor, requiring performance from him: But the Emperor demanded whether he had Commission to treat thereof: But Velly faying he had none, the Emperor would hear him no more. Nevertheless, to shew a desire April 17s to come to a solid Peace with Francis, and avoid effusion of their Subjects Blood: The Emperor in the prefence of the Pope, the Cardinals, and the Ambassadors of France, of Venice, and many great Prelates and Noble-men affembled, made a long Oration in Spanish, his Hat in his Hand; declaring first the cause of quarrel and unkindness betwixt Aliximilian and Leavis VII. deducing them after to his times, with much particularity; and shewing still the fault was on the French fide: After which, in the presence of this great Affembly, he made three offers to Fourcis, first, That if a fure Peace might be concluded, he would give the Dutchy of Milan to one of the Kings Children (but not the Duke of Orleans, fince he knew Francis did not demand it so much to fix there, as to serve himself thereof as a step to pals further to the form For I find by Bellay, that our King had State of Florence, and Urbin, in the right of the first acquainted Francis (by means of his Ambassador then resident here) with a Letter of the Emperores, about this time sent him, wherein the said that Francis had already made of the Dutchy of Burberor advertis d, that he meant to go to Rome, and what he would say and do there; request-

April 5.

April

OFers bimfelt

1536. would declare in what manner be would affift him fion. As for the Treaty between that it was fet 1536. towards the celebration of a Council, a Reformation of Christendom, and War against Hereticks and Infdels: Which because it would not be done except all offences were remov'd, he requir'd first that his Army Should be withdrawn out of Piedmont. that his strong pound be minimally on of I couldly, if within themty days Francis did not approve this, he offer'd to end the business in a Duelbertmixt their two Persons; not out of bravery yet, but for avaiding the effusion of Blood between their Sub-jects, too much whereof had been shed dready. And that be thought there would be no more difficulty in affigning a fit place for this Combat, than for an In-terview, and that it might be in some Isle, or on some Bridge or Boat on a River: And for Arms, he thought them all good, whether they were Swords or Poignerds, in their Shirts; only in this case, that who socver overcame, should give his Forces to the Pope, for the mere strengthening kim to summen a Council, and reduce all disobedient Persons to the Church, and resist the Tuck: For which purposes he did there ingage himfelt to the Pope and Apoltolick See; requiring befides, that the Drieby of Milan and Burgundy should be depifited in some good hand, and the Victor have both. The third offer was War; to which yet he protested not to come without necessity; though he had fufficient cause, Francis bawing taken Arms against bim white he talk'd of a Peace by the entremise of one who had no power to treat thereof : Only if he were it, till one of them both remain'd the poorest Gentle-man in their Country. Thus bowing his Head to lock upon a feroul lapt about his Finger, he made a paufe: After which the Pope began to tpeak; but the Emperor interrupting him, faid be had not yet concluded, but would, when he had referred all to his Holiness, whom he desired to bestow his favour on him who had most reason and equity on fide. This being done, the Pope commended the Emperor's Propositions, as tending to a Peace, and hop'd the French King would be no less in-clin'd thereunto. After which, the Bishop of Mescan step'd forth, and said, the protestation being in Spanish, be understood it not well: But for the point concerning Peace, he knew the King his Master awould be inclinable to it; referving the further Declaration thereof to Monsieur de Velly, who drawing near, and desiring to be heard, the Empehigh real, and telling to be head already speken to bun too often of Peace, and that he despi'd Deeds and not Words; and that he would grant him no other Audience at that time, only what he had there publicly stid, should be given in Writing, and therewith arole. So that though Velly desired to and the street with a sole. fwer for his Master, yet the Emperor still laid the fault on him; and thus went with the Pope to Mass. But that Evening the Pope, who knew of what consequence a War betwixt these Princes was, fent for the French Ambuffadors, defiring them to do good offices in their difpatches to Francis, protesting that he was surpriz'd on his part: And that whatfoever he faid, he would keep neutrality betwixt them. The Emperor being now ready to take his leave of the Pope, the French Ambaffador defir'd Audience, and thereupon told the Emperor in the Popes prefence, That whereas he had spoken of a Combat with his King in case no Peace were made, with out declaring other cause than to spare essusion of their Subjects Blood; he desir'd to know whether his Majeffy had made a Challenge to fight: And that if it were so, he durst answer on the part of his King, that it should not be result. And that the Emperor might well remember that heretofore there was question bereaf, but not non that he knew; the King his come in Perfon to fight, he refolved to march.

Mafter defiring to have Milan by Treaty, and having given express command to his General in Piedbout fixty thousand Men, and an hundred pieces mont, not to invade any thing in the Emperors polici- of Artillery, he came to Afti the 22 of fune 1536. June 22

down in Writing, and the Pope might judge of both; and therefore that he would say no more of it, but know only whether the Emperor would change the Know know only whether the Emperor would change the Knop bis Messer, as having faild in his Word or Henour, and whether he had defeal him. There were nor many present when this pass'd; which the Emperor observing, call'd all those in the Sala and Chamber of Audience, and stid, as he spake publickly before, so he would again. Many hereupon The Emrepairing to him, he said in Italian, That he interpolating to him, he said in Italian, That he interpolating to him, he said in Italian, That he interpolating to him, he said in Italian, That he interpolation had been did then think best that they two in Person should end the husins; which yet he spake by way of Advice, and not as a Challenge; especially since it was in the Popes presence, without whose permission he would do nothing. And therefore that he proposed it only to avoid a greater hocovernience, as thinking it better to do so, than suffer a War in Christendom: Which was the reason also why he appointed him towenty days time to retire his Army out of Piedmont. But these Bellers that proved the Tope's requestly were not openly advertised to Francis, nor some others, peror observing, call'd all those in the Sala and openly advertis'd to Francis, nor fome others, whereby he vilified the Commanders and Soldiery of that Nation in comparison of his, (as Bellay hath it;) who relates the business somewhat more in favour of his Nation, and Monfieur de Velly, than Sindoval doth, or indeed our Records: amongst which I find divers of these passages certified by Richard Pace. But though the French Ambaffadors (at the Pope's intreaty) were fparing in their relation of the Emperors words, which (if we may believe Sandoval) were very high, yet order was given to his Ambassadors in France (as Sandoval hath it) to acquaint Francis with them; adding only four days more to the term of twenty formerly prefix'd: Though Bellay doth not acknowledge this particulat.

While these things past thus at Rome, the Car-April 18.

dinal of Lorain was imploy'd by Francis to the Emperor: Who in his way coming to the French Army, charg'd Chabot not to march further, or innovate any thing, (which troubled him, as being inform'd that the Emperor both rais'd great Forces, and drew near him.) After which he went to Antonio de Leywa, and the Spanish Army, requiring the same of them, at least till he had spoken with the Emperor; whom yet when he found ambiguous in his answers, and uncertain, he acquainted the Pope therewith, and afterwards the French King; who having in the mean while understood by the Emperors Ambassadors resident with him; the effect of his Masters Oration at Rome (though yet he would give no copy of it) fent to the Pope a Justification, (fet down at large in Bellay) in the conclusion whereof he return'd this Answer to the Emperors ofof the feathful this Alliner to the Employers of the of a Combat, That if ever they came near each Front K's other (as might well be if they led their Armies in his offerof Person) and the Emperor then sent a Challenge, he would a Duel.

fight with him. But the Pope, who had more use of their Swords than to imploy them one against the other, endeavour'd ftill to procure all good Amity and Correspondence betwixt them: Therefore he fent (upon the request of the Cardinal of Lorain) the Cardinal de Carpi, and the Cardinal Trivulcio to mediate an end; for which purpose they were to go joyntly to the Emperor first, and then one of them to the French King, according to the occasion.

But nothing now could hinder the Emperor from going into France, where in sequence of a Protestation (as Sandoval hath it) to attend the French King thirty days to fee whether he would

The Fr Aml affadors AnThe Emperor in vades France with great Force. Aug. 15.

O&ob Nov.

But re-without effecting

Countreys) by his order had rais'd an Army of twenty thousand Foot, and a thousand Horse under the command of Henry Count of Nasjan, to invade France on that part: It was yet advis d whether in his way he should take the places in Savoy and Piedmont, which the French held, or go strait to France. Antonio de Leyva faid, that wild Beafts were to be fought in their Dens; and therefore wish'd the Emperor not to spend his Men in Sieges, but march on; which Counfel being follow'd (and the rather, because the Emperor desir'd personally to be in France to acquit himself of his promile,) the Army having first taken some Towns, came near Marselles: Where Andrea Daris with his Gallies was appointed to meet him. But Antonia de Leyva (a valiant, but Sept. 15. covetous and cruel Commander) dying there, and about thirty thousand more of Sickness and Disorder, the Emperor, who had now stay'd 33 days (as Sandoval hath it) in the French King's Dominions, return'd to Genouia, and (not long after) to Spain, leaving order yet for War in Savoy and Piedmont. But whatfoever retarded Francis, it was not want of Courage: Though I find by Bellay, he was refolv'd by his Council rather to weary and famish the Emperors Army, than to fight with him; though yet having rais'd a confiderable Army in those parts under the command of Montmorency, Grand-Maiftre of France, he was not unprovided to refift him; befides which, he had another under his own command at Valence, not far off; which he yet left at last to come to his other Army. But the Emperor, as having (even by the confession of Bellay) loft half his Army, was now remov'd, leaving behind him fo many dead Soldiers unburied, that they infected the Air. Hereupon Francis took Advice, whether it were better to follow the Emperor into Italy, or to return and raife the Siege from Peronne, being then in fome dan-ger; the latter pleas'd him, his affairs in Italy at that time fucceeding well, and Winter besides drawing on: Only before he return'd, he thought good to visit Marsfeilles, commanding the Seig-neur de Langy to repair the ruines of Aix, where the Emperor had lodg'd. This being done, and he now going homewards, the glad news was brought him, that the Siege of Peronne was rais'd; which (as Sandoval hath it) hap'ned the same day the Emperor diflodg'd from Air to return into Italy. Sent. ro. And thus did those vast Preparatives of the Emperor come to nothing; (great Armies as well as little ones having their Inconveniences, especially where Sickness and Disorder doth intervene.) any thing.

Francis being yet upon his way home (as Bellay hath it) received Letters from his Ambaffador in England, how our King was inform'd by his Agents in the French Court, that the Emperor's Retreat was out of Stratagem, that the French might fol-low him, and so be taken at an advantage: And that this Rumour of his Men's Death, was rais'd only to draw them on the fooner; but that in effect he had not loft 2000 Men fince his coming out of Italy. Upon which false Advertisements alfo, our King forbare to comply with Francis as he was wont; where he on the other fide effrang'd himself a little from King Henry, insomuch, as he began to cherish and love the King of Scotland more than before; who also had promised him affiftance in his Wars (which our King had neglected, contrary to Francis's Expectation) and was now in France; for which reasons he gave him his Daughter Magdalene (as is before related:) Nevertheless, that he might proceed formally, he fent Gilles de Pommeray hither, to tell our King: nally known by him, as was fufficiently proved before Thomas Archbishop of Canterbury, and theresecondly, the Cause of his accepting the Scottish fore, that any Dispensation to the contrary here-while his Sister Mary (Governess of the Low- King for his Son-in-law: Thirdly, to propose a Marriage betwixt the Duke of Orleans (his Son) and the Princess Mary. But when the Marriage and the Princeis Many. But when the Marriage with King James, and the Excuse for it was produced, our King was in that Passion, that he would not hear him again for four days space; though yet he forgot not by his Council to shew how ill he took it. So that Pommeray, without almost daring to speak of the Marriage with the Princess Mary, return'd; and the rather, because our King knew well that the Emperor had a good while fince propos'd it to Francis, only to fow Diffention betwixt both Princes. Our King finding this Coldness on the French King's part, began to think how he might fortify himself by the Emperor's Friendship; for which purpose also (as is aforesaid) several Overtures had been made; but the Declaration of the Princess Mary to be illegitimate hindred all (which though much labour'd by the Emperor, King Henry yet could not be perfuaded to revoke) tho'he profess'd himfelf much inclin'd to return to his antient Friendship with Charles; so that till after the Death of Queen Jane, being the Year following, all things remained in fuspence. In which terms also, he thought fit they should be continued till he faw the Event of the War, renewed now betwixt the Emperor and French King with more Ardor than ever, (as shall be told hereafter;) of which occasion therefore our King thought fit to prevail himself, for giving order to his Businesses at home:

The ParWhich that he might do by the Advice and Conliament fent of his Parliament, he commanded it to fit fits. the eighth of June, 1536.

The principal Act was touching the Succession Regn. 18.

of the Crown; in which after a rehearfal of the June 2. Statute 25 Henry VIII. touching the King's Marriages, and limitation of Succession to the Crown, and another of 26 Henry VIII. it is declared, That whereas a Marriage heretofore was folemniz'd betwixt the King's Highness and the Lady Anne Bolen, that fithence that time, certain juff, true and lawful Impediments of Marriage, unknown at the making of the faid Acts, were confessed by the faid Lady Anne before Thomas Lord Archbishop of Cantobury; by which it plainly appeareth, that the faid Marriage betwist his Highness and the faid Lady Anne was never good nor confonant to the Laws; and therefore his Highness was lawfully divorc'd from the faid Lady Anne: Moreover, that she and her Complices before-mention'd, were convict by due course of Law, and have fuffer'd according to their Merits.

And whereas it has pleas'd his Highness, notwithstanding the great Perils fuffer'd by occasion of his first unlawful Marriage betwixt the Lady Katharine, and this unlawful Marriage betwixt the Lady Anne, at the most humble Petition of his Nobles in this Realm, and for Confervation of the same, to enter into Marriage again with the Lady Jane, according to the Laws of the Church; and that there is hope she may conceive by his Highness; That it is the most humble Petition of his Nobles and Commons, that for extinguishment of all Ambiguities and Doubts, it may be The K's enacted in manner and form as followeth. And Children first, that the Marriage between the King and by histwo-Queen Katharine should be void and of no effect, former as being grounded on a Dispensation, in a Case declared not dispensable by Human Authority; and so illegitidetermin'd by the whole Clergy, and both Uni-mate by versities of this Realm; as also by the Univer-lumentfities of Bononia, Padua, Paris, Orleans, Tholoufe, Anjou, and divers others, in regard, the being Wife to his elder Brother Prince Arthur, was carnally known by him, as was fufficiently proved

B. Her.

1536. of should be to all intents void, and of no effect; and the liftue procreated under the same unlawful Marriage, betwixt his Highness and the faid Lady Katharine, to be illegirimate, and barr'd from claiming any Inheritance from his Highness from chamming any inheritance from his Fighness by Lineal Defcent; and that the Marriage also, betwix this Highness and Queen Anne is of no value, no effect; and that the Divorce made between his Highness and her, is good and effectual, and the Islue illegitimate and not inheritable to his Highness, by Lineal Descent; any former

Act to the contrary notwithstanding.

And furthermore, fith many Inconveniences have fallen by marrying within degrees prohibited by God's Law; which Marriages yet have been often difpenced with by some usurped Power; when yet no Man hath Power to difpense with God's Law. Therefore it was enacted. That if any were married within the faid degrees, or took to Wife the Sifter or Daughter, &c. of her whom he had before carnally known, he might and should be separated by the definirive Sentence of the Archbilhops, and other Ministers of the Church of England: And their said Sentence to be good and effectual, without suing any Appeal to or from the Court of Rome.

Further, it was enacted, that the Iffue betwixt his Highness and Queen Jane should be his lawful Children and Heirs, and inherit according to the course of Inheritance of the Laws of this Realm, the Imperial Crown of the same, with all Dignities, Honours, Preheminences, Prerogatives, Authorities, and Jurisdictions to the fame annexed or belonging.

But if it should happen that Queen Jane should decease without Issue-male of the Body of her Highness to be begotten, then the same Imperial Crown and all other the Premiffes to be to his Majesty, and to his Heirs Males by any other lawful Wife, and to the Heirs of the Body of the same Son and Heir Male lawfully begotten; and so from Son and Heir Male to Son and Heir Male, and to the Heirs of every fuch Son and Heir Male lawfully begotten according to the course of Inheritance, as is above-said. And for default of fuch Iffue Male, then the faid Imperial Crown and Premisses should be to the Issue Female, betwixt his Majesty and Queen Jane begotten, and fo again to the Islue Female by any other Wife in like manner; that is to fay, to the eldest Iffue of the Iffue Female, and to the Heirs of her Body lawfully begotten; and fo from lifue Female to Iffue Female, and to their Heirs of their Bodies, one after another by course of Inheritance, according to their Ages, as the Crown of England hath been accustomed, and ought to succeed and go, in case when there is Heir Female inheritable to the fame. forafmuch as it stands in the only Will and Pleafure of Almighty God, whether his Highness shall have Heirs, and that if they fail, and no Provision be made in his life, who should govern this Realm, that then this Realm after his transitory life should be destitute of a lawful Governour, or incumbred with fuch a Person that would cover to afpire to the same, that in this case, his Highness might limit the Crown to any Person or Persons in possession and remainder by his Letters Patents under the great Seal; or elfe by his laft Will affigned with his hand, after fuch manner as should be expressed in his faid Letters Patents; and that fuch Person and Persons should have and enjoy the same after his decease in as large and ample manner as the lawful Heirs of his Body should have done.

After which, order was taken to prevent Ufur-who believ'd either the Marriage of his Highnefs with the Lady Kathrine, or the Lady Anne, High to be good; and did call the Lady Mny or the Treaton Lady Elizabeth legitimate, and who used certain to after. Lady Engageth legitimate, and who are certain to affect Words and Actions tending to this purpole: As the Legis to be feen more largely in the faid Statute.

Furthermore, it was enacted, That if his Maccis Mary iesty should decease before any Heir Male of his or Eliza-Body inheritable to the Crown of this Realm beth. should be of the Age of eighteen Years, or any Heir Female which should be inheritable as aforefaid, should be married, or be of the Age of fix-teen Years, that then they, or any of them, shall be and remain until they came unto the faid feveral Ages, at and in the Governance of their natural Mother, and fuch other his Counfellors and Nobles of his Realm, as his Highness should name and appoint by his last Will in writing, figned with his Hand, or otherwife to be at and in the Governance of fuch his Counfellors and Nobles of his Realm, as his Highness should name and appoint by his last Will in Writing, and fign'd with his Hand, (as is aforesaid) and that an Oath should be administred for performance of this Act, and the Penalty of High Treason inflicted on those that shall refuse it.

Furthermore, it was enacted, That the King should have Power by his Letters Patents or last Will, as aforefaid, to advance any Person or Per-fons of his most Royal Blood to any Title, Stile, or Name of any Effate, Dignity or Honour, and to give to them or any of them any Castles, Honours, Lands, &c. in Fee-simple, Fee-tail, or for term of Lives, or the Life of any of them, faving the Rights and Estates of all others, in and to the fame.

Finally, it was enacted, That every Claufe, Article and Sentence therein, should be taken and accepted according to the plain Words thereof. How yet this Act was alter'd, 35 Hen. VIII. shall be declared by me, God willing, in this Hiftory; referring the Reader to x Mary I. when it was repeal d.

Howfoever, I thought fit to fet it down with much particularity, both as it is Relative to many precedent Points touch'd in this Hiltory, and as it leads the way to some that follow; by which alfo it may appear unto the Reader, with how high a hand the King did authorize his Actions, while each part justified the other, and all his Subjects Voices being comprehended in his Parliament, no Man could accuse him, who did not in some fort first condemn himself; so that if in those two Divorces he had not reason, the chief of his Kingdom feem'd to err with him: Unless ill Arts with the Nobility, and undue Election of the Knights and Burgeffes be fuppos'd; which though possible in many, and (for that I have seen) there be cause to suspect it in some; yet to believe a general Corruption in the prime Perfons of a Kingdom, or to allow an Argument drawn from thence only, as conclusive, what is it else but to overthrow and subvert the Columns and Foundations of Laws? And then what Statute can stand? What Decree will be in force? I will not yet take on me every where to defend the Actions of a Prince, whom fo many have bitterly cenfur'd, as it may be doubtful whether he were more extoll'd at home in his first times, or depress'd afterwards abroad. But thus much I cannot but observe of him, that if where he did ill, he made or found many Complices; where he did well, he had almost the Glory alone; as being so active and knowing in all he undertook, that he was capable of both: Only towards his latter time, as he was thought to decline in his fingular Perfections of Nature, fo all things pation of the Crown, and the Penalty of High almost tell to the worse; while divers of those Treason imposed on Usurpers, as on those also ill Accidents which betel him, were revenged fo committed.

fometimes with fo fevere a Juftice, as might be or Ordinances are made, upon pain of forfeicalled Summum Im; fometimes repaired with ture, &c. Sith which time, divers Acts and Orfurnishing his Wants in that large manner and extent, both on the Spiritualty and Temporalty, Act have been made; it was now ordered that as little elfe remained, either to be demanded or Apprentices should pay but little Fees at their gotten. In procuring whereof, though he loft Entry, and that no other should be given to remuch of his former Love and Esteem, yet he strain them from keeping Shops when they were kept himself still upon the high steps of Autho-Freemen. And as this was much to the benefit rity, without flooping either to Fear or Necesfity : fo that his most irregular Actions represented fuch a Type of Greatness, as crooked Lines drawn every way, which tho' not fo compendidrawn every way, which the not to compendi-ous and direct as the ftrair, feem yet to have in them fomewhat more of the infinite; but as these things are fer down by way of Description, and not of Apology, so I will leave them to come to my History, which for being free and impartial, will speak him better to the judicious Reader than my Annotations can.

This Year Thomas Howard, youngest Son to Thomas late Duke of Norfolk, and Brother to the present Duke (but by another Mother) had so obtain'd the Favour of the Lady Margaret Douglas, Lord Ho-Daughter to the Queen of Scots (then living in ward imprifon'd the King's Court) that fome affiancing or privy Contract past betwixt them: whereof the King being inform'd, was much incens'd; as conwithout ceiving that one fo join'd in blood to him and his Confent. Nephew the Scottish King, should not be given nor taken without his confent, especially when fhe lived fo near him; wherefore he was committed to the Tower, and she not long after. She is al-The business thus being in July brought to the Parliament, and certain Suspicions and Accusa-tions alledged of aspiring to the Crown, (some Circumstances being drawn thereunto) he was there attainted of High-Treason; and in sequence thereof a Statute made, that none should Marry in the next degrees of the Blood Royal, without the King's Licence first had, &c. which yet being repeal of t Edw. VI. 12. and 1 Mary 1. I mention no otherwife. The News hereof being brought with speed to M. rgaret Queen of Scotts, afflicted her much; so that it retarded her Journey into England, whither she was coming; being desirous also to be reconciled to her former Husband Archibald Douglas Earl of Anguis. Nevertheless she thought fit to write to the King, That whereas she heard he was displeas'd with her Daughter for promifing Marriage to the Lord Thomas Howard, intending to punish her for the fame, she desir'd his Majesty to pardon her; and if he fo pleas'd, to fend her into Scotland, that she come no more in his presence; and not to be extream to his own Blood. Notwithstanding which, both she and the Lord Thomas Howard were committed to the Tower, without fuffering other Punilhment, where also the remain'd till the death of the faid Townes Howard; but then releas'd to be a Mother of that great Offspring which after follow'd. Besides these two Statutes formerly mention'd, I find fome others concerning State-Government enacted this Seffions which therefore I shall infert

Whereas in the 19 Hen. VII. 7. a Law was made, That no Masters, Wardens, and Fellowthip of Crafts, or Rulers of Guilds and Fraternities, should take upon them to make any Acts or Ordinances, ne to execute any heretofore made by them, or hereafter to be made, in difheritance or diminution of the King's Prerogative, nor of other, nor against the common profit of the People, except the fame Act were examined or approved by the Chancellor of England, or Chief Justice of either Bench, or three of them, or before the Justices of Assize in their Freemen. And as this was much to the benefit of those who would learn and fet up Trades and Occupations, fo it was thought by some it would be much more, when the Mysteries of the said Trades (as far as could be expressed by Words) might be commanded to be published in Print to the end that all Men (who would) might learn them, and an honeft Emulation (who fhould do beft) might quicken Industry, and bring down the Prices of things: Or if this were not permitted, that at least due Order were taken, that the Masters in all Trades might be restrain'd from packing together to inhance Wares and Commodities, but by the approbation of the Lord Chancellor, Lord Treasurer. &c. as being to that common profit of the Subject, (mention'd in the Statute) which is more to be effected than any Man's particular Gain.

In fequence whereof, also another Act was Fronth made concerning the Prices of Wine, to this ef-2d, the fect; that no French Wine should be fold by re- Quart. tail above Two-pence a Quart, and no Malme-Sack at sies, Ramnies, (being Wines of Romania as I take 3 d. Jies, Kammies, (being wines of Komania as transe it) Sack or Sweet-Wines, thould be above Three-pence the quart. Provided always that the Lord Chancellor, Lord Treafurer, Lord Preident of the King's Council, Lord Privy-Seal, and the two Chief Juftices of either Bench, or five, four or three of them should have Power and Authority by their directions to fet the Prices of Wines: the faid Prices to be published in Chancery, in the Term-time, or in such Cities, Towns and Places where Wines are fold in gross; the Contents or Quantity of Liquor also, to be held in tents of Quantity of Liquor and, to be near in every Veffel, was experified in the faid Statute; and Remedy given for lofs fuffain'd in those which wanted measure: § And though this prevented much Couzenage, yet Order being not taken to punish those who fallstied and corrupted Wines, much Abuse in this kind followed.

Order was also taken how Pirates at Sea should be punish'd.

All Bulls, Breves and Dispensations also from Bulls, &c. All bulls, breve and Dupentations and non gains the Biflop, or See of Rome, were declared void; made neverthelefs, that all Marriages folennis'd before void-the third of November, 26 of the King's Reign, and not contrary to God's Laws, flould be good and effectual. And also that Archbiflops, Bi-And ano track Archinops, Bi-fhops, and all Ecclefiaftical Perfons and Orders of this Realm, might keep and retain their Archbifhopricks, Bifhopricks, &c. and exercise all things pertaining to their Dignities, Offices, Orders, Cures, &c. And that the Effect and Contents of all Bulls, Breves, Faculties, &c. purchas'd of the See of Rome, which be allowable, and may be lawfully granted by the Archbishop of Canterbury, by the Authority of the Laws and Statutes of this Realm, should be confirmed under the Great Seal at the humble fuit of the Petitioners for the same.

Alfo, for the more confirmation of the King's 1534, Supremacy (enacted two Years fince) it was now ordained, that every Ecclesiastical and Lay-Officer, shall be sworn to renounce the said Bishop and his Authority, and to refift it to his Power reputing any Oath (heretofore taken for the maintenance of the fame) to be void. And the refusal of this Oath shall be adjudged High-Treason. Some Ecclefiaftical Conftitutions also were Circuit or Progress, in the Shire where such Acts made, during this short Sessions of Parliament, Vol. II. D d (be-razde a Reron and Privy-Seal. July 9.

Acts palled

1536. (beginning the eighth of June, and ending the eighteenth of July next following.) But to leave the less important to be seen in their places, I shall here briefly set down the Resultance of and keep his body Commandament, and never decline certain Articles, concluded in the Convocation concerning Religion. These Articles (as I gather out of our Records) were devised by the King himself, and recommended afterwards to the Convocation-house by Cromwell, who being lately made Baron, and Lord Privy-Seal, and then Vicegerent General of the King's Authority in Ec-clefiaftical Affairs, gave much Subject of Dif-courfe. For the the King fublituted him for due Administration of Justice in all Causes and Cases concerning Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction, as well as for Godly Information, and Redress of all Errors, Herefies, and Abuses of the Church, as the Act of Parliament hath it, 51 Henry VIII. 10. yet because there was no Example, either of King of Jirael, they said, (tho' lawfully in the own Person, enjoying this mixt Power of Spiritual and Temporal) or of Popes, that derive their whole Ecclefiaftical Power immediately on any elfe, especially a fecular Person, they thought it flrange: But that I may pass by those things whereof no Publick Reason, that I have seen, is extant, I shall in these Articles observe rather the chief variation they had from the former Doctrines, than repeat the Doctrines themselves, as being fufficiently known.

After establishing (therefore) the Bible, and three received Creeds, with the Explication of the Fathers and the four first Councils, as the the Fathers and the four first searching to his definition of Sacraments, three only. Firth, Baptifin for washing away of Sins. Secondly, Petifm for washing away of Sins. Secondly, Penance for fatisfaction of Faults afterwards committed both towards God and our Neighbour. Thirdly, the Eucharist: Changing in any of them little yet of the ordinary, (as I conceive) unless Auricular Confession seem not there altogether fo ftrictly commanded as before; nor otherwife much than in case of mortal Sin. that Prayer, Fasting, Alms-deeds, as being Fru-dus digni Panitentia, are not to be held as means of our Salvation by way of Merit, but of Merey only. For Juftification, that it was attained by Contrition or true Repentance and Faith, which was to be accompanied with Hope, Charity, and other Inward and Spiritual Motions and Graces, and outward good Works.

Concerning Images, That they had been used in the Old Testament, and sometimes (for the abuse of them) taken away; and allow'd in the New, (as good Authors declare) Therefore that the true use of them should be taught by Bishops and Preachers every where, they being permitted to fland in Churches no otherwise than as Reprefenters of Virtue, and Stirrers of Devotion; and not that rude People should take Superstition thence, as in times past, or that Idolatry should ensue; and that the Censing of them, kneeling before them, and all other Honours should be done as in the Honour of God only, although they be done before the Images of Christ, the Crofs, or of our Lady, or any Saint befides.

Concerning honouring of Saints; That we should not trust to obtain at their hands that which is to be had only of God: Yet that they were to be honour'd because they reign'd in Glory, and were Examples of Virtue, as not fearing to die for Christ; and therefore to be taken (in that they may) to be the Advancers of our Prayers and Demands unto Chrift, but not to be had in other Reverence and Honour.

Saint John Baptift, and other Apostles, fo that it be done without any vain Superstition, as to think that any Saint is more merciful, or will hear us fooner than Christ, or that any Saint doth ferve for one thing more than another, or is Patron of the fame. And that we flouid keep Holidays in memory of him, and his Saints, upon fuch Days as the Church hath ordain'd, except they be mitigated or moderated by the Affent or Commandment of the Supream Head; in which case the Subjects ought to obey it.

Concerning the Rites and Ceremonies of the Church, as using certain Vestments in God's Service, fprinkling of Holy-water, giving of Holy-bread, bearing of Candles on Candlemas-day, giving of Alhes on Alfonednefday, bearing of Palors on Palor-Simday, creeping to the Crofs on Good-Friday, and offering there unto Chrift before the lame, and kiffing of it, fetting up of the Sepulchre of Chrift, the Hallowing of the Font, and other like Benedictions made by the Ministers of God's Church; as alfo all other laudable Cu-floms, Rites, and Ceremonies; that they were not to be contemn'd and caft away, but to be us'd and continu'd, to put us in remembrance of those spiritual things that they do signify, not fuffering them to be forgotten, but renewing them in our memory from time to time: But that none of those Ceremonies have Power to remit Sins, but only to flir and lift up our Minds unto God, by whom only our Sins be for-

Concerning Purgatory: Forafmuch as according to due order of Charity, and the Book of Macchabees, and divers antient Writers, it is a very good and charitable deed to pray for Souls de-parted: And forafmuch as fuch Ufes have continued in the Church even from the beginning That all Bishops and Preachers should instruct and teach the People not to be grieved with the continuance of the fame : But forafmuch as the place where they be, the Name thereof, and the kind of Pains there also, be to us uncertain by Scripture; that therefore this and all other fuch things were to be remitted to God Almighty, unto whose Mercy it is meet and convenient to commend them, truffing that God accepteth our Prayers for them; referring the rest wholly to God, to whom is known their flate and condition. And therefore that it was necessary that fuch should be clearly put away, which under the Name of Purgatory have been advanced; as to make Men believe, That through the Bishop of Rome's Pardons, Souls might be clearly delivered out of Purgatory and all the Pains of it, or that Masses said at Scala Cali, or otherwhere in any place, or before any Image, might likewise de-liver them from all their Pain, and fend them ftrait to Heaven; and other like Abufes. This was fubscribed by Thomas Cromwel, Thomas Contuariensis, Johannes London, and sixteen Pishops more (Rewland Bishop of Coventry and Litchfield being comprized by his Proxy) and William Abbeing comprised by ins Froxy) and window Aubat of Weshmishor, with 39 Abbats and Priors; and by the Lower-House, consisting of 50 Arch-deacons and Proctors of the Clergy; among whom, in the Original, I find two Italians, Pelydore Virgil Arch-deacon of Wells, and Peter Vannes Arch-deacon of Worcefter, who not long before was made Coadjutor to Richard Pace Dean of May 8 Concerning praying to them: That it is very was made Coadjutor to Richard Pace Dean of laudable to use these Words, All baly Angels and Salisbury, being then thought commonly distractions in Heaven, pray for us, and with us, unto the ed and out of his Wits.

King's Records. nions, would fliew how capable he was of it: Though yet he published not these Articles without much consultation with his Bishops and Divines, who flood divided in opinion; fome leaning to the Lutheran, as Canterbury, Ely, Salisbury, Worcefter, Hereford, Rochefter, St. David, and the rest: Others cleaving to the old Doctrine and Rites, as York, London, Durham, Winchefter, Chi-chefter, Norwich and Carlifle; whose Arguments on either fide, the King himfelf took pains to perufe and moderate, adding Animadversions with his own hand, which are to be seen in our Records: Yet was not his Doctrine approved by the Romish Party, because it took away much of their Authority and Revenue: Nor by the Lutheran and Zuinglian, (then beginning to appear in these Parts) because it differ'd from theirs. But whatfoever any of the Reformed might fay for their only two Sacraments, it was thought by some, that according to the King's Instauration, nance might have been retained still upon some terms as a third; both as there is no other general way than Aversion from Sin, and Conversion to God, known to all Mankind for making their Peace with him, and obtaining Pardon. And as the other two Sacraments being particular Rites only of the Christian Church, are in their explication subject to so much Difficulty and Difputes, as no less than a Man's whole Age is requir'd to fludy them; when as this other, being an uncontroverted Sign of the Operation of God's Spirit in our Hearts, produceth fuch holy effects, as it ought to be acknowledg'd not only as a particular Sacrament of Grace, but an Univerfal of the reasonable Nature of Mankind, wherefoever it be found; and therefore worthy its former Name and Authority, where Abufes in Absolution were taken away: For perform-ing whereof, they said the Priest should never pronounce it but in case of such a serious Repentance as might totally efface the Fault, and make the Sinner a new Man; without which therefore he should be told, he was as much liable and obnoxious to Sin and Punishment, as if no fuch Abfolution had ever been given. Whereas now the common Abfolution of Priefts, ex-tending (for the most part) no farther than to require Attrition, or Sorrow for their Offences past, and to command, for the rest, some formal Prayers, eafy Fafts, or ordinary Pilgrimages, not only made Men believe they were quit of their Sins at so easy a rate, as they feared not much to return to them again, but usurped on the Power of God, while they brought the Forgiveness of Sins within their own particular Jurisdiction, and together put off Heaven and Everlasting Happinels at a cheaper price than either they could juftly promife, or frail Man expect. So that they concluded, that Priefts should be allow'd indeed to absolve, but so as Men might not think their Sins paft, as much pardon'd as if they had not been committed, unless they never do the same offence again; left greater occasion and liberty of Sin should thereby be given.

And now, as the Reader hath formerly feen the Reformation Francis would have flood to, when it might have been imbrac'd in Germany; fo here he may perceive what our King requir'd in Eng-Neither of which yet could ever be accepted, as long as contentious Preachers and factious School-men on all fides would have rather difturb'd the Peace of the whole World, than re-

And thus the King having taken on him the Ti-tle of Supream Head of the Church in his Domi-them one William Tindal, who had translated into them one William Tindal, who had translated into Sept. English a great part of the Bible, (a witty, but vio Tindal the lent, and sometimes railing Disputant) at a Town Translanear Bruffels; fo on the other fide, these Cruel-tor of the ties made the Romish Party so odious, as their Dif- Bible ferences grew almost irreconcileable.

Our King having thus begun to rectify the Frame of Religion, endeavour'd now to prevent foreign Opposition: And because he knew of what confequence the General Council now appointed at Mantua was, he obtain'd this Decree to be fign'd by the Bishops while their Synod Records.

A S concerning General Councils, like as we (taught The Biby long Experience) do perfetily know that there tree connever was, no is any thing devised, invented, or in cerning fitted by our Fore-futbors more expedient, or more ne-General collery for the effabiliment of our Faith, for the extin-Councils, pation of Herches, and the abeliling of Selis and Schilms; and finally, for the reducing of Christ's People unto one perfect Unity and Concord in his Religion, than unto one perfect Unity and Concord in his Religion, than by the having of General Councils, so that the same be langfully had, and congregated in Spiritu Sancto, and he also conform and agreeable, as well concerning the Surety and Indifferency of the Places, as all other Points requisite and necessary for the same, with that wholesome and godly Institution and Usage for the which they were at first devised and used in the Primitive Sections. they were at fift deviled and used in the Permittee Church. Evens lo on the other fide, taught by like Ex-perience, we esseem, repute, and judge, That there is, ne can be any thing in the World more pession when permiciant to the Common-weal of Christond, no where-by the Truth of God's Word bath in times pass, or here-after may be some defaced and subverted, or where bath and may only more Contention, more Discord, after may be joint actuate and jurvertee, or more contention, more biford, and other devilish Essets, than when such General Councils have or shall be assembled not Christenly, nor Councils have or shall be assembled not Christosty, nor charitably; but for and upon private Malice and Ambition, or other worldly and carnal Respects and Confiderations, according to the saying of Gregory Nazianzenus, in his Epistle to one Procopius, wherein he writeth bits Sentence following: Sic sentio, si verum scribendum est, omnes Conventus Episcoporum sugiendos estle, quia nullius Synodi sinem with honory nearus heaven the heavent mente following: vidi bonum, neque habentem magis solutionem malorum, quam incrementum. Nam Cupiditates Contentionum, & Gloriæ (fed ne putes me odio-Contentionum, & Gloria (fed ne putes me odio-fum effe feribentem) vincunt rationem. That is to fay, & Ithink this; if I flould write truly, that all General Councils be to be of betweed. For I never faw that they produced any good end or effect, nor that any Provifiem or Remedy, but rather increase of Milchiefs proceeded of them. For the defire of maintenance of Men's Opinions and Ambition of Glory (but rec-kenn or that I write this of Malice) both always in them overcome Reafen. Wherefore we think that Chriftian Princes effectally and above all things ough and must, with all their Wills, Power, and Diligence foresee and provide, Ne sanctissima hae in parte Majorum instituca ad improbissimos Ambitionis Majorum inftituta ad improbiffimos Ambitionis aut Malitiæ effectus explendos divertissimo suo sine & sceleratissimo pervertantur. Neve ad alium prætextum possint valere & longe diversum effeêtum Orbi producere, quam sanctissima rei sacies præ se ferat. That is to say, 'Lest the most noble 'whossome institutions of our Elders in this behalf be wood one infitutions of our Edders in this collap we perverted to a most contrary and most wicked end and effect. That is to sury, to fulfil and satisfie the wicked effections of Most Ambition and Malice; or left they might prevail for any other colour, or bring forth any other effect, than their most wirtums and laudable countenance doth outwardly to the World. linquilled or retracted one Particle of those Opinions they had publickly taught their Auditors and Disciples. For which Obitinacy also, as the Reformers, being the weaker, suffer'd most, they Cause all together a General Council. Secondly, whether the Council second of the Particle Reformers, being the weaker, suffer'd most, they Cause all together a General Council. Secondly, whether the Reformers, being the weaker, suffer'd most, they Cause all together a General Council. Secondly whether the Reformers, being the weaker, suffer'd most, they can be a suffer and suffer and suffer a suffer of the Church, according to such a Commandment given herecofore in that point.

1536. ceffarily they require a general Council, nor can other—

in the General Council. Fourthly, what order of proceeding is to be objected in the same, and how the Opinion of Charles of the Palls. ceeding is to be confirmed in the fathers are to be con-fulted or ask d. Fifthly, what Dolivines are to be al-four'd or defended with diwar after things which in General Councils ought of reason and equity to be obferv'd. And as unto the first point, we think that neither the Bishop of Rome, ne any one Prince of what Estate, Degree, or Preeminence soever be be, may by Coincil without the express Consent, Assentia of Christian Princes; and efgreement of the residue of Christian Princes; and efpecially, such as have within their own Realms and Seignories Imperium merum, that is to say, of such as have the whole intire and supream Government and Authority over all their Subjects, without knowledging Anthony or recognizing of any other Supream Power or Authority. And this to be true, we be induc'd to think by many and fundry, as well Examples, as great Resign and Authority. The which, forefunch as it should be over-long, and tedious to express here particularly, we have thought good to omit the same for this present. And in witness that this is our plain and determinate Sentence, Opinion, and Judgment touching the Pre-milles, we the Prelates and Clergy under-written, being Congregate together in the Convocation of the Province of Canterbury, and representing the whole Clergy of the same, have to these presents subscribed our Names the twentieth of July, in the year of our Lord, 1536. 28 Hen. 8.

> Thomas Cromwell. Thomas Cantuarienfis. Johannes London.

With 13 Bishops : And of Abbots, Priors, Archdeacons, Deans, Proctors, Clerks and other Ministers, 49.

After which, he fet forth an Injunction to restrain the number of Holy-days, now grown to that excefs, that there was fcarce time to gather in Harvest, or hold the seats of Justice in Term time; which as it was inconvenient, fo again the abuse of Holy-days in Drinking, and other Vices and Idleness was so great, as many Riots and Diforders were committed; for which reafon, though the number was limitted, yet Priefts were fuffer'd to do their duties in Churches on these days, and all who would to hear them. And now as the poorer fort were at liberty to work for their living on those days, fo they approv'd well this Reformation. Whereby it came to pass that the Reverence of supposed Saints (whereupon much of the Roman Religion was built) growing to an excess, became one of the first degrees to the Ruine thereof in this Kingdom. In fequence of which, the same year he commanded (under the name of Cromwel his Vice-gerent) these Injunctions following to be observ'd of the Deans, Parsons, Vicars, Curates, and Stipendaries refident, or having care of Souls each where

1. And First, that in all Parishes and places of Preaching, once every Sunday for a quarter of a year together, the Doctrine of Supremacy should be taught, and the Laws to that purpose read, and that the Bishop of Rome's Authority having no establishment by the Law of God was justly taken away.

2. That in the Kings Articles, lately fet forth, the Real Doctrine of Salvation should be distinguish'd from the Rites and Ceremonies of the Church, and so taught the People as they might know, what was necessary in Religion, and what was inflituted for the decent and politick order

3. That the late order concerning abrogating of certain Superfittions Holy-days, should be read to the People, and they perfuaded to keep

4. That they should not extol or fet forth Images, Reliques, or Miracles, or allure People to Pilgrimages otherwise than as permitted in the late Articles, but rather exhort them to keep Gods Commandments, and provide for their Families, and what they can give, to bestow it ra-ther on the Poor, than upon the said Images, or Reliques.

5. That in their Sermons, they admonish Fathers to teach their Children the Pater noster, Articles of our Faith, and Commandments in their Mother-tongue; which also should be often re-peated by the said Youth, and to bring them up in Learning, or fome honest Occupation or Trade, whereby to avoid idleness, and get their Living.

6. That Sacraments and Sacramentals be duly and reverently administred by the Parsons, Vicars, and Curates; and if any be absent from their Benefices by Licence, that Learned Curates be left in their place.

7. That every Parson or Proprietary of a Church should provide a Bible in Latine and Englifb, and lay the same in the Quire for every Man to read, exhorting them thereunto, as being the word of God, teaching them withal to avoid Controversie amongst themselves in the places they understood not, but to refer themfelves therein to the better Learned.

8. That the faid Deans, Parfons, Vicars, and Curates should not haunt Taverns nor Ale-houfes, or use Tables, Cards, or any unlawful Games, but rather at their leifure that they should read the Holy Scripture, and be example to others in purity of life.

9. That because the Goods of the Church are the Goods of the Poor, and yet the needy in these days not sustain'd with the same, therefore all Parsons, Vicars, and Prebendaries, and other Benefic'd Men, which may dispend twenty pounds yearly, or above, should distribute amongst the poor Parishioners in the presence of the Church-wardens, the fortieth part of the Revenue of their Benefices, left they should be noted of Ingraticude, as receiving thirty-nine parts, and yet not vouchsafing to bestow the fortieth.

10. That every Parfon, Vicar, Clerk, or Benefic'd-man, being able to dispend in Benefices or Promotions of the Church 100 l. yearly, or more, shall for one, or every of the faid 100 L yearly, give a competent exhibition to maintain one Scholar, or more, either in Grammar-Schools, or the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge, who when they have profited in Learning, may be partners in their Patrons Cure and Charge, in Preaching and otherwise, or else pro-fit the Common-wealth with their Council and Wildom.

11. That all Parsons, Vicars and Clerks having Churches, Chappels, or Mantions, shall be-flow yearly upon the faid Mantions or Chancels of their Churches (being in decay) the fifth part of their Benefices, till they had fully repair'd the same.

That all these Injunctions should be observ'd, under pain of Sufpension and Sequestration of the Benefices until they were done.

Other Injunctions also at divers times were Other influencins and at Green the state of the Pee-feet our, which may be feen in Eas. But as the The Pee-People were not generally fatisfied with the ple diffa-Kings alterations, and proceedings in Religion (1854) with these ons laid on the Clergy.

Injuncti-

Fox.

Alterations in Re

Grievan-

Rebels

and of a minimum nich were demanded of them (atout then) being more than for their former Taxes they were well able Poverty in 1 to pity in he can not a little murmur; but if the were a control in them, Cromwel was not altegethe. See from Error; fince to charge the Turie at the time time, that he would make a Retermation plaufible, could be no fafe Counfel; and in effect, it prov'd fo. For the People did rife in many places; though as they agreed not alike in the causes of their Discontentments, they neither took Arms at once, nor altogether Rebellion for the same Pretexts. The Lincolnshire-men set in Lincoln on by one Doctor Mackrel (Prior of Barlings in the faid County, but calling himself Captain Coblet) began first, though the moderatest in their demands, as hoping, perchance, the fooner to have them granted. But as this was not the way, fo neither could they long fubfift, when no fuch necessary motive united them. The Grievances they fent the King in the ces of the quality of most humble Supplicants, were, The quality of most humble supplicants, were, The hopprellin of fo many Religious Hudges: The Act of Ufes, as refraining the Subjects liberty in the Declaration of their Wills: The fifteenths, for which yet Poverty is only pleaded: That his trace had ill Counfellors, and of mean Birth about him, (among which Cromvel was not forgotten;) That divors Bifloop had fuberted the Faith, and that they fear the feewels and Plate of their Parifle Churches fhould be fewers and trute of the state of the state of the state of the state of which, yet, they, as his poor and true Subjects, humbly defir d his Gracious Majefy to call to him the Nobility of the Realm, and to fee fuch order and directions concerning the Premisses given, us they might accept his Grace to be their Governour and Supream Head of the Church of England, which they did acknowledge to be his Graces true Inheritance and Right: And that his Grace should have the Tenth, and First-fruits of Spiritual Promotions of the value of twenty pounds and above, and of all other under the said value, which do not keep Residence and Hospitality.

And now these Articles being publish'd in the Neighbourhood, and thence voiced abroad, drew many to them; while yet for more colouring their Actions, they swore to be true to God, the King, and Common-weal. Nevertheless, as they referv'd the interpretation of the Oath to themselves, they began a dangerous Rebellion. All which being advertis'd to our vigilant King, caus'd him immediately to dispatch Charles Brandon Duke of Suffolk, against them, about the se-venth of October (as I find by an Original) with Commission to raise Forces: Together with which he writ a Letter to them in fuch a Stile, as though he might promise Justice, he yet requir'd many things, and particularly that two of the chief Rebels should be deliver'd to him. Whereupon the Knights and Gentlemen, who were affociated with these Rebels, wrote to the Duke of Suffolk, how ill the People were fatif-fied with the Kings Reply; and that upon read-ing of it, they cry'd they would march on, and make the Gentlemen go along, or else destroy them. And that for this cause they had taken on them to be their Heads and Captains; as also that by Policy they might the better stay them: Which yet they thought would be hard to do, in regard the People rofe in fo many other parts. Adding further, that if they had not found means to keep them back, and perfuaded them to Petition the King, they had before then been at Huntington; and that there was no ways to appeale them but a General Pardon. This Letter made it felf considerable; for when it made him think what he had to do: Yet was were a true Allegation, it had its Pretext, though not his Service neglected by some of the Nobi-

in fifteenths, granted by Act not fufficient to excuse the Gentlemen: And 1536 when not, it was cunningly remonstrated; for it ferv'd both ways. Howbeit, the Duke of Suffolk finding that the end thereof, at worst, was to obtain a General Pardon; and that the Commotion might end thereby, follicited on their behalf: Yet fo as he offer'd withal to go against the Rebels with the Forces he had there affembled, if the King gave him leave. In the mean while, he order'd the business in that manner, that he obtain'd of them not to proceed till the Kings Answer were return'd. But the King, who was inform'd already from divers parts (bur chiefly from Yorkshire) that the People began there also to take Arms; and knowing of what great Consequence it might be, if the great Persons in those parts (though the rumour were false) should be said to joyn with him, had commanded George Earl of Shrewsbury, Thomas Mannors Earl of Rutland, and George Hastings Earl of Huntingdon, to make a Proclamation to the Lincolnshire-men, summoning and commanding them under their allegiance and peril of their Lives to return: Which as it much disheartned them, The Res fo many stole away, while the rest (being as bels distanced from the Duke, that as long as they were perse. in Arms, it was in vain for him to mediate their Pardon) featter'd themselves to divers parts; the more stubborn and poorer fort yet retiring to the 2014/him-men. Besides they had heard, that (notwithstanding the foul ways of this Country, and the Winter season approaching) the great Ordnance was coming on, and the King in Perfon following: All which Confiderations, together with the danger that divers of the principal Ring-leaders found themselves in, as being Men of good Fortunes, and fure to fuffer most, caus'd them to persuade those who remain'd, to make their submission as the King requir'd; which was, That they should acknowledge their fault, deliver up their Armour, and approve and maintain all the Acts of Parliament made fince the Kings Reign.

> of Yorkshire, which pass'd in this manner: While the Lincolnshire Commotion was on foot, the Yorkhire-men made an Infurrection under the com- Infurrectimand of one Robert Aske; they would have it on in call'd yet only a Pilgrimage of Grace; while, for Torkhires giving it Reputation, certain Priefts with Crofles led the way, the Army following with Banners, wherein were painted the Crucifix, the five Wounds, and the Chalice. And because they defir'd to draw in as many good Persons as July, they could, they attempted first William Lord Dacres of Gillessand, advising him (as being of late wrongfully accus'd, and in danger, had not his Peers acquitted him) to joyn with them, but he refus'd: Then they fent to invite divers others, using threats, where persuasions serv'd not; infomuch, that at last they made sundry Perfons of quality fwear to be faithful to them: For they pretended only the good of the King and Comnonwealth, the Church and Religion, and the depreffing of Hereticks

And so this business ended: Though not that

They being now affembled in great number, the dispossessed and discontented Monks every where made Petitions to Aske for remedy; who I find also re-establish'd them in divers places, wishing them to pray for the King, and to take up Victuals of the Farmers of the faid Monaiteries upon Bill, till their fuit were granted. Which nes upon bin, in their intervere granted. When being advertis'd to the King on the one fide, and (prefently after) that the Commons of Rich-Andin mont, Lancalpire, Durbam, Westmerland, &c. were other up in another place, and had fir'd the Peacons, Places, made him think what he had to do: Yet was park by Service peached by some of the Noble.

Octob. 7.

1536. lity there, especially George Talbot Earl of Shrewf-bury, who raising many Men before he received the Kings Commission for it, did by this dangerous discretion much advance his Service. though his zeal for the welfare of the State were above feruples, and that fome Learned Men in the Law besides had told him, that his Intention being good, his Action could not be conftrued ill: He yet faid, he knew his danger fo well, as he had fent to the King for a Pardon; while for deterring the Rebels, as well as the fatisfying many, who otherwise might have fulf ratisfying harry, who did with a high have fulf fulf edded him, he gave an Outh to his Men to be true unto the King; protefling further, that according to the ancient Loyalty of the Talbots to the Crown, when it had been upon a flake, he would have liv'd and dy'd in defence of it. And now the first order the King gave was to command the Duke of Suffolk's stay in Lincolnshire, left they should rife again. Then he appointed the Earl of Shrewsbury as his Lieutenant, to march with a great Army and the Canon, against the Northern Men: He writ also to Ed-Octob. 17. ward Stanley Earl of Derby, to raise what Forces he could, promising to repay his Charges. Henry to the King, and the Earls of Huntingdom and Rutland offer'd themfelves to the Kings Service. The Rese hels reford to their Monasteries by the Rebels refore forme (or I feel porticeled), the feel feel feel porticeled to their Monasteries by the Rebels (as I find particularly those of Sally, Whally, Minks to (as I find particularly those of only, their Mo-Norton, and Hessim) he commanded them to be nafferies taken out, and Martial Law to be us'd against them. Yet as the noise of this Insurrection was by continual Courriers augmented, Thomas Howard Duke of Norfolk about the twentieth of Octo-ber, was dispatch dwith Forces to affish the Earl of Shrewsbury: Who writ to the King, that the Yorkshire-men, as being us'd to Arms, were more confiderable than those of Lancashire, yet that they could not long continue together, but for lack of means to provide Victuals otherwife than by Rapine; and the feafon of the year: And that the best way was to persuade them to lay down their Arms, or sow Sedition among them.

They force the Arch. sy to take Oath.

This while Aske and his Company advancing forward, forc'd Edward Lee Archbishop of York, bishop of and Thomas Lord Darcy to surrender to them Pomfret Caftle, and take the Oath; which was, That Lord Dar they should enter into this Pilgrimage of Grace for the love of God, the preferencies of the Kings Person and Islae, the purifying of the Nobility, and expulsing all Fillan block, and coil comsellors; and for no parti-cular prefit for themselves, nor to do displeasure to any, cuar prept for tremjerves, nor to do diffetajure to any, nor to Stay nor Murder any for Evry; but to put away all fears, and take afore them the Crofs of Chrift, bis Evith, and the Reflitution of the Church, the Suppreffico of Hereticks and their Opinions. But as this Cattle was throng, the Archbilhop and Lord Darcy (though pretending want of Furniture and Provisions to beld now to the Christian and Lord Darcy (though pretending want of Furniture and Provisions to beld now to the Christian and Cord ture and Provision to hold out) were suspected to have render'd it in favour of the Rebels. They stay'd not yet so, but took the City of York and Hull; and betwixt Force and Intreaty drew most of the great Persons in those parts unto them. While not content to have pretext of Religion, they by false tales got many Partizans: Therefore they gave out as before they had done in Lincolnshire, that all the Gold in England should be brought to the Tower to be touch'd; and that the King claim'd all the Cattel unmark'd as his: As also all the Goods and Ornaments of Parish Churches; that they should pay Fines for Christenings, Weddings and Buryings, and for Licences to eat white Bread, and the daintier forts of Meats, &c. And this again flirr'd rancor in the Peoples Hearts,

Aske and his Followers being now in Pomfret, 1536. Lancafter the Herald came with a Proclamation Octo. 20. from the Earl of Shremshury, requiring it to be read. But Like fitting in State, and having the Archbishop on the one hand, and the Lord Darcy on the other, desir'd first to know the Contents; which being told, he faid it should not be proclaim'd. Nevertheless, he gave the Herald a safe conduct, as long as he ware his Coat. But the Rebels not contented thus, re-Odob at quin'd Henry Clifferd Earl of Cumberland (being then in his Castle of Skipton) to joyn with them: But he by Letter affures the King, that though 500 Gentlemen (retain'd at his cost) had forfaken him, he would yet continue the Kings true Subject, and defend his Castle (in which he had great Ordnance) against them all. Sir Ralph Evers also kept Scarborough Castle with no less courage against the Rebels; he and his Company having no fuftenance but Bread and Water for the space of twenty days that they Besleg'd

The King being now in Windfor, intends in Octob. 22, Person to go against the Rebels, commanding his Nobles for this purpose to meet him at Northampton November 7. And it was time to take fome The Regood order, for they were now grown to be create to thirty thousand Men; in which number (being 3000) divided into three Battels) they presented them. Men selves before Donasser: Near which, the Duke Ostob 26. of Norfolk, Earl of Shrewsbury, and Marquis of Exeter were encamp'd with an Army, though little in number (as being but five thousand) yet better furnish'd. And two ways they had to pass the River Don to the Town; a Bridge, and a Foord: The Bridge the Duke took on him to defend; not neglecting yet to entertain them with a Treaty, as expecting daily more Forces: The Foord was undertaken by the rest of the Army. This alone yet could not have ftay'd the Rebels; but a great Rain falling that Night, the Rebels; but a great Rain falling that Night, fo increas'd the Water, that it was not paffable the next day: Beides, by the conning of fome Shot, the Bridge was fo fortified, that it was now defenible. This hindered not the Treaty; for the Duke of Norfolk and the reit knowing of what Importance it was to gain time till all the Kings Forces were affembled, and having invelligence hefdet among the Robels, are the intelligence besides among the Rebels, got a Petition from them to be deliver'd to the King, which Sir Rulph Elecker and Robert Bowes flould carry, (who though manfully defending Hell against the Rebels, were at last forced to joyn and take the Oath.) The Duke himself also promised to go with them, upon condition that there might be a Ceffation from Hostility in the mean time; which was condescended to. Coming thus to Court, and the Duke being first heard (who acquainted the King with the state of all They fend things) the aforesaid Commissioners presented Deputies the intrusted Petition with many excuses on their to the own part. But the King, who defir'd fill to king-gain more time, would return no prefent an-iwer; and the rather, because he was inform'd by the Duke that the Rebels began to disband; for the Treaty disheartned and divided them, while Rumours were dispers'd every where, that fome of the Chiefs would compound for them-felves, and leave the rest to the Gallows. Infomuch that daily and nightly they ran away, especially the poorer fort, who had neither means to subsit, nor might have leave from their Captain to take any thing by force; which being advertis'd to the King, made him both give private order to discharge those Troops he had appointed to meet him at Northampton, and to detain Elecker and Bowes, upon pretext that some Innovation had been attempted by the Yorkshire-

1536. Novemb.

Dated Nov. 14.

Dated

Treaty with the Doneaster.

took this detention of their Messengers so ill, that they encourag'd one another to be in Arms again at an hours warning) the King thought fit again at an hours warning the King thought he to fend his answer; yet not by them, but by the Duke of Norfolk, together with a safe conduct (under the Great Seal) for three hundred Persons to meet in the Town of Doncaster for concluding all things; neither did the King doubt to admit this great number, as being confident they would not only less agree among themselves, but that some would be won to his Party. After which, the faid Elecker and Bowes had their dispatch too, as being commanded to fay, that his Majesty took it marvelous unkindly at their hands, that knowing his Benignity, they would rather rise in Arms than Petition his Majesty, and that they had left their Country open to the Scots, who prepar'd to invade them; referring the rest to the Duke of Nor-folk, who brought (as I gather out of those Ori-Nov. r 2. ginals I have feen) the offer of a Pardon to all, except fix nam'd, and four un-nam'd, when the reft would fubmit. But as the four un-nam'd concern'd every body, fo it was declin'd. Nevertheless, certain Books the King fent down, which were, as I take it, the Articles of Reli-gion, devis'd by himfelf, being receiv'd by them, for clearing all fuspition (fince the Commons

took away much misunderstanding and ill im-pression which their discontented Priests had KingsLet-given; while for accompanying hereof, express ter, dated order was fent to the Bishops in their several Diocesses, not to neglect the usual Ceremonies of the Church. Hercupon the Clergy of those parts met at Pomfret, and agreed on certain Articles of Religion, to be proposed in the following Treaty. The Archbishop of Nork being present, and taking occasion to tell them, that though Pilgrimages were good, yet an arm'd Pilgrimage could not be lawful. After this, a day of meeting at Doncaster was appointed, in which John Lord Scroop, Lord Latimer, John Lord Robert Aske, and about 300 Persons, were to treat with the Duke of Norfolk, Sir William Fitz-

William Admiral of England, and the reft: But concerning Aske, there was fome difficulty, the Rebels demanding Hoftages for his fafe return. But the King inform'd hereof, answer'd, that be knew no Gentleman or other, whom he esteem'd so little, as to put him in pledge for such a Villain; therefore he wish'd the Duke of Norfolk and the rest, to assure the passages over the River Don, and to fecure Doncaster: And whereas the Rebels had demanded an abstinence from War for fourteen days, in case no agreement should be made; not to grant it, as being time given them to fortifie themselves, whereas he should rather win it from them by Policy for his own Advantage. Nov. 26. But the Duke of Norfolk supposing that a General Pardon and a Parliament in those parts (which they requir'd) might quiet all, had by Letter to our King, perfuaded him to accord it, or elfe to march towards the Rebels with an Army of Gentlemen and Houshold Servants, and not to trust the Commons; since the Rebels, though they had laid down Arms, had yet (upon firing of Beacons and other Signals) agreed among themselves to resume them again on all occasifions. And now on December the fixth, the 300 on the part of the Commons came to Doncafter Rebels at to the Kings Lieutenants, where their first demand was a General Pardon, then a Parliament to be held in those parts, and a Court of Justice, that none beyond Trent might be cited to London in Law-Suits. After which, they desir'd a be so presumptions (seeing that we and our repeal of the Act of Parliament for the last Subwhole Clergy in Convocation, hath in Articles men fince their coming up; nevertheless, at last fidy, for Uses, for Misprision of Treason for words, for Tenths and First-fruits; then that the Lady Mary might be reftor'd to her Legitimation, the Pope to his wonted Jurisdiction, and the late expuls'd Monks to their Houses; the Lutherans to be punish'd, the Lord Privy-Seal and Lord Chancellor to be excluded from the next Parliament, and the Doctors Leigh and Layton to be imprison'd for Bribery and Extortion. But as these demands were more insolent than those of the Lincolnshire-men, and howsoever such as the King would not accord, the Lords rejected them; whereupon the Rebels affembled in great numbers, divers others also, desirous to know the Success, appearing among them. Which caus'd the Duke of Norfolk to write again to the King what a multitude was gotten together, and if no agreement follow'd, his Highness Army was in ill eftate to resist. Therefore, he and his Affociares desir'd his Grace to send them instruction ons for divers degrees of proceeding with the Rebels, and that the last might be for gaining of time, in case they came to no Agreement. The King finding these difficulties, and suspecting besides that the Emperor had or would have a hand therein, and that the Rebels might have affiftance from Scotland; and for the reft, believing that all was but mif-understanding in the simpler fort, which yet he hop'd his Book of Articles, and other good orders would in time rectifie, feat to the Duke of Norfolk a General Pardon for the Rebels, and promife of a Parliament, with directions yet to the Duke, that he should not make use thereof, but in case of extremity. But the Duke and the other Lords finding so many gather'd together, as their number was very great; and being not able to distinguish those who came on the Rebels part, from fuch as curiofity only brought thither; and confidering that the first denial of their demands had fo inflam'd them, that they intended to have fallen upon the Town of Doncafer, (had not the River this fecond time fwelling by Rain the Night preceding, prevented their artempt) made They are use of the Kings General Pardon and Promise pardon do fa Parliament, which they all gladly accept and red, and return d home. The Contents of this home.

Pardon, dated December 9. at Richmond, and Sealed with the Great Seal, was, as our Records shew, that the King granted them all a general and free Pardon of all Rebellion, Treasons, Felonies, and Trespasses, unto the day of the date hereof; provided that they make their Submif-fion to the Duke of Norfolk and Earl of Shrew(- bury (the Kings Lieutenant,) and that they rebel no more. I find also by our Records, that to the Petition (formerly mention'd) fent by Elecker and Bowes, the King sent a Reply pen'd by himself; which I doubt not gave much fa-fect fent to the Lincolnshire-men.) It was this:

First, astouching the maintenance of the Faith, Records, the terms be so general, that it would be very writes an hard to make certain answer to the same; but answer to if they mean the Faith of Christ, to the which their Grie-all Christian Men be only bound, we declare vances. and protest our felf to be that Prince that doth tisfaction (as another had before done to this ef-intend, and hath always minded to live and die in the Maintenance, Defence and Observation of the purity of the same. And that no Man can or dare fet his foot by ours, in proving of the contrary. Marvelling therefore much, that ignorant People would go about to take upon them to instruct and teach us (which hath been noted fomething Learned) what the Faith should 1536. declar'd it) as to take upon them to correct us all therein. Or that they would be so ingrate and unnatural towards their most Rightful King, and Natural Sovereign Lord, without any our defert, upon false reports or surmiles to suspect us of the fame, and give rather credence to forged light Tales, than to the very truth by us these twenty-eight years us'd, and by our Deeds

> The fecond, which toucheth the maintenance of the Church, and the Liberties of the same; we say it is so general a Proposition, that without distinctions no Man with troth can answer; neither by Gods Laws, nor by the Laws of the Realm. For first, the Church which they mean, must be known. Secondly, whether those things which they call Liberties, and fay they would maintain, be things lawful and beneficial to the Prince and Commonwealth, or otherwise. And these known, we doubt not but they shall be answer'd according to Gods Law, Equity, and Justice. Nevertheless, for all their generality this we dare affirm, that (meaning what Church they lift) we have done nothing that may not be abiden by, both by Gods Laws and Mans Laws, or that is prejudicial to our Common-wealth, if our proceedings may be indifferently And in our Church of England, confider'd. whereof we be the Supream Head on Earth, we have done nothing fo onerous and chargeable to them, as many of our Predeceffors have done upon much leffer grounds. Wherefore, fithence this Article pertaineth nothing to any of our Commons, nor that they bear any thing therein, we cannot but reckon a great unkindness and unnaturalness in them, which had leaver a Churl or Twain should enjoy those profits of their Monasteries for the supportation and maintenance of abominable Life, than that we their Prince fhould receive the fame, towards our extream Charges done, and daily fuftain'd for their defence against foreign Enemies. The third Article toucheth three things, the First is the Laws, the Second is the Commonwealth, the Third the Directors of the Laws un-Touching the Laws, as it becometh not der us. Touching the Laws, as it becomet not blind. Men to judge of Colours, ne to take upon them to be Judges of the fame; so we dare exprelly and boldly affirm, as a thing that may be easily and duly prov'd; that there were never in any one of our Predecessor days, so wholfom, commodious and beneficial Acts made for the Commonwealth, as have been made in our time; and fithence fome of them had credit and doing in our Affairs, that would now perchance pick them thank without defert; for our Lord forbid that both we and our Council fhould have loft fo much time, as not to know better now, than we did in the beginning of our Reign, what were a Commonwealth, and what were against the good and commodity of the fame; feeing we have been a King thefe twenty-eight years, and by experience learn'd the perfectness thereof. And although the folly and unkindness of some will not perchance let them so knowledge it, yet we trust and doubt not but the most part of our loving Subjects, especially those which be not seduced by salse report, do both think it, accept it, and find it fo. Now touching the Commonwealth, what King hath kept his fo long in Wealth and Peace, fo long without taking or doing wrong one to another, fo indifferently ministred Justice to all Estates both high and low, so defended them from all outward Enemies, to fortified the Frontier of his Realm to his no little, and in manner ineftimable Charges, and all for their Wealths and Safeties? What King hath given among thould have the felf-fame punishment which his Subjects more general and freer Pardons? What King hath been loather to punish his Subjects, or shew'd more Mercy among them? These things being so true as no true Man can deny them; it is an unnatural and unkind de-meanour of you our Subjects, to believe or deem the contrary of it, by whose report soe-ver it should be set forth against us. And at the beginning of our Reign where it is said, that so many Noblemen were Counsellors, we do not forget who were then Counfellors; for of the Temporalty, there were but two worthy to be call'd Noble, the one the Treasurer of England, the other the High Steward of our Houshold. Others, as the Lord Marney and Darcy, but mean born Gentlemen, nor yet of any great Lands, till they were promoted by us, and so made Knights and Lords; the rest were Lawyers and Prietts, faving the two Bishops of Canterbury and Winchester. If these be then the great number of Noblemen that is spoken of, and that our Subjects feem'd then contented withal, why then be they not much better contented with us which have fo many Nobles indeed, both of Birth and Condition of our Council. For first of the Temporalty of our Privy Council, we have the Duke of Norfolk, the Duke of Suffolk, the Marquis of Exceter, the Lord Steward, (when he is present) the Earl of Oxford, the Earl of Suffex, the Lord Sands our Chamberlain, the Lord Admiral Treasurer of our House, Sir William Paulet Comptroller of our House. And of the Spiritualty, the Bishop of Canterbury, Winchester, Hereford, and Chichefter: And for because it is more than neceffary to have fome in our Privy Council Learned in our Laws and Pacts of the World; we by the advice of our whole Council, aforenamed, did elect and chuse into our Privy Council, and also in their Rooms, our Chancellor and Privy-Seal; thinking them Men in all our Opinion most meet for the same Rooms; and we with our whole Council think it right strange, that ye which be but Brutes and inexpert folk, do take upon you to appoint us who be meet for our Council, and who be not. Mark there-fore now, how these seditions Persons, which thus wrongfully have born you thus in hand, have falfly abus'd you; that reckon there were then more Noble-men in our Privy Council than be now: But yet though of our great Clemency and Princely goodness we declare now the truth to pull our Subjects from that error and blindness they were led and train'd to by false and untrue surmise and report; we would again that every of them knew, that it appertaineth not to any Subject to prefume to take upon him the appointment of his King and Sovereign Lord's Council, ne for our part we will take any fuch thing at any of our Dubjects hands. Wherefore, "we would that from henceforth they should better remember the Duties of good Subjects to their natural Liege Lord, and meddle no further with those or such like things as they have nothing to do withal.

To the fourth Article, where the Commons do name certain of our Council to be fubverters both of Gods Law, and the Laws of this Realm, we do take and repute them as just and true executors both of Gods Laws and ours, as far as their Commission under us doth extend. And if any of our Subjects can duly prove the contra-ry, we shall proceed against them, and all other offenders therein according to Justice, as to our Estate and Dignity Royal doth appertain. And in case it be but a false and an untrue report, as we verily think it is, then it were as 1536. wrongfully have objected this to them, that they the Turk, newly return'd from the Expedition to 1536 should have had if they had deferv'd it. And Perfia; and perfuades him to take Arms against flant from that where they inhabit, and also from those People which never heard them Preach, nor yet know any part of their Conversation. Wherefore we exhort all ye our Commons to be no more fo light of credit in believing of evil things fpoke of us your natural Prince and Sovereign Lord, nor of any of our Prelates and Counfellors; but to think that your King, having fo long reign'd over you with the advice of his Council, hath as good diferetion to elect and chuse his Counfellors, as those, who-soever they be, that have put this in your heads, or ye either, being but ignorant People, and out of all experience of Princes Affairs.

Here in this final Point, which ye our Commons of Torkshire, Westmerland, Cumberland, the Bishoprick of Durbans, Richmond-hire, Crawen, Dens, Sedhine, and all other places that have been seduc'd to this Insurrection to desire, and also in the matter of the whole discourse of your Petitions; we verily think that the rest of all our whole Commons of many Countries, to whom you be in manner but an handful, will greatly disdain, and not bear it, that you take upon you to set order to Us and them, and efpecially to Us, being Sovereign Lord to you And that (you being Rebels) you would both. make them as bearers and partakers of your Mifchief, willing them to take Pardon for Infurrections, which verily we think and doubt not, they never minded; but like true Subjects, to the contrary, have both with Heart and Deed been ready to our call to defend both Us and themselves. And now for our part, as to your demands, We let you wit, that pardon of fuch things as you demand, lyeth only in the will and pleafure of the Prince: But it feemeth by your lewd Pro-clamations and fafe Conducts, that there be among you, which take upon them both the parts of Kings and Counfellors, which neither by Us, nor by the general confent of our Realm hath been admitted to any fuch room. What Arrogance is then in those Wretches, being also of none experience, to prefume to raife you our Subjects without Commission or Authority; yea and against Us, under a cloaked colour of your Wealth, and in our Name, and as the fuccess and end would declare, if we should not be more merciful unto you, than you have deferv'd, to your own atter Confusions? Wherefore, we let all you our faid Subjects again wit, that were it not that our Princely Heart cannot reckon this your fhameful Infurrection, and most ingrate and unnatural Rebellion to be done of Malice or Rancor, but rather by a lightness given in manner by a naughty nature to Communalty, and a wondrous fudden furreption of Gentlemen; we must needs have executed another manner of punishment, than if you will humbly knowledge your fault, and fubmit your felves to our mercy, we intend to do (as by our Proclamations we doubt not ye be inform'd.)

And now this great Company being dispers'd, began to take Books of Controversies in hand, and inform themselves concerning the Kings Articles of Religion. But the Clergy of the North in general wholly opposing the Kings Reformation, kept the Rebellion still on foot, though out-wardly imother'd for a while (as will appear in his place.)

I shall come now to Foreign History. Barbarossa being driven from Timis, repairs to wronginly have had if they had deferved it. And one thing among others caufeth us to think that this flander should be untrue, because it proceeded from that place which is both far dictional forms that place which is both far dictional from that place which is both far dictional forms that that Monsteur de Forrest the French Ambassador con-curr'd therein, and one Pignaselo a Renegado of Naples. Affembling thus an Army of 200000 Men, and 400 Gallies and Ships, (in which were 3000 Pieces of Ordnance) under the command of Lutsi Bassa, he appointed them to be ready at Velona, being not above 15 Leagues diffant from Otranto in Italy; from whence a fmall part of the Fleet being fent to enter that Continent, they chofe rather to fall on Castro than Orranto, or Brindist, being stronger than that they could be gotten easily. This great preparative yet, at last, came to nothing: For those of Apulia not rising in favour of the French (which was hop'd) nor Francis having any Army near to fecond him, and Doria (besides that) having taken some of their Gallies from them, the Balla having gotten Castro, and taken store of Captives, neglected the Enterprise, and return'd; while Forrest the French Ambassador died at Verona.

About this time Alexandro de Medicis, first Duke 153-of Florence, was betray'd by his Kinsman Lorenzo Sunda de Medicis, who promifing to help him to a Lady Sandey, much defir'd by the Duke, entic'd him to his House in the Night: But in Itead of the Lady, Lorenzo with two Affafins came in and kill'd him ; which yet was reveng'd by Cosmo de Medicis, his Successor.

Though the Emperor were now retir'd to The Em-Spain, (as is told before,) he yet continu'd his perons. Wars againft the French in the Low-Countries (and the French in the Low-Countries) and the French in the Low-Countries (and the French in the Low-Countries). the rather, that our King had promis'd to be King. Neuter betwixt them,) giving order thereupon to befiege Therouenne; which being advertis'd to Francis, caus'd him to raife an Army of 25000 Men under Anne Montmorency his Lieutenant, wherewith (the King being present) Hesslin, St. Paul, and divers other places were taken: While by a publick Act in Paris the Emperor was de-clar'd a Rebel and Felon, and that he had for- Is declar'd being Artois, Flanders, Charolois, and fome others, and Felon But some confiderable Forces being rais'd on the Emperors part, and half the French Army being diminish d by reason of Garrisons put into the Towns won, and other occasions, Francis with the rest of his Army return'd. The Imperial Army hereupon, commanded by the Count de May.

Bures, took * back St. Paul, † furpris'd Monfruel, June 15. and defeated Claude de Annebault Mareschal of + June 19. France, though bravely defending himself after his Victualling of Therouenne. Things being brought to these extremities, Mary Queen of Humgary, Regent of the Low-Countries, mediated July. and effected a Truce on those parts between the two Princes for three Months: While in Savoy fome Towns revolting, the Court de St. Paul was fent thither by Francis, who recover d all again, and freed Turin then befieg'd by the Imperials St. e. Yet allong de Avalos, Marquis of Gnafe, won back the greatest part of the Marquestate of Salazzo in the better of Brancis Marquestate of Salazzo in the behalf of Francois Marquis thereof; who for falling away to the Emperor, was by the French King not long fince deprived of his Possessions. But the Marquis enjoy'd not this Restitution, being kill'd foon after with a fmall fhot, while he play d the part of a Canoneer at the Siege of the Caffle of Carmagnola, Francis underflanding now the progress of the Spanish in those parts, commands the Seigneur de Humiers with some German Foot to pals to Piedmont, both to defend the places he had gotten there, and take others; July 5 who thereupon befieg d Afti, but in vain, it be-

Sander.

went to Albe, which was rendred him without

Retistance Bufineffes paffing thus with various Success on both fides, Francis thought fit to fend Henry the new Dauphin (his Elder Brother Francis after four days Sickness, being the last year dead of a Surfeit of drinking cold water after Tennis-play, rather than Poyson by the Emperors procurement, though one fuffer'd for it) and Antonie de Bourbon Duke of Vendosme, and Montmorency, who made their way over the Alps, by force took divers Towns, and perform'd many brave Ex-ploits; which being advertis'd to the King, made him refolve to go thither in Perfon, where adving with the Dauphin, and Montmorency what was further to be done, News was brought of a general abstinence of War concluded by the mediation of the Queen of Hungary, from that Nov. 28. time being 28 of November 1537. till the 22th of February following; for as upon a Truce made a little before in Picardie for three Months (as abovefaid) Commissioners were fent to the Emperor to treat of a Peace, or at least a General Truce, and that for a longer time, fo this Ceffation was accorded: And the rather, that the Pope had now a long while mediated it. And by this means, as the Siege was rais'd from Theroienne, fo the French remain'd in possession of all they had in Piedmont. This Truce being publish'd the Marquis of Guafto demanded leave to kifs the hands of Francis; which being granted, he with many Spaniards in good Equipage came towards the Army at Carmagnola, while Francis for more honouring of Montmorency, (as a Man who for his rare Merits, he thought deferv'd that Efleem) took him in the middle, betwixt himfelf and the Dauphin, and so expected the Marquis, who having first done his due Respects, and after treated of an agreement concerning the Soldatesque in the places taken on either part, de-parted with much satisfaction of the Reception which Francis had given.

The Emperor this while not unmindful of the

Princefs Mary, us'd all means for restoring her to her Legitimation and Possibility of Inheritance. Therefore, defiring of the Pope that Re-ginald Pool (who a little before had written his Books de Unione Ecclefiastica) should be made Cardinal, the Pope both eafily granted it, and in the beginning of 1537 imploy'd him as Legate to Flanders, that by this means he might confirm the Roman Catholicks in England, and advance his Defigns, being to flir up Enemies to our King. Though as Pool was of the Blood-Royal (his Mother Margaret Countels of Salisbury, being Danghter to George Duke of Clarence, Brother to Ed-ward IV.) many wanted not, who believ'd that his zeal was complicate with some Ambition to intitle his Line to the Crown, when our King might be depos'd, and his Pofterity, especially by Queen Anne, declar'd Illegitimate. Being now on his way, our King who was inform'd hereof, writ to Francis to deny him paffagethrough his Kingdom, or to deliver him up as a Rebel, or at least not to treat with him as a Legate; who thereupon difmifs'd him. Coming thus to the Low-Countries, his Servant Michael Throgmorton was very inquilitive (as our Records tell us) whether the Queen (being now grear) were thought by the Physicians to bear a Man-child or Female: Which, as it made the intentions of the Cardinal more suspected, so it gave occasion

Traitor; which he seconded also in that manner, that though at first she said it was not fit for her to refuse the Pope's Legate, yet being now urg'd again, at a time when she was (as is before related) in War with Francis, she forbad the Cardinal to enter; telling him, that fince he was an Englishman of that Quality, his Negotiation could not be hidden, and that it might be to her prejudice. Howfoever, the Cardinal fent a Letter to the Lord Cromwel, to clear himself of all design against our King, and dispatch'd John Matthei Bishop of Velona to the Regent, both to charge her with disobedience to the Apostolick See, and to protest that Legate was never so us'd: Adding, that his business was chiefly to dispute the errors of our Kings Reformation. But the Lady Regent not liking disputations of Religion in her Dominions, a-gain refus'd him: So that he was forc'd to hold his Correspondence in England by more clandeftine means: Whereof, as also his other proceedings, his Servant Throgmorton, and one Frier Peto certified fome part, as I find by our Records; as allo his return to Rome in Novemb.
1527, where he was receiv'd with much Triumph (as the faid Throgmorton affirm'd.) This proceeding of the Pope's on the other fide made our King cherish the Princes of Germany : For Novemb. which he took this Occasion.

with the Emperor not observed in all Points, met Proteagain at Smaleald, Feb. 7. 1537. to confult what fights in was to be done. Hither Heldus came on the Germany. Emperors part, who exhorted the Princes, First, Feb. 7. to accept the Council indicted: Secondly, to aid the Emperor with Money against the Turk; or (if he flir'd not) against the Field from usuring Savey,) &c. Thirdly, he objected to them, that they had received into their League new Confederates since the Treaty at Novem-To this the Protestants answer'd, that for 1532berg. To this the Protestants answer a, that for the Council, it was not propos'd in a due manner nor place (the Emperor and Princes having decreed that it should be in Germany,) therefore they could not admit it. For the Treaty of Peace at Noremberg, it was not broken by them, but by the Emperors Officers, who in the Camera Imperialis, contrary to the Conditions agreed on, had question'd Men for causes touching Reli-And as for those entred into their League fince the Treaty of Novemberg, it was defir'd that they also might be comprehended in that Peace; the Emperor such Monies as he requir'd. Howbeit, if he offer'd violence to them, they protested to defend them as their Confederates.

The Protestants finding their late Pacification The af-

upon which condition they promis'd to furnish

Things flanding thus, King Henry privately The King dispatch'd William Paget and Christopher Mount to sends Am-Smalcald, with Instructions to take France in their bassidors way, and acquaint Stephen Gardiner his English with In-Ambassador, and the French King therewith, and fituections. by their directions to do all things, and that the Voyage was to be perform'd in disguis'd Habit. In conclusion, the sum of their Instructions was, to dehort the German Princes from according either with the Emperor, or to the Council in-dicted; but rather to refer all their differences to him and the French King. And herein as the King pretended to shew his love to the said Princes, (who, if the Emperor made a Peace with them, fhould (he faid) be fingly and feparately oppress'd) fo he had his own ends, as knowing that if a Council were held, his Actibut is not to flow Hutton, the Kings Agent in the Loventher.

Countries, to gain Throgmorton. He was allo combanded by our King to charge the Queen-Regent there with breach of Treaty, if the received the Cardinal, being (as he call'd him) a

Dec. 10. 1536.

March.

Poole funt Legate to gent of 前からは

neral Council.

March 35 publick Protestation of the Council, he made as the publick Protestation against it; shewing, that lickly probut to the Emperor, and the Princes who should gainst cal- fend or come thither. That the time was unfit, ling a Ge- War being then betwixt the Emperor and Francis; the place inconvenient for the English, as being in Mantua, whether they could neither come fafely, nor declare themfelves freely; that the manner of deciding Controversies in Religion was unjust, the Bishop of Rome being Judge in his own Cause; that therefore the Pope's intention was rather to establish his Authority on this oc-casion, than to yield to a Reformation, and after all to glory that a Council had damn'd the contrary Opinion. That for his particular therefore, he would not come there, as having more reason to keep home, and provide against the Rebellions and Mischiefs that the said Bishop had now for three years space procur'd or rais'd in his Kingdom, than run new dangers. In conclusion, that nothing remain'd to be done, but that every Prince should reform in his own Kingdom; all other ways being suspect, perillous, and unequal: Yet if any could shew a better Expedient, he would give ear to it. The French King would not declare himself yet so far; and indeed he had use of the Pope at this time. Nevertheless, he publickly protested again to the Princes, that he would never confent to a Council which was not affembled in a fafe place, and free manner: And that his Son in-Law, the King of Scots was of the same mind.

May now approaching, Frederic Duke of Man-May now approaching, Prearie Danco of Branch rua requir'd Money of the Pope to maintain a Guard for the fecurity of his City during the Council. But the Pope denying this, or at leaft Conc. Trid. requiring, that if he paid this Guard, it might be at his command, found the Duke averse; so that he deferr'd the Council from May to November, and then to May next, and lastly, transferr'd it to Vicenza, being in the Venetian Territo-Conc. Trid. ry. And because (by reason of these delays) staid. many doubted whether the Pope really intended a redrefs to the Enormities then generally complain'd of, he refolv'd privately to proceed in a Reformation a year fince propos'd. And this was 1536. a fingular ingenuity: Yet as he referr'd the businesses to the Cardinals Contarino, Theatino, Sadolet, and Reginald Pool, and fome others who were paffionate on their own fide, they produc'd, after many Conferences, no more than a Remonftrance of divers abuses in the Government and Administration of Ecclesiastical Persons and Affairs; for in the Church Doctrine they would not admit an Error. But there were few Princes then living who would not have been glad that fomething more had been done; but as their Subjects were fo much at the Pope's dispose (when he would use his Authority,) and as no little Sums were drawn out of their Kingdoms; that I may fay nothing of Theological Points vexed Skid. Com. on either fide. Howbeit, this Reformation (being extant in Sleidan lib. 12.) is worth the feeing: For certainly it was the occasion of rectifying divers abuses in that Church; fo that it hath been better, or at least warier ever fince: Whereby it appears, that Controversies in Religion, though they produce many pernicious effects, have yet this one good, that they make both fides more careful not to offend; while fear

Therefore, after the Protestants had fent him might have follow'd, (and certainly it had been 1537 the fafest way to begin there) yet as Luther, Stermius, and others hearing what was done by the Delegates at Rome, both irrided it publickly, and rejected all Reformations but their own; fo all hope of Reconciliation in this kind was precluded: While the Pope and Cardinals hearing thereof again, found now fo little probability of an accord by endeavouring to come nearer the Protestants, that they thought it would rather derogate from the Authority of the Church (as if it might err) than establish a General Peace.

> It is time I return now to those home Affairs which pass'd while those foreign Businesses formerly related were in Action.

The Infurrection of the North was not yet for quieted, but that the King thought fit to hold a hand over them: Therefore he commanded the Duke of Norfolk to stay there, and together with the Earl of Shrewsbury to compose all things: Who thereupon took the submission of the Commons; which was, First, to revoke all Oaths and Promises made in the former Insurrection, asking the King forgiveness on their Knees. Secondly, to be true to the King, his Heirs and Successors. Thirdly, To observe and maintain all Acts of Parliament fince the first year of the Kings Reign. Fourthly, Not to take Arms again, but by his Highness's Authority. Fifthly, To apprehend all feditious Perfons. And Sixthly, To remove all the Monks, Friers and Nuns they had reinplac'd in the late diffoly'd Monasteries. Together with which thefe Lords had private Inftructions to bring in the Lord Thomas Darry and Robert Aske; and for Aske, I find by our Hiltory Aske and Records, that he came to our King, and that comes upon the Submiffion aforefaid, and Oath not to depart for any long feafon without the Kings leave, being well receiv'd for the present, he was dismiss'd again. But the Lord Darcy, sufpecting he should be question'd, excus'd himself to Cromwel; saying, that all he did was only for retaining fo much credit among the Commons, as might better enable him to do his Highness Service : Adding thereunto a note of the Services he had done the King and his Father for fifty years. But this did not avail; for he was fent for to London, and Imprison'd, that so he Lord Dara might no more run fuch hazards, the King fore- of Imprifeeing the Rebellion would break out again, a fon'd indeed it happen'd: For Nicolas Mulgrave, Tho-Mulgrave mat Tilby, and others Befieg'd Carlile with 8000 and the Men, but were repuls'd by the City; and in feated in their return encountred by the Duke of Norfolk, Cambers.

who caus'd all the Captains (fave Mulgrave, who land-efcap'd) and about feventy Perfons, by Law-

Martial to be hang'd on Carlile Walls. Sir Francis Bigat, and one Halam attempted al. Sir Francis fo to furprize the Town of Hull; but were pre-bells, is tavented, and they both taken and executed. For ken and which Infurrections, and fome leffer which fol-executed. low'd, I find yet no reason deliver'd, but that the People were unfatisfied because a Parliament was not held at Tork, according to their expecta-tion; and that they imagin'd the Duke of Norfolk had order fecretly (notwithflanding the Pardon) to chastife the principal Offenders. But our King on the other fide, alledg'd, that fince they had not restor'd all the Religious Houses, in which they had reinplac'd the Monks, he was not bound frictly to hold promife with them. left personal faults should redound to the detriment of the Religion they profes, becomes a caution for Vertue and good Example; so can God draw good out of evil; and so can Man pervert all again: For though indeed there was hope at this time that a further Reforma ion was not count interty to hold promise with them. Howsoever, these new Revolts ended quickly: And now the Duke having this occasion, proceeded severely; for having by the King's Commandment spread his Royal Banner, he there upon executed Martial-Law where he thought it needful. In conclusion, so many were found to Vol. II.

June

1537. be Complices in Treason, or the Conspiracy of death at Tyburn; who yet had he not hop'd for it, that the Lord Darcy, Robert Aske, Sir Robert Constable, Sir John Bulmer and his Wife (or Para-Conjease, Sir Thomas Percy, Sir Stephen Hamilton, Ni-cholas Tempeft, and William Lumley, were taken and brought Prifoners to London; and in June following, the Lord Huffy for the Lincolnshire bufinels, and the Lord Darry were Arraign'd at Westminster before the Marquis of Exeter then High Steward, and found guilty of High Treason. The Lords The Lord Darcy was Beheaded at Tower-Hill, and Davey and the Lord Hully at Lincoln: Others were hang'd Hully Be- at Hull, and at York, fome elsewhere, among whom were divers Religious Persons: The news whereof being certified by the Duke of Norfolk to Court, the King by Letter to him, faid, he would close this Tragedy: For he fent now a General Pardon; which was receiv'd with great joy, many being terrified with the Dukes proceedings. All this great Service of the Duke of Norfolk yet could not exempt him from Calumny : For the Lord Darcy during his Imprisonment, had accus'd him, as favouring the Rebels Arti-cles when they first met at Doncaster. But the Duke denied it, offering the Duel; faying, that Aske hang'd. Aske (who fuffer'd at York before the faid Lord) told him the faid Lords Intentions; who (he faid) bare him ill will ever fince the Duke had foli-Nov 14 cited the faid Lord to deliver Aske into his hands, when he was in chief credit with the Rebels; 1536. which Darcy denying, fome expostulation had pass'd betwirt them. Nevertheless, I find the pass'd betwixt them. Nevertheless, I find the King was so well satisfied of the Duke, that those though James the Scottifb King (now in France) were advertis'd; yet he flir'd not. And it was happy for our State; for had he joyn'd, he might have endanger'd the Northern parts, as People flood then affected. Howfoever, our King who thought his absence was not security enough, had employ d Sir Ralph Sadler thither, with command to refide till fames retund, (which was about # Birkenide, 1637.) and to inform him of Records. all Occurrents. Howbeit, I find that fames in his way touching on the Coaft of England, divers English cast themselves at his feet, and defir'd him to affift them, faying, he should have scots King all: (For so the Original hath it.) But the King returns to would not fuddenly discover himself. Coming with his thus to Edenburgh with his new married Queen, new-mar- (who was brought up under the Queen of Na-things were pass'd over without further question-

Of all which proceedings (from the beginning)

varre, and not disaffected to the Reformation of Religion) he was received with much joy, which yet continued not long, the dying thortly after of an Hectick Fever: (As hath been formerly related.) Whereupon Cardinal Beton and Robert M. xwel were fent into France to treat of a Marriage betwixt him and Mary of the House of Gufe, and Widow of the Duke of Longueville, which also follow d.

Ju. 1538. The Atried

Queen.

fairs of

The king having appeas'd all things in thefe parts, procures the chablithment of his Authority in Ireland; but as now the vigorous and many Executions done upon all forts of Perfons had made him terrible; fo that sweet temper of love and fear, which ought to be equally mix'd in all Subjects Hearts, was turn'd into that awe and dread as few thought themselves fafe; which though it might have caus'd fome apprehension in him, had he been capable therePardon by the intercession of the Lord Grey, to Feb. 3. whom he yielded himfelf, (as is formerly mention'd,) he would have died fome other Death. All the race yet ended not fo; for Gerald, younger Brother to Thomas Fitz-Gerald, fought for, was packt up in a bundle of Clothes, and convey'd to his Friends in Ireland, and to to France, and from thence to the Low-Countries, in both which places being requir'd of our King, he did at length fly to Cardinal Pool in Italy, who being his Kinfman, and finding him a fit Instrument for his Purposes, kept, and cherish'd him, until he obtain'd in after-times, that he might be restor'd to his Country and Place.

This being done, our King devis'd certain Several Acts to pass in the Parliament of Ireland; being Ireland for the avoiding of all Bulls, Breves, Dilpensations, &c. granted by the Pope; and that the People should use the English Tongue. That Marchers should dwell upon their March Lands: That certain Religious Houses there should be Supprest : Against alliance with the Rebels ; for establishing Succession; for the First-fruits and twentieth part of Spiritual Promotions; that those who took part with Kildare might be pardon'd, when they sin'd for it, &c. of which more may be feen in the Irifh Statutes.

This year at Hampton Court Prince Edward Ostob. 12. was born, October 12. 1537. who (to use Polydore's words) was Princeps natus ad Imperium; yet was not the happiness entire; for Queen fane, two Nov. 8. days after her delivery, died, and was buried in Prince Ed-the Quire at Windfer; whose loss much afflicted and the the King, as having found her always Difcreet, Queen Humble, and Loyal; for which reason also, he dies in was not so forward to match again. Insemuch Childbed. that notwithstanding some good offers made him, he continu'd a Widower more than two years : which in his declining Age and Corpulence (for he grew now very unweildy) was a long space. The Prince yet not being above fix days old, Holinhad, was made Prince of Wales, Duke of Cormula, and 1536.
Earl of Chefter: Sir Edward Sepmor alfo, Brother Aug. 16. to the Queen, lately made Lord Beauchamp, was created Earl of Heriford. And Sir William Fitz-Willams (made Admiral of England lately) Earl of Southampton. And in March following Sir William Paulet, Treasurer of the Kings House, was made Lord St. John; and Sir John Russel Comptroller, Lord Ruffel.

And now (25 I find by our Records) Queen Margaret hearing of this Princes Birth, Congratulates it, and together complains of fome unkindness in her Son, desiring she might end her days (being now about forty-nine) in quietness; but if our King could give no reme-Ocob.31; dy thereunto, it comforted her yet, that she understood how (upon the Death of the Lord Thomas Howard) her Daughter was at this time re-leas d out of the Tower.

I shall conclude this year with a prodigious sanday. effect of Mount Etna, the flames where of life-ing up a huge mass of burning Sulphur, by flow degrees, to a great height, fuftain'd it there, till at length it scatter'd over all the Country, and kill'd (as my Author Sandoval hath it) innumerable Men and Beafts.

In March 1538, the Protestants meeting at 1538. Brunswick, our King sent thither Christopher Mount, March with Instructions, First, To see who were the Confe-Mount derates. Secondly, Whether their Leagus was for sent installations. of, yet without being troubled for any thing, General Defence, or limited to matter of Religious only indication was, to punish feverely: Therefore he gave for the great Legation with Melancthon, as they flant in order that Thomas Fitz-Gerald, Son to the Earl but Protes. But they defining king Henry should Germany of Kildare, and five of his Uncless after a long decension in Priton, at this time should suffer lefting left the Ambassador should after fo great felves in this last Point, pretending that they had present use of their learned Men, &c. And as to the other two Articles, they declared, that their League was only in the Caufe of Religion, and fent the Names of their Confederates, being

(as the Record shews) twenty fix Cities and twenty four Princes; among whom the King of Denmark was newly admitted. Nevertheless, to ripen matters for a further Treaty, they gave Commission to their Agents now sent (being Francis Burgrat, and two other Men not unlearned) to dispute with the English Divines about Religion, which they did, till being recall'd home, they craved difmission of the King, leaving with them their Remonstrance touching divers Abuses in England: As, I. The Administrations of the Eucharist in one kind only. II. Private Mass. III. Celebate of Priefts. Against which they urged Scripture, and the ancient Fathers; adding, that their Princes would never admit the same; and that it belongs to his Majesty to restore the Purity of Religion, as did the Kings, David, Fofias, Fe boshaphit, Ezekias, &c. This, though commended to the King and Cromwel by Archbishop Cranmer, was yet opposed by divers others, and particularly by Cuthbert Bishop of Duresme, (who ex tracted the faid Declaration for the King, and gave him Arguments against it.) So that the King for all Answer to the said Orators, defended the Points they would have reformed. Info-much, that they return'd unfatisfy'd and frustrate.

King Henry the white proceeding in his own Reformation, as hoping the Protestants in German would be drawn to him. And because he had been often importuned to authorize a Translation got our King's and Francis's License to print it at Paris, both in Latin and English, in a large Volume: Which therefore by Cromwel the Vicegerent's Injunctions this Year (1538) was to be fet in every Church for the People to read; yet for as the King by Proclamation gave them to understand, that this was not his Duty, but his Goodness and Liberality to them; who therefore should use it moderately, for the increase of Virtue, not of Strife. And therefore no Man should read it aloud to diffurb the Prieft while he fang

Mass, nor presume to expound doubtful places

The King having Iffue Male, proceeded more confidently in his Designs: And because he knew that the pretended and false Miracles of Priests had feduced many ignorant People to a superstifo cunningly reprefented, as they had kept their Credit for some Ages; the manner of these times being, if a Man were restor'd to his Health upon without advice from the Learned.

May 12.

August 5. testant Princes object against Reforma-rion.

Sept.

A Tran-flation of the Bible printed by Authority. Fox.

of the Bible, He committed the Care thereof to Cromwel, and the Printing to Richard Grafton; who pretending the want of good Paper here, tious Obedience to the Romifb See, and Reverence of Monafteries, he refolv'd to detect them, at leaft, as many as he could; for divers were a Pilgrimage, or obtain'd any thing he defir'd upon a Vow to some Saint, never to study other Caufe. And here out of our Records I shall mention logue of fome of the Images and Kencks to which the indicators grimages of thefe times brought Devotion and Tada's Girdle. Shew'd in ele-Offerings; as our Lady's Girdle, shew'd in eleven several places, and her Milk in eight; the Bell of St. Gurblac, and the Felt of St. Thomas of Lancafter, both Remedies for the Head-ach; the ture Pen-knife and Boots of St. Thomas of Canterbury, and a piece of his Shirt, much reverenc'd by great-belly'd Women; the Coals that roufted St. Laurence; two or three Heads of St. Unula; respondence, as thinking them capable both of Malebus's Ear; and the paring of St. Edmend's making War with the Turk, and revenging his

A Cata-

1538. expectation return without effect, excused them- | which brought hither the Spear's Head that piere'd Chrift's Side; an Image of our Lady with a Taper in her Hand, which burnt nine Years to-gether without wasting, till one forswearing himself thereon, it went out; and was now found to be but a piece of Wood; our Lady of Worcefter, from which certain Veils and Dreflings being taken, there appear'd the Statue of a Bi-shop ten Foot high. These and others were now brought forth, and with great oftentation shew'd to the People; among which were two notable Trumperies I cannot omit; one was the Rood of Grace at Boxley in Kent, which being made with divers Vices to turn the Eyes and move the Lips, was shew'd publickly at Pauls Crofs by J. bn Bi-feb. 24. shop of Recbefer, and there broken and pull'd in pieces. The other was at Hales in Glonestershire, where the Blood of Jesus Christ brought from Je-rusalem, being kept (as was affirmed) for divers Ages, had drawn many great Offerings to it from remote places: And it was faid to have this Property, That if a Man were in mortal Sin, and not absolved, he could not see it; otherwise, very well: Therefore every Man that came to behold this Miracle, confes'd himfelf first to a Priest there, and then offering something to the Altar, was directed to a Chappel where the Relick was fhew'd; the Priest who confes'd him (in the mean while) retiring himfelf to the back part of the said Chappel, and putting forth upon the Altar a Cabinet or Tabernacle of Crystal, which being thick on the one fide, that nothing could be feen thorow it, but on the other fide thin and transparent, they used diversly: For if a rich and devout Man enter'd, they would thew the thick fide, till he had paid for as many Matfes, and given as large Alms as they thought fit; after which (to his great Joy) they permitted him to fee the thin side, and the Blood. Which yet (as my Author, a Clerk of the Council to Edward VI. will, Thoand living in those times, affirms) was proved to be the Blood of a Duck every week renew'd Nov. 24. by two Priefts, who kept the Secret betwixt them. Beiides which, the Images of our Lady of Welf-fingham, of Infaith, of Penrife, of Iffington, and St. John of Ofulfin (called otherwise Mr. John Shorne) who was faid to shut up the Devil in a Boot; and divers others were publickly burnt: May 224 Infomuch, that a huge Image call'd Darvel Ga-

> And by this means the Monasteries grew infamous where most of these Images were kept, and divers were undeceived, who before held a reverend Opinion of these pretended Relicks and Miracles; yet, as this way, there was danger left the People should not believe those Miracles which the Church had delivered for true, the King held a hand over his Subjects, and found means to humble them; for they were taught, that howfoever the Miracles of those later times proved counterfeit and false, yet that God hath done, and can again do Miracles, when it is for his Glory and Service; and that it did not repugn to Faith, that for honouring the Memory of his Saints, he permitted them fometimes, where the People were not withdrawn thereby from his Worthip, to the Worthip of the Crea-dern being fetch'd out of Wales ferv d to burn Frier Forrest, (Condemn'd for counselling People in Confession not to believe the King's Supremacy) and to elude I know not what old blind Prophefy.

Upon the Ceffation of Arms betwixt the Emperor and French King formerly mention d, the Pope endeavour'd a further I eace and good Cor-Nails; the Image of an Angel with one Wing, Quarrel on our Ling, against whom he was

Err

 F_{ax}

Picture

for the King.

1528. much intentive to join them. But there are maby Difficulties in procuring two potent Princes to concur in the same Enterprize, when it was for nothing else, but that they can never agree who thould have the Advantage of it. Nevertheless, both of them were difaffected to our King at this time, not yet so much for their particular Interests, as that his overthrowing of Religious Houses, and many rigorous Executions of his our King understanding, procures to hold his Treaty with Francis. And therefore recalling Fully 7. 1577 from Spain Edmond Bonner elect Bishop of Hereford, and his Ambassador then with the Emperor, he imploy'd him in Frace in the place of Stefent A. u-ballador then Gardiner, who had foured all things; fince, being one who both dislik'd the King's late Proto France ceedings, and fecretly favour'd the Emperor, he did his Matter little service in that Court. Au 1537, ner being now come, was roughly received by Gardiner, and coldly by the French King (as I find by an Original;) yet he obtained at first that the Old and New Testament in English might be printed at Paris in the largest Volume, whereof yet Complaint being made by the Clergy there, the Prefs was flay'd, and as much as was already printed, publickly burnt, fave fome few Copies, that being gotten for Wafte-paper, were recover'd and fent into England, whither also the Printers themselves follow'd shortly after, and si-Dec. 17. nished their Work. Howbeit as Bonner had in his other Affairs here but little fatisfaction, he was repeal'd at last on this occasion; being commanded by our King to deliver a high Meffage, con-cerning his Penfion, now four Years detain'd, as also touching a Fugitive and Traitor, who was receiv'd and favour'd by Francis, he utter'd it in to haughty a manner (as was thought) that Franeis return'd both to our King and him some harsh Language; nevertheless, as he fear'd lest it shou'd cause War, he sent to England an express Mesfenger both to interpret and excuse himself, and to defire Bonner might be recall'd; which the Rue is so-King did, (as thinking him henceforth an uncall'd at the French useful Servant in that place) yet so as he forgot king's denote to bestow the Bishoprick of London on him fire. for his Reward, and to employ him to the Em-Octob. 20. peror afterwards. But as Francis (having about this time made a ten Years Truce with the Emperor, as shall be told hereafter, and a Treaty with Scotland) talked louder than before; so the Lady Regent in the Low-Countries, permitting dirers Exactions on our Merchants, shew'd difaf-fection to our State, without that our King in his prefent condition knew well how to repair himself, fince being resolved to take order about his Home-businesses not yet fully setled, he thought of Foreign Affairs no otherwise, than to attend the occasion, and confederate himself where it might be for his best Advantage. For The which at last divers Overtures were made. first it feems came from the Emperor, whose Ambaffador here fignified to Cromwel Lord Privy-Seal his Master's Desire, that a Match might be had betwixt our King and Christiana the Dutchess of Milan, being a beautiful Lady, and at that prefent lately come into the Low-Countries. Cromwell answer'd, that he would first see her Picture, and March, then fpeak to the King; which being granted, Hans Hol- one Hans Holin (or Holbin I believe) being the bin fent to King's Servant, was fent over, and in three hours take the space (as John Hutton our Agent there hath it) Dutchess of Milan's shew'd what a Master he was in his Science. Our King hereupon feem'd inclinable, giving charge But the Lady to Hutton to treat of the butiness. Regent (though faid to have fufficient Power) referr'd all to the Emperor, who having appointed rita Relict of the Duke of Florence, natural Daughan Interview with Francis, was so slow in return-ter of the Emperor: The other betwixe Victoria

ing an Answer, that our King understood it as a 1532. delay, and therefore neglected the business a while : And he had reason; for a Treaty was now formed betwixt Francis and the Emperor, for his Son the Duke of Orleans and her, and the place nominated at Compteas, where Francis (now return'd from the Interview, whereof hereafter) met Queen Mary Regent of Flanders: Whereof our Octob. King being advertis'd, fent some privately thi-Subjects, had given ill impressions of him; which ther, to inform him of that which passed; but Milan being refused as Dowry to the Duke, the Treaty was suspended. This made our King proceed again, imploying Thomas Wriothesty, and fome others, to the Lady Regent for this purpose; but this Treaty produced others, fo that a Match Match was propos'd betwixt Don Lewis of Portugal and propos'd between our Princes Mary, in the terms she then was, ex-between cluded by Act of Parliament from all Claim to of Parliament the Succession, except such as the King shall give gal and her: As also a strict Confederation and Amit the Printy. The Conditions our King requir'd with the cess Mary cels Mary. Dutchels of Milan were great; for though the was but the fecond Daughter of Denmark, Dorothea the elder being married to Frederick Count Palatine of the Rhine, and Duke of Bavier, yet he demanded with her the whole Kingdom of Denmark, (there being no Iffue Male now alive of Christiern II.) defiring for this purpose the Emperor's affistance, which also the Emperor feem'd to promife, as offering to treat with Duke Frederick about renouncing his Title to it; and Records. the rather, that he was more suspected at this time in the German Affairs, than that the Emperor defir'd to greaten him, by fuch an acceffion. And with Don Louis the Emperor offer'd Milan, when the King would shew how to defend it, and give only a Dowry of three hundred thousand, two hundred thousand Crowns; promising further, if the French King, upon this occasion, deny'd the Pension usually paid our King, to take no Peace with him till he had paid it; he offer'd alfo to endeavour a Reconciliation with the Pope, if our King so pleased. Nevertheless, divers Jealoufies and Cavils arifing (especially after the Interview) betwixt the Emperor and Francis, (whereof presently) the Treaty, though continuing, went on but coldly; the Lady Regent objecting sometimes that our King treated of a Match in France with the Daughter of Guise; another while faying, that in regard of the Dutchess's nearness of Blood to the late Queen Katharine, there needed a Difpenfation from the Pope, which she knew the King would hardly accept; but these Answers being taken as illufory, the Treaty at last not only broke off, but a cruel War was intimated betwixt the Emperor and our King; especially after he heard of the Treaty betwixt him and the Lady Anne of Cleves, Treaty of which follow'd. But Francis omitted not likewife Marriage to make his Propositions, offering our King what K. Henry Lady he pleafed in his Country, which yet came and Anne to nothing, as will appear hereafter; neither of Cleven ought their Motions of Alliance to feem strange, both as there were ever Caufes of Jealouiy betwixt these great Princes, and as they knew well, our King had fettled his Affairs at home. While things past thus, the Truce expiring in February betwirt the French King and Emperor, Feb. 22. the Pope obtain'd yet that it should be continued 15% for fix Months; hoping in the interim to conclude a Peace; whereunto as his good Intentions might concur, fo his particular Interests wanted not; he imploying the Cardinal Carpi to the Emperor, and Cardinal Jacobaccio to the French King Sand. 1.24 for concluding two Matches for his Family; one betwixt his Grand-child Ottavio Farnele and Marga-

Farne e

Famele and Antoine de Beurbon Duke of Vendolme; of Treachery at home, or Invalion from abroad. and for bringing them to an Interview, at which Therefore he took especial Care of the Seaand for bringing them to an Interview, at which hinnfelf would be prefent. All which was accorded, and the time and place of meeting appointed at Nizza about the beginning of fune, 1578, where they all came; but fo as the Emperor being lodg'd in Villa-Franca, and the French King in Villa-Nova, they neither faw one another in their feveral Courts, nor at the Pope's at Nizza: Infomuch, that notwithstanding the Pope's folicitation, their mutual Jealousies of the Pope's Affection, the number of their Attendants not to be regulated as long as third Perfons interven'd, their late Defies, and greatness of Bufinesses to be determin'd betwixt them, permitted no safe terms of meeting. Nevertheless, the Pope (after he had in vain defir'd them to fend fome Bishops to the Council now at Vicenza) con-June 18. cluded a Truce betwixt them for ten Years, and fo the Meeting diffolv'd. The Pope prefently recalling his Legates from Vicenza, and deferring the Council till Easter the next Year.

And now the Emperor and Francis being near each other, and, for the rest, Princes of so great Courage, as they heard with fome Indignation the Difficulties their Counfellors had reprefented about an Interview, refolved betwixt themselves to meet. Francis fent an Invitation to him to repose at Aiguesmortes and Marseilles, in his way to Spain; and Charles accepted it; who coming thereupon near the Shore, Francis, attended with Montmorency (now Constable) and few others, without all difficulty passed in a Shallop to the Emperor's Galley; and after an hour's flay, and fome Complements in French (which Language And now both spake) Francis return'd to Land. the Emperor was pensative and doubtful whether he should go on shore; many of his Council op-pos'd it; but the Duke of Alva said generously, He should go; which Counsel the Emperor follow'd: And thereupon landing, the French King and French and his Queen, the Dauphine, and a huge Train, King have receiv'd him with demonstration of Joy: And two Meals they did eat together, at which the Dutchess of Estampes (much regarded by Francis) was present. But the next Day after, (being the fixteenth of 'Fulr') rich Gifts having pas'd on fixteenth of July) life State both fides, the Emperor departed for Spain.

July 16.

these two Princes should join in a War against the Turk, or bring our King to reason? The former took place; the Turk, as being much animated against the Christians, having made great Preparatives: And when he had not, our King being a Person with whom they would not easily have fought in the Pope's Quarrel: Which also is the more probable, for that Francis would not fo much as concur with him in a War against the Turk, though folicited by the Pope, Emperor and Venetians, no more than our King: Tho' (as I find by our Records) intreated by the faid Venetians, as having a particular War with the Turk at this time in Morea and Sclavonia; fo that they above-named only join'd, according to a League made at Rome, Feb. 8. the Pope furnishing thirty fix Galleys, the Emperor eighty two, and the Venetians as many; who yet being led by Andrea Doria, and coming to fight with the Turkish Fleet of 130 Vessels, under Barbarossa, were on the Coaft of Epiro, towards Night, September 24. defeated; when such a huge Tempest of Thunder and Lightning arole, as scatter'd them every way: Yet few Days after they took from the Turk Castel Novo, a Fort in the Gulf of Ca-taro, and leaving a Garrison there, return'd.

Coasts, and particularly had an eye to the Actions of those who might ftir in favour of Cardinal Pool; who being encouraged by the Pope, had no little Intelligence from our Kingdom. Notwithflanding all which Attention, divers Meffages passed betwixt the faid Cardinal and his Friends and Kindred; which cost some of them their lives not long after.

And now the King knowing that while any fuperstitious Worship reigned here, the Tryers and Priests would oppose his Reformation, especially as long as fuch were accounted Saints who had refifted their Prince, refolved, after he had burn-ed fo many Images, to burn the Bones of Thomas Bones of Becket, Archbishop of Canterbury in the time of Thom Henry II. (though others mention not the burning; and one living in those times, affirms only, will Thom, that his Bones were scatter damongst so many dead 11. Pel. Ing. Men's, that they could not be found again with-out fome great Miracle.) Together with which, our King feized on that immenfe Treafure and of his Jewels which were offer'd to his Shrine; there shrine being few fince Henry the Second's time which feiz'd, passed to Canterbury, that did not both visit his Tomb, and bring rich Presents to it. Among which, there being one Stone eminent, which it was faid, Louis the Seventh coming hither on Pilgrimage from France, Anno Dom. 1179. beffow'd; Aug 23. our King wore it in a Ring afterwards. For 1179. which reasons, as also for being so great an Example of Contumacy against his King, he was (as Sanders hath it) constrain'd Causam iterem ad Sand Seh. Tribunal dicere; that is to fay, his Life and Actions Angl. being examin'd, it was declar'd by our King that he deferved no Canonization; and proved befides, that the Skull which the People did formuch venerate (and which was now burnt as an Imposture) was not his own, (it, together with his Bones, being found in his Tomb) and scatter'd, as aforesaid) and that there was Forgery in divers Miracles there exhibited; with which yet our King being not content, caus'd his Name to be raz'd out of the Kalendar, and forbad the keeping of his Holiday. But that it may appear what a kind of Saint this Man was, I will repeat fome part of his Life; not out of his Legend, or indeed Polidore Virgil, who most fabulously af- Kontift firms, that certain Men of Kent for cutting of long Becket's Horse Tail, their Progeny ever after, as Tails long as any of them remain'd, had Tails like Beafts; but out of a Book of the said Clerk of the Council, formerly mention'd, leaving to every Man yet the choice of believing what relation he pleafeth. This Man (as my Author hath it) being born Wil Them.

of an English Merchant, and a Woman of Barbary, having been brought up in Learning, and Lie promoted to the Archbishoprick of Cantobury, contested with King Honry II. for the Pope's Authority: Infomuch, that in his Pontificalibus, with his Mitre upon his Head, and gilt Crofs born before him, he publickly excommunicated all those who opposed the Church; wherewith the King being offended, Becket fled to the Pope, who cherished him so much, as in contemplation of him, he excommunicated the King and Kingdom; fo that for about four Year's space, neither Mafs, nor other Publick Service was used in the Church. But by the Intercession of the French King, Beeket and the Mass being restor'd, and our King and Kingdom absolv'd, all things seem'd quiet, till he began new Quarrels: At which the King being displeased, said, If he had faithful All which Engagements of War, though in Servants, he should not be fo wronged; which effect they were so many diversions of it from us, fome Gentlemen that served him hearing, went could not secure our King from suspicion either to Camerbury, and taking their time, upon some 1538. ill Language given, kill'd him in the Cloifter of his Cathedral Church, and fo fled. Whereupon the Monks thut their Gates, and perfuaded the People that the Bells rung of themselves; nor content herewith, they cast a certain Composition into a Well adjoining, and made the People believe that it appeared bloody by Miracle, for that holy Marryr, which at laft obtain'd fuc-credit, that Henry II. came in Person, together with Louis of France, to visit that holy place, and Aug. 23give many rich Poffessions to the Monastery; for further tellimony of his favour to them, refuling ever to receive again, or pardon the Murtherers; yet these Wonders ended at last, for our King on some occasion coming to Canterbury, discovered the Fraud of the Well, and abolished the Miracles.

But what Pretext foever our King had to pro-

Pope excommunicates K. Hwo in Han-Land, and France. Dec. 17.

April 8. May.

More Monaile-ries fup-

prefs'd

1100

ceed thus with Beiket, nothing was taken to be a greater Cruelty and Rapine: Infomuch, that upon News hereof, the Pope deferred no longer to publish his Bull of Excommunication (formerly decreed 1535) against our King; wherein he Deteffation; fending also his Agents abroad with the faid Bull, who fet it up in divers places of Flanders, France and Scotland; being fuch a Bull (faith the Writer of the Council of Trent) as neither his Predeceffors left him Example for, or his Succeffors ever imitated. But the Pope gain'd little hereby ; for all his Rigours were but fo many Incentives to King Henry to oppose him; therefore as he had fent Publick Protestations every where against the Council to be affembled at Vicenza, affirming the same Difficulties would be about holding of it there, which must have been at Montua; fo having made way by the discovery of the former Impostures, he suppress'd more Monasteries, and every day more and more divested the Clergy of their former Authority. Howbeit, on the other fide, he oppos'd all Reformation but his own; as appears both by burning two Dutch Anabaptiffs, and by a Dispute he publickly held in Wylminsfer-Hall, with one John Nich.lin alias Lambor, a Prieft; against whom he maintained the Presence of Christ in the Sacrament, after the manner he fet down in his Articles; concluding, that he should have merey if he recanted; otherwife, that he should be burnt. But Lambert despiting Mercy on those terms, the Sentence was executed. So deep a tincture doth Religion give to the Soul, as being Nov. 22. once throughly enter'd, nothing afterward can

Nov 19. Two Anabap riffs and one Po-Priest executed

Several for holdterous Correfpondence with Cirdinal Pool

The King having thus made it appear, that howfoever he rejected the Papal Authority, he concurred not every where with the Reformers, thought he might with more reason now confront the Report which Cardinal Pool and his Friends had rais'd, that he had wholly altered his Religion. In which number, because Henry Courtney Marquis of Exeter (the King's Cosingerman, as being Son of Katharine, Daughter to Edward IV.) and Henry Pool Lord Montacute, and Sir Edward Nevil Brother to the Lord Abergaverny, and Sir Jeffery Pool Knight, were eminent; he took occasion (upon fecret Information given by Sir Jeffery) to cause them to be indicted, for deviling to maintain, promote, and advance one Reginald Pool late Dean of Exeter, Enemy to the King, beyond the Seas, and to deprive the King; upon which the two Lords, before Thomas Lord zindley (for the prefent fitting, as his High Stewand of England were found guilty: Not long after which, Sir Edward Nevel, Sir Jeffery Pool, either change or efface it.

the two Priefts and Mariner hang'd and quarter'd 15:3. at Tyburn, and Sir Jeffery pardon'd: Sir Nicholas Carew also (Knight of the Garter, and Master of ticular Offences yet of these great Persons are not fo fully made known to me, that I can fay much. Only I find among our Records that Thomas Wriothefly Secretary (then at Fruxels) wri- Novemb. ting of their apprehension to Sir Thomas Wyat (his Highness's Ambassador in Sp.in) said, that the Accusations were great, and duly proved. And in another place I read that they fent the Vinc Heral, Cardinal Money. I find little more of this Year for our parts, fave that notwithstanding all these Severities, neither was one Connesby, Groom of the King's Chamber, deterr'd from counterfeiting the King's Seal Manuel; nor one Clifford from counterfeit-ing his Privy Signet; both which therefore suf-fer'd death.

The Emperor now in Sp.sin, among his homebusinesses, thought none more requisite, than to take order for Money: Therefore he affembled at Sand, L24 Toledo a Cortes or Parliament of both States; fo that the Grandees of Castilla and Leon on the one fide, and Cardinal of Toledo and Clergy on the other, did enter into it : Where the Emperor's Neceffities being reprefented by occasion of his late Wars, it was declared, That neither his ordinary Revenues, nor the Indies, nor the Cra-zades, Tenths and other Helps granted by the Pope, did suffice to keep him out of debt. Wherefore the Emperor defir'd, that at their Charge all his Estate and Dominions every where might be preferv'd and fecur'd both by Sea and Land; To as he might have the ordinary Rent of Cafilla and the Indies for paying his Debts, and fpending Money. The Clergy hereupon agreed, That their most ready and equal way for supplying the Emperor's Wants, was to grant a Sifa or Tax for a certain time, with a limitation to what it should extend; fince less Corruption and Extortion would follow this way than any other: Only they defir'd the Emperor, That he should procure a License and Commandment from his Holiness to this purpose. But the Grandees and Nobles, who had immediate Power in their hands to confent unto the Emperor's Demand, would yet refolve nothing fuddenly in their own Name or the Peoples, nor before they had committed the Bufiness to twelve elect Persons among them; among which the Condestable being chief, spake much against Impositions; desiring rather to supply the Emperor some other way: And that they might confer with the Burgesses or Procuradors of the chief Cities hereof; befeeching his Maje-fly withal, that he would flay at home and fludy Peace, as having made eighteen Years of continual War both by Sea and Land: Which Answer being brought the Emperor, it was reply'd on his part, that he demanded Money, and not Advice. Hereupon, certain amongst them pro-pos'd to lay Imposition upon Commodities ex-Hereupon, certain amongst them proported; but the rest agreed not. Whereupon the Cardinal of Toledo came and told them in his Majesty's Name, That he affembled them to the Feb. 1. intent he might communicate his own and his Kingdom's Neceffities; it feeming reasonable, that as they were general, so should the Remedy be: But by as much as is done, he conceiveth there is no cause to detain you any longer, and therefore gives you leave to depart.

The Cortes being thus dissolv'd, the Emperor upon occasion, told the Conestable he had done ill, after which, Sir Edward Newl, Sir Jeffery Pool, upon occasion, told the Constitute ne was some my and deserved to be thrown out of a Corrector or open Constable found guilty also, and Judgment given according-law they were they were: To which he answered, as found guilty also, and Newl were beheaded, New Majely will plasse to advise; for though I am Saving to Itale. Charles V.

Dec. 31. Jan 3.

The Emronted v the 1538.

Records.

April 1.

little, I weigh much. But it feems the Emperor! - fpake neither in earnest, nor the Conestable as one that referred; fo that nothing follow'd. Howfoever, the Grandees and Nobles of Spain behav'd themselves insolently at this time to the Emperor; who having commanded a Just or Tourney, wherein all the principal Persons were, to meet: It happen'd as they rode in their Equipage and Order to the place, an Alguazil throok the Duke of Infantados Horle, on some occasion; whereupon the Duke turning about, demanded, Do you know me? And the Alguazil faying, yea: He with his Sword cut him on his Head; who with blood about his Ears, coming to the Emperor (then on Horfe-back,) incens'd him fo much, as he fent presently to apprehend the Duke; But the Conestable being present, said to the Officer, you have no Authority, as long as I am in place; and fo forc'd him thence. Emperor now much offended, that all these Acrevemiencos were done in his prefence, fends another Officer to apprehend the Duke; at which the Grandees and others were fo displeas'd, that they all rode away in a Troop; fo that the Emperor having few or none to attend him in this great Solemnity, was forc'd to defift and return; both to his own great Scandal, and those who came to be Spectators. But the Emperor found means afterwards, to let them know how fensible he was of this Contempt. The German Protestants, this while, being follicited for Aid against the Turk, and denying it, unless the Emperor first granted them such a folid and intire Peace in the cause of Religion, as might comprehend both the prefent and fu-ture Confederates; the adverse Party enter'd a Counter-league to that of Smaleald, calling it Holy, and flipulating mutual Defence, if they were molested for the Roman Religion. The Emperor notwithstanding giving Commission to Heldus and others, to treat with the faid Protestants of an Accommodation; which yet took no effect, though there were a meeting held at Francfort to this purpose. Howsoever, our King omitted not to send his Agents (Christopher Mount and Records. Thomas Paynel thither, shewing, he took it ill, that they treated of a Pacification without his knowledge, defiring to understand the Conditions thereof, and whether they intended to be constant to their profess'd Doctrine: To which, April 23. Burgari and others in their Name, April 23. coming to England, brought Instructions to this effect, that their manifold Troubles fuffer'd them not hitherto to fignifie the faid Pacification, which yet was not likely to take effect, no Conditions being so much as propos'd. Neither would they accept any contrary to the Augu-fane Confession; so that there needed be no doubt of their Constancy : But they are inform'd, that his Majesty had set forth a Proclamation, injoyning rigidly and under heavy Censures, those Points which the last year their Ambassadors defir'd as Abuses might be reform'd; which unless his Majesty pleas'd to mitigate, they could determine nothing of the Legation of Learned Men, which he expected. For we have, fay they, diffured enough already, and the King is not ignorant of our Opinions touching Private Mats, Communion in one kind, and Celibate of Priefts. And unless we understood that our Doctrine herein were prefcrib'd by God, we would not undergo the dangers we do for maintenance thereof: Neither let the King imagine, that we will now either deny the faid Doctrines, or fend any of our Divines into England, to give approbation to the contrary. Together with which, Philip Melancthon fent a Letter to the clefice, post Christian Supremo, exhorting him to 1529, perfect the Reformation begun, and not hearken to those Minewith would binder it, by exciting too severely Ceremo "Mane-nies and things indifferent; wherefive, he despose his test to k Majesty to mitigate the late Proclamation. What An-there, fwer our King gave to this, doth not appear to me : But the King was fo far from condefeending thereunto, that he obtain'd a Confirmation of the faid Articles in the next Parliament, under greater Penalties, as shall appear in its place. In the mean time he consulted to strengthen himself at home, by inriching his Treasury.

Therefore, having formerly gotten the confour Houses under 200 /. yearly, he did now attempt the rest; so that though divers of the Visitors had heretofore petition d, that fome might be spar'd, both for the vertue of the Persons in them, and the benefit of the Country (the Poor receiving thence relief, and the richer fort good education for their Children;) and though L_{7-} Records. timer mention'd, that fome two or three might be left in every Shire for pious uses, Cromwel yet (by the Kings Permission) invaded all; while betwixt Threats, Gifts, Perfussions, Promises, and whatfoever might make Man obnoxious, he that their Houses might be given up. Among Tie great which, those that offer'd their Monasteries free. Monaster ly, got best Conditions of the King; for if they rest sup-flood upon their Right, the Oath of Supremacy, Surrenand fome other Statutes and Injunctions brought der, Purthem in danger, or their Crimes at least made chafe of them guilty of the Law; which also was quick-forkly executed. And particularly on the Abbatsof Glaffenbury, Colchefter, and Reading, who more than any else resisted.

In conclusion, the Title made to these, seems not to be grounded upon a grant by Statute, or claim of Right, but was fome voluntary Surrender, Purchaie, or Forfeiture. Howbeit, the King thought fit to have this proceeding pre-fently confirm'd by Act of Parliament: Therefore by his Writs he fummon'd it to begin April 28. 1539. In the mean while, rumours were every where difpers'd, that Cardinal Pool labour'd with divers Princes, to procure Forces against the Kingdom, and that an Invafion was threatned, And this again feem'd more credible, in that the Truce concluded between the Emperor and the French King was generally known, and that nei-ther of them wanted pretext to bring an Army hither. This also was seconded by a sudden journey of the King unto the Sea-coaft; into divers parts whereof he had formerly fent fundry Nobles and expert Persons to visit the Ports, and places of Danger, who fail'd not for their discharge upon all event, to affirm the peril in each place to great, as one would have thought every place had needed Fortification; besides he caus'd his Navy forthwith to be in a readinefs, and Musters to be taken over all the Kingdom. All which preparatives being made against a danger which was believ'd imminent, feem'd fo to excuse the King suppressing of Abbies, as the People (willing to spare their own Purses) began to fuffer it eafily; especially when they faw order taken for building divers Forts and Forts Bulwarks upon the Sea-coaft; many, if not most built. of these we have at this day, being thought not fo exact as the modern, yet of his raising. And that they suspected the discontented Religious Orders (fooner than any elfe) would affift an Enemy. But if the reasons of these proceedings were held by some as current, by others they were taken to be no more than Palliation, and by the Clergy but Rapine, who divulg'd King (superscrib'd Serm &c. Capiti Anglica Ec-lyond Seas the miserable ruines of themselves, fugaret.

Vol. II.

1529. and Houses, in such terms, as the Christian jecked it) instead of divers supernumerary and world was allonished; for though their excessive lide Persons, Men sit for Imployment, either in number excused the King in some part for the ned Supprettion, this latter (they faid) had no tuch specious pretext, when yet surrender, purchase, or the like were urg'd; So that notwiththanding the Kinus necessities, no little occasion of scandal and obloquy was given. 649 15-The number of Monasteries first and last supprofi'd in England and Wales were (as Cambden accounts them his hundred forty five; whereof there had voices among the Peers: The Abbat of St. Albans (being as I take it) declar'd the first Abbey of England (whether in favour of Pope odrian IV. his Father, call'd Breakspear, who upon his Wives death rendred himself a Monk there, or S. Alb. n himfelf Protomartyr of England St. Peters in Westminster, S. Edmondsbury, S. Benners of Holm, Bredser, Shrewsbury, Crowland, Abing dan, Evesham, Glocester, Ramsey, S. Maries in Tewsbury, Reading, Battail, Winchcombe, Hide by Windselfer, Cirencefter, Waltham, Malmeshry, Thorney, S. Augustine in Contributy, Selby, Peterberough, S. Johns in Colchester, Coventry, Tavestock. Of Colledges were demolish'd in divers Shires, And Hospitals 110. The yearly value of all is ... 'a'd. And Hofpitals 110. Chingries which were, as I find it cast up, 161100 l. be-However the first ing above a third part of all our Spiritual Re-factor to the track of Cattel and Corn, of the Timber, Lead, Bells, ere and lastly, but chiefly, of the Plate and Church-Ornaments; which I find not valued, but may be conjectured by that one Monaftery of S. Edmondsbury, whence was taken (as our Records shew) five thousand Marks of Gold and Silver, besides divers Stones of great value. All which being by fome openly call'd Rapine, and Sacriledge, I will no way excuse: Though I may fay truly, that notwithstanding so many Religious Houses were destroy'd, there are yet in every kind (the supprest Abbies and Chantries only excepted) left flanding fo many, as give no little increase to Learning, splendor to Religion, and testimony of Charity to the Poor. So that although I cannot but pity the ruine of fo many pious Foundations, as affording a fingular conveniency to those who desir'd to retire to a holy, private, and contemplative Life, when abuses were taken away; yet I have thought fit to mention these Particulars, that it may appear to foreign Nations, we are not destitute of many Monuments of Devotion : Of which also our King had fuch regard, that he did not imploy all the profits arifing from the aforefaid Diffolutions, on Fortifications or the like; for he not only augmented the number of the Colledges and Professors in his Universities, but erected (as he had promis'd) out of the Revenues gotten hereby, divers new Bishopricks; whereof one at Westminster, one at Oxford, one at Peterborough, one at Briffol, one at Chefter, and one at Glocester; all remaining at this day, save that of Westminster, which being revok'd to its first Instiwelfampier, which being levola to listing many rution by Queen Mary, and Benedictines plac'd in it, was by Queen Elizabeth afterward converted to a Collegiate Church, and a School for the teaching and maintenance of young Scholars: Besides, many of the ancient Cathedral Churches formerly possess by Monks only, were now supplied with Canons, and some new ones erected and endow'd; the Revenues allorted by the King to those new Bishopricks and Cathedrals amounting to about 8000 l. per Annum. So that Religion feem'd not fo much to fuffer hereby, as some of the Clergy of those times and ours would have it believ'd: Our Kingdom in the mean while having (as Cromwell pro-

1539 War or Peace, maintain'd at the cost of the forefaid Abbies and Chantries: So that the Desolations (appearing in their flately Foundations at this day) are by our Politicks thought amply recompene'd. Besides, the King in the demolishing of them, had so tender a care of Learning, that he not only preferr'd divers able Per-fons which he found there, but took special care to preferve the choicest Books of their well-furnish'd Libraries: Wherein I find John Leland (a curious fearcher of Antiquities) was imploy'd-But hereof enough, fince I do not intend to exceed the terms of an Historian, and therefore shall come now to the Parliament, which being April 28. compos'd of Persons well-affected to the Kings Service, (as his manner was always with great New Laws industry to procure such,) these Statutes among made others were enacted:

That Religious Persons being put at liberty, might purchase, sue, and be su'd; but not claim any Inheritance, as descending on them: And that if they had made a vow of Chastity after one and twenty, they should not marry. But this enabling them not to buy, they thought no fufficient amends for the loss of their present Maintenance.

That the King by the advice of his Council, or the more part of them, might fet forth Proclamations under fuch penalties and pains as to him or them shall feem necessary, which should be observed as though they were made by A& of Parliament: But that this should not be prejudicial to any Persons Inheritances, Offices, Liberties, Goods, Chattels or Life, &c. But this was repeal'd 1 Edw. 6. 12.

That the King might nominate fuch number of Bishops, Sees for Bishops, Cathedral Churches, and endow them with fuch Possessions, as he will. Which, though repeal'd 1 & 2 Phil. & Mar. yet order was taken therein again 8 Elic. 1.]

It was declar'd also how Lords in the Parliament should be plac'd.

That Leafes made of Manors belonging to Monasteries dissolv'd, or to be dissolv'd, and assur'd to the King, should take effect: Wherein is express'd, that the King should hold, possess, and enjoy to him, his Heirs and Succeffors for ever, all Monasteries, Abbacies, Priories, Nunneries, Colledges, Holpitals, Houses of Friers, or other Religious and Ecclefiaffical Houses and Places, which fince the fourth of February 27 Hen. 8. have been diffoly'd, fupprefs'd, renounc'd, relinquish'd, forfeited, given up, or by any other means come to his Highness; or which shall be diffolv'd, &c. As also all Mannors, Lordships, Lands, Tenements, Rights, Liberties, e.c. belonging to them. All which (except fuch as came by attainder of Treaton) should be under furvey and governance of the Kings Court of Augmentation of the Revenues of the Crown. Other Mens Titles yet fav'd.

It was also particularly enacted, that where-as Thomas Duke of Norfolk by the Kings affent had purchased of one William Flatbury, late Abbat of the Monastery of Sipton in Suffolk, the said Monastery, with all, &c. And whereas George Lord Cobbam had likewise purchas'd the Colledge or Chantry of Cobham in Kent, it was enacted, that the Act above-written should not be prejudicial to the faid Duke, or Lord Cobbam. Whereby it appears, the Kings intention was to unite all the Abby Lands, &c. to the Crown, fave thefe fo specified.

The Six Articles, call'd by fome the Bloody The fa-Statute, were also enacted this Parliament: Be-mous fix ing. I. If establish'd sent.

Six new Rifhopricks erested.

I. If any Person by Word, Writing, Printing, C.by a Letter from the Earl of Southampton, and phering, or any otherwise, do Preach, Teach, Dispute, Bishop of Ely to Cromwell, That though the were or hold Opinion, that in the blessed Sacrament of the seventy years old) her behaviour yet was Masor bold Opinion, that in the beliefed Sacrament of the Altar, under form of Bread and Wine (after the Con-fectation thereof) there is not present really the natu-ral Body and Blood of our Sacriour Jesus Chriss, con-ceived of the Virgin Mary; Or that after the said Confectation there remaines to any substance of Bread and the Confectation there remaines to any substance of Bread and Wine, or any other substance but the Substance of of Bread, is not the wery Blood of Chrift, or that with the Blood, under form very Flesh of Christ, as well apart, as though they were both together; or affirm the said Sacrament to be of other substance than is aforesaid, or deprave the said blessed Sacrament: Then be shall be adjudg'd an Heretick, and suffer death by burning, and shall forfeit to the King all Lands, Tenements, Hereditaments, Goods, and Chattels, as in case of High-Trea-

II. And if any Person preach in any Sermon, or Collation openly made, or teach in any common School continuo open, mane, or nette in in y or defend, that the Communion of the bleffed Sacrament in both kinds is necessary for the bealth of Mans Soul, or ought or should be ministered in both kinds, or that it is necessary to be receiv'd by any Person, other than Priest, being at Mass, and Confecrating the Same.

III. Or that any Man, after the order of Priesthood received, may marry, or contract Matrimony.

IV. Or that any Man or Woman which advisedly bath Vow'd or Profess'd, or should Vow or Profess Chastity or Widowbood, may marry or contract Mar-

v. Or that private Masses be not lawful, or not landable, or should not be us'd, or be not agrecable to the Laws of God.

VI. Or that Auricular Confession is not expedient and necessary to be us'd in the Church of God: He shall be adjudg'd to suffer death, or forfeit Lands and Goods as a Felon.

Margaret

If any Prieft, or other Man or Woman which advifedly hath vow'd Chaftity or Widow-hood, do actually marry or contract Matrimony with another or any Man which is, or hath been a Prieft, do carnally use any Woman to whom he is or hath been married, or with whom he hath contracted Matrimony; or openly be converfant or familiar with any fuch Woman, both the Man and the Woman shall be adjudg'd Felons. Commissions also shall be awarded to the Bishop of the Diocess, his Chancellor, Commissary, and others, to enquire of the Herefies, Felonies, and Offences aforefaid. And also Justices of Peace in their Seffions, and every Steward, Under-Steward, and Deputy of Steward in their Leet or Law-day, by the Oaths of twelve Men, have Authority to enquire of all the Herefies, Felonics, and Offences aforefaid.

In this Parliament alfo, Margaret Countess of Countries In this Parliament and, prangares Countries of Salisbus Salisbury (being Grand-child of George Duke of Tries, Gardi-Clarence, Brother of Edward IV. and Mother of Tries, and Condition himfelf, and Cardinal Pool, as also the Cardinal himself, and attainted. Gertrude Wife to the late Marquis of Exceter, Sir Adrian Fortescue, and Thomas Dingley Knight of S. Johns, were attainted of Treason. Against Margaret and Gertrude it was alledg'd, that they were complices with the Marquis of Exceter, and other Traitors: Our Records also tell us, that certain Bulls granted by the Bishop of Rome were found at Cowdrey, being then (as I take it) the Countefs of Salisbury's House; and that the Parson of Warblington convey'd Letters for her to her Son the Cardinal; and that she forbad all her Tenants to have the New Testament in English, or nants to have the New Testament in Engisjo, or any other new Book the King had priviledg'd.

But whatfoever the cause was (for our Parliament Records are short in the Particulars) I find both in that danger of Rebellion at home, and Vol. II.

I f 2

Invasion

culine and Vehement, and that the would con-fefs nothing. Howfoever, the teftimonies brought convincing her, the was condemn'd.

Against Cardinal Pool it was alledged, that he had conspir'd against the King with the Bilhop of Rome, and taken preferment of him.

Against the rest, I find no more, but in gene-July 10, ral, that they were Complices. Howsever, Fortescue and Dingley fuffer'd first; for Mirgarets Execution was deterr'd for two years, as shall be told hereafter; and Gertrude died a natural Death: And for the Cardinal, he could not be taken, though I find our King requir'd him earneftly of all those Princes that receiv'd him in their Dominions

The fix Articles being now publish'd, gave no little occasion of Murmur, since to revoke the Conscience not only from its own Court, but from the ordinary ways of refolving Controverfies, to fuch an abrupt decision of the common Law (as is there fet down) was thought to be a diverting of Religion from its right and usual course; fince the Conscience must be taught, not forc'd; without that it should at any time be handled roughly, as being of so delicate a remper, as though it suffer an edge to be put on, who doth more, diminisheth or breaks it. Befides, to make the contravening of Doctrines to be Capital, before they be fully prov'd, is prejudicial to that liberty, without which no Man can juffifie himself before God or Man. For if it be death to believe otherwise than we are commanded, how unfate will it be to make exact enquiry? And without it who can fay his Religion is best? Besides, the example is dangerous; for if Infidels and Heathens (to rerain their People in Obedience) should do the like, who would ever turn Christian? Therefore Cranner for three days together in the open Affembly oppos'd these Articles boldly; though yet it appears not what Arguments he us'd. Only I find the King fent to him for a Copy of them, and millik'd not his freedom, as knowing all he spake was out of a fincere Intention; though fome thought he had a private Interest, as being himthought he had a private interest, as easy manifeld a married Man, though fearing of this Law, he fent away his Wife for the prefent into Germany, she being Kinswoman to Hosander the Divine of Neromberg, whom he married during his Ambaffade with the Emperor about Anno 1; 32.

But that it may feem lefs ftrange why the King, who before was much dilpos'd to favour the Reformers, did on a fudden to much vary from them, I have thought fit to fet down some of the Motives, as I conceive them. In which number certainly, the Objections of Stephen Gardiner formerly mention'd may have place, while fpeaking against the Treaty with the Prote-stants in Germany, he alledged that they would not allow the Kings Supremacy, left they should infer an investing of the same Authority in the Emperor, whose absolute Power they seem'd to fear more than that of the Pope himfelf: And as this fuspition alienated fecretly the mind of our King, who saw that if he embrac'd their Reformation, they would abridge his Power; fo they not only deny'd to approve his Divorce, but lately (as is flow'd) in a peremptory man-ner refus'd all Accommodation, unlefs our King yielded wholly to the Augustan Confession. A-gain, the Duke of Saxony about this time parti-cularly shew'd some disaffection to him in the 1539. Invafien from abroad, as he thought it not fafe to reform any further in Religion; for which reafon also he was severe against all new Sectaries, especially Anabaptifts; so when occasion was given, he still testified his desire as far as was possible to keep an unity with the Roman Church, affirming that the Pope had flanderously call'd him Heretick. Infomuch that the same time he publickly diffputed with Lambert in Westminster-Hall, he declar'd his Resolution to continue in the Religion he had openly profes d. For the Reafons therefore (for I shall not here intermeddle with those of Conscience) it seems our King was the more disposed to keep him to the ancient forms of the Church. And now the Protestants in Germeny, despairing of accord with the Emperor, affembled at Arnstet in Thu-ringia, Nov. 9. to consult about mutual defence. To which purpose, they sent Ambassadors to our King; who told them, (as I find in our Records that he would make a League with them in honest Causes, as he had done with the Duke of Juliers, and after that he would treat of an accord and league in Religion. Though Sleidan (a little differing herein) writes that King Henry told them plainly, he thought their Doetrine touching Communion in both kinds, privace Mass, and Priests Marriage erroneous, and that his Learned Men should dispute herein. And that Cromwell thereupon told them the best way was to fend an honourable Ambaffade, and Me-Shid l.12. landthon affuring them if they came to any reafonable agreement of Doctrine with our King, he would not only furnish them with a vast Sum of Money for their occasions, but enter into a strict League with them for defence in general. But they standing firm to the Augustan Confession, and intending no League but in case of Religion, the business ended for the present, in April 13. them. And now the fix Articles caus'd no little apprehenfion in all the Reformers; yet I do not find the Law was us'd with much rigour till Cromwel's Death. Nevertheless, the terror of it made Latimer Bishop of Worcester, and Shanton Bishop of Salisbury (being committed to Prison) to resign their Bishopricks to the King, they being unwilling it feems to have a hand in the approbation or execution of them. So that if Sir Thomas More and the Bishop of Rochester had their scruples about the Supremacy; these Men were as confcientious about the fix Articles.

a resolution to answer the Kings Arguments concerning the fix Articles in writing, and fend it in a Book to him, and to defire an abolition of

This year the Emperor glad to repose himself a while from War, attended his pleafure in Spain, while Barbaroffa with a strong Fleet keeping the Seas, and landing his Men, did mischief in ma-August 7 my places. Recovering to after a brave resistance by Servicino a Spaniard, the place of Castel-new in the Gulf of Caster; which though it excited the Emperor to proceed in War against the Times, yet a Mutiny arising in Gaume (his native Town) made him refolve in Person to go and May 21. appeare it. And the rather, that having now loft his Empress, and check'd a little the greatness of some principal Persons in Spain, he thought himself more free and disengag'd. All thought himself more free and disengag'd. the difficulty was what way to take; for if the Sea were full of hazard, there was no ready I and-way, but by France; which though beft, when it could be handfomly procured, yet (the business being brought to his Council) was judged impossible; nevertheles, an overture thereof being secretly given to Francis, and a promise of Allan to one of his Sons (as the French within) has been haddly employed the new forms of the council of the secret within he had been haddly employed the new forms of the secret within he had been haddly employed the new forms of the secret within he had haddly employed the new forms of the secret within the land the new forms of the secret within the secret when the secret within the secret when the secret whe fion, and offer'd his two Sons for Hoftages of his fafe paffage. This was thankfully received by the Emperor, but as the Age was full of ancient honour, (which I never found intermitted but in barbarous times) the Emperor would have no fecurity, but only a fafe conduct under the Hand and Seal of Francis; taking that pledge only for his life and the Empire, while Francis that he might exempt his magnanimous Guest from jealousie, sent his two Sons and Anne de Montmorency the Conestable to receive him at Bay- The Fmonne, whither in his mourning Weeds, he came peror pat with twenty fix Persons only, (as our Records ses thre' have it) in the end of November, 1539. And so France to like Knight Errant following his journey, he every where (as Francis had permitted) deliver'd all Prisoners. Coming thus to Castel le Herand, 1540. the King (though troubled with an Ulcer in his January. fecret parts) and the Queen and Dutchess of Dupleix. Estampes his Favorite, and a great train of Noble Perfons welcom'd the Emperor with all demon-firations of Love. This confident paffage having (it feem'd) abolish'd all memory of their former Rancour; holding their way thus to Amboife; the Emperor was there almost stifled by a thick and fudden fmoak, which (though the French report it to have been the cafual burning of some Hangings near his Chamber, and also might be Recordtrue, yet one Style, imploy'd there by our King to write him the fuccess of this Journey, said) came thus. They who had charge from Francis to make the Emperors Reception, had hung a long iron Chain from the top of the Caffle to the bottom, cover'd all over with Pitch, Tar, and Rosin in very great quantity, which being lighted at the Emperors coming (somewhat in Night) did afterwards upon fome accident, go out in that fuuff and ill favour, as the Emperor fuspected it was done on purpose to choak him; but these jealousies were soon clear'd, Succours not only coming in quickly, but Francis commanding the Authors of this disturbance to be hang'd, had not the Emperor interceded for them. And here, during fome flay, both Princes (who formerly would have us d their Arms against each other) ending their emulation in shooting a Stag, which they both hit at the same time with their Hand-guns, (as Style his Receprelates) departing hence to Paris, the Court of tion at Parliament in their Robes, the Chancellor and Paris. Officers of the City met him, with a brave Equipage, which yet the Emperor feem'd not much to affect; his black Cloth Suit, and private Train being not proper, as he thought, for fuch flews; fo that he wish'd they had been fpar'd. Nevertheless Francis would not omit any thing which might ferve either for Ostentation or Magnificence, fo that in the splendor there-of, all note of their former diffension seem'd hidden or effac'd. Howbeit, there wanted not fome who perfuaded Francis to cancel the Treaty of Madrid, and make a new one at Paris, and that Milan should be reftor'd into the bargain. But as the Conestable Montmorney (a Person of great worth) opposed this Advice, so France abhorr'd it. Besides, the Dutchess of Estampes (who at first seem'd averse) being gain'd by a Diamond, which the Emperor having purpotely let fall, had after given, (upon her taking it up) changd her Language, and now begun to ferve the Emperor. Seven days thus being pall, either in Masks, Tilts, Turneys, and other Royal Disports and Triumphs, or in friendly and private Communication, the Emperor thought fit to depart, giving by way of fatisfaction for his good entertainment, many affurances of his promife of Milan to one of his Sons (as the love to Francis, who also for making it more en-French write) he both gladly embrac'd the occa-tire to him, as well as withdrawing it from our King.

July 1. Two Bifhops refign their pricks ratherthan confent to Articles.

Beilay.

1540.

But as this, at last, was disclos'd again to our King, the unkind usage he receiv'd herein, made him attend an occasion to refent it. And now the Emperor and Francis leaving Paris, the Conettable entertain'd them both at his goodly Palace of Chantilly: The admirable fituation whereof, and variety of Country pleafures about it, was fuch, as it made the Emperor wish that he had fuch another place, when it had coft him one of his Provinces. Both Princes going hence to St. Quintin, bid adieu to each other, leaving nothing to be admir'd, in all the Paffages betwixt them, than that they never fpake of any particular difference, but by way of gentle difcourfe, or urg'd it further, than either of them pleas'd to give ear; so much did civility prevail with them over all other Considerations: And thus at length, in February the Emperor came to February. Valenciennes; whither Francis his Children having accompanied him, and receiv'd both from him, and his Sifter Mary, Lady Regent there, all kind and regal utage (excepting an abfolute promife to reftore Milan) they departed and left the Emperor to attend his great occasions in those Countreys. Where being happy in nothing more than that his adventure of paffing through France, (which nothing could justifie but the Event) had fucceeded fo well, he compos'd the ftirs there fhortly after.

The passages of this Interview being advertis'd to our King, made him attempt betimes to break off their new Alliance: Or when that could not be done, to prevent the Confequences. fore, immediately upon the departure of the Emperor from Paris, he fent the Duke of Norfolk to treat with Francis to this effect: To offer him affiftance for recovery of Milan. And for this purpose, that the arrearages of the Pensions due to our King, and Salt-money flould be remitted: Furthermore, that with all industry he should make him jealous of the Emperors Ambition. And lastly, to propose a strict League with him, even to the exclusion of the Pope from their Dominions, as he faid: He faid he had already contracted with the Duke of Cleves, and in a manner with the Duke of Saxe, the Count Palatine of the Rhine, the Dukes of Bavaria, John Marquis of Brandenburgh, the Lantgrave of Hesse, and the Marquis Josephin Elector, and other Princes of Germany. The Duke coming thus to Paris, had audience of Francis; but finding him refolute not to break with the Emperor, if he perform'd his part, he return'd before the end of February Having thus deliver'd together the whole busineß of the Interview, and Success thereof, lest the Reader should be interrupted with broken and imperfect Narrations, I shall look back on fome other Affairs which pass'd this while.

Our King having found that neither the Marriage propos'd betwixt himfelf and the Dutchefs of Milan, was like to take effect, nor any other in France, confider'd now where he might beflow himself with most advantage: Whereupon Cromwel advis'd him to a Treaty with Cleves; and the rather, that he might oppose the Emperor, who did still retain such a grudge against him for difinheriting the Prince's Mary, as it was thought he would endeavour to execute the Popes Sentence: So that hereunto certain con-

King, had difcover'd fome fecrets (formerly paft betwixt them) which diverted the Emperor much joyn with in League to this purpofe. But the Apris 19, old Duke John dying floorly after, the Treaty Mays 19, But as this, at laft, was difclos'd again to our was renew'd with Duke William his Son, towhorn Princes. also the Princess Mary was propos'd, when he Mary prodemanded her upon fitting terms. But difficul-pos'd in ties appear'd in either of these Affairs; for the to the D. Lady Anne having been demanded by the Duke of Clevia. of Lorain's Son, the old Duke of Cleves had in great part accorded it: And for the other Match. it was much cross'd by the Emperor, who of-fer'd Duke William the Dutchess of Milan, not without fome hope that he would releafe Guelders, which the faid Duke claim'd by the gift of Charles of Egmond, late Duke thereof. How-beit, the treaties with our King went on; but fo as they were by the Clevois cunningly delay'd, till a meeting with the Emperors Deputies at Bruxels had past, and advice was taken with the Duke of Saxony: Yet were not these the only impediments; for the Lady Anne understood no Language but Dutch; fo that all communion of Speech betwixt our king and her was intercluded. Yet, as our Ambaflador, Nicholas Watton Doctor of Law, employ'd in this bulinefs, hath it, she could both write and read in her own Language, and few very well; only for Mu-fick, he faid, it was not the manner of the Country to learn it. But for her better description, Hans Holbin the Kings Servant took her Picture, and her younger Sifter Amelies, and fent them Au. 1539. hither; upon whose excellent representation of the Lady Anne, the match being refolv'd on, was fully concluded at the coming over of Frederic Duke of Bavaria Count Palatine of the Rhine, and the feveral Ambassadors of the Dukes of Decemb. and the several Amballadors of the Durkes of Decemb. Sexony and Cleves; and fhortly after the Lady with a brave Equipage was fent into England. The other Treaty yet fucceded not; for the Anne of young Duke of Cleves finding no disposition in Cleves in the Emperor to release Gueldors, concluded a constitution of the Emperor to release Gueldors, concluded a constitution of the Extension of the William of the Will Marriage with the only Daughter of Henry King land. of Navarre, and Margarita the French Kings Sifter, the year following; which yet took no effeet. This Lady being on her way now as far as Dec. 31.

Rochefter, the King came difguis'd to her on New-Dec. 31. years day: But the fight fo diflik'd him, that he The King was glad (as his own words were afterwards) diffices that be had kept himself from making any past of her. Bond with her, and that he was woe that ever she came into England; and that he thereupon deliberated with himself how to break it off; though, as he consider'd it would make a russle in the World, and drive the Duke ber Brother into the Emperor or French King's hands, he faid, it was too far gone. The truth of all which is to declar'd by our Records, that I make no question but if her coming had hapned at any other time than when the Emperor and French King were together in France, as is before related, he would have fent her back. Howfoever, he thought fit to discover himself at last to her; who thereupon fell on her Knees, but he taking her up lovingly, kis'd ker, with-out making shew of any inward discontent, which also he had so at length digested, that he refolv'd to marry her, when the enfurance made by her to the Duke of Lorain's Son were clear'd; which business being committed to Crommels care, who was a special Counsellor of the Match, he faid (as the King afterwards charg'd him under his hand) that a fufficient Instrument for this purpose was brought: But whether Cromwel did forget himself herein, or his Master, it is hard out of our Records to determine; for I find in fiderations of State, rather than Beauty or Riches, did conduce. For as John Duke of Cleves, an Original written by Crowneyl, 25 of June, to June es, did conduce. For as John Duke of Cleves, the King, out of the Torrer, that Oleffeger and was next Neighbour to the Emperors Domini-Hobstedin (the Duke of Cleve's Commiltioners for ons in the Love-Countreys, and Father-in-Law to bringing over the Lady) had with them indeed

Records

1539, no fach instrument, nor any Discharge or Declaration touching the Covenants of Marriage berwist the Duke of Lorain's Son; nevertheless, that Olefleger offer'd to remain here as Prisoner. till a revocation of all the aforefaid Covenants and Contracts of Marriage were brought; and that this being told the King, made him fay, Tan 4. he was not well handled in this business. foever, all was remitted to the Council-Table. where the Archbishop of Canterbury, and Bishop of Duresme said, if nothing but Sponsals had past betwixt them, such a Renunciation as was offer'd would ferve; and that then fhe making a Protestation in an Honourable Presence before certain Notaries, should be a sufficient discharge in Law: And now the procuring of the faid Instrument in writing being undertook by the aforesaid Commissioners, the King required the Lady to make a Protestation before the Lords to this effect: Which being done, he faid to Jan. 5. Cromwel, that there was no remedy now, and therefore he must put his neck in the yoak (as the words under his hands are:) Whereupon, the next day Tan. 6. after he folemnly married her at Greenwich, refolving to confederate himfelf with the Princes of Germany, if they would come to some moderate accord in Doctrine. But in the Morning Cromwel coming to him, and demanding whether he lik'd her better than before, he answer'd Nay, much worse; for that he having found by some signs that she was no Maid, he had no disposition to meddle with her: Nevertheless, he outwardly cherish'd her; without making any publick demonftrarion of dif-favour towards her, or neglect of any Solemnity for her Reception at London and elfe-where. All which made the greater flew,

Dec. 1539 that the King remembring what Enemies he had abroad, and difcontented Persons at home, had renew'd his Guard of Fifty Pensioners, intermit-ted fince the first year of his Reign.

It is formerly related, how not only James King of Scotland defir'd in Marriage Mary the Daughter of the Duke of Guife, and Relict of Scots Afthe Duke of Longueville; but a touch given that our King had some inclination to her: Howbe-it, Francis chose rather to give her to James, as knowing that lefs states united to greater, de-pend on them; whereas the equal for the most part live in jealousie with their Neighbours: Therefore the Match being concluded, the was Ten. 10. 1538. brought to Scotland, and foon after with Child, which being a Son, the Grandmother Margaret, Queen of Scots, and Sifter to our King, having Christned, shortly after died, aged about fifty years, and was buried in the Carthusans Church in Perth. But neither that Child, nor another born the year following, liv'd long; they (tho in feveral places) ending their lives within fix hours one after the other, the fame day (as the Leg. Each. Scottif History hath it.) I find little else by our Records, of Scotland, for this year; fave that fome Libels and Prophesies being divulg'd in Scotland against our King, the Authors were punished by James. The year following Sir Ralph Sadler Secretary was dispatcht thither, about the time that the Emperor and French King were together; for our King knew well how much it concern'd him now on every part to prevent danger. The Instructions given to Saeller were bishop of St. Andrews, into suspicien mith that king, as having written to Rome in other terms than he should; which Letters being intercepted in England, were now to be theren. But King James did not much receigh this.

Secondly, To perfuade him, for augmenting his E-face, to take into his hands the Abbeys; which fames fidering, and having besides divers Articles likewifo refus'd, faying, what need I take them 1539. into my hinds, when I may have any thing I can re-gaine of them? Lind if there be abufes in them, I will reform them; for there be a great many good.

Thirdly, To discover his affection, by telling him bon rumans were dispers'd (which the aforeshid Interview made probable) that the Emperor, French King, and Bishop of Rome would invide England; and that it was faid, King James would do the same: But he protefled with many Oaths against it. Whereupon Sadler told him how near he was to the English Crown; and that he should esteem his Uncles friendship above any others, defiring again there might be an Interview; which fames approv'd, when the French King might be prefent; but afterward by a particular Meffage excus'd it: So that some jealousies pass'd betwixt them; which also appear'd by certain Fortifications rais'd about this time upon the Borders by our King, and a Navy of fifteen Ships, and 2000 Men made in readings by James: Who wanted not Money, his Clergy giving great Sumsonly that their Houses might not be diffolv'd. What the occasion of these Preparations yet was, I cannot tell; but I gather out of our Records, that about this time certain Irish Gentlemen came to The Irish invite him to their Country, promifing to ac-invite the knowledge him their King, and that divers No- K of stars bles and Gentlemen of Ireland should come over to be their king. to do him Homage. How this offer was accepted, appears not; but the Preparatives came to nothing, by the good order which our King gave; who both by frequent and kind Meffages, and fecuring his Borders, kept his Nephew in good intelligence. One doubt yet remain'd undecided, as I gather out of our Records, which was, that our King took it ill, that Fames affum'd to himfelf his Title of Defender of the Faith, only adding the word Chrifian unto it, as if (faid he) there were any other Faith. That Beauty and attractive which should take April 11. the Kings eye in Anne of Cleve, not appearing, nor that Conversation which should please his Ear; and her Brother besides excusing himself in the performance of some Articles of the Treaty, he did more willingly think of a Divorce; for which purpose, the Pre-contract with the Duke of Lorsin's Son was chiefly pretended. For The King though Olefleger, Chancellor of Cleves, had according to his promife, 26 Feb. 1540, procured from an Instrument in writing out of the Records of Anne of Dusseldorp, dated Feb. 15. 1535, testifying the Chous-Sponsalia heretofore made by the Parents betwixt the Duke of Lorain's Son, and the Lady Anne, should not take effect. Yet this it seems either was not shew'd, or did not satisfie our King. Howfoever it was not deposited in Archivis Regiis, but found among Cromwel's Papers after his apprehension. And now although all feruples feem'd the more confiderable, in that fo many doubts had been already cast concerning the Kings former Marriages, yet the King determined at what price foever to separate himself from Anne of Cleve, and together to ruine Cremwel. For though he had not long before made him Grama Knight of the Garter, Earl of Effex, and High made Earl Chamberlain of England, yet as he was odious of Efficient by reason of his low birth to all the Nobility and Lord concern'd him now on every part to prevent and hated particularly by Stephen Gardiner, and the Lindhager. The Inflructions given to Sadlor were Roman Catholicks, for having operated for much Aug. 16. (after prefenting the Kings love, and fome Horfes) First, To bring David Beton, Cardinal and Archifering the Kings love and formers themselves found he could not protect April 18. them from burning; and laftly, that belides a Subfidy that the Clergy gave of four shillings in April 12. the pound, he had gotten in the present Parlia-Isgeneralment, not without much Reluctation, one Tenth, ly hated.

brought

June 14.

Records

in his favour.

be material; it being impossible that any Man, who medled fo much in great and publick Affairs, should not in divers kinds so mistake, forget, and err, as to incur the note of a Criminal, when fevere inquificion were made against him. And now the King having gotten fufficient proof against Cromvel, caus'd him to be ar-June 23. refled at the Council-Table by the Duke of I artelled Norfick, when he leaft fufpected it: To which of Norfick cromvel obey'd, though judging his Perdition more certain, that the Duke was Uncle to the Lady Katharine Howard, whom the King began now to affect. The News whereof, and his commitment to the Tower being divulg'd, the People with many Acclamations witneffed their Joy; to impatient are they usually of the good fortune of Favorites arifing from mean place, and infolent over the ill: Whereof the King being inform'd, proceeded more overtly, both in his Parliament business, and the Divorce; and the rather, that all former faults being now imputed to Cremwel, every body began to hope of a betFoxp.514 ter Age. But Cremwel (if we may believe fome of cur Authors) ferefaw his fall two years be-fore, and therefore provided for his Family; neither did the late Honours give him much comfort or fecurity, when he thought they were conferr'd only to make him the greater Sacrifice. It cannot be deny'd yet, but the Crimes whereof he was attainted in Parliament, are in the general terms great and enormous, and fuch as deferv'd the most Capital Punishment; though as fome of the Accufations were conceal'd two years after they were alledg'd, and the particulars of fome others not specified; and lastly, as he was not permitted to answer for himself, the proceedings against him were thought Rigorous; but fo few pittied him, that all was eafily pass'd over: Nevertheless, I find by an Original, that Cranmer writ to the King in his behalf boldly, confidering the times; for though (as is in his Letter) be heard yesterday in his Graces Council, that he is a Traitor; yet, he faith, who cannot be forrow-ful, and amaz'd that he should be a Traitor against Letter to the King your Majesty? He that was so advanc'd by your Mayour Majesty? He that was so advanced by your Majesty, be whole surely own only by your Majesty, on less than God; be who studied always to set forward whatseever was your Majesties Will and Pleasure; be that car'd for no Mans Displeasure to serve your Majesty; be that was such as Servant; in my sudgment, in Wisdom, Dissease, Faithfulvels, and Experience, as no Prince in this Realm ever had; be that was so vigilant to preserve your Mojesty from all Treasens, that few could be so secretly conceived, but he detected the same in the beginning? If the Noble Princes of memory, King John, Henry II. and Richard II. had had fuch a Counfellor about them, I suppose they should never have been so traiterously abandoned, and overthrown as those good Princes were: After which, he says again, I lov'd him as my Friend, which he had a gain! I we a him as my retend, I route, who hoods teach to the king to be, but I chiefly low'd him for the love which I thought I saw him hear ever towards would please him, both to grant, that the Liyour Grace singularly above all others: But now, if your strace ingularly doorde all olders: But now, of the be a Traitor, I am Jory that ever I lov'd bim, or trufted bim, and I am very glad that his Treason is discovered in time; but yet again I am very sorrow-ful; for who shall your Grace trust hereafter, if you might not trust bim? Alas! I bewail and lament your Grace thous hours. Graces chance herein, I wot not whom your Grace may trust. But I pray God continually night and day to Send such a Counsellor in his place, whom your Grace Jena Justo a Complettor in ois place, whom you Grace longly, and and instantiation, his Majetty ferve your Grace like to him, and that will have so could not deny, not doubting but the said Duke much sellicitude and care to preserve your Grace from considering that it is the general motion of the whole

1542. brought against him, he now judg'd him no longer necessary: Therefore he gave way to all as being a Character of Crommel in Grammo's O. pinion, I have faithfully copied out of the Original. Not yet that I will pretend excuses for him, whom the Laws have condemn'd; (though Fox doubts not to fay, That as General Councilshave functimes been observed to crr, so Princes and Parliaments may be sematimes informed by sinister Heads; ments may be functimes inform a vy junifor the east 1) but that his punishment may ferve as a caution for those that ferve severe Princes, to procure sufficient warrant for all that they do. The Acconstitution of power to force the procure of the an usurpation of power, to fet at liberty certain Perfons not capable of it, and granting certain Li-cences, and making certain Commissions in high Affairs, without the Kings knowledge: For which, though Cromwel in his differetion might have found due Motives; yet as he proceeded not warily therein, he fell into the danger of the Law. Furthermore, he was accus'd for being an Heretick, and favouring them: (But then, that the Head of the Churches Vicegerent in Spiritual Affairs, should be an Heretick and favourer of them, to some seem'd strange, to others gave occasion of Merriment.) As for his speaking sanders, certain high prefumptuous words concerning the Schifm King, and fundry of the Nobility, many thought King, and tunny of the Nobinty, many thought is proceeded rather out of mittaking and rathnels, is chan any ill intention. Cromwel thus unheard, His Conand almost unpitted, being condemn'd while he finement was in the Tower, omitted not yet to write unto the King, whereof hereafter. The context of my Hiftey requiring, that I come to the proceedings of the Kings Divorce.

I find by an Original, that Jobn Clark Bifhop June.

I find by an Original, that Jobn Clark Bifhop June.

of Bath, was fent to the Duke of Clevis at the Records, end of June, to tell him, That the King never Divorce and Contact Learnity as the Mariety and Contact Learnity and Mariety. confented heartily to the Matrimony with his from Anna Sifter; and that he never did, nor intended to of closes confummate the fame; especially since he could pursue not but take notice of the precontract with Lerain: Besides which, that there were secret Caufes, which the King without great necessity would not have disclosed, because they touched the honour of the Lady; yet that all her Jewels should be restor'd with an honourable Augmentation in Revenue, &c. And so that she should be transported into her Country. Besides, affurance should be given the Duke of the Kings Lone, in all his occasions with the Emperor. After which, if the Duke should remain perverse, to tell him, that the matter is already fo debated by his Majesty, and the whole Realm, (as the Reader will fee hereafter) the Parliament now fitting, that they be utterly refolv'd to pronow items, that they can be infructions again were check'd by others of $\int u/y$; and he combined manded to perful only in the point of precontract with Lorain, which was upon Remonstrance of the Lords in the Upper House, to be debated in Parliament, fince they found the Instrument for Revocation thereof was of no value: And that certain Persons were appointed of both Houses, who should repair to the King, to beamine the matter, and thereupon declare their Judgment, and Sentence; and also to abitain from her Company, till the case were decided: Whereunto his Majesty condescending and a July 62 greeing, upon Thonflay next is should be opened to the Parliament, and brought to the King, and from thence, remitted to the Bishops and Clergy; and also notified to her. All which 1540. whole Realm, and remembring the effusion of Blood which hath been in the fame, by uncerrainty of Titles, will think it reasonable, that this last Mattimony, for their more certainty, and the Kings discharge, should be examin'd. These second Instructions (sign'd by the King as the former were,) yet did not pleafe: He being finally commanded to urge for his best Argument Authoritatem rei judicatæ: All which Inftructions were fent the Bishop in his way, and before he came to Bruges, where the Emperor was; whom he was commanded to falute on his Majestics part, and to deliver him certain Letters. The particulars whereof, though not extant in our Records, yet (as I gather by fome Circumstances) tended to a Reconciliation with the Emperor, whom the King in this Match had difebligd. Of the delivery whereof alfo, the bishop (being not yet come to the Duke of Cherg) advertised our King, who this while com-

June 25. manded the Duke of Suffelk, the Earl of South-She is ac ampton, and Sir Thomas Wriothefly to acquaint the quainted with the faid Lady therewith; (who, upon pretence of Kings & better Air, was lately remov'd to Richmond.) But fignshere the news flruck her into a fudden weakness and fainting, till at last recovering her felf, she was by little and little perfuaded, First, to refer the matter to the Clergy: Secondly, to relinquish her Title of Queen; instead whereof, the king had devis'd another which he thought might content her: And this was (as I find by our Records) that she should have the Name and Dignity thenceforth of his Adopted Sister; which stile yet, afterwards gave fome subject of Discourse: July 11. Howforver she accepted it, and subscrib'd (in these terms) a Letter to the King. Besides, she fent another to her frother the Duke of Cleves, acknowledging the Juffice of the proceedings; and that the was untouch'd by the King, and that file was well intreated in England, and therefore defir'd to flay: Laftly, the promis'd to flew the King all Letters receiv'd from her Brother, Mother, or any elfe. Whereupon, the Officers which before attended her as Queen, were difcharg'd, and others appointed to wait on her in the quality of the Kings Adopted Sifter.

And now the Duke understanding by the Bishop of Bath, and Nicolas Wotten Resident there, that our Clergy affifted by the Court of Arches, had declar d (upon her Teftimony, that fhe was untouch'd by our King) that the Marriage was void, and that either part might marry freely; and that the whole Parliament had confirm'd the Sentence, and the accepted it, remain'd much perplext, as with tears he witneffed; yet finding it a business publickly resolv'd, he faid little; especially, after he heard that Richmond House, and other fair Lands, were allotted her for Maintenance; and that the thould have precedence before all, fave the Queen, and the Kings Children. Howbeit, he would never confent to the difannulling of the Match; fo that the Bishop return'd, leaving the Duke no otherwife fatisfied, than that his Siller had fped no worfe. Thusat length the Law pass'd, declaring the Marriage Marriage void, both by the judgment of the Clergy of edeclar d void.

England, and also by her own confern, and that is was High Treasure. was High Treason to judge or believe other-

Another Act also was made, shewing, what Marriages were lawful, and what not. Where-in is ordain'd, that all Marriages (without the degrees prohibited by Gods Law) made and confunamace by carnal knowledge, shall be firm and good. Notwithstanding any precontract, which hath not been fo confummate. But this Law was repealed, 1. and 2. Phil. and Mar. and 1. Elia. 1.

Other Acts also pass'd this Session of Parlia- 15.10. ment, which began April 12. Among which I April 12. thought fit to remember thefe : An Act declaring in what cases a Man may dispose all his Lands by his last Will in Writing; and in what, but part thereof. And in what ca-fes the King, and other Lords shall have their Wardships.

That no Person should fell or buy any Right or Title, or maintain it, or procure Maintenance in any Suit.

The punishment also by Death of Priests married, or unmarried; and of Women offending with them by Incontinency, was Repeal'd. For as the Clergy of these times thought it (though one of the Six Articles) too severe; the punishment (upon their Remonstrance) was laid on their Goods, Chattels, and Spiritual Promotions; and this also better pleas'd the King.

Sanctuaries alfo, and priviledg'd places were reduc'd to a few, and certain Rules preferib'd to

That Horses feeding on Commons, not being of a lawful height, (that is to fay, not being fit-teen hands high, at two years old) should be feis'd on by any Man for his own use.

That Forests, Heaths, Commons, &c. should be driven once in the year, and unlikely Tits in them to be kill'd. Nevertheless, that Horses of small height might be put where Mares were not kept. The Statutes also of 5 Rich. 2. 3. 6 Rich. 2. 8. 4. 4 Hen. 7. 10. and 22 Hen. 8. 7. touching fraighting in English Ships, were only rehears'd and confirm'd, and a rate fet down what should be paid for the fraight, or portage of the feveral forts of Merchandizes from the Port of London to o-

That no Alien nor Denizon shall set up any Trade in the Kings Dominions, and they who are Denizons should be bound by and unto all the Laws and Statutes of this Realm, particularly those of 14 Hen. 8. and 21 Hen. 8. above-mentioned.

That Trinity Term, in regard of impediment of Harvest, and danger of Infection, should be abbreviated. Certain Priviledges also were granted to Physicians in London; as that they should not keep Watch and Ward, nor be Constables; and that they might practife Chirurgery: Barbers and Chirurgeons were also made one Company, and certain Priviledges given them; as not to bear Armour, or to be put in any Watches or Inquests.

A Court also of the First-fruits, and Tenths, granted to the King, was erected.

The Court of the Kings Ward alfo, and the Names and feveral Duties and Offices thereof was erected.

It was enacted alfo, That the I ands and Goods of St. Johns in Jerufalem, should be in the Kings disposition; for which these Reasons chiefly were pretended: Because the Knights of Rhodes or Saint John, otherwise call'd Fryers of the Religion of Saint John, drew yearly great sums of Money out of the Kingdom; that they maintain'd the uturp'd power of the Bishop of Rome; that they defam'd and slander'd the King and his Subjects; that the Isle of Rhodes, whence the faid Religion took its name, was furpris'd by the Turks; that the Revenues might be better imploy'd for defence of the Realm; nevertheless, certain Penfions were allow'd unto the Prior, and others of the faid Order, that were dutiful Subjects. But all their Lands, as well in England as in Ireland, were granted to the Kings Majeffy, to be in the Survey, Rule, and Governance of the Chancellor, and others, Officers of the Court

July 20. fuly 10.

Inly 15.

Tuly 12.

1540. of Augmentations. And thus fell that ancient and pious Order, not without much Scandal a-broad, both to the King and Government. Tho yet, the envious Difrespect shew'd unto the Finglish being such, as they never attained higher Dig-nity than the Turcoplier or Captain's Place of the Light-Horfe in the Isle of Rhodes, did (in the opinion of fome) extenuate this Proceeding: The King yet grew not much the richer hereby, as giving great Portions of the faid Lands to divers of our Noblemen and Cavaliers, who lately had held a folemn Justs, Tourney and Barriers in Westminster, and seasted sumptuously both the King and Court. Laftly, a general and free Pardon was granted ASt of Indemnity. of all Herefies, Treasons, Felonies, and Offences, (fome particular Perfons and Matters only excepted) in which number Cromvel was not yet included. For, though divers Letters and Mef-June 25. fages paffed from him to the King; and one particularly written after his Condemnation, and extant in our Records, wherein he much excus'd himself, saying, That if his Medlings under his Ma-jesty were great, so his Majesty's Authority was great; and that he protested, besides, under many Executions, Cramw. 1 writes to after Conthat he was innocent in his Intentions; and, lastly, utdemnaterly deny'd all Treason and Heresy, as that he was no

Sacramentary, &c. yet he could not prevail. And July 28 thus the twenty eighth of July (being four Days after the Diffolution of the Parliament) he was brought to the Tower-Hill, where, after Profession Is behead, that he would die in the Catholick Faith, his Head was cut off.

cent and

Fortune.

And to this End came Cromvel, who from bevel into divers foreign Countries, to learn their Languages, and to fee the Wars, (being a Soldier of Bourbon at the facking of Rome;) whence returning, he was received into the Cardinal Woolfey's Service: To whom he fo approv'd himfelf by his Fidelity and Diligence, that the King after his Fall voluntarily took him for his Servant; in which place he became a special Instrument for dissolving the Abbies, and other Religious Houses, and keeping down the Clergy; whom in regard of their Oath to the Pope, he ufually term'd the King's half Subjects: And for expelling the Monks, he faid it was no more than a refloring them to the first Institution of being lay and labouring Persons: Neither did it move him, that so much Strictness and Austerity of Life was injoin'd them in their feveral Orders, fince he faid they might keep it in any Condition. But as thefe Reafons again were not admitted by divers learned and able Persons, so he got him many Enemies, who at last procur'd his Fall; but not before he had obtain'd fuccessively the Dig-(a) July 9, nities of Mafter of the Rolls, (a) Baron, (b) Lord 1536. Privy-Seal, (c) Vicegerent to the King in Spiri-(b) tualities, (d) Knight of the Gurter, (e) Earl of (b) July 8. Effex, Great Chamberlain of England, &c. He (d) Au. 26, was noted in the exercise of his Places of Judi-(4)Au.16. Was noted in the existence of Figure 1537. cature to have used much Moderation; and in (4)Ap.14 his greatest Pomp, to have taken notice, and been 1540 thankful to mean Persons of his old acquaintance, and therein had a Virtue which his Mafter the Cardinal wanted: As for his other Descriptions, Heave them to be taken out of Cranmer's Letter formerly mention'd, with fome deduction; for it feems written to the King in more than ordinary favour of his ancient Service.

At the fame time with Cromwel, Walter Lord Hungerford suffer'd. The Crimes objected to him were, For taking into his House as Chaplain one William Bird, who had called the King Heretick, That he had procur'd certain Persons to conjure, to know how long the King should live; alfo, That he had used the Sin of Buggery.

Shortly after which, divers great Perfons from Italy, and other places, came to fee the King, whom he very courteoufly receiv'd, and being richly rewarded, difmiss d them.

The King continued yet his Rigor to those that disputed either his Authority, or Articles; infomuch, that both the Reformers and Main-tainers of the Pope's Authority fuffer'd fo frequently, that his Enemies faid, While he admitted neither fide, he feem'd to be of no Religion. Sander: Howbeit, this was but Calumny, for he stood firmly to his own Reformation.

And now the Lady Anne of Cleves contenting The King her felf with the file of the King's adopted Si-marries fler, the Lady Katharine Heward, Daughter to the Lady Edmond the third Son of Thomas, first Duke of Bourd Norfolk, and Brother to the prefent Duke, was married to the King, and presently after shew'd publickly as Queen.

That in August, this Year, August Our Historians say, there was fo great a Drought, that the Springs failing, the Salt-water flow'd above London-Bridge. I find also, that Frederic Count Palatine of Bavaria was in England, to obtain Aid of the King, for the restitution of his Father-in-law the King of Denmark. But as our Records do not fet down the time exactly, fo I know not whether to place him in this Year, or the Year preceding. How-foever, he found fome Difficulty in his Bufiness. and the rather, that he asked fo great a Sum as fix hundred thousand Ducats, when the King had fo much use of Money, for the fortifying of his Kingdom.

Let us look a while upon foreign bufiness: The memory of those Courtesies which were done the Emperor, being yet fresh, Francis thought fit to fend the Cardinal of Lorain, and Coneflable Montmorency, to treat concerning the Reflitution The Emof Milm: But the Emperor, refolute at what mero's finding to govern not to quit it, made them at length fiver to this Answer:

There is nothing I defire so much, as the Peace and about Quiet of the World, which that it may be firm and Milan true, I am content to give unto the King, more than ever he meant to ask, or I to grant. Of two Daughters Sanders which I have, I am willing to bestow the elder in marriage to the Duke of Orleans, and with her for Dowry the State of Flanders, with the Stile and Title of a the State of Handers, with the Stitle and This of a King; io [hall Francis bave true Sons, both King; and Neighbours: Besides, if his eldest Son and mine die, he and my Daughter [hall be the greatest Princes in the World; for they [hall bave Spain and all my other Dominions. As for Milan, let them not think I will Dominions. As you seemed to be every part with it, fince it were nothing elfe than to disjoint (the Spanish is more elegant Descaped) all my Estates. And let it not grieve the King; for i had it by good and larvful Succession, and possess it as bad it of good and langue Successor, and possess it is belonging to the Empire. Take Milan from me, and you take away my Passage between Flanders and Spain, Italy, Sicily, and Germany. This is that I bad to fay to you. And if it pleafe you not, there is no occasion to fpeak more of the business.

The Cardinal and Monimorency hereupon advertis'd this good Offer; but Francis, us a Man pat-fionate, and affronted, returned this Answer.

That fince he might not have his Inheritance, he the would have nothing elfe; neither would he care to speak King's Repl. any more of Peace.

And thus the Treaty brake off; yet fo, as it was thought that Francis herein shew'd some Wilfulness; he being not further off from Milan for having Flanders, nor to be bound fo by any Confederation, as he might not easily find occasion to disfolve it, the Causes both of War and Peace betwixt great Princes being perpetual. And now the Emperor, glad of this refulal, profecutes his Business in Germany, without care of giving Francis any further fatisfaction.

July 22.

Aug. 8.

This

Oftob.

Tune.

of Hertford, and Sir Edward Kerne, who disputed the Right of the Borders with Monsieur de Biez, and other Commissioners from Francis. But as no effect follow'd hereon, and Francis befides took occasion to complain, that our King in the late Parliament had made the French liable to Subfidies, and other new Impositions, contrary to the ancient Treaties: Our King on the other fide, remonstrating that those Acts were neither new, nor derogatory to the faid Treaties; both Princes remain'd unfatisfy'd of the others Actions. Hall. 1541. Therefore on the French Party Monsieur de Vendosme was commanded to raife Forces in Picardy; and Octob. 27. from England were fent William Earl of Southampten, lately made Lord Privy-Seal, and John Lord Ruffel, newly constitute High Admiral, with a few Troops of Northern Horse: Without yet that any thing was attempted on either fide for the

I will conclude this Year with a Narration of Inigo or Ignatius being born 1492. (that is to fay, in the Year that the Indies were discover'd, and Granada taken in by Ferdinand) feems the third great effect of that unparallel'd Ascendent which

Spain had at that time: He lived yet obscurely from Inigo de Loyola of Guipuscoa in Spain.

present. Order of the first beginning which the Jesuitical Order took founded.

Records.

April

July 28.

Life of Ignatitus Loyola,

Sandan

till he came to twenty nine Years of Age, but then turn'd Soldier in the Wars of Navarre, 1521. where being hurt in the Knee, the Pain thereof feems to have waken'd Devotion in him to a Religious Life; for affoon as he recovered, he went to our Lady of Montferrat, to whom he offer'd his Sword and Dagger, which being done, he gave his Clothes away to a poor Man, and took upon him a Shirt and miferable Habit, which he girt about him with a Rope of Rushes: And in these Arms (for so are Sandoval's Words) he watch'd one whole Night before our Lady, and fo went to an Hospital three Leagues off, and there attended the fick Persons, whence he tra-vell'd after to the Holy Land; being return'd thence, and now in his Age of thirty three, he began to learn Grammar at Barcelona, which in two Years he attain'd. And being desirous to make further progress, he went to the University of Alcala, and fo to Salamana, where being oppos'd and perfecuted, he left all and came to Paris, and there studied till he had found at last divers others, with whom he agreed to return in Pilgrimage to the Holy Land, and ferusalem. Thus about 1536, going first to Venice, he staid till his Companions overtook him, and went from thence to Rome, whither he follow'd them; and obtain'd of Paul III. the Foundation of the Fefuitical Order, 27 Sept. 1540. The decay of Religious Houses in England, and the Progress of the Lutherans in Germany, authorizing (it feems) their Institution, who sithence have so dilated themfelves, as their Disciples fear not to fay, That for advancement of their Doctrine, they have gone to further Countries than the Apostles ever reach'd; and that God referv'd the intire Difco-

In France, where all was now quiet, little past Devotion and Miracles which this Ignatius is said 1540 This Year, fave that France's where all was now queet, little patt to have exhibited in his Journeys, I affirm no large his Borders, built a Fortrefs at Andres, and made a Bridge over to the Engillo Pale; which more historical part out of Sandward, (who feems Sept. 7). Our Garrifon hearing, best down. The French to be a great Extoller of him.) Sundry Reformers on the other fide, inflead of confelling him again. Whereupon the French railing some Forces to be a good Man, or a Miracle-worker, said, under Monsteau de Biez, our King commanded he was an Incendiary, and haunted with Evil Hung Arundel Lord Matrevers (lately made Deputy of Calais in the place of Arthur Plantagenet) Turrianus and Bobadilla (both of them Feluite) Jan. 1541. to put the Town into defence by Fortifying and confirm; moreover Turrianus related (as Hospinian Records: Victualling it; and shortly after sent over the Earl hath it) that he dy'd in much Fear and Trembling, and that his Face was strangely black; Hasenmullerus besides (once a fesuit) adds that no Bones were found in his Body, and that all the Jesuites at his Burial were Witnesses thereof. Concerning which therefore no little Dispute is on both fides, whether good or bad Angels took them away, while divers fober Men think neither: But that we may pretermit the Contentions of Men paffionate on the one or the other fide. as unfit to establish that Peace in which God is beft ferv'd, there is little occasion to fay more of the Jesuites in this place, than that they are generally held such Ministers of the King of Spain, that they have more advanc'd (by the fe-cret Operations of their Confessions, and Intelligence, which is admirable) the Defigns of the House of Austria, than either the Continent of Spain, made intire by the Union of Granada, (as is formerly touch'd) or the Indies themselves. By is formerly touch'd) or the Indies themselves. By which means, as also that their Doctrine and Learning is so exact in all things, save where they overmuch study the Pope and Spaniards Ends, they have made themselves the most considerable among all the Religious Orders.

And now a cruel time did pass in England; for Persecuas few durft protect those who refus'd to subscribe renecuto the fix Articles, fo they fuffer'd daily, whereof England Fox hath many Examples; neither was it eafy for concernany Man to escape, (Commissioners being ap-ing the pointed in every Shire to search out and examine ticles. those who were refractory;) nevertheless, these Punishments did but advance their Religion; for as they were notify'd abroad, and together their Conftancy prefented, who were burnt, it was thought they had some affistance from above, it being impossible otherwise that they should so rejoice in the midft of their Torments, and triumph over the most cruel Death. Therefore not only the learned and better affected fort, but even all Christian Princes endeavour'd some confent of Opinion: The Pope himfelf not omitting to concur therein, as thinking it better to allow fome degrees of Latitude in Religion, only when their feveral Authorities might be conferv'd, than to hazard a general Schifm and Distraction. Hereunto also it conduced not a little, that the Turk taking notice of these Divisions, prepared to invade Germany. Therefore the Emperor appoint- Octob. 28. ed a Meeting at Worms, where divers learned and 1540 able Men on both fides fhould dispute, hoping Jan 1. fo an end would follow. Howbeit, as the Divines could not agree among themselves, the business was referred to a Diet, shortly to be held at Ra-April s. tureni. And here the Emperor being present, requires both sides to permit the choice of the ADsparent Delegates to him, which they granted; where in German upon he appointed on the one fide, Julius Pflug, tween the John Eccius, John Groper; on the other, Philip Ms. Prorefant langthon, Martin Bucer, and John Piftorius; grave- and Po ly adviting them to handle the bufiness fincerely; with Dithese Men, after a modest Excuse, accept the April 22, veries both of East and West Indies until the lat-ter times, only that those Holy Fathers might test times, only that those Holy Fathers might have the Honour of their Conversion. Of the peror gave them Frederick Count Palatine, and April 27.

This Order founded by Pope fome Paffages whereof they all admitted, others they corrected, and of fome others the Protestants writ their Opinion apart; fo the Book wis re-exhibited to the Emperor, and he (it feem'd) well contented therewith; nevertheless, because the Pope interven'd not herein, this way was oppos'd, Contareni alledging, that all agreement in this kind would be vain, unless the Holy See confirm'd it; whereupon the Emperor referring the Protestants Confession to him, he again refers it to the Pope: But as this requir'd time, fo the Emperor defirous his Endeavours should take some effect, demands whether those Arricles whereof the Delegates were agreed might be receiv'd, until a Council were had. Protestants desired it; but the Legat and Catholick Princes opposed it, saying, They were not the most material, and therefore to be pretermitted till the rest were determin'd, &c. Concluding with a Defire, that all might be deferr'd to the General Council now intended.

The Emperor finding all Reconciliation at this time to be hopeless, and that the Turk still approach'd, took this way, promiting himself to go to Rame, and solicite the Pope herein; advising the Protestants in the mean time, First, to infift in the reconciled Points. Secondly, The Roman: Catholick Bishops to reform their own particular Churches, and so make way for a general Reformation; taking order withal, that Religious Houses should not be thrown down, nor People drawn from one Country to another upon pretence of converting them: Yet that they who came willingly might be received; promiting further, if a General Council could not be obtain'd, to procure a Provincial; or if neither, that within eighteen Months another Diet fhould be called, whither he would intreat a Legat from the Pope to come; fufpending, in the mean time, that rigid Decree at Augsburg against the Protestants; whereupon, they also promis'd him their Assistance against the Turk. And thus July 28. ended the Diet; to which our king sent Stephen Sanders Sanders Gardiner Bishop of Winchester, and Sir Henry KneSchilf Ang vet, by whom (if we may believe Sanders) he held a doubtful part; fometimes excusing himself to the Protestants, sometimes offering a Reconciliation with the Pope by the Emperor's means, when Penance and Reftitution should not be requir'd. But as neither our Histories nor Records, nor the diligent Sleidan make mention hereof, that I can find, fo I leave the credit thereof to the Readers diferetion.

Francis not fatisfy'd with the Answer formerly mention'd, nor the Negotiation of Montmorency, did refent both. Against the Emperor he took offence for not reftoring Milan according to his Promife (as he alledg'd) to Montmorency: Against him again, he shew'd no little displeasure (as some affirm) for diffuading him to feize on the Emperor at that time: Though I rather believe it was on occasion of fome private quarrel betwixt the Admiral Brion and him; in which, ill offices were done him by the Dutchess of Estampes, larely al ly'd to Brion's Kindred : Howfoever, Montmorency was confin'd to a private life; neither would the The K. of King ever after fee him. And now Francis, refolv'd when occasion was offer'd to break with the Emperor, fends Anthony Rincon, a revolted Spaniard, in Ambassage to the Turk, and one Cafar Fregoso, a Genouese, to the Venetians: Both these meeting in Piedmont with Seignieur du Bollay, the King's Lieutenant there, were advertis'd that the Marquis of Guafto, the Emperor's Lieutenant in Mil n, laid wait for them: Howbeit, whether trufling to their Quality, or Address, they agreed (for being no Parliament Lord, he could not be June 25

Nicholas Perenot Seigneur de Granvile, and fome others; offering them further a Book to confider, fome Paffages whereof they all admitted, others they all admitted, others.

Venice; for the reft, hoping betwixt changing their Habit, and Diligence, to escape: But (as it falls out very often, that they who hide not the melves cunningly, give but the more occa-fion to difcover themfelves, (a) they were pre-vented, and by certain Persons with Visors (fig. July 3) Francis hearing hereof, firi'd upon the Water. faid it was done by the Emperor or the Marquis of Guafto's procurement, and that the Law of Nations was violated therein: But they, on the other fide, disclaim'd the Fact, offering to put the suf-pected Persons into the Pope's hands, to be there examin'd; protesting nevertheless, that the killing of Rincon was only a chaftifement due to a ling of Kinom was only a chantisenest due to a treacherous Subject. Francis hearing this, furprifeth George of Auftria (natural Son to Miximilian late Emperor) in his Journey from Spain to Flanders through France, and commits him to Prison. Some other Passages also happen'd about this time, which increas'd the Jealousy betwixt them: For as Francis had given in Marriage Jone Daughter of Navarre to the Duke of Cleves, and therein ftrengthen'd himself against the Empeto the Son of the Duke of Lorain, got the same advantage of Alliance against Francis.

A little Rebellion now appearing in Torkflire, April. in which Sir John Nevil was a Complice, the King took order to fuppress it betimes; commanding the said Sir John Nevil to be put to death at York. Shortly after which follow'd the Counces of Salisbury's Execution; which, whe-May 27ther occasion'd by the late Rebellion, (as being thought of Cardinal Pool's Infligation) or that the gave fome new offence, is uncertain: The old Lady being brought to the Scaffold (fet up in the Tower) was commanded to lay her Head on the Block; but she (as a Person of great Quality affur'd me) refus'd, faying, So fhould Traytors do, and I am none: Neither did it serve that the Executioner told her it was the fashion; so turning her gray Head every way, she bid him, Countess if he would have her Head, to get it as he of Salir could: So that he was constrain'd to fetch it has of the factor in the factor off flovenly. And thus ended (as our Authors Plantage fay) the last of the right Line of the Planta-net Line

And now the King resolved to go in Progress Yorkshire; not yet so much to extinguish the relicks of the last Commotion, as those of Superflition, Miracles and Pilgrimages: Besides, he was in hope to meet his Nephew of Scotland, who being folicited again for Interview, had (it feems) promis'd it. Yet before he went, he caus'd two Lords and divers others to be put to death: One was the Lord Leonard Gray, who having been (the Year precedent) recall'd from his Deputy's place in Ireland, was then committed upon Suggestions ministred by the Council there, with whom (I find by our Records) he often wrangled; who furnish'd therefore divers Articles of High-Treason against him: So that though he had (the Year 1539) repulfed O Donel and O Neal (who invaded the English Pale) and render'd the King divers good Services hererofore in France, Ir.land, and other places, he could not escape. The chief Points objected against him (extant in our Records) were, his readiness to join with Cardinal Pool, and other the King's Enemies, he having for that purpose (as was alledg'd) left the King's Ordnance in Galoway; and that he conferred to the escape of his Nephew Gerald, formerly mention'd; which, with divers others, to the number of twenty (if Hall fay true) being brought to a Jury of Knights, Hall fends an Am baffador to the June.

Gg2

July 7.

July 28.

F 530

Sept. 16

Sept 20. Council

Buch Ligh.

meet K

Himy at

Ргератаtions for War

1541. judged by his Peers) he faved them the labour | fres Katharine Howard, Daughter to the late Lord 1541. Learn of great Courage) did out of Desperation or Guilt, some Circumstances make doubtful: And Jeans Guilt, Iome Greumitances make doubtful: And and Lord the rather, that the Articles being fo many, he ceuted.

neither deny'd, nor extenuated any of them; though his continual fighting with the King's Enemies (where occasion was) pleaded much on his part : Howfoever, he had his Head cut off. The other was a young Lord, Thomas Fines Lord Dueres of the South, who fuffer'd for committing a Murther in company of fome light Persons Tone 20 (who were with him a Deer-stealing.) All things being now ready for the intended Journey, the King, accompany'd with his Queen, passed thro' Angust.

Lincolnshire, where the People (thankfully acknowledging their late Pardon) presented him with divers Sums of Money; which the Yorkshire Men also imitated. And now being come to Tork, he caused Proclamation to be made (as I find in our Records) that if any Man in those Parts found himself wronged for lack of Justice, or otherwise, by any whom his Majesty hath put in trust, or other, he shall have free access to the King and his Council for Redress. After this, News was brought him that his Nephew King Fames would not meet : So that although our King had made great Preparations to receive Scorr King him, all was frustrated. This fill'd the King with refules to Indignation; yet he conceal'd it for the prefent, though resolving in himself to resent it in the highest degree. Therefore departing from York, September 26, towards London, he was on the way encounter'd by the Ambassador of Portugal, de-Oa. 14. firing a License for the Transportation of Wheat into that Country, being in great need thereof. To which was answer'd, That if that King would admit in his next Navigation to Calicut, fome Englishmen of our King's appoinment to adventure there for providing this Realm with Spices, he should have his Request. But of this, although the faid Ambaffador undertook to write to his Mafter, I find no further mention. Our King Decemb.

being now return'd, prepar'd for War. Which fames hearing, sent Ambassadors hither to excuse himfelf, and renew their former Correspondence, with Scorwhich King Henry refusing, James also levies Men, (as shall be told the Year following.)

But our King encounter'd after this Journey a greater Vexation; for the Queen was fuppos'd to offend in Incontinency; fome Particulars whereof being extant in our Records, I have thought fit to transferibe, rather than to make other Narration; the Family of which she came being fo Noble and Illustrious, and the Honour of her Sex (which is tender) being concern'd

The Letter fent from divers of the Council to William Paget, our Ambassador then in France, was

A Letter from the Lords of the Council to the tend

After our hearty Commendations, by these our Letters, we be commanded to fignify unto you, a most miserable case, which came lately to Revelation, to the intent that if you shall bear the same spoken of, you may declare the Truth as followeth:

Amballa-Where the King's Mijesty upon the Sentence given of Amonia: If there is a King's Misjely upon two Semence grown of don't ale a top be breathisty of the presended Matrimony between his ric coin:

Highness and the Lady Anne of Cleve, was earnefly K. Howards and humbly solicited by his Council, and the Nobles of and humbly folicited by his Council, and the Nobles of this Realm, to frame his most noble Heart to the Love and Favour of some noble Personage to be join'd with him in lawful Matrimony, by subom his Majesty might have some more store of Fruit, and Succession to the comfort of this Realm; it pleased his Hybness upon a notable apparence of Honour, Cleanness and maidenly Behaviour, to bend his Assection towards Mi-

Edmond Howard, Brother to me the Duke of Nor-Editional Howard, Brother to me the Duck of Non-folk, infomuch as bit Highnef; was finally contented to bonour her with his Marriages, thinking now in his old days, after fundry Troubles of Mind, which have ha-pend unto him by Marriages, to have obtain'd such a Jewel for Womanhood, and very perfect Love towards him, as should not only have been to his Quietness, but also brought forth the desir'd Fruit of Marriage, like as the whole Realm thought the semblable, and in reis the whole Keam Dough is be femourate, and in its fact of the Virtue and good Behaviour which she show the outwardly, did her all Honour accordingly. But this fay is turn'd into extream Sorrow; for when the King's Majesty receiving his Maker on Athallows day last palf, then gave him most humble and hearty Thanks, for the good life he led and trusted to lead with her, and also desired the Bishop of Lincoln, his Ghostly Father, to make like Prayer, and give like Thanks with him; on All-Souls Day being at Mass, the Archbishop of Canterbury having a little before heard, that the ame Mistress Katharine Howard was not indeed a Woman of that Pureness and Cleanness that she was esteem'd; but a Woman, who before she was joined with the King's Majesty, had liv'd most corruptly and enfuelly; for the discharge of his Duty open'd the same must forcoufully to his Majesty, and how it was brought to his knowledge, which was in this form following. While the King's Majesty was in his Progress, one John Loffels came to the faid Archbishop of Canterbury, and declar'd unto him, that he had been with a Sifter of his married in Suffex, which sometimes had been Servant with the old Dutchess of Norfolk, who did also bring up the said Mistress Katharine, and being with be faid Sifter, chanced to fall in communica-tion with her of the Queen, wherein he advised her (because she was of the Queen's old Acquaintance) to ue to be her Woman; whereunto his Sifter answer'd, that the awould not fo do; but the was very forey for the Queen; Why, quoth Lossels? Marry, quoth the, for the is light both in living and Condition: How fo, quoth Lossels? Marry, quoth she, there is one Francis Derrham, who was Servant also in my Lady of Norfolk's House, which hath lien in bed with her m his Doublet and Hose between the Sheets an hundred Nights. And there hath been such puffing and blowing between them, that once in the House a Maid which lay in the House with her, said to me, She would lie no longer with her, because she knew not what Matrimony meant. And further she said unto him, that one Mannock, sometimes also Servant to the said Dutchess, knew a privy Mark of her Body. When the said Lossels had declared this to the said Archbishop of Canterbury, he considering the weight and importance of the matter, being marvelloufly perplex'd therewith, consulted in the fame with the Lord Chancellor of England, and the Earl of Hertford, whom the King's Majesty going in his Progress left to reside at London, Majelfy going in his Progress left to reside at London, to the distribution of the matter, and deeply ponder'd the Gravity thereof, wherewith they were greatly troubled, and unquieted, resolved finally, that the said Archbishop should reveal the same to the King's Majelfy; which because the matter was such as the hath sorrowfully limented, and also could not find in his heart to express the same to the King's Majelfy by word of mouths, he declar'd the Information thereof to his Highness in Writing. When the King's Majelfy but read this Information thus deliver'd unto him, his Grace being much pervelved thereliver'd unto him, his Grace being much perplex'd therewith, yet nevertheless so tenderly loved the Woman, and had conceiv'd such a constant Opinion of her Honesty, that he supposed it rather to be a forged matter, than of Truth. Whereupon it pleas'd him secretly to call unto him the Lord Privy Seal, the Lord Admiral, Sir Attthony Brown, and Sir Thomas Wriothesly, to whom he open'd the case, saying, He could not believe it to be true: And yet seeing the Information was made, he could not be satisfy'd till the Certainty thereof was known; but he would not in any wife, that in the Inquisition any spark of Scandal should rife towards her. Whereupon it was by his Majesty resolved, that the Lard Privy Seal should go strait to London, where the said to still the same the forms. Privy Seal house go frait to LOMOM, where the line Loffles that gave the Information was ferretly kept, and with all dexterity to examine and try whether he would fland to his Saying: Who being so examind, answerd, That his Sister so told him, and that he had declard it for the discharge of his Duty, and for none other respect; adding that he knew what danger was the respective to the same whose danger was in it; nevertheless, he had rather die in declaration of in it; nevertheless, he had rather die in declaration of the Truth, as it came to him, seeing it touch'd the King's Mariesty so nearly, than live with the Concealment of the same: Which Assertation being thus made by the said Lossels, the King's Mariesty being inform'd thereof, sent the Lord Privy-Seal into Sussex, to examine the Woman, making a Pretence to the Womans Husband of Hunting, and to her for receiving of Hunters; and sent she said Sir Thomas Wriothelly to London at the same instant, both to examine Mannock, and also to take the said Dertham upon a Preture of Prayer, hereass he had been before in Ireland. tence of Pyracy, because he had been before in Ireland, and hath been noted before with that Offence; making these Pretences to the intent no spark of suspicion should rise of these Examinations. The said Lord Privy Seal found the Woman in her Examination constant in her former Sayings: And Sir Thomas Wriothelly found jumer saying: And Sir Indinas who the ly found by the Confellin of Mannock, that he had commonly n's d to feel the Secrets and other Parts of her Body, ere ever Dertham was fo familiar with her; and Dertham confess d that he had known her carnally many times, both in his Doublet and his Hose between the Sheets, and in naked Bed, alledging such Witnesses of three sundry Women one after another, that had lien in the same Bed with them when he did the Acts, that the matter seem'd most apparent. But what inward Sorrow the King's Majelly took when he perceiv'd the Information true, as it was the most worst withing that ever came to our bearts, to fee it; so it were too tedious to write it unto you. But his Heart was so piered with Pensevens, that long it was before his Majely could speak, and utter the Sorrow of his Heart unto us: And finally with plenty of Tears (which was strange in his Courage) opend the since. Which done, she was spoken withal in it by the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Lord Chancellor, the Duke of Norfolk, the Lord Great Chamberlain of England, and the Bishop of Winchester; to whom at the sirll he constantly deny'd it; but the matter being so dera'd unto her, that she perceived it to be wholly disclosed, the same myth she disclosed the wholes to the same in Writing subscribed with her hand! Then inward Sorrow the King's Majesty took when he per-Arterishing of Cattletour, two two the Conjugatory of the fame in Writing subscribed with her hand: Then were the rest of the number, being eight or nine M.n and Women which knew of their doings, examin'd, who all agreed in one tale.

Now may you see what was done before the Mar-riage; God knoweth what hath heen done sithence: But she had already gotten this Derrham into her Service, and trained him upon occasions, as sending of Errands, and writing of Letters when her Secretary was the way, to come often into her Privy Chamber. and she had gotten also into her Privy Chamber to be one of her Chamberors, one of the Women which had before lien in the Bed with her and Dertham: What this pretended is easy to be conjectur'd. Thus much we know for the beginning; whereof we thought meet to advertife you, to the intent afore specify d: And what shall further succeed and follow of this mat-ter, we shall not fail to advertife you thereof accordingly.

You shall also receive herein inclosed a Packet of Letters, directed unto Sir Henry Knevet, his Graces Ambassador with the Emperor, which his Highness's Plea-fure is you shall see convey'd unto him by the next Post that passets from thence into the Emperor's Court. Thus fare you right heartily well.

1541. From the King's Palace at Westminster the twelfth of November. Herewere

Your loving Friends.

Thomas Audely, Chancellor. E. Hertford. William Southampton. Robert Suffex. Stephen Winton. Anthony Wingfield.

Names which are now de-fac'd in the Original; but D Norfolk may by tents of the Letter

Besides the Persons specify'd in this Letter, one posedone Thomas Culpeper (being of the same Name with the Queen's Mother) was indicted for the same Fault (as our Histories have it,) which he and Derrham at their Arraignment confessing, Culpeper had his Head cut off, and Derrham was hang'd Nov. 31. and quarter'd. But it rested not here; for the Dec. 12 Lord William Howard (the Queen's Uncle, newly return'd from an Ambassage in France) and his Dec. 7. Wise, and the old Dutches of Norfolk, and divers of the Queen's and the faid Dutchess's Kindred and Servants, and a Butter-wife, were in- Dec. 10. dicted of Misprision of Treason (as concealing this Fact,) and condemn'd to perpetual Prilin; though yet by the King's Favour fome of them at length were releafed. The King yet not fa- Dec. 22, risfy'd thus, for more authoriting his Proceeding, referr'd the Business to the Parliament fitting the fixteenth of January, 1541. Where upon Peti-Jan. 16. tion of both Houles, that he would not vex himself, but give his Royal Assent to what they should do, they had leave to proceed, and toge- Regn. 33. ther Thanks given them that they took his Sorrow to be theirs. Hereupon they attainted the Kath He-Queen and the Lady fane Reclifors, as also Call ward are peper, Derrham, &c. And so the Queen and Latinted dy fane Reclifors (Wife to the late Lord Reclifors), headed, and noted to be a particular Instrument in the with death of Queen Anne) were brought to the Tower, others, and after consession of their Faults, had their Feb. 13. Heads cut off.

An Act also pass'd, declaring that it shall be Hall lawful for any of the King's Subjects, if themfelves do perfectly know, or by vehement Pre-fumption do perceive any Will, Act or Condition of Lightness of Body in her which shall be the Queen of this Realm, to disclose the same to the King, or some of his Council; but they shall not openly blow it abroad, or whisper it, until it be divulg'd by the King or his Council. If the King, or any of his Succeffors shall marry a Woman which was before incontinent, if the conceal the same, it shall be High-Treason, &c. But this Act was repeal'd I Edward VI. 12. and

I Mary I.

Divers other Acts also pass'd, whereof I have thought fit to set down these: That they who under colour of a false Token or counterseit Letter got other Men's Money into their hands, should be punish'd at the Discretion of those before whom they were convicted, any way but

It was declar'd also, how many Ston'd-Horses every Man fhould keep according to his degree. But this was afterwards repeal'd; though yet of special Use in defence of the Kingdom, when due regard of the Perfons were had.

Further it was declared, who might also shoot in Guns and Crofs-bows.

Moreover, That shooting with Bow and Arrows should be used, and unlawful Games debarr'd.

The Order also for Punishment of Murder and Blood-shed in the King's Court, with all the Ceremonies thereof, was fet down; the oc-

1541. casion, it seems, being given by Sir Edmond Kne- | peror from thence sent to the Pope, desiring him June 10. for this Fault, was yet pardon'd.

The Authority of the Officers of the Court of Wards and Liveries, was fet down.

That in certain Cases there should be Tryal of Treason in any Country where the King by Commission will appoint; and this saved much Trouble and Charges: For as divers things were made Treason in this King's Time, which yet were repeal'd afterwards; fo the Lords of the Council were not only continually vexed with these businesses, but the King at great Charges in remanding the Prisoners.

That none should be Justice of Assize in his own Country.

The Court of Surveyors of the King's Lands, the Names of the Officers there, and their Authority, was fet down.

All practice of Conjuration, Witchcraft and

The Kings of England for a long time rul'd Ireland by no other Name than Lords thereof, our K. Honry himf-If King now thought fit to change the Stile, and the Stile of King honour a populous and warlike Kingdom with of Ireland, the Title of a King. Therefore in a Parliament held at this time in that Country, he gave order to be declar'd King of Ireland; which was proclaim'd here during this Parliament, and finally Jan- 29. enacted 35 Henry VIII. 3. This being notify'd to Fames, much offended him; though whether out of Emulation for his affuming the Title, or that himself had any Design on this Country (as by his laying claim to divers parts thereof, and by former Passages may be suspected) is un-Lest de Reb Gest. certain. Howbeit, understanding that Mac-Con-nel and some Scots, who held part thereof (as Lesseus hath it) were not disturbed in their Pos-Scotorum. fession, he more patiently suffer'd it. Our King feffion, he more patiently funer u.m. on the other fide, finding none contelled with him for the Sovereignty of the Island, did not be much recard their particular Right: Though yet, as there were divers Commotions about this time, he had occasion to hold a hand over the disaffected Persons: But by the Diligence of Sir Anthony Saintleger, whom the King had lately made

Tuly 7. 1540 March 28.

commit-

a Parliament Man.

red for arresting

Stow

takes to

Deputy there, all was quickly compos'd.

During this Session of Parliament some Wrong was offer'd (as our Histories say) to their ancient Privileges; a Burgess of theirs being arrested: Whereof the King understanding, not only gave way to their releasing him, but Punishment of the Offenders; infomuch, that the Sheriffs of Sheriffs of Lendon were committed to the Tower, and one Delinquent to a place call'd Little-ease, others to Newgate. By which means the King (whose Masterpiece it was to make use of his Parliaments) not only let Foreign Princes fee the good Intelligence betwixt him and his Subjects, but kept them all at his devotion: Which also he fo industriously procur'd, that rather than he would feem to require more at this time than would feem to require more at this time than they had littly given, he borrow'd divers Sums of Money of Men, above fitty Pound yearly in his Books (which he look'd on often) giving them in lieu thereof Privy Seals as Security for their repayment in two Years; by this means fuffering his Parliament rather to take notice of his Wants, than to supply them; which yet serv'd to prepare them for his next occasion. The bijb Nobility also being well inform'd of these Proceedings, and collecting thereby the Absoluteness of the King's Power every where, the Chief of them this Year fubmitted themselves, and acknowledg'd him now their King; among whom Eustace the great O Neal presented himself, and was made Earl of Tyrone.

1541. vet, who being lately condemn'd to lose his hand to permit an Interview at Lucca, which the Pope accorded; whereupon the Emperor paffing thro Milan, came by land to Genoua, and thence ta-Sand has king Water to Lucca, where the Pope now was August. And here many things were to be determin'd: For first, the Emperor (as he had engag'd him-felf to the Protestants of the last Diet) urged a Council, which the Pope thought fit to hold at Vicenza, where ir was last indicted: But the Venetians oppos'd it, as fearing left the Turk, with Cone Trid. whom they had lately made a Peace, should think it was call'd to confederate all Christian Princes against him. Thus was the Council again frustrated: Other Affairs being also interrupted by the Ambassador of Francis, who made divers In-stances, that at least the Bodies of Rincon and Fergose might be restor'd; hoping that together with the Law of Nations, they would not yet violate that of Nature, and deny them the Rights of Burial. But the Emperor still protesting himfelf to be no way conscious of this fact, omitted Answer to the rest. This while the Turk having gotten some places of Importance in Hungary, and overthrown the Army of Ferdinand (led by Roccandolph) the Pope endeavour'd a Reconciliation of all the present Differences; desiring the Emperor to give to Francis the Estate of Milan, and him to restore all he had in Piedmont to the Duke of Savoy. But the Emperor resolute not to leave of Savoy. But the Emperor resonant not be sur-Milan, broke off the Treaty; for the reft, pre-paring for an Expedition to Algier: His Fleet CharleV's confifting of 64 Gallies, 200 Ships, 100 Frigors, Expedi-tion of the Charlest Companying tion to 20000 Foot, and 2000 Horfe, besides Voluntiers Algier. and Seamen. Setting fail with these from Maorea, and other places where his Fleet attended him, he came in two days to the Coast of Algier, Octobdefended by Azan-Aga, and about 800 Turks (being Cavallery for the most part) and about 5000 Moors, Renegadoes. It was now October 22, 1541. when his Men landed without much refiftance, The first thing done was to require Azan-Aga to yield the Place, and turn Christian, as being the Son of Christian Parents, and born in Spain: But he answer'd, that he desir'd no more Honour than to comply with his Loyalty, and die by the hands of so excellent an Emperor. But as the Seafon of the Year was far advanced, foul Weather began; fo that they fought neither often, nor with much Advantage on either fide. At last, a huge Tempest arose, which finally destroy'd 150 Ships, little and great, with all that was in them, fave fome Horfes and a few Men: And now the Tempest still increasing, the Emperor, who between Noise and Danger could not fleep, demanded of some Seamen then with him, how long the rest of the Fleet might live, if the Tempest continu'd? they answer'd, At most two Hours: He demanded then, what a clock it was? they told him, Half an hour past eleven: Whereupon he faid to them, Comfort your felves; at Twelve the Friers and Nuns rife, and will pray for us. But the Tempest continu'd till far in the next Day, when the miferable Carcaffes of Ships and Men swimming in some places, and drowning in others, made an hideous spectacle; while if any got to Land, the drabs and Moors without mercy kill'd them. And now, belides the above-mention'd Ships, fourteen or fifteen Gallies were caft away; by which means notonly the Artillery and Victual fail'd, but even the His Fleet Defire to continue the Siege: For one fuch ano- ruined. ther Tempest would have destroy'd all. Yet there was much difficulty in embarking of the Soldiers, for the Ships did not fuffice to carry them: Therefore they were forc'd to cast overboard their most generous Horses, who swim-The Diet of Ratisbonne being ended, the Em- ming from one Ship to another, were drowned

Octob July 28.

1541. at last, not without much compassion of all, and especially their Masters. The rest of the Navigation homewards yet was not profeerous, many Ships perishing. At last, the Emperor came to Calari in Sardigna, where through contrary Winds, he was conftrain'd to pass his Christmas; at length fair weather appearing, he arrivd in Spain: And this was the third unfortunate Voyage to Algier, it having been twice before attempt-Fle returns unfuccessful. ed in vain.

A Rupture with Scotland being now fecretly resolv'd, our King thought fit to assure Francis. fending for this purpose to Sir William Paget his Ambaffador there, Instructions, which were chiefly to hold Francis to his Treaties of perpetual Peace. But Francis faying it was made upon certain Conditions, which were broken by our King, it was answer'd the Treaty was fans Condition, and when it were not, that he had Feb. 1540. broken none. But Francis requiring then Affiflance for Milim, as was promised, it was reply'd, that both by the Treaty laft offer'd by the Duke of Norfolk, and another formerly by Pomnersy, this was fpoken of indeed, but that there was complicated with it another Condition, that he should forfake the Bishop of Rome, which he refus'd to do; but as this was interrupted with fome wrangling, fo there was no little debate about Ships detain'd on either fide, our Officers having with-held fome, under pretence they were Pirars, and rhey again feizing on ours by way of Reprifal; fo that matters were breaking forth to an open War. Which being advertiz'd to our King, gave him little hope of Amity on that part, and confequently made him not only de-fift from a Treaty of Marriage betwixt the Duke of Orleans, and the Princess Mary, proposed for-merly by Pommeray and now renewed, but seek friends elfewhere (as will appear hereafter.) Our King refuing in the mean time to enter into League with him against the Emperor.

Though the right Line of the Plantagenets were extinct in the Countess of Salisbury, and confequently no fear of pretence to Succession, on that part, there remain'd yet a natural Son of Edward IV, call'd Sir Arthur Plantagenet (created by King Henry VIII, Viscount Liste) who came April 26. to his end on this occasion: This Lord, during his Lieutenancy in Calais, being suspected, as consenting to a practice of some of his Servants, (whereby they conspir'd to deliver that Town to the French,) was thereupon sent for, and committed to the Tower; but upon due Examinati-April 17. time, not only gave order to release him, but The Lord for his more comfort sent him a Diamond Ring, Life dies and a Gracious Message which the on his Innocency appearing, the King at this and dilated his Spirits, that the night following he dy'd. The Emperor being now in Spain, Ferdinand holds a Diet at Spire, where he requires Aid against the Turk; whereof Francis being advertis'd, fends Francis Oliver thither with charge to represent, First the Assassinate of Rincon and Free, pretending it to be the more heinous, in that Rincons Imployment was to hinder the Turk from invading Hungary. Secondly, to diffuade them from taking Arms against the Turks, till their own differences were compos'd. Laftly, to represent both the levity of the Hungarians, and their disaffection to the German Nation: And therefore, that they should fortifie their strong places betwixt Austria and Hungary, and the other Confines, without taking much regard to ther confines, without taking intent regard to and Longuevine being about this was floudy dether the reft. As for Pacification in Religion, that Men, befieged Antwerp; but it was floudy dethey should conform themselves on all lides to the fended not only by the Natives, but by foreign Confession of our Faith, left us by the Niene Merchants, and particularly the English; where-not agree in them, they should not yet be occafion of hate or division. But the wifer fort, who believ'd that Rincon's Dispatches (when they were to be feen) would have told another tale, did not much believe the first part of his Speech: As for the fecond, fince it tended only to give Hungary into the Turks hands, they rejected it wholly: And for the last, they regarded it little (though a wife and charitable advice) as being resolved already of their Religion. After him, the Bi-March 23. shop of Modena, the Popes Legate, tells them that the Pope desir'd Peace in Christendom, and provision for Wars against the Turk. As for the Council which had been suspended hitherto by the Emperors confent to try if a Concord might, the while, be wrought in Germany, that it was reason to call it. Only that Germany could be no fit place for holding thereof, fince his Holinefs resolving to be present, could not indure so long a Journey; or fuch a change of Air, befides, he fear'd it would be turbulent. Nevertheless, for A Council fatisfying them, he was content the same should design to be affembled at Trent, (that is to say) in the meet at Borders of Germany. Ferdinand and the Catholicks accept this place with thanks, (when it might not be held at Rottishome or Colen.) But the Protestants wholly dislik'd it. And now the French Ambassadors finding themselves but slighted, go thence discontented. And so the Dier brake up (after War had been decreed against the Turk, and Peace establish'd in the Empire.) And May 22. the Council was indicted to begin April 13. in November following. Francis being now inform'd by his Ambassahis Advice, that they thought him to be a perturber of the Peace of Christendom, is not yet discourag'd. Therefore, after a Procession made Francis in Paris for fuccefs in his War, and a Prefent fenderich fent to the Turk of fix hundred Marks of Silver Perfents curiously wrought, and five hundred Vestments Turk. for those that attended him, together with a request that he would fend his Fleet against the Emperor, and a publick defiance fent to Charles, he invades his Territories in five feveral places; Julyagainst them in Brahant he imploys the Duke of His great Longueville, who was to joyn with Mirtin Rosson, preparatipart: Against Artois the Duke of Vendosme: A-peror. gainst Luxemburgh the Duke of Orleans: In Piedmont Monsieur du Bellay his Lieutenant there: And against Perpignan (the chief Town of Rouffil-lon, and the Barrier of Spain to the Southward)

the Daulphin, promifing to fecond him in Per-

He began first in Piedmont, as being the immediate way to his defir'd Milan : In which he held thefe places, Turino, Montealier, Savillan, Montdevis, Pignarola, &c. For the Emperor stood, Ali, Vercelli, Ulpian, Fossan, Quierosco, and Albi; a-mong which Quierosco was first attempted and yielded: Vendosme in Artois taking and razing Tourneham: The Duke of Orleans (affisted with five hundred Horse from Christiern the third King of Denmark) took Luxemburgh and other places; which yet René Prince of Orance and Count of Naffaw recover'd fhortly after. Nevertheless, Roffen deceiv'd him with a plain Trick: For Neverthelefs, commanding his Infantry to lie flat in a Champian Field behind his Cavalry, the Prince of O-range who did not imagine he was so strong, churg'd him; but the Foot rising, they and their Horse together deseated him. Whereupon Rosien Horse together defeated him. and Longueville being about thirty five thousand Council. And for other points, if they could upon, Roffen raising Siege, and going to Lovain, dors that the Germans were fo far from receiving

March 3 Feb.

1536.

March.

1523.

1541. demands of them Money, Victuals, Artillery and Reign of Henry the Sixth: Which he prov'd First, demands of them Money, Victuals, Artillery and, Ammunicion; which they of Lovain accorded in part, communition; which they of Lovain accorded in part, communiting thereupon fome Wine to be carried in Carts to the Gate. But the Scholars, unwilling both to let it go, and fufpecting benices that when the Gates were fo embarrafsd, the Enemy behind the Hoghead might get into the Town, cut off the Harness from the Horfes, and went to the Artillery planted upon the Wall, and difcharg di tupon the Enemy: Whereupon and difcharg di tupon the Enemy to the transfer of the tra Roffen departing, spoil'd the Country round a-This while, the Daulphin brought an Army of forty thousand Men, whereof fourteen thousand Switz, and four thousand Horse to Per-pignan, which he besseg'd, hoping Barbarossa and the Turkill Fleet would fecond him, according to his request by Polin, whom Francis employ'd in those parts. But the Town being bravely defended, and the Emperor befides preparing to relieve it, he rais'd the Siege, and the rather that Winter was now coming on. This while, the Emperor omitted not to complain to the Pope of Francis, protesting, that he both difturb d the Peace of Christendom and the Council, and hindred him from opposing the Turk. Where-upon, the Pope desiring to reconcile them, the Emperor answer'd, It was in vain to make Treaties with those who did hold none; desiring him therefore rather to take Arms against him, as a Confederate with the common Enemy of Chriflendom.

Decemb.

The excuse from James, formerly mentioned, being not held fatisfactory, our King prepares for War; nevertheless, he thought not fit to difcover himfelf, but as late as he could. fore upon James's request, he appoints Commisioners to examine businesses betwix them, not omitting yet to levy Men; of which fames being advertis'd, rais'd Forces likewise (as is before fet down.) During this Treaty, fome Inroads being made into Scotland, and Ports attempted, I find by Leflers twenty-eight Scatish Ships were taken. Whereupon, the Scats en-tring the English Marches, Sir Robert Bowes (who Aug- : 4. Ships were taken. refifted them) with divers others were taken Prifoners; without being permitted yet to ranfom themselves. Hereupon the Duke of Norfolk with the Kings Army march'd forward, but upon a fecond motion of Peace flays at Tork: And together with the Earl of Southampton, Bishop of Durham, and Sir Anthony Brown, treats with certain Scotish Commissioners, who having variety of Instructions, (which they shew'd one after another and finally proposing an Interview, were thought to be fent thither only to gain time, Winter now coming on, and the French King having fo much to do at home, as is before related. So that the King commanded the Duke with Scotof Norfolk to proceed, and together published a Declaration of the causes of this War. Which being extant in our Records, and set forth at large by Hall, I shall not need to infert here, though yet for satisfaction of the Reader, I shall extract some particularities from thence.

The chief causes I conceive, were, that James entertain'd some of the chief Rebels of the North. That he denied fome grounds, (though of very finall value) for which good Evidences were pro-That he frustrated our King, after a promife of an Interview. That his Subjects made an Inroad while the Treaty was on foot. Befides all which, King Henry claim'd Homage and Fealty, as due to him out of an ancient Title to that Crown; the demand whereof he faid he had neglected a great while, because of his Nephews Minority, and other kind Reafons, his Title being by lineal Succeffion, and recogniz'd for many Ages by the Kings of Scotland, to the Dominion. Athelftane made one Constantine King thereof. Eldred took Homage of bife [or Ericus] King of Scots, and Edgar of Kindld (or Kenneth.) That this was interrupted yet in Edward King and Marty his time. But Malcolm did Homage to Knute, and Edward the Confessor making War against Malcolm, overthrew him, and gave his Kingdom to Malcolm his Son, who made him Homage and Fealty; that Malcolm did Homage to William the Conqueror, and after him to William Rufus, but failing in his Duty, was depofed; and Edgar Brother to the last Malcolm, and Son to the first, ordain'd in that Estate, who did bis Homage and Fealty accordingly. This Edhis Homage and Fealty accordingly. gar did Homage to Henry the First, David did Homage to Matild the Empress, but refus'd it to Stephen, as having done it to Matild; but after his Death, David's Son made his Homage to Stephen. William King of Scots, and David his Brother, with all the chief Nobles of Scotland, made Homage to Henry the Second, his Son, with refervation of their Duty to his Father. This William after much Rebellion and Refistance, during the absence of Henry the Second, made his Peace and Composition with his Homage and Fealty; he also came to Canterbury, and there did Homage to Richard the First. William did Homage to John, on a Hill befide Lin-coln, and made his Oath upon the Crofs of Hubert, then Archbishop of Canterbury. Alexander King of Scots married the Daughter of Henry III. and did his Homage at Tork. Alexander came to the Coronation of Edward I. and did his Duty: John Baliol made Homage and Fealty to Edward

I. Robert Bruce made War against the Baliols, which interrupted the butiness of forty four years. But afterwards Edward Baliol prevailing, made Homage to Edward III. After this, David Bruce, though on the contrary Faction, made Homage to Edward III. Edward Baliol, who had the clear Title, furrendred the Crown to Edward III, at Roxenburgh, who thereupon caus'd himfelf to be Crown'd, and for a time entertain'd and enjoyed it as Proprietary and Owner of the Crown, both by confifcation and voluntary Surrender. In Richard II, and Henry IV. their times, fome interruption happen'd by reason of inward diffentions in this Kingdom; yet Henry V. commanded the Scots to attend him in his Journey to France. And in this time the Realm of Scotland being descended on the Stuarts, James Stuart King of Scots, made Homage to King Henry VI. at Windfor. All which Homages (though interrupted fometimes for more than fixty years) were yet within the memory of Man. Of which therefore, Instruments made and fealed with the Seals of the Kings of Scotland remain; fo that it was not for the Earldom of Huntingdon (as the Scots pretend) but for the Kingdom of Scotland, As for Records and Registers, that he had divers which were Authentical, and among others that of Edward I, in diffcuffion of the Title of Scotland, then challeng'd by twelve Competitors. And that Sentence was given for Balial, who accordingly injoy'd the Realm. That in a Parliament following, they did agree to the Superiority of the King of England, and enfuing their Determination, did particularly, and feverally

A War

Ochob zz.

1541. make Homage and Fealty with Proclamation, tenant General, accompanied with the Earls of 1541. that whosoever withdrew himself from doing Shrewsbury, Darby, Cumberland, Surrey, Hersford, his Duty therein, should be reputed as a Rebel; and fo all made Homage and Fealty to Edward I. That during this discussion, the Realm was rul'd by Guardians deputed by him, and all Castles and Holds furrendred to him as to the Superior Lord. And in the time of Vacation, Benefices, Offices, Fees, Promotions, passed as in the right of this Crown of England; Sheriffs also named and appointed, Writs and Precepts made, obey'd and executed. And that at this time, the Bishops of St. Andrews and Glasco were not Archbishops, but recognized the Archbishop of Tork, whose Authority extended over all their Coun-That fithence the time of Henry VI. this Kingdom was lacerated and torn by diversity of Titles till his time. So that though Edward IV. after great Travels, having attain d quietness in this Realm, finally made preparation of War againft Scotland, yet he was prevented by Death. As for Richard III. that he usury'd the Kingdom till Henry VII. his Father overthrew him, (which Henry VII. by reafon of his Effate not fully fet-led at home, forbare to compel the Scots to do their Duty.) And for his own time, that twenty-one years past of it in his Nephews Minority, when he had more care to bring him out of danger to the place of a King, than to re-ceive of him Homage when he had full possession of the same.

The conclusion of this Declaration yet seem'd to be ambiguous; as not pretending directly to infift upon the Claim, though he faith, that fuch be the works of God Superiour over all, to fuffer occasions to be ministred, whereby due Superiority may be known, demanded, and required.

How the evade it.

Leftens

Sleid.

August

The Scetish Writers tell the business otherwise : Sooren- Not denying yet but Athelftane was King of the deavour to whole Island by the testimony of divers of our Britain Writers. Nevertheless, that their words were fo to be understood, as the further parts of Scotland were not comprehended therein. for the Homage done, that it was for the Earldom of Huntingdon (though as there was no Investure thereof in the King of Scots, till the time of our Henry I. when David married the Daughter and Heir of the Earl of Huntingdon and Northumberland, it reaches not to Homages formerly made.) Again, among those who did Homage, fome were reputed Kings of Northumberland, rather than Scotland. And for Baliol's refigning the Crown, they fay, the Nobles did not confent to it: And many other things, which for avoiding prolixity, I omit; defiring the Reader to believe, that I am fo far from undertaking to define the Point, as (in an Hiftorical way) I have only produc'd fuch Notes as my leifure would fuffer me to gather at this time: Profeffing, for the reft, that I should not in any wife have intermedled therewith, but that Hall by ferring fouth the Declaration, gave the occasion.

These proceedings from time to time being advertis'd to Francis, caus'd him to fend Monfieur de Morvilliers to congratulate the constancy Fames in refusing an Interview, which he attributed to his resolution not to forfake the Roman Church: Advising him for the reft, to stand upon his Guard; and for that purpose, sending him Money and Artillery.

And now the Army being ready to march on, William Fitz-Williams, Earl of Southampton, Captain of the Foreward, died at New-Cafile; a honour of his Memory, his Standard was born given much in his youth to the love of Women, in the Foreward in all this Expedition. The year to which his Governors gave way, thinking thus being far spent, the Duke of Norfolk Lieu- thereby to rule him the longer. This hindered Vol. II. Hh Shrewsbury, Darby, Cumberland, Surrey, Hertford, Rutland, and other Lords of the Northern parts; Rutiand, and other Lords of the Kings Horfe, and Sir Anthony Brown, Mafter of the Kings Horfe, and Sir John Gage Comptroller of his Houle, and above twenty thousand Men (the Earl of Anguir and the Comptroller of the Comptroller of Lords and Comptroller of the Odober, and finding no refiftance, burnt in eight Odob. 2th days above twenty Villages and Towns: Whereupon the Bishop of Orkney, and James Leirmouth came on their Kings part to require Peace; but the Conditions not pleafing, the Treaty was dif-folv'd. Nevertheless, our Army retreated pro-Burrehra fently to Bermick, as being betwixt the rigour of without the feafon and want of Victuals, confirmin'd Astron. thereunto. So that though Lefleus faith, the Eng-lish retir'd upon hearing that the South Army approach'd; this yet by others is thought improbable, because they invaded not England till three weeks after the Duke of Norfolk was at Berwick, and had licens'd many of his Soldiers. About Nov. 2. which time therefore the Scotife Army being af Sout Army fembled, they entred England on the Weit Mar-vade Ln, ches with an Army of fifteen thousand, or (as land fome fay) a greater number. But Thomas the Baftard Ducres and Mulgrave, having first sene to Sir Thomas Wharton, Warden of the Marches, to come to their Aid, and then leaving a Stale or Ambush on a Hill side, came forwards with an hundred light Horse, which being charg'd by fome of the Scots, retir'd towards their Stale, and to Wharton now appearing, who had not yet above three hundred Men (as our Writers fay.) But what soever the Stratagem was, the Scots be- Sir Thomas lieving (it feems) the Duke of Norfolk was there Whaten with all his power, fuddenly, as Men amaz'd, Menrouts fled. The Englip-men purfu'd, and took the them. Earls of Casselles and Glencarne, the Lord Maxwel Admiral of Scotland, the Lord Fleming, the Lord Somervel, the Lord Oliphant, Lord Gray, and Sir Oliver Sinclere, the Kings Minion (as our Hifto- Hall. rians term him,) and divers others of note, to the number of two hundred and above, eight hundred of the meaner fort (fo that fome had two or three Prifoners,) and twenty-four pieces of Ordnance, with much Arms and Baggage.

The Scotish Writers tell the business a little o- Legions. therwise; confessing yet the foresaid Prisoners to be taken, and that their Men ran away, and were defeated. But some fay, the reason of it, was, that Sir Oliver Simlere being fuddenly declar'd their General, when the English appear'd, the Nobles took it so ill, that they car'd not to fight. They fay also, that the King was at Solway (where this encounter hap'ned) a tittle before, and no further off than Emlawroch, when the blow was given; which perhaps, made fome Hall think that he was prefent at the Fight, and received a wound, of which prefently after he died, and not of Sorrow.

and not of Gardon.

Gardon being now return'd, had in recompence Dec. 1.

of Ms Misfortunes, a Daughter born, afterward The Sari call'd Mary; which yet, together with the many of guet. Divertisements his Servants gave, could not keep him from a deep Melancholy, which was aug-mented also (as the Scottish and our Writers say) Los. Stew. by the sudden Murder of an English Herald, Had. whom our King fent thither to ranfom Prifoners (though yet none of his Subjects, but Leech a Lincolnshire Rebel, kill'd him:) All which made that impression in him, that he died within few days after, and was buried near his first Wife tain of the Foreward, died at New-Castle; a Magdalene, in the Abby of Holy-Rood. He was of Dec. 14. brave Lord, and so much effecting, that for the a middle Stature, yet well compact and ftrong,

Dec. 4.

1541. him not yet to be active in all State Affairs, and frugal in his own; qualities rarely found in Prin-His Cha. ces fo much addicted to their Pleafure. No Man endur'd Labour, Cold, Hunger better (as his many Expeditions in Person against Rebels, fhew'd.) Under pretence of favouring the poorer fort, he was noted to be fevere to his Nobility, which made them less ready when he had occasion to use them. Infomuch, that (as Buchange bath it) he could not perfuade them to come to Battel with the Duke of Norfolk.

The Murder of our English Herald being related to our King, mightily incens'd him: And therefore he not only requir'd Leech, (who yet was not demanded till after the death of king James, nor executed till May following;) but fent to his Ambassador Paget in France, both to acquaint Francis therewith, (whom he lately knew had fuffer'd in the like kind,) and to defire him not to affift James. But the answer hereunto was cold, as will appear hereafter.

The news of the Kings Death, and the Princess Birth being brought to our King, awakened in him new Counsels: So that instead of pursuing War against Scotland, he began to think how he might recover the young Daughter thence, Dec 26. and match his Son Edward to her. To which also he was so intentive, that he fent a Dispatch to his Ambassador Paget, commanding him carefully to observe what past betwixt France and Scotland, as being jealous left Francis should get or detain her from him. And there was reason to fear it, Francis having by the intervention of the Queen and Cardinal Betan, a great Party there. Nevertheles, as our King knew how much it concern'd either Nation, that all causes of Hostility should be taken away, and both Kingdoms united: So he doubted not but many, especially the wifer fort, would concur with him.

And now in Scotland two Factions were eminent : One that of the Queen, feconded by Cardinal Beton, who (as the Scottish Writers fay) forg'd a Will, by which himself, affisted with three of the most powerful Nobility, should govern the State, and with him all the French Faction joyn'd. James Hamilton, Earl of Arran, chief of the other fide (though observ'd to be a lover of quiet) was yet encouraged by his followers to affume that Dignity; as being fo near of Blood, and the Princels fo young, that many occasions might happen, whereof he might prevail himself: Which reasons also inclin'd him to depend on our King.

While these things past in Scotland, the Prisoners taken in the last Battle, were by Sir Honry Savil and Sir Thomas Wentworth, conducted from Dec. 15.

Tork to London, whither they came Decemb. 19.

Stow. wearing every one (as our ving had appointed) for a cognizance, a red St. Analogy Cross, and were presently sent to the Tower, we-nee shortly after King Heavy for more offertable, see ly after King Henry for more oftentation com-manded Sir John Gage, Comptroller of his Hoofhold, to bring them by two and two together in new Gowns of black Damask, and other Apparel fuitable (all at his coft) from the Tower to the Star-Chamber, where Thomas Lord Audeley, the Lord Chancellor, was to tell them, what cause King Henry had of War against them, both for denying their Homage, and invading his Realm without Defiance, and keeping his Sub-jects without fuffering them to make Ransom, contrary to the Laws of the Marches. Neverthelefs, that fuch was his Benignity, that he would shew them kindness for unkindness, and but brought to divers Noble Houses, there to be 1541. be regal and made much of. Thus the Arch-The sear, bishop of Canterbury had the Earl of Caselles com-Lordsta. biling of Canterwary had the Earl of Capillets com-Lords in mended to him; the Duke of Norfolk, the Earl ken heely of Glencarne; Sir Anthony Brown, the Lord Max-Priliners well; the Lord Chancellor; the Lord Sumerwell; commits Sir Thomas Lee, the Lord Oliphan; the Duke of ted to Gusuffolk, Sir Oliver Sinclere; Thomas Thurleby (lately and effect Bilhop of Westminstern Robert Erikin; Dec.1540, and many others, were with divers of our chief Nobility, where having past some time with as much contentment as the news of their Kings Death (now brought) permitted, they forgot not to express how glad they would be that a Match might fucceed betwixt our Prince and their Princefs, promiting also their furtherance therein; which being related to our King, was taken so Dec. 26. well, as they were not only dismiss d upon Hoflages to be given for their return (when they were not able to effect this Match,) but richly rewarded. After which, again, being feafted, they kept their Journey towards Scotland, till they came to the Duke of Suffolk (the Kings Lieutenant in the Northern parts) being then at Newcaftle, where their Hostages being receiv'd, they had Licence to go home; and with them also went the Earl of Anguis, and his Brother Sir George Dowglaffe, (now fifteen years absent from their Country) who, during their long flay in these parts had a liberal Pension bestowd on them by our King; for which also they promis'd their best affishance on all Occasions. Cardinal Beton, who this while (by pretext of his counterfeit Will) had made himfelf Viceroy, was now (upon detection of the Forgery) depos'd, and fames Hamilton, Earl of Arran, cho-fen in his place: A Nobleman follow'd by many, Buchan. both for his nearness of blood to the Crown. and that the Cardinals cruelty and ambition had made him fo hated. Besides, there was found after the Kings death certain Papers, in which the names of above three hundred of the principal Nobility and Gentry (and among them James Hamilton) were accus'd as Criminals: And this again made them more confident of his Protection. Moreover, he was noted willing to inform himself in the Controversies of Religion, and gave hope of a mild and temperate Disposition. is first publick Action was the convoking of a Parliament in March following; whereof our March. King being advertis'd, fent Sir Ralph Sadler (his King being advertis'd, fent Sir Ralph Sadler (his secretary) thither, to procure the Marriage formal merly mentioned, and a perpetual Peace: Svarith Ambaffadors being alfo deputed to treat therefore with our King. What Sir Ralph Sadler's first Prince Instructions were, appears not by our Records. Edward more than is formerly related out of the Scottish word of Scott. Writers: But by a subsequent dispatch, dated of Scott. Mary 6. If find that our King, in reward of some May 6. business that the Viceroy should effect, had promised his Daughter the Lady Elizabeth in Marriage to this Son - And because our King rassing. age to his con. And because our King passionately desir'd to have the young Princes into his hands, both that he intended to marry her to his Son Prince Edward, and that he feard the French would prevent him, I nothing doubt but this was the affair intimated betwixt them. Our April, Records also tell us, that George Douglasse, and the other Lords who were sent home, excused themselves at first, as neither knowing what they did, nor able to perform their Promi-fes; fo that though they had undertaken to procure the Marriage, and to get fome Holds into their hands, where they might with more advantage fet forth our Kings purpofes, Recards Fight for wrong: And thereupon (after their promife to remain true Prifoners) commanded that they should be no more return'd to Prifon, Difposition, and that the French Party was so

Vav.

Anonft

Inne 20

riage.

Buchanan.

April 14. being unwilling to admit other Governour than the Earl of Arrain, during the Queens Minority, or to deliver the Holds of Scotland, till she had Issue by Prince Edward, or to put her into our Kings cuftody, with some other Demands which were distasted by them, it was thought fit to fend the Earl of Glencarne and Sir George Dowglasse; who, I find, seconded the overture of the Contract of Marriage and perpetual Peace (which the first made) in more plausible terms: Yet not so, but that Sir George Dowglasse was difpatch'd Poit to Scotland to bring a more fatif-factory Answer; which was obtain'd: Infomuch, that a Treaty for Marriage fign'd and feal'd, was brought back by those Scottish Ambassadors in August, 1543. (as Lesleus hath it.) And because I find among our Records this following Treaty [Lib.Conc.] of June 29. I shall enquire for no other. First, That the Lord's of Scotland shall have the the Mar- Education of the Princess for a time: Yet so as it might be lawful for our King to send thither a Nobleman and his Wife with a Family, under twenty Persons to wait on ber.

That at ten years of Age she should be brought into England, the Contract being first sinished by a Proxy in Scotland.

That within two Months after the date hereef, fix Noble Scots should be given as Hostages for the per-formance of the foresaid Conditions on their part: And that if any of them died, the number of them should be Supplied.

Furthermore, it was agreed that the Realm of Scotland (by that name) flouid preferve its Laws and Rights: And that Peace should be made for as long time as was desir'd, the French being excluded.

Nevertheless, the Queen, Cardinal, and all the Clergy oppos'd this Treaty, and the Cardinal fo particularly, that he was remov'd to a Chamber apart, or (as others have it) into a Prifon, till the main question of the Marriage was voted and agreed, and Hostages promis'd for per-formance thereof. But as the Cardinal found means to corrupt his Keeper, fo he escap'd; and then began again to trouble all, using for this purpose the help of the Queen-Mother, and the pretext, it was unfit that the Dowglaffer, being wholly devoted to the English, should from a long Banishment be admitted to the Supream Council concerning publick Affairs. Besides, he got huge fums of Money from the Clergy, up-on colour that there was no other way to redeem themselves from imminent ruine. Furthermore, he perfuaded that the Hostages should not be fent into England; he procur'd also that our Ambaffador should be contumeliously us'd: whereof he complaining to the Viceroy, had no other Answer, but that the Cardinal had so discompos'd all things, that he could give no re-medy for the present. The Question was then, what course they should take about the Hostages left in England, upon Condition that the late Nobles who were Prifoners should return, in case the Marriage and Peace took no effect. But the Cardinal aniwer'd, That Kindred, Friends, Children, and all should be facrified for the good of their Country. Howbeit, Gilbert Kenneth Earl of Casselles could not be persuaded to stay; for having left two Brothers his Pledges, he said he would redeem their Lives with his own: And thereupon, though many dehorted him, he went into England. Which generous Counfel fucgiven him by our King, he was difmised with and other noble Disports; in which, though he his Brothers freely, and richly rewarded. On had the Earl of Bothwell for Rival, this Lord yet great. Howbeit, upon further debate of the buther of the finels, certain Scottillo Ambassadors were sent hither, being Sir William Hamilton and Sir James Lermouth; but their Negotiation not pleasing, as Mother inform'd the French King thereof, and that the Factions were fuch, as there was danger both Kingdoms should be united; defiring him further, to fend over Matthew Stuart Earl of Le-nox, as being of great power in that Country, and noted then to be adverfe to the Hamiltons Befides, it added to his Reputation, that it was thought the last King, if he had died without Iffue Male, would have defign'd him his Heir and Succeffor, and gotten it confirm'd by Par-liament. And to invite him the more, there was some fecret hope given, he might marry the Queen-Mother, and diversother things fet down by Buchanan. These Motives, together with the Buchanan. French Kings approbation and promife of affistance, made this young Lord to refolve to repair to Scotland; whereof the Viceroy being inform'd, indeavours to get the young Princess out of her Mothers Hands; hoping thereby not only to govern all, but to draw the English on his fide; but the defign being vented to the Cardinal, a Guard was given to the young Queen.

In the mean while the Earl of Lenox arrives April.

of his Intentions; only he tells his Friends in Sectland private the Promifes made him, and what help he prevail might expect from the French King. Whereupon they exhorting him to try his ftrength, he gather'd four thousand Men and advances; whereof Hamilton being advertiz'd, and finding himfelf inferior in Power, fent to treat of Peace, which follow'd, and an agreement for the present that the Queen should be brought to Sterling, and four principal Persons should have care of her Education: And the rather, that it was fuspected that the Earl of Arrain would have deliver'd her to the English. Whereupon she was conducted by Lenox unto the place appointed, and committed unto the tuition of Grames, Erskin, Lind-Aug. 26. fey, and Leviston, and shortly after Crown'd. The Viceroy being thus frustrate, and for the rest, not much favour'd by the People, fuffer'd him-felf to be gain'd by the Cardinal; to whom he shew'd himself so obsequious, as he seem'd to hold the Name rather than the Power of a Viceroy. Infomuch, that the Cardinal, who a little before was in danger of fuffering for a notable Forgery, now absolutely govern'd all. Whereof our King being advertis'd, did no longer hope to recover the Queen by the help of the Vice-roy, but refolv'd openly to demand her, upon pretext that there was fear of her being convey'd into France; and in case of resusal, to de-nounce War. The Message hereupon being brought, the Scots utterly denied him, fo that provision for War was made by our King. All things yet pass'd not so quietly in Scotland as was desir'd by that State; for as the Cardinal being of immoderate Ambition, could not indure the Earl of Lenox's Power, so he endeavour'd to suppress him; which he did also with much cunning. For whereas hope had been given him ning. For whereas hope had been given him of a Marriage with the Queen, he advertis'd her to entertain him fairly till he had receiv'd an answer of the French King of a Letter, wherein, though he made Honourable mention of him, he thought it convenient yet the faid Earl should be recall'd. It being not likely otherwise that the Kingdom would long continue in Peace. In the mean while, as Lenex was young, handsom, and gentile, and brought up in all exercises of ceeded to well, that after a large commendation a Cavalier, he past his time in Tiltings, Masks,

Hh 2

Vol. II.

out of France, without discovering yet any thing The France, Fastion in

II. A free Intercourfe.

1543.

1543. appear'd fo inferior to him, as he retir'd home: Nevertheless, Lenex finding himself at last deluded, and that all this was done only by the Queen and Cardinal, to have the more leifure to raine him, he protested he would be reveng'd; neither wanted there an opportunity: For thirty thousand Crowns being fent by the French King to him, in the disposing whereof, yet he was wish'd to use the advice of the Queen and Cardinal, he diffributed the Money amongft his Friends; but the Cardinal alledging that the Money was fent to himfelf, and to be employ'd in Wars against the English, and that Lenox had intercepted it against all right, rais'd an Army to feize on him and the Money together. But as Linux was not ignorant of these Preparatives, he gather'd in a short space an Army of ten thousand Men, saying, he would prevent the Cardinal; who being now defirous to gain time, as knowing Lenex was not long able to maintain this Expence, entertain'd him with frequent Pollicitations and Messages; Lenex also doubting left fome of his followers might forfake him. agrees with the Viceroy and him, and comes to Edenburgh, where (after a while) being advertiz'd, that fome Treachery was intended, he conveys himself by night to Glasco, and from thence to Dunbritton; after which, hearing both, that the Douglasses and the Hamiltons were agreed, and that through the calumnies of his Adversaries, the French King was alienated from him, he seem'd much troubled, and the rather, that fome noble Persons who desir'd to end these Controversies, were fuddenly committed. But as our King prepar'd now to invade Scotland, this business had another end than he could easily imagine.

And now if just causes of competition to the young Queen of Scotland hapned, no lefs just for War against Francis were given, of which I find the chief, or at least the most recent,

were thefe:

That he with-held divers of our Ships, and feiz'd Canfes of upen our Merchants Goods. That he detain'd the Penfion due yearly to King France Henry.

a War

with

That he had fortified Ardres to the prejudice of our English Pale, on which also be had increach'd. Moreover divers ancient unkindnesses not sufficiently concoeled remain'd in our Kings Breaft : As that he had given his Daughter Magdalen to James, and afterward the Daughter of Guile, contrary to his Promife and Treaty

That he had not described the Bishop of Rome, and consented to a Reformation, as he once promised.

That whereas with much freedom and confidence he had reveal'd divers Secrets to him, they had been difclosed again unto the Emperor, while he was at Aignes Mortes, and after at Paris. Pefides which, there was a common quarrel taken betwixt the Emperor and our King, for having confederated him-felf with the Turk, &c. as is in the following Treaty. But to these Francis answer'd, That our Emperor. Our King replied, that Francis had vio-lated the Treaty first. Besides, he could not be ignorant of the Wars against his Rebels at that time; howfoever these businesses were so roughly contefled, that the Ambaffadors were flay'd on both fides, though at length difmiss'd, and an open Rupture resolv'd. The consequence whereof having a good while fince been prefaged by our king, made him determine to enter into League with the Emperor, and to call a Parliament.

K. Hamy's The League with the Emperor was to this ef-League fect (as appears by our Records.) with the L. Thut there should be Abolition of former Laperor. Injuries.

III. A perpetual Peace.

IV. That they should aid or countenance no Enemies of each other.

V. That Rebels or Fugitives should not be harbour'd, but upon warning given to be gone, if they obey'd not, to be banish'd and profcrib'd.

VI. He shall be taken for a Common Enemy who shall invade England, Guines, Calais, Ba-wick, Wight, Jerfey, Garnfey, Man, Spain, Bra-bant, Flaudert, Holland, Zeland, Hainault, Artic, Limburgh, Luxemburgh, Nameurs, Frife, Overysfell, Utrecht, Mechlin.

VII. And if he invade with ten thousand Men, the Prince invaded shall require Aid of the other, who shall fend him within forty days, at his own charges, in this proportion, viz.

That if the Enemy fall on Calais, or the Caftle and County of Guisnes, the Emperor shall fend at least as many Soldiers, Horse and Foot, as may be paid for seven hundred Crowns the day, each Crown valued at forty five Sol' Tournois.

If on Wight, Fersey, Garnsey, Man, or England, the Emperor shall fend for Aid, such a number of Foot as can be paid for feven hundred Crowns a day.

But if the Emperor be invaded in any of his Countries above-mentioned, the King of Eng-land shall send him for Aid, such a number of Foot at least, whose pay, considering their Cloaths, Diet, and Weapons, comes to feven hundred Crowns a day, each Crown worth forty Sol' Tournois.

And it is in the choice of him who demandeth Aid . whether he will have Men or Money, which Money shall be paid by the Month, confifting of twenty-eight days.

And whether Men or Money be requir'd, the Prince of whom it is demanded, is not bound to be at this charge above four Months in one Year. But if the Prince in whose Aid they are fent, will retain them longer, he may, at his own charge.

Neither Prince is bound to Aid the other in divers places at once: And if both shall be invaded at the fame time by the King of France, the one shall not be bound to Aid the other.

If this Aid be demanded upon a false rumour, and the Enemy shall neither besiege any City or Fort, nor make Spoil, nor encamp in the Country of the Demandant, then the faid Demandant is to repay the Money

Concerning the Kingdom of Spain and Ireland, it is agreed, they shall Aid one another by fending Horfe and Foot, or Ships at the cost of the Demandant: And concerning these two King-doms, the Number and Costs of the Aid Ihall be as the time, and occasion, and strength of the Prince, of whom it was demanded, will fuffer: Which thing shall be referr'd to the conscience of the Prince to call'd upon.

And for the pay of the Soldiers, it shall be ra-ted according to the Market of the Country wherein they are.

VIII. If any Article of this Treaty be violated by any of the Subjects, they shall be punish'd, and it remain.

IX. That no Letters of Merque shall be given without due warning, to the end the loffes and wrongs may be otherwise repair'd by the

X. That because many scandalous and heretical Books are fpread abroad by Translations, it is agreed that no Book written in English shall be Printed or Sold in Germany, or the Emperors Dominions; Nor any Book written in Dutch, in England, under Pain of Imprifonment to the Sellers and Printers, and burning of the faid Books.

March.

XI. That there shall be Intercourse of Trassick according to the Treaty made 1520, and consirm'd and order'd in the Treaty of Cambray, 5 August, 1529. XII. That if there be any Damnification of the Subjects on either fide, the wronged Party upon requifition may have the Caufe heard, and due reparation made.

XIII. That when upon Invasion (as aforefaid) War is denounced, no Truce shall be made by either Prince without the confent of the other, except there be danger of Siege from the Enemy: In which case there may be Truce made (apart) for two Months, within which time he is to give notice to the other.

XIV. That no Peace shall be made, nor any Treaty feverally with the French King, or any other to the prejudice of this, but this to con-

XV. That none are to be comprehended in this Treaty, but by common confent; as also no Enemy to either, nor in whose Dominions the other hath any pretence.

XVI. This Treaty to be ratified by the two Princes, under their Princely Word and Oath, and under Pain to be infamous, and hated both by God and Man, and under Pledge of their Goods, fo that it shall be lawful to invade the Realm and Dominions of the Infractor, to take Perfons and Goods and carry them away, till Satisfaction be made: Provided, that they come not to this extremity, till a Diet or Meeting hath been requir'd, and Justice deny'd or delay'd.

XVII. This Treaty to be understood according to the simple and plain Tenor of the Words, and no Interpretation admitted otherwise.

XVIII. It is also covenanted and agreed, that, as foon as may be, the two Princes shall by their Ambaffadors declare to the King of France (requiring his Answer thereto) viz.

1. They shall complain, that the Turk (Enemy to Christian Faith) had taken Boldness by his Friendship to invade Christendom.

2. That he renounce his Correspondence with the faid Turk, recalling his Orators that are now refident with him.

2. That he fatisfy for the Lofs and Prejudice done by the Turk, through his occasion and procurement, to Christendom, viz. First, That he reflore the Town of Maram to the King of the Romans. And, Secondly, That he content the Emperor for the Costs and Damages sustain'd in the loss of Caftle-Nuovo, which the Turk, with the Aid of twelve Galleys of the King of France, took.
4. That he cease from War with the Emperor, that he may more commodiously and fafely take upon him the Defence of the Christian Common-wealth. 5. That he repay to the Germans the loss by them fuflain'd, in defending themfelves against the Turk.

6. That he pay the King of England all Arrearages, and that he give him fome Lands and Possessions to secure the satisfaction of the perperual Penfion. And if there be any thing elfe which each of these two Princes will require from the French King, it shall be lawful for him to do it, so that he declare his Intent therein in open and plain terms, before the Ratification Emperor, Eustachius Chappuis, Doctor of both of the present Treaty. of the present Treaty.

XIX. If the French King either for Terror of XIX. If the French King either for Letto. S. England.

Conference, or Fear of Revenge, shall defire to England.

This League minuted and agreed in February Charles. April 8. at Melin

King of France hath given them fatisfaction, viz. Till he hath paid the King of England all that is in Arrear due to him by Bargain. Alfo, for fecurity for the payment of the Annual Pension due for ever, he shall surrender into the Possession of the King of England the whole Country of Ponthe Ang of Legina to the Town of Bolegne, and Territories of Monstrueil, Theroueme, and Arde, with the Lands, Villages, and Towns adjoining, as far as the Borders of the faid County of Ponthicu, &c. On Condition, that the King of England and his Successors shall hold them all for them and theirs, free from all Feod. On this condition yet, that they hold themselves fully satisfy'd with the Profits arising out of these Lands for the annual and perpetual Pension. To the Emperor he shall restore the Dutchy of Burgundy.

XX. If the King of France will not accept Peace on these Conditions, or delay it forty days after proposition, the two Princes shall denounce War against him. Wherein

The King of England shall challenge to himself the Kingdom of France, Dutchy of Normandy, Aquitain, and Guicine. The Emperor the Dutchy of Burgundy, the Cities and Towns of Abbeville, Amiens, Corby, Bray, Peronne, Hannere, and St. Quintin, with their Territories. Before recovering of all which, neither of the Princes shall defift from Hostility, but by consent of the other, and for the good of Christendoon.

XXI. They shall have each a Fleet at Sea to secure Trasfick: Which Ships bearing two thoufand, or (if need be) three thousand Soldiers, shall be set to Sea within a Month after War denounced to the French King, and shall remain there on the Coasts of France, infesting his Country, and defending their Friends. Nor shall they license their Soldiers, or diminish the number of Ships or Men, but by consent. And if there be any Lofs by Tempest or Fight, they shall supply it. For the Designs, they shall be ruled by the Admirals and the Councils of the two Princes

XXII. After War, as aforefaid, denounced by common confent, in time and place agreed on, (fo it exceed not the space of two Years) the two Princes shall either in Person, or by Lieutenant, invade the Realm of France with a compleat Army; that is to fay, Twenty thousand Foot, and Five thousand Horse, or less; nor shall desist within four Months, unless he be beaten, or receive some Disaster, except by mutual confent.)

XXIII. When King Henry shall with Twenty thousand Foot, and Five thousand Horse invade the Dominions of the French King, the Emperor shall at his own Costs lend him Two thousand Lanfquenets, and Two thousand of able Horsemen, to ferve under him, till he license his

XXIV. When the King of England shall pass the Sea to invade France, and pass through any of the Dominions of Charles, the said Emperor shall give him free Passage, and let him have Ships, Carriage, Victuals, and Ammunition, so he pay for them at a fair and reasonable Price. XXV. This Treaty to be ratify'd and sworn by both Princes within fifteen Days after Requifition.

Commissioners for our King were Stephen Bishop of Winchester, Thomas Bishop of Westminster, Sir Thomas Wriothesty Principal Secretary: For the Emperor, and his Lieger Ambassador here in two Princes may treat with him apart, until the 15th, was (worn to by Charles, April 8. at Molins

King's

Com-

mai d

Several.

15... del Rey near Barcelona, in the presence of Edmond Bonner Bissop of London, our King's Ambassador, and publish'd in June following: Our King in the mean while providing for War, and his Parliament largely contributing to the Expences rhereof.

In this Parliament, a Book intituled, A necessary Decirine and Erudition for any Christian Man, re-ceiving its approbation, was in May following printed and publish'd in English by the King's A Book publish'd by the Command; wherein he departs not from his Articles fer forth Anno 1536. except in admitting Seven Sacraments, and handling the Points in a more copious manner: For here at large out of the Scriptures and Fathers, he explains the Creed, the Sacraments, and the Decalogue, the Lord's Prayer, with the Ave; then the Doctrine of Free-will, and Good-works: Laftly, adds Prayer for the Dead : all with much Moderation ; as chufing rather to refolve high and obscure Queflions in general terms, than by any peremptory and particular determination to make his People Skildel, 6 obnoxious; a Fault noted by fome Authors in Charles and Francis; both which about thefe times commanding their Divines to collect their Doctrine into certain brief Heads, propos d it barely without Explication or Proof, under the greateft Penalties. But King Horry having labourd first to make Tenets understood, took order in the next place to have them observed on these Therefore among other Laws ena-Conditions. cted in this Session, beginning the twenty second of January 1542, and lasting till the twelfth of May following, this is the first:

Recourse must be had to the Catholick and Apostolick Church for the decision of Contro-Jan 22. versies: And therefore all Books of the Old and Regn. 34. New Testament in English, being of Tindus salfes Translation, or comprising any matter of Christian Religion, Articles of the Faith, or holy Scripture, contrary to the Doctrine set forth Anno Domini 1540. or to be fet forth by the King, shall be abolish'd. No Printer or Bookfeller thall utter any of the aforefaid Books: No Persons shall play in Interludes, sing or rhime contrary to the said Doctrine: No Person contrary to the faid Doctrine: No Person shall retain any English Books, or Writings concerning matter against the Holy and Blessed Sacrament of the Altar, or for the maintenance of the Anabaptists, or other Books abolished by the King's Proclamation. There shall be no Annotations or Preambles in Bibles or New Testaments in English. The Bible shall not be read in free use of English in any Church. No Women or Artificers, the Eng-his Bible Prentices, Journey-men, Serving-men, of the torbad degrees of Yeomen, or under Husband-men, nor Labourers, shall read the New Testament in Eng-lish. Nothing shall be taught or maintained contrary to the King's Instructions. And if any spiritual Perfon preach, teach, or maintain any thing contrary to the King's Instructions or Determinations made or to be made, and shall be thereof convict, he shall for his first Offence recant; for his fecond, abjure, and bear a Faggot; and for his third, shall be adjudged an Heretick, and be burned, and lofe all his Goods and Chartels. And this Statute, though rigorous, was yet a qualification of the fix Articles, which imposed Death upon the first Offence in this kind: And as the King was now in good Terms with the Emperor, he might the better moderate them.

That the Lords authorized by the Statute of Liverena 28 Hen. VIII. 14. to for the Prices of Wine in grofs, may misigate or enhance the Prices of Wine by retail, as time and occasion shall re-Which Act, though expired before our mes, had yet this ufe, that Vintners then were ve y much restrain'd from couzening; and the those Bonds with a King, who had (as they extraordinary number of them diminished.

That any Perfon being no common Chirurgion, may administer outward Medicines.

That Bishops new erected, shall pay their Tenths into the Courts of the First-Fruits.

That Penfions, &c. granted out of Abbeys, &c fhould be paid flill as they were before.

That Laws especially should be made in Wales by the Officers there. Whereupon the Council in the Principality of Weles and Marches was confirmed; and divers other Orders establish'd, too long to be recited here. Only I must not omit how Gavelkind (which being heretofore us'd in Wales, did fo divide and fubdivide the Lands of the antient Nobles and Gentry there, that at last every Man's Part came to very little; and so difabled them to keep the Dignity of their Houses) was here taken away and extinguished.
In this Parliament, also, a Subsidy was granted Holimboad.

to the King, to be paid in three Years, after this Stow. rate; They who were in Goods worth twenty Shillings and upwards to five Pound, paid Fourpence of every Pound; from five Pound to ten Pound, Eight-pence; from ten Pound to twenty Pound, Sixteen-pence; from Twenty and up-wards, two Shillings. All Strangers, as well Denizens as others, inhabiting here, doubled the Sum: Strangers, not Inhabitants, that were fixteen Years old and upwards, paid Four-pence for every Head or Poll. As for Lands, Fees and Annuities, every Native paid Eight-pence in the Pound from twenty Shillings to five Pounds; from five Pounds to ten Pounds, Sixteen-pence; from ten Pounds to twenty Pounds, two Shillings; from twenty Pounds and upwards, three Shillings. Strangers still after all these rates doubling the Sum. As for the Clergy, they granted a Subfidy of fix Shillings in the Pound, to be paid of their Benefices in perpetuity, in three Years following: And every Prieft having no Perpetuity, but an annual Stipend, paid yearly during the faid three Years fix Shillings Eightpence. Befides which, I find, upon occasion of a Dearth of Victuals, a Sumptuary Law was made, whereby the Mayor and Sheriffs of London, as also the Serjeants and Yeomen of their Houses, were limited to a certain number of Dishes: They were forbidden also to buy certain kinds of Fowl. Neverthelefs, in regard of the great Confluence of People in this Parliament time, and the Scarcity of Fish, the King by Proclamation dispensed eating of White-meats in Lent, forbidding yet the eating of Flesh so strictly, as Henry Earl of Surrey, with divers Lords, Feb. 9. Knights, and Gentlemen, were imprisoned for offending herein.

And now the Irish finding by O-Neal, that the Irish Nouse our King made of this Stile of King of Ire-bility subland, was to confer Nobility more amply on them, King, according to their feveral Merits and Services; O Brian, Mac-William-u-burgh, and Mac-Gil-Patrick, came hither, and upon notice taken of their De-June; fert, O Brian was created Earl of Thomond, and Mac-William Earl of Clarriceard; fome others had July 1 alfo Honours given them, and received therein an Obligation to continue firm to the English Crown: Of which likewise the Successors of the aforefaid Lords have given ample tefti-

The Separation or Divorce betwixt our King and the Lady Anne of Cleves now itanding uncontroverted, and Queen Katharine beheaded, our King bethought himfelf of another Match. the concluding whereof yet he found fome Difficulty: For as by a Statute formerly mention'd, it was declared Death for any whom the King should marry, to conceal her Incontinency in for-mer time, to few durst hazard to venture into marries the Lady the Lord

July 12.

lune.

1543. thought) fo much Facility in diffolving them: Therefore they flood off, as knowing in what a flippery estate they were, if the King, after his receiving them to bed, fhould, through any mi-flake, declare them no Maids: So that now he The King fix'd upon the Lady Katharine Parr, Widow to the Lord Latimer; who, as she was esteem'd ever, a Lady of much Integrity and Worth, and some Maturity of Years, fo the King after Marriage liv'd apparently well with her for the most part. The publishing of this Marriage was accompanied with a Declaration of his League with the Emwith a Declaration of its League with the Emperor, and denouncing War to Francis: For which purpole, two Kings of Arms on the Emperor and our King's part, were dispatched to him; while for more authorising their Messages. they were to require performance of certain Conditions before mention'd. But Francis not fuffering them to come at all within his Dominions, they return d; and both Princes, without more ceremony, prepar'd for War: The beginning and progress whereof, that it may be the better underftood, I shall look a while upon Foreign Hi-

Guillaume de Bellay Seigneur de Langey, one of the compleatest Gentlemen of his time, to whom the charge of all Affairs in Piedmont was chiefly committed, finding himfelf declining in health, defires leave to return home, but too late : for the head of the king his Mafter to accept thereof as a Teftimony that he had ferved his Majefty to the uttermoft of his force: Whofe lois, I find, happen'd the more unfeafonably, in that Francis had now need of his best strength against two so puissant Princes as resolved to invade his Dominions in person. The Emperor set out first, as having divers Businesses to determine by the way; leaving for Governour of Spain his Son Philip, affifted by Fernando de Toledo Duc de Alva as Captain General, and Francesco de les Covos for other Dispatches during his absence. His chief Design was to draw the Pope from the French King: To which, though the Pope was sufficiently disposed, which, though the Pope was sufficiently disposed, test the durft not (faith Sandward) left Francis thould renounce his Authority, as our King had done, and give ear to the Lutherans. Which being certified to the Emperor by his Ambassadors at Rome, made him withdraw fome Revenues which he had given with Margaret his natural Daughter to Ortavio Farnese the Popes Grandchild. And now the Emperor having all things ready for his Voyage, arrives from Barcelona at May 25. Genoüa about the end of May 1543, as our Records fay, or June, according to Sandoval. His Necessities yet were great; infomuch, that as he was forced before his leaving Spain to pawn the Molu cas to Juan King of Portugal, (and the rather, because some Revolt happening in the West-Indies about this time, he was disfurnished of the Revenues usually receiv'd from thence:) so in Italy he was conftrain'd to fell the Fortreffes of Florence and Ligerno to Cosmo de Medices Duke of Florence for an Hundred and fifty thousand Ducats; though yet he wanted not fo many Reafons to retain these Places, as (unless a most urgent Necessity did excuse him) it cannot but feem most strange, both as he lost so principal an access to Italy by Sea, and such a pursuant means of conferving the Florentines at his devotion : Nevertheles, I find he would not part with Siena, though as being an Inland-Town, and without means to be eafily relieved, it could not fo aptly ferve for to make good his Authority in those parts. To which yet I find Diego de Mendoza Gosand, 1.25. vernour thereof fo encouraged him, as he feem'd rather to invite an Attempt against Rome.

by the Pope to permit an Interview; which at last was accorded at Bussetto, between Parma and Cremona, where the Pope and Emperor did meet, Sand 1. 25 fune 21. Their different Ends yet did not per-June 21. mit them to speak principally of a Council, nor Anthereat all, till their other Bufineffes were determined : view For the Emperor, defirous to incite him against tween the the French King, and (howfoever) to get Money Emperor. of him, bent his chief Difcourses that way. The Pope, on the other fide, ambitions to get Aller for his Grand-child Ottavio Farneje, who had married Margaret, natural Daughter to the Jimperor, (as is before recited) intended little elfe; offering for this purpose, to make what Cardinals the Emperor defird, to give an hundred and fitty thousand Crowns for some Years towards his War against France, and yet to leave the Castle of Mi-lan and Cremona in his hands. Others say, the Pope would neatly have bought Milan for his Grand-child, when the Emperor could give him good affurance for his Purchafe, and that the Emperor would not part with the Forcefs of Milan and Cremona. But to leave these things to the feveral Authors, I find, that the Emperor requiring more Money, the business was suspended, and the Conclusion referr'd to Commissioners, who fhould treat thereof as the Emperor proceeded in his Journey through Germany: Who, for all advantage and facisfaction in this Interview, had no account to give at his coming thi-ther, but that he could proteil, he had made fome Overture of a Council. The Pope finding thus no certain Refolution given to his Request, inclined to Francis; and the rather, that the League betwixt our King and the Emperor being publish'd, he was highly incens'd against The Pope him, as having join'd himself in League with one winthe who was so lately excommunicated, anathema-Empetor tiz'd, curs'd, depriv'd, and made incapable of all for ma-Confederation: Which yet so little moved the king a Emperor, as when it was represented that the League with the Pope's Proceeding here was paffionate, and for king of his proper Interest only, and that Religion stood England. upon firmer Principles, than that it could be perfonated in any one Man, he did not relinquish his former Intention: For more confirmation whereof alfo, he fail'd not to reproach unto the Pope his affifting of Francis; faying, He might with much more reason prevail himself of our King's affiftance, than Francis could do of the Turks.

The Emperor being now come into the Low-Countries, refolves to chaffife the Duke of Clove; August the chief places of whose Country he took in fifteen Days. Nevertheless, upon his submission he reftor'd all but Gueldre and Zutphen; of which Sept. 7. yet he gave him fome hope, when he would hold it in Fee from the Empire.

This being advertis'd to Francis, made him detain Jone of Navarre; but for her the Emperor afterwards gave the Duke in Marriage (the Pope dispensing with the former Contract) Many Daughter of Ferdinand. This prosperous Exploit yet was check'd by the Success of Francis, who this while had taken Landreey, Bapaumes, and Maubege, (where there is a fair and magnificent Convent of Gentlewomen of Noble Houses, which yet are not fo bound to any Vow of Religion, but that they may marry, and was in effect an Academy for their Sex.) Afterwards he took almost all Luxemburg: Therefore the Emperor prepar'd Forces to withfland him, and recover relaid Places. To which purpose Sir John Walley, with fix thousand Men, being fent by our King, (who failed not to affift the Emperor) landed at Calais, and from thence keeping along betwixt the Frontiers of France and the Low-Countries, did much spoil upon the French, till he joined with Emperor repofing a while at Genoua, was defir'd the Emperor's Forces before Landrecy, which two great Armies being near each other, it was thought a Blow would follow. The Emperor, who defir'd much to fight, puts his Men in order; which being done, he exhorted them to do bravely, shewing withat the Imperial Standard, which one guisada carry'd, saying, If this should fall, and my self too, I charge you to take it up before me. Francis also drew out into the Field, not omitting in the mean time to fend Men, Victuals and Ammunition into the Town: The two Armies thus confronting one another, Night came on, through the benefit whereof Francis, diflodging fecretly, retires with his Army. The Imperialifts finding this, follow; but as Francis had laid an Ambuscado, he took divers of the more forward, among whom, it was the fortune of Sir George Carew, Sir Thomas Palmer, and other English, to be taken Prisoners. The Emperor yet continu'd the Siege for some sour or five days: But as it was now towards the Novemb. midit of Nevember, he went with his Army to Cambray; where, perfunding the Inhabitants that the French had a Detign upon them, he counfell'd them to build a Cittadel; which they approving, he found means to possess himself thereof. He also sent Hernando Gonzago and Juan Baptista Gastaldo to our King, to treat further of a War against France the next Year; he omitted not alfo to call a Diet at Spire; whither he went with defire (as much as fafely he might) to oblige the Protestants to him; and the rather, that the Turks had at this time not only taken Strigonium and other Places in Hungary, but the Town of Nizza in the Confines of France and Italy, in this manner: Antoine Polin (afterwards Baron de la Garde) had now made two Voyages from Francis to Solyman the Turk, to folicit him to fend his Sea-Forces against the Emperor. Whereupon Barbarossa was dispatch'd with Commission to join with him: He taking Fresh-water at Oftia, within five Leagues of Rome, gave that Alarm, that the Inhabitants began to fly; but Polin affurd them by his Letters: From thence coming of Marfeillet, Francois de Bourbon, Duke of Anguien, encounter'd them, having charge to command the Naval Army of the king, which was two and twenty Galleys, and eighteen other Ships: Whereupon they belieged and took the Town of The Turks Nizza, but not the Castle, which being stronger in confe-than that it could be won easily, they carrying deracy fome of the Inhabitants with them, retir'd to their Shipping; and the rather, that they heard take Niz- the Marquis de Guafto was coming out of Piedmont towards them; who (I find) recover'd it fhortly after. And thus ended the two Years Negotiation of Polin with the Tink, with finall prefent effect, and no confequence but the carrying away of a few Slaves by Barbarffa, who winter d at Thoulon, betwith Nizza and Marfeilles. Howfoever, I find by Sandoval, that it was fo great heinously taken in Rome, that some Cardinals in Scandal of a publick Consistory moved to deprive Francis from the Court at Rome.

I shall draw this Year to a Conclusion, with a beginning given to the Council of Trent, now appearing in fome Rudiments. Many Years had past without any manifest necessity of calling a Council. Those sew Separatists which re-main'd of the Waldefians, Picards, and Hushites, being difarm'd, illiterate, and obscure; and these later not much differing from the Roman Church, but in the use of the Cup in the Eucharist: But Luther, Zuinglius, and divers others of late appearing, though not fufficiently united among the Emperor belieg'd: Whereof Francis being Differentian feem'd to be who should be furthest 1543.

advertis'd, resolves to relieve it: Hereupon the off from them: Every Reformer in his turn off from them: Every Reformer in his turn pretended both to discover new Errors, and to shew himself more averse. This made the Pope refolve at last on a Council; and the rather, that all Christian Princes desir'd upon any reafonable terms a Peace of Religion, as knowing how much it concern'd them to fettle that Affair: Neither did they think there would be much difficulty, when all fides came prepared thereunto, most of the Points in difference being to be reconcil'd in middle and indifferent terms, or to be rejected as doubtful, (upon the grounds taken on either side) or at least not tending to much Edification. The Meeting was (as is above fhew'd) design'd at Mantue first, by Pope Clement the Seventh, 1522, then by Paulus the Third, 1527. but being thence brought to Vicenza, and there suspended during his Pleasure, at last it was removed to Trent, in the Confines of Germany; which also was hasten'd by the Pope, as fearing the confequence of a National Council in Germany, whereof the Emperor had lately given hope; fo that he was (at what price foever) de- 1541. termin'd to prevent it; as knowing well what prejudice it might bring to his Authority. Neither did he any longer apprehend the defection of Francis; who knowing he should lose the Pope in his businesses of Milan and elsewhere, if he triff'd any longer with the Protestants, had May 22. made fevere Edicas against them. Whereupon Bulls also were dispatched every where abroad, Whereupon notifying the faid Convention to begin November the first following: Which yet was in such terms as scandalis'd the Emperor, supposing that Francis was us'd therein with more respect than 1542 he deferv'd; fince, in the late Diet at Spire, ha-ving fecretly offer'd his affishance both to the Protestant and Roman Catholick Party in Germany, he had declar'd his Intentions were only to foment Division; and besides, had colleagu'd himfelf with the Turk. But for compoling these August differences, the Pope having appointed the Cardinal Contarent to go to the Emperor, and Sandolet to Francis; Contureni dying in the way, he imploy'd Cardinal Vi/ee in his place; one fo openly difaffected by the Emperor, that it was thought no good effect would follow. Howfoever, to make it appear, that this univerfally defir'd Council was not retarded by him, he fent at the fame Aug. 26. time unto Trent the Cardinals Pietro Paulo Parifio, 1542. a good Canonist, Giovanni Morone an expert Statesman, and Reginald Pool, opposite to our King, and fo eminent as might give Authority to Proceedings against him. Their fecret Instructions were yet rather to entertain the Ambaffudors and Prelates which should be there affembl'd, than to treat of any thing material without further direction. The Emperor fent hither Diego de Mendozo, his Ambaffador resident at Ve-, and Nicholas Perenot Seigneur de Granville, to- Council gether with Antonio Bishop of Arras (his Son) and of Trent. iome few Bilhops of the Kingdom of Naples; who together with some few Prelates (of the most affected to the Pope) being commanded to be present, were all that could give Name and Reputation to this General Council: so far was it from having other Kingdom or Religion concurrent therein. Howfoever, the Imperial Man-Nov. 1. date being exhibited by the Agents of Charles, in- 1542 stance was made that the Council should open, and a beginning be given, at leaft, to a Reformation in Discipline. But the Papal Legates interpos d a delay, faying, It was not convenient to begin an Universal Council with so little a number: Whereupon the business came to Prothemselves, gave yet the Roman Catholicks so litters on both sides; and so the Legates referring the cause to glory therein, that their greatest all to the Pope, nothing was concluded. Where-

Aug. 20. with the

upon, the Imperialists departed, whom also the case of Succession: And albeit, for default of 1544.

Neopolitam Bishops follow'd, and finally the Le-fuch Heirs as be inheritable by the said Act, lie gates themselves, after having been there seven Months without more than this oftentation of a Council.

Little else happened this year of foreign Affairs, that I thought worthy my Relation, but that Philip Prince of Spain (though very young) had given him in Marriage Donna Maria, Infanta of Portugal, by John III, and Donna Catalina Si-fler to the Emperor.

July 28.

March 7.

1544. Gardiner

Secretary

denying

Suprema-

Dec. 23.

I 543. The Suc-

ceffion again fetled in Parliament.

Reg 25.

Jan. 14.

CV.

Information being made to our King, that divers this year were burnt for Religion at Windfor, it appears by our Histories, that he was nothing pleas'd; which yet, whether it proceeded from some better impression he might have taken of the Protestant Reformation; or that he grew weary of the too many fevere Executions, which had made his Government thought in foreign Countries to be rigorous, cannot eafily be determined. Howfoever, he made it known now that he could forgive. And therefore, though fome of his Courtiers, as Sir Thomas Cardine, Sir Philip Hobby, and others of his Subjects were fallen into the danger of the Six Articles, he voluntarily gave them his Pardon; and together, withdrew much of his favour from the Bilhop of Winchefter, who was reported more than any to perfectue them, and fuspected to diflike fecretly the Kings Proceedings: Which was made more probable, when not long after his Secretary German Gardiner was executed for denying the Kings Supremacy. And perchance, hang'd for as King Henry intended fhortly to go in Person to the Wars in France, the many punishments he had inflicted on others might have begot fome apprehensions in him: Yet not such as could deter him from the Journey; for he made great preparations of Soldiers and Habiliments of War, and particularly of Iron Pieces and Granades, which I find this year were first cast in England: While for the more contenting the Queen in his abfence, he conferr'd certain Ho-nours on William Lord Parr, her Brother, who was made Earl of Effex: And her Uncle Sir William Parr, who was made Lord Parr of Horton, and Chamberlain to the Queen. All which yet feem'd nothing to him, unless he parted in good terms with his Parliament : For he accounted it his most Loyal Spouse: And not without reason, since there was nothing I know desir'd by him, which they perform'd not. This Session (being the third) began the 14th of January, in the thirty-fifth year of his Reign, and continued till the 29th of March, 1544.

The first Act was concerning the Succession:

And herein, as I find, he endeavour'd to close with the Emperor, in giving the Princess Mary a possibility of Succession; to he fetled that bufiness among his Children in such fort, that all then, and from thenceforth, for lack of Heirs cause of competition was taken away (as far as by our Laws he might.)

The beginning of the Act is a recital of a former, 28 Hen. 8. touching the Succession; to which reference must be had. Whereupon it follows thus, or to this effect, (as I conceive it.)

Forasimuch as his Majesty sithence the death of Queen Jane, hath taken to Wife the Lady Katharine, late Wife of John Nevil Knight, Lord hath none Iffue, but may have full well, when it shall pleafe God: And forasmuch as our faid most dread Sovereign intendeth, by Gods Grace, to make a Voyage Royal in his most Royal Per-Prince lawfully begotten, the said Imperial Crown fon into the Realm of France, against the French and other the Premisses, shall be, come, and re-might by the Authority of the faid Act, give and dispose the faid Imperial Crown, and other the Premiffes by his Letters Patents under his Great Seal, or by his laft Will in Writing, fign'd with his Hand, to any Person or Persons of fuch Estate therein as should please his Highness to limit and appoint: Yet, to the intent his Majesties disposition and mind should be openly declar'd to the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and other his Subjects of this Realm, to the intent that their affent and confent might appear to concur with thus far as followeth of his Majesties Declaration in this behalf; his Majesty therefore thinketh convenient, afore his departure beyond Seas, that it be enacted by his Highnefs and Parliament: And therefore Fifth on be it enacted, that in case the Kings Majetty Prince Is and his only Son Prince Edward should decease without Heirs of either of their Bodies lawfully begotten, fo that there be no fuch Heir Male or Female of any of their two Bodies, to have and inherit the faid Imperial Crown, and other his Dominions, according and in fuch manner and form as in the aforefaid Act, and now in this is declar'd, that then the faid Imperial Crown, and all other the Premisses shall be to the Lady Mary, the Kings Highness Daughter, On the and to the Heirs of her Body lawfully begotten, Lady with such Conditions as by his Highness shall Marybe limited by his Letters Patents under his Great Seal, or by his Majesties last Will in Writing, fign'd with his Hand. And for default of fuch Iffue, the faid Imperial Crown and other the Premisses shall be to the Lady Elizabeth the On the Kings second Daughter, and her Heirs lawfully Lady Elizabeth begotten, with fuch conditions as is aforefaid. zabeth. Any thing in the Act made 28 Hen. 8. to the contrary notwithstanding.

Provided nevertheless, that if the said Lady

Mary do not keep and perform fuch Conditions as the King shall declare and limit in manner aforefaid; that then, and from thenceforth, for lack of Heirs of the feveral Bodies of the Kings Majesty and Prince Edward, the faid Imperiat Crown, and other the Premisses shall be and come to the Lady Elizabeth, and the Heirs of her Body lawfully begotten, in fuch like manner and form, as though the faid Lady Mary were then dead, without any Heir of her Body be-

And be it further enacted, That if the faid Lady Mary do keep and perform such Conditions which the Kings Majesty shall hereafter declare and limit, in form aforefaid; and that the faid Lady Elizabeth for her part do not keep and perform such Conditions which the Kings Majesty shall declare and limit, in form aforefaid, that of the several Bodies of the Kings Majesty, and the faid Lord Prince, and the faid Lady Mary lawfully begotten, the faid Imperial Crown, and other the Premisses shall be and come to fuch Person and Persons, and of such Estate and Effaces as the Kings Highness, in form aforcfaid, fhall limit and appoint.

Provided, that if the Lady Mary do not keep and perform fuch Conditions which shall be limited and appointed as aforefaid, and the faid Elizabeth being then dead without any Heir of her Body lawfully begotten; that then, and from thenceforth, for lack of Heirs of the feveral Bodies of the Kings Majesty, and the faid Lord King; his Highnels most prudently considering main to such the Tennus, and Persons, and of such how this Realm standeth at this time in the Estate and Estates as the Kings Highnels by his

Vol. II,

1544 Letters Patents Scal'd under his Great Seal, or by his last Will in Writing, sign'd with his Hand, shall limit and appoint.

Provided always, and be it enacted by the Authority aforefaid, that in cafe the Kings Majesty do not declare and limit by his Letters Patents, or by his last Will, in form as is aforesaid, any Conditions to the Estates and Interests afore-limited to the faid Lady Mary, and Lady Eliza-beth, nor to the Estate or Interest of any of them; that then every fuch of the faid Lady Mry, and Lady Elizabeth, to whose Estate or Interest no Condition shall be limited by the Kings Majesty in form aforesaid, shall have and enjoy such Interest, Estate, and Remainder in the faid Imperial Crown and other the Premiffes, as is before limited by this Act, without any manner of Condition. Any thing in this prefent Act to the contrary thereof notwithstanding.

And forafmuch as it flandeth in the only pleafure and will of Almighty God, whether the Kings Majefty shall have any Heirs begotten and procreated between his Highness and his most entirely belov'd Wife Queen Katharine, or by any other his lawful Wife; or whether the faid Prince Edward, the Lady Mary, or Lady Elizabeth, or any other, shall have any Issue of their Bo-dies lawfully begotten; and that if such Heirs should fail, and no provision made, this Realm after the Kings transitory Life should be destitute of a lawful Governor to order and rule the

The King fame: Be it therefore enacted by the Authority impow-erd to diff of this prefent Parliament, that the Kings High-ofe of the ness shall have full power and authority to give, Crown by dispose, appoint, assign, declare, and limit by his gracious Letters Patents under his Great Seal, or else by his Highness last Will made in Writing, and fign'd with his most gracious Hand, at his only pleafure, from time to time hereafter, the Imperial Crown of this Realm, and all other the Premisses, to be, remain, succeed and come after his Decease, and for lack of lawful Heirs of either of the Bodies of the Kings Highnets and Prince Edward begotten, and also for lack of lawful Heirs of the Bodies of the faid Lady Mary and Lady Elizabeth, to be procreated and begotten (as is before limited in this Act) to fuch Person and Persons in Remainder or Reversion, as shall please his Highness, and according to fuch Estate, and after such manner and form, fashion or condition as shall be express'd, deciar'd, nam'd and limited in his Highness Letters Patents, or by his last Will in writing, fign'd with his most gracious Hand (as is aforefaid.) Any thing contain'd in this present Act, or in the faid former Act to the contrary thereof, in any wife notwithftanding.

There followeth also in the said Act a new form of Oath against the Authority of the Bishop of Rome, and the penalty on those who refus'd to take the Outh, or did interrupt this Act, or any Effate limited thereby.

In another Act it was declared where, and before whom, Treasons committed out of the Realm should be tryed. That the Kings Stile also, of King of England, France, and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, and of the Church of England, and also of Ireland, in Earth the Supreme Head, shall be united and annexed for ever unto the Imperial Crown of this Realm of England.

That no Person should be put to his Trial upon an Accufation concerning any of the offences compris'd in the Statute of the Six Articles 31 Hen. 8. but only upon fuch as shall be made by the Oath of twelve Men before Commissioners authorised: And the Presentment shall be made within one year after the offence com-mitted. That no Person should be arrested or setting Sail, shortly afterwards came to New-committed to Ward for any fuch offence before 1544. he be indicted. That if any Preacher or Reader shall speak any thing in his Sermon or Reading contrary to any matter contain'd in the Six Articles, he shall be accus'd or indicted thereof within forty days, or elfe shall be discharged of the said offence. And this also qualified a little the punishment of the Six Articles.

That the Lords and Commons shall remit unto the King all fuch fums of Money as he had borrow'd of them fince the first of January, Anno 23 of his Reign.

That certain Tenures shall be referv'd (at the Kings pleafure) upon Houses and Lands, being fomerimes Abbey Lands, under forty Shillings a

That all Perfons which have any Houses, Lands, Gardens and other Grounds in the Town of Cambridge, adjoyning upon every Highway, Street, or Lane, in his own Right, or the Right of his Wife, or, &c. shall cause the same to be pav'd with paving Stone unto the middle of the fame ways, and in length as their grounds do extend, and fo shall from time to time maintain them, upon pain to forfeit fix pence for every yard fquare not fufficiently pav'd, to the King and Informer. And had this Statute extended to the other Cities and great Towns of England, it would have been much to the beauty of them, and the commodity of Passengers.

That the King shall have Authority during his High

Life to name two and thirty Persons, viz. fix-Committee teen Spiritual and fixteen Temporal, to examine all Canons, Conflitutions, and Ordinances Pro-vincial and Synodal, and to establish all such Laws Ecclefiaftical as shall be thought by the King and them convenient to be us'd in all Spiritual Courts. But this (it feems) expir'd with the Kings life.

An Ordinance also (never sufficiently commended) was made for prefervation of Woods, which being too long and particular to rehearfe, I shall defire the Reader to peruse in his place: There being no Law either more useful to this Kingdom (in regard of our Navy and otherwife,) or whereof the Infraction can with more difficulty be repair'd; fo many years, if not Ages, being requir'd before they can come to that growth, which any rashhand may cut down in a very fhort space.

Some other Acts also pass'd, which the Reader may fee in their place.

And now the Parliament ending March 29, March 19, 1544. That War which was denounc'd by our War with King against Scotland for the Treaty broken in Souland. fome Particulars, and the Law of Nations in Buchan, others, appear'd in his Preparatives; and the Lord Edward Seymer Earl of Hertford was fhortly Earl of after conflituted by our King, Lieutenant Ge-Hertford neral of the North, and fent thither with a well-fest with a neral of the North, and fent thither with a wellfurnish'd Army: For as it was only a Quarrel into Scotof unkindness with the Scots for their not admit-land ting readily the loving offer he made of Marrying his Son Prince Edward with their young Queen, none was thought more fit to determine, or if need were, to compose the Business, than the Princes Uncle. Besides, the Duke of Norfolk (whose Service he had hererofore us'd in those parts) was appointed to attend him in his Jourparts) was appointed to attend thin in his John-ney to France. And now Confultation being had which way to invade Scotland, it was refolv'd, by Sea; yet fo, as the Kings Land-Army might make a divertion on the Borders, and (if need were) joyn with the other. Forces. The Fleet being ready (which was of two hundred Sail,) Sir fobn Dudley Lord Life (newly made Admiral of England) was appointed to conduct it; who

Laffle,

Edenburgh taken an plunder'd.

Leith, the fourth of May, where spending some three or four days in disembarking their Men, and taking out their Ordnance and Victuals, the Cardinal of Saint Andrews made provision to receive them: Our Army march'd in three Bat-tels, whereof the Lord Admiral had the Van, the Earl of Hertford the middle, the Earl of Shrewsbury the Rear; who from thence going to the Town, encountred fix thousand Horse, befides many Foot, led (as our Hiftories have it) by the Cardinal and divers Noble Persons: But as they judg'd themfelves too weak, and confequently offer'd not much Refiftance, they were quickly discomfited, and their Ordnance taken. Whereupon our Men entring Leith, found more riches there (they faid) than they could have eafily imagin'd. Marching thence to Edenburgh, the Towns-men offer'd to yield themselves, when they might depart with Bag and Baggage; but this not being accepted, they prepar'd for Defence. Nevertheless, our Men both forc'd the Town, and burnt it for three days together: At which time William Lord Ever Warden of the East-Marches, and Governor of Berwick, making his way by Land, did (notwithflanding all oppo-fition) joyn his Forces with the reft. The Ar-my thus greatned, burnt and spoil'd all places about Edenburgh in a crueller manner than became fuch as would obtain the favour either of that Queen or Country for their young Prince. vertheless, as they could not take the Castle of Edenburgh, they retir'd to Leith, where the Lord General having made divers Knights, they shippcd their great Artillery, and among them fome fair Pieces gotten in the Voyage; divers Ships also were taken by them. And now being ready to depart, they burnt the Town of Leith, and the Peer of the Haven; and fo on the fif-teenth of May the Fleet fet Sail, while the Land-Army, defirous to commit further Spoil, march'd Towns in to Seton, and so to Hidington, and Dunbar, which Scotland Towns they burnt. After which, coming to a aken and Strait (which our Historians call the Peale) and a great Mist happening, they made a Halt, being advertis'd that the Scottish Army would fall on them: But the Mift breaking up, they marched on without refistance, and so came to Rinwithin eight miles of the English Borders, which having ruin'd and burnt, they upon the 18th of May enter'd Berwick, without having lost in all this Journey above 40 Persons. Our Navy in the mean while, taking out of every Creek > Boats they found there. The Expedition thus gloriously ended, the King found his business nothing advanc'd; he had done more than became a Suitor for Alliance, too little for one pretending to Conquest. Neither had this Invasion other event than a general detestation of a Marriage fought for in fuch rough and unufual terms: But our King, who understood the business otherwise, said, That fince he could not obtain, he would strive to chastise. Howbeit, he omitted not to advise how he might raife a Faction in that Kingdom, whereof he might prevail himfelf. And because the Earl of Lenox, now deferted by the French, feem'd most proper for this purpose, he resolv'd to admit a Treaty with him: Which Affair also upon his Misfortune, and the Retreat formerly mentioned, had been negotiated by the Earl of Glencarne and his Brother at Carlile, May 17. 1544. took Caintyr and spoil'd it; and all this with the (as I find in our Records:) Which again was help only of one hundred and forty. Men more fecended in that manner, that our Army now he had out of his own Country: Concerning and Haven on the Scottish Coasts all the Ships and Caffle, where the Earl of Herford, Francis Talbat returning, he came by Scu to Welledeffer, and so the Court, where he was well received by our with the Kings Army attend him. These being feedily shipped, came to Grantham-Crag near twist them, by the name of Mathew Earl of Lenox, and Thomas Wrioth fly (lately made * Ba- * Jan). to and theman recompy (and) made by parties of parties of and the Duke of Suffelk, and Sir William Piggs, by June 26. upon defending to this effect.

effect.

That for the fermity of the faid E rel of I enox a-Treaty gainst the power of the Cardinal, and the Earl of Ar-between rain, and the safety of the Realm of Scotland, it is the last of agreed, that the said Earl will observe the Articles the local regreed on his behalf by the Earl of Glencarne and o Charlet there at Cathile, May 17, 15.44.

That he will be the Kings Servant and Subject, the said serves him against all that shall impage his Greece and serves are Cathile, and serves and subject of the said destroying the said and serves and subject of the said destroying the said and serves and subject of the said destroying and serves and subject of the said destroying a subject of the said destroying and serves and subject of the said destroying a subject of the said destroying the said and said the said said the said the said the said said the sa

Title and Authority in Scotland, or elfewhere.

That he will furrender into his Majeffics hand the Caffle of Dumbritton, as also the Isle of Bute, and belp him to win the Caftle of Rofs therein.

That when the King, having the Direction of the Realm, shall have made him Governor, the faid Earl shall never call a Parliament, ner do any matter of great moment without the Kings Advice.

That he shall forefee that the Kings Prenept be net convey'd out of Scotland, but strive to get ber Person into his custody, and to deliver her into the Kings

That because the King bath upon his earnest suit given him leave to marry his Graces Niece the Lody Margaret Dowglas, the said Earl hindest himself to endow her with the yearly value of 500 Marks

That the King, in confideration of the loss which the faid Earl shall sustain in France by this decement, will give unto him and his Hirs, Possessions on Eng-

That the King will aid the faid Earl in Scotland for two or three Menths with 500 Mm; it files fuch Men as his Grace will fend to take and keep Dum-

That the King having obtain'd direction of that Kingdom, will constitute the faid Earl Governor.

In which Treaty, though our King beflowed The East the Lady Marg net Donglas upon him, and that mures there wanted not fome, who thought it best she the Lady Margaret hould be referred upon all events, when the Dungles, he chole rather was a consideration flouid die, he chole rather yet to gratifie this gentle Lord. And therein both put a perpenal obligation up-on him, and enabled him to be an Ancesto of that happy Off-fpring which hath followed

Vol. II.

The Earl now poffefs'd of his Lady, was fent shortly after into Scotland with twelve or four- Augusta teen Ships, and about fix hundred Men, under the command of certain English Knights: These coming to the Castle of Dumbritton, were received Lifeur. with great joy, and feafted by Striveling, Concierge or Captain thereof: But when Linon had privately told him that the Caffle was promis'd our King, he feem'd fuspended betwixt Affection and Duty. Though at last, considering that it neither stood with his Honour, nor the fafety of the Country, to furrender into any foreign hands, he took Arms, and fore'd Lenex, and a few of the English who were with him, to their Ships, whence they fet fail for the Isle of Areain, Holinghead, and burnt all the Houses there; and after to the Ifle of Bute. Some fay yet that Striveling would have feiz'd on the Person of Long, had he not forefeen the danger, and efcapid; and that he landed in the Earl of Argiles Country, near the Caftle of Danvin, and atterwards bent it; and took Caintyr and fpoil'd it; and all this with the burnt.

May 15. Other

May 18.

1544 which Exploits, he advertis'd our King then at 1 Boulegne, himself returning in the mean time to Briffol (whence he had his Ships) and flaying there till the Kings arrival in England, who foon after commanded him, with fome Ships, to fcour

the Scottish Coast. Among the Kings Preparatives for War, that of Money was the most difficult: For though he had much enrich'd himself with the Revenues of the fuppreft Abbies; and befides, receiv'd great Subtidies and Loans from his Subjects; yet Fortifications, Shipping and other Provisions had exhausted his Treasure. Besides, he found the Money of his Kingdom much drain'd away by his crafty Neighbours, while they cry'd it up in their Country. For remedy of which Inconveniences, he both enhaunced our Gold from fortyfive shillings to forty-eight shillings the Ounce; and Silver from three shillings and nine pence to four tedMoney shillings: And together caus'd certain base Moneys rant by K. newly coyn'd to be made current; though not without much nurmuring: Which afterwards yet was cry'd down in Edward the IV. his time, and call'd in by Queen Elizabeth. Howfoever, it ferv'd for the prefent to exchange both for Com-modities at home and abroad. Though about two years after our Records mention, that the Low-Country-men finding the Allays (it feems) rejected it.

Men and Money being now provided, there remain'd yet not a few difficulties concerning the Government of the Kingdom in the Kings abfence. Among which, because the greatest was difference in Religion, he endeavour'd to quiet all parts, as finding it impossible to unite them. That of the Roman Catholicks he had already fo curb'd, as they could hardly make head again: And for the Reformers, he thought a Litany publish'd in English little would give them contentment, as being at this time scarce more than pretenders. Therefore he caus'd a Litany or Procession to be set by his Anforth in English, which much fatisfied them, as hoping the rest of Divine Service might follow in the same Tongue. And indeed, our Records tell us, that another English Procession for Festival days was afterwards added. As for the Civil Administration of his Kingdom, it was or-The Qap-ral Regent of the Realm: Not yet fo much, that her foft Sex was thought less capable of Regent Manufacture as the Reman-Catholicks (whom King goes he thought only could flir) would take no defor frame, pendance from her; fine being obfer'd to incline a little to the Reform'd. To direct her Counfels yet, the King appointed the Archbifhop of Canterbury, the Earl of Hertford, the Lord Chancellor, Thomas Thurleby Bishop of Westmin-ster, and Sir William Peter Doctor of Law, one of the principal Secretaries, to be joyn'd in Commission for those Affairs, and on some occasi-ons William Lord Parre of Horton to be call'd to them. It being provided further, if occasion were given, that the Earl of Hertford should be the Kings Lieutenant or principal Captain. Befides which general order for Affairs in his abfence, he particularly appointed certain Noblemen and Gentlemen in every Shire, who should flay there and observe all Motions : And for this purpose, the Bishop of the Diocess in every County (for the most part) and fix or feven other Noble-men, or Justices of the Peace were nominated; Francis Talbot also Earl of Shrewsbury, was made Lieutenant of the North. And now affurance being given that the Imperial Forces were in readiness, he commanded his Army (which confilling of thirty thousand Men, with red, with Caps and Hofe party-colour'd and fuitable (their Caps fitted to their Head-piece or Skull) were led by the Duke of Nor-folk. The Rear in the like Habit, by the Lord Ruffel, lately made Lord Privy-Seal, with whom went Henry Earl of Surrey Marshal of the Field. John Vere Earl of Oxford, the Lord Gray of Wilton, Lord Ferrers of Chartley, Lord Mountjoy, Sir Francis Bryan, and divers brave Lords, Knights, Gentlemen, and others, not a few Welsh and June.

Irish filling up the numbers. These landing at Calais about Whitfontide, march'd directly to Monfrenil, where the Count de Bines Admiral of Flanders with ten thousand Foor, and about three or four thousand Horfe joyning with them, they laid Siege to the Town which Monfieur de Biez Mareschal of France defended; while, at the same time, the Battel, apparell'd in the like Bizarre fashion, (the Colours yet being red and yellow) passing over under the Conduct of Charles Duke of Suffolk the Kings Lieutenant, accompanied by Henry Fitz-Alan Earl of Anundel, Marshal of the Field, William Pawlet Lord St. John, Stephen Bishop of Winehester, St. Anthony Brown Master of the Kings Horle, and others, expected the Kings coming; a speedy advertisement whereof being given, he targed were the start of the start ried not. But we will leave him a while, and fee what the Emperor did.

The Emperors Ambaffadors formerly mentioned, being return'd from our King with good Feb. 20. Satisfaction and great Rewards, the Dier at Spire began, where the Emperor, Ferdinand, and all the Electors in Person did meet: The Emperors chief bufiness was, to require Aid a-gainst the Turk and French their Confederate: Which Francis also suspecting, sent an Herald to require a safe Conduct for his Ambassadors to come thither: But he was rejected with ill words. And now the Emperor endeavouring to divide the Protestants, propos'd so fair and advantagious a Treaty to the Duke of Saxe, that he obtain'd of him to acknowledge Ferdinand King of the Romans. Which Accord, though it were not communicated to, nor approved by the rest of the Confederates, yet they all at last condescended to a Contribution by Pollthroughout all Germany, for a War against the Turk, and half a years pay for four thousand Horse, and four and twenty thousand Foot against the French. In regard whereof the Emperor promis'd to commit the business of Religion to certain good Learned Men, who should write some pious Reformation; wishing the Princes also to do the fame: To the end, that upon compari-fon of them on all fides, fome agreement might be made by common confent, which should be observed till a General Council were held in Germany, or at least a National: And that peace should be kept in the mean while on all parts, and the rigorous Edict of Augsburg suspended, and the Anabaptists punish'd. There was an agreement also to meet again (which follow'd at Wormbs) and so the Diet ended June 10.

The Pope being advertis'd of these passages at Spire, was mightily offended, as being refolv d to tolerate no Reformation whereof himfelf was not Author. Therefore he wrote a sharp Letter to the Emperor, Dat. 25. Aug. wherein he remon-firateth the Inconveniences would follow, if any thing were establisht in Religion without his Intervention: Excluding further the Proteflants wholly from having any voice therein.

April 11. This while the French, under the conduct of displicit Francois de Bourbon Duc d'Anguien, obtain'd at Se-Sandev. rifides in Piedmont, a great Victory against the rifeles in Piedmont, a great was divided into three Battails) to pals the Seas. Sp.mard, commanded by the Marquis of Glaße;
The Vangard apparell'd in blue Coats garded wherein, as the Spaniards conceived, was some fa-

Men transport ed to Can thority.

pointed Regent

day. Howfoever, the French were not a little glorious; yet, as Francis knew the League betwist our King and the Emperor, was directed chiefly against him, he prepard for Defence: And the rather, that he had heard of a fecond Treaty, (which was at Gonzaga's coming over into England, as I take it) wherein both Princes had agreed to march strait on to Paris without befieging any Town, or flaying by the way. Befides, the Emperor had now recover'd Lux-This made Francis refort to the extream remedy in case of Invasion, call'd the Ban and zirriereban, by which all Men holding under certain Tenures, are bound for a certain time, at their own cost and charges, to serve in Person, or at least to provide (according to their degree) Horse and Foot against the Enemy: Which Francis yet converted to a Foot only, and thus he got together an Army of about forty thoutand Foot, and fix thousand Horse. As this yet could not fecure him against two such puillant Advertaries, he difpatched feveral Ambaffadois to both Princes, with power to offer great and advantageous Conditions of Peace, when either of them might be taken off. This while the Emperor , who promis'd our King to march directly to Paris with a great Army) had taken divers Towns in Champagne, as the way unto it, though losing unfortunately René Prince of Orange at S. Differ, who was the fecond of that Family that had died in his quarrel, his Mothers Brother Philibert de Chaalon having been flain 1530. at the Siege of Florence. And now both Armies marching to, as the Imperialifts held the one fide, and the French the other fide of the River of Marne, news was brought to either Camp, that our Army was landed in France, and had befieg'd Boulogne. The Particularities whereof, out of a Diary extant in our Records, I thought fit to extract, and chiefly follow in this Narration.

July 14. Our King, who pals d the Seasin a Ship with Salls of Cloth of Gold, arrivd at Calair the 14th general Hermann Sea to Ca- Emperors High-Admiral attended him, and gave account in what estate and forwardness his Mafters Army and Affairs were about that time: He advised our King also to proceed to Paris without anuling himself about any thing by the way. But he who knew well what Towns the Emperor had taken in his way, would not be diffuaded from the fame Liberty: Therefore he fent the Duke of Suffolk with Forces to invest Boulogne, in which Monsieur de Verven a young Gentleman, but affifted by Philip Corfe, a brave and old Soldier, Commanded. His Forces confifted of a Garifon of about two thousand five hundred paid, and as many more able Townsmen. The Duke in a short space took (notwithstanding resistance) the lower Town, lying on the River of Pont-de-bricq, and the Watch-Tower before Boulogne, (call'd the Old-Man, or the Tour de ordre, thought to be built by fuling Coffee; this haftened the Kings coming; for that diffracting the Emperors Admiral, he July 25. march'd forward in this Equipage, July 25. First, the Drums, Villeurs, Trumpeters and Officers at Arms, then the Barons, and after them Garter-

Herald next before the King's Banner, after which follow'd Don Bertran de la Cueva Duke of Albuquerque (Commander of the Emperors Auxiliary Forces;) next whom came the Kings

Majesty arm'd at all pieces, upon a great Cour-fer; then the Lord Herbert bearing the Kings tality; their Writers observing, that the Battel of hundred Horse of albuquerques Company (where-Ravenna and Gelves were lost upon the same of six were burded with Cloth of Geld) met 1504 him: Also the Earl of Edex (chief Captain of the Men at Arms,) and Sir Thomas Darry with many other Horsemen who set themselves in parade) fo that the Light-Horfe and Demy-Lance went first, then the Guard on Foot, after them the Pike-men, amongst whom the King rode before the Men at Arms; for the Wings, fifty Archers on Horfeback, and as many Harquebufiers were appointed, and fo they came to Marquife, where the Army then encamped that Night, where the Army then encamped that Night. The next day (being the 26.) marching laly towards Boologue, the Duke of Sulfells met the Merindia down before the the Town, near the Sea; divers Skir begg-and mishes passing in the mean time. The 28. John Vifcount Lifle Lord Admiral, July at the Lord Clinton, and about 900 Men, who had fcowr'd the Seas towards Scotland, landed in the Haven at Benlegne.

The 29. Sir Thomas Poynings came to give the July 29 King account of all that pass'd at Monstruel, and in his return took Hardelot Caffle.

The third of August our Battery began on the Aug. 3 East-side of the Town, two Batteries more being afterwards planted against it.

The fixth of August Monsieur de Bures came Aug. 6 from Monstreul; to whom our King gave a brave Courfer richly furnish'd.

The 13th of August the Earl of Heriford came Aug 13. to the Camp; and divers Companies of Almaines and Flemings joyn'd with our Men: Many Sallies and Skirmishes (in which the French ffill had the worse) passing in the mean while. Certain French Troops also endeavouring early Aug 19 in the Morning to get into the Town, were defeated and kill'd; fome nevertheless cleaping into it. Certain Troops of German Horse came now also to the Camp, who were muster'd be-fore the King the next day.

The 24th of August, the Duke of Norfolk from Aug 24.

before Monstreul came and advertis'd the King

how the Affairs pass'd there.

The 27th Alarm was given upon discovering Aug. 27. of fome French Troops

The 29 and 30, our Men approaching still to Au.29,36, the Walls, short Skirmishes past.

Septemb. 1. our Men got the Bray, not yet with- Sept. 1.

out loss of brave Men on both sides.

The fecond of September, fome of our Men Sept. 2. giving a falfe Alarm to the Caftle, at the breach which our Canon had made, other of our Men break up certain Doors into the Caftle; but they being barricado'd within, and well defended, we retir'd with lofs.

The 3d. Sir Christopher Morris Master of the Sept. 3. Ordnance, and chief Director of the Batteries, was hurt with a shot from the Castle. While things pass'd thus afore the Town, a Convoy of Victuals (being fent from S. Omer to the Camp) was taken by the Enemy, and divers Inperialists kill'd. Nevertheless, our English sav'd and refeu'd fome part.

The 4th of Septemb. the Pioneers having brought Sept 4. their Work to the Counter-mure of the Caille, two Mines were fprung, which shiver duhe Wall but made no great Overture.

The 5th our Men fapping the Walls, the French Sept 5 kill'd certain Pioneers.

The 6th another Salley was made, and fome Sept. 6. Workmen were kill'd.

The 9th the Town being brought almost to Sept. 9. terms of yielding, certain Ambaffadors from Franfer; then the Lord Herbert bearing the Kings cit, being John Cardinal du Belley, Puere Reymond Head-piece and Spear, followed by the Henchmen bravely hors'd and appointed. Marching the Marching thus out of Calair with a Princely Train, an General Accord; concern ng which the Earl of English Cardinal du Belley. Hertford ,

July 21.

Tuly 22.

1544. Hertford, the Bishop of Winchester, Sir William Paget, and Sir Richard Rich, were appointed to Negotiate with them at Hardelot Castle: Our King not doubting in the mean time to carry the Town.

September 11. fire was given to the Mine un-Sept. 11. der the Castle, the effect whereof the King went to fee, not without fome danger, the stones flying very far off: Whereupon, our Men pre-fently giving on, many were flain on both opt. 13 The 13th Monfieur de S. Blimont, and Monfieur de sits came out of the Town, and treated of furrendring it.

The 14th, it was yielded upon Condition to depart with Bag and Baggage; but to leave the Victuals and Artillery behind them. It was Sept 14. thought yet the place might have held out longer, but that Philip Corfe was kill'd, with whom (it feem'd) both their Courage and good Fortune ended. And fo, about two thousand Soldiers, and as many others going out of the Town, pass'd towards Monstreul in our Kings besides divers that escap'd another way. Boulogne And thus Boulogne was taken, without any mention in our Diary of Cannon of Wood colour d like brafs, which should be planted against the CaSept. 14. file, as Tradition hath it. And now an horrible Tempest arising, threw down Tents and Pavilions, and Shipwreck'd some part of our Navy in the Haven. Nevertheless, the French Ambassadors came to the Camp that Night; but as their Tents were blown down likewife over their heads, the King courteously permitted them to lodge in the Town.

Sept. 18. The King September 18. the King (attended by Alburquer-The king que) entred Boulogne Triumphantly, the Duke of Town in Suffulk (the Great Mafter, who was fent before Triumph, to take possession thereos,) meeting him at the Gate, and prefenting the Keys of the Town, where, after he had viewed the places that needed Fortification, he gave Audience to the French Ambaffadors: But they hearing the Emperor had condefcended to a Peace (which was publish'd about this time) did lefs insift upon a Treaty with us, and so recurrid by the way of Heldin Sept. 25. Septemb. 25. Some of the Spanish Writers yet use much art to palliate this abrupt Treaty: Therefore they fay, that our King fail'd in his not Never going directly to Paris (as was agreed.) confidering in the mean while, that the Emperor (though having a much clearer way) had taken divers Towns in his passage: Besides, they > himfelf, not regarding the common Interest. All yet were but pretexts: Whereas the real cau-First, That Charles had by this means taken off Francis from his League with the Tirek.

alledg'd, that our King would keep Boulogne for Secondly, That he had engag'd our King in a War against France, and thereby made himself the freer to pursue his own designs in Germany, where he knew the Protestants would grow more refractory, as long as he was in War elfewhere.

Thirdly, That in the Wars of Germany, which he now intended, he thought the French King could more hurt him, than our King do him good.

Sem. 19. The Articles of Peace concluded by thefe two Princes, were ;

I. That betwixt the Emperor Charles V. and Peace between the Francis the French King, and the reft that will enturgeror ter into this League, there be a firm and perpetu-Puzce beal Peace.

II. That the Subjects of both Princes pay Tri- 1544 butes, Rites, and Customs of Merchandize that and the

they were wont to pay.

And they were wont to pay. on one part or other fince the Truce of Nizza, shall be restor'd: And that neither part may take thence more than their Victuals or Ord-

IV. That the Duke of Arefebot shall enjoy his Right in the County of Ligny, &c.

V. That all Places and Fortresses that have been taken from the Duke of Savo, by either of the Parties, or from the Marquis of Montferat, or the Duke of Mantua, Duke of Lorain, Duke of Stenay in Luxemburg, shall be restored. VI. That the King of France shall leave and restore the Abbey and Lands of Garagana in the Emperors hands; as also certain Hostages for performance thereof, and that he shall give unto the Emperor the County of Charoleis to him and his Heirs for ever.

VII. That the Emperor and French King joyn together in a War against the Turk; and that the King shall furnish for this purpose six hundred Lances, and ten thousand Foot.

VIII. That Francis shall renounce all the Right he pretends to hold in the Kingdom of Naples, Sicily, Milan, the Contado of Afri, as also the Right of Sovereignty he had in Flanders, Arteis, Lifle, Downy, Orebies, Townsy, Mortaigne, and S. Amand. Moreover, that the King leave unto the Emperor and his Succeffors all the right that he can pretend in the Dutchy of Gueldres, and County of Zutphen.

IX. That the Emperor likewife shall yield and pass over all Action and Right that he may pretend unto in any State or Seignory of the King, except the Dutchy of Burgundy, the Vicounty of Assistance, the Soveraignty of S. Lawrence, the County of Mascon, Auxerre and Bar upon the River Seine. That he should renounce also that Right he held in the Cities upon the Border of Some, Peronne, Mondidier, and Roye; as also the Counties of Boulogne, Guyenne, Ponthieu; excepting Therotionne, Han, and other places mentioned in Sandoval, and whatfoever in the I state and Limits of Arras.

X. That the Vaffals of either Prince shall be fully restor'd unto all that they had, although they had ferv'd on the contrary side.

XI. That the Flemings may enjoy the Heritage that their Fathers leave them, though themfelves have not been born in France: And that the cuftom call'd Droit D'aubene shall not concern them.

XII. That the ancient and modern Priviledges on both parts shall remain in their force and vigour. To which purpose, the Emperor shall renounce (in favour of the King) the Dutchy of Burgundy, the Vicounty of Auffine, Soveraignty of S. Lanrence, the County of Linguis, Social states ty of S. Lanrence, the County of Linserve, Mission, and Bur fur Seine; and within four Months after the publication of this Peace, he shall procure that his Son Philip, Prince of Spain, shall confirm the fame

XIII. That the Emperor in favour and confirmation of the Peace, shall give his Daughter the Infanta Donna Maria, or (in case he do give her) the fecond Daughter of Ferdinand King of the Romans, that the may match with Charles Duke of Orleans fecond Son to the King: And that he declare his mind therein within the term of four Months after the publishing of this Peace. And that if the Emperor will marry his Daughter with Duke Charles, then he that give them the Estate of Flanders, which at this present is under his Obedience, and moreover, the Datchy of Burgundy and Charolois in Dowry; and that r544. they shall enter into the possession of these Estates after the Emperors Death, to descend upon Duke Charles and his Heirs Males; and that the Emperor yet living, these States shall swear to the said Charles; and that Fbilip Prince of Spain thall fwear, confirm, and approve it.

XIV. That the Marriage being made, the Emperor shall constitute Duke Charles in the Government of Flanders.

XV. That Francis and his Son the Daulphin shall renounce for ever, and depart from any right that they held, or may pretend to hold to the Durchy of Milan, or the County of Afi; and that they shall procure within eight days after the publication hereof, the Daulphin's Bro-ther Charles, and Madam Marguerite to confirm and approve it.

XVI. That if Mary Daughter to the Emperor shall dye without Issue Male, the Estate of Flanders shall revert to Philip Prince of Spain, and to his Heirs: and that the Duke of Orleans in this case may revive his right to the Dutchy of Milan, and Contado of Afri: And that in this case the Emperor likewise may revive his right to the Dutchy of Burgundy, and the rest formerly mentioned.

XVII. That if Duke Charles shall marry with the fecond Daughter of King Ferdinando, he shall give with her the Durchy of Milan, with the Contado of Affi, and all belonging unto them; the Emperor in the mean while retaining in his power the Fortresses of Milan and Cremona: And that the Emperor shall give to them and their Heirs Males the Title and Imperial Collation of the State thereof. And that if the Duke of Orleans shall have no Heirs Males by this Marriage, nevertheless, that the faid Title and Estate shall remain to Duke Charles, and to his Heirs Males by a fecond Marriage. Provided, that the fecond Marriage be made with the good will and confent of the Emperor and his Brother Ferdinand.

XVIII. That the Marriage with the Duke of Orleans shall not be deferr'd more than one year after the day of publication of these Pre-

XIX. That Francis shall give unto his Son the Duke in Dote the Dutchy of Orleans and Bourbon, Chastellerand, and the County of Angoulesme; and if these Estates mount not to the yearly Revenue of 100000 livers Tourneis, that they shall be made up out of the Dutchy of Alanzon.

XX. That if the Duke of Orleans shall have only Heirs Females, each of them shall have for their Portion in Marriage 100000 livres Tournous : And if there shall be but one only Daughter Heir, they shall give her 100000 livres in ready pay; and that if the Duke shall dye first, the Emperors Daughter shall have for her life 50000 livres Tournois yearly; but if it be Ferdinand the King of the Remans Daughter, 30000 only.

XXI. That the King of France shall restore to Charles Duke of Savoy all the Lands that he hath taken from him (except Montmelian and Piquerole) in which the King may hold Garrison all the time that the Emperor shall retain the Caftles of Cremona and Milan.

XXII. That the Duke of Vendosme shall hold the County of St. Paul with the same Right that he possess'd it before the War.

XXIII. That the King of France shall hold Hefdin till it be determined whose Right it is.

XXIV. That in the Cause of Henry de la Britt, pretended King of Navarre, Francis shall not inpretended King of Navarre, Francis shall not in-terpose himself otherwise than a Pacifier; nor in cording to a Bull fram'd for that purpose) & the War that shall be for this Cause betwixt them; propose, determine, and conclude all that was northat he shall take any part.

XXV. That the King shall give unto the Em-ANY. That the King mail give unto the Lin-peror a Writing in due form, in which fiall be declard, that Madam Jone, Daughter to Himy de la Britt, doth fivear that she will not con-fert unto the Marriage agreed with William Duke of Chwe; and that the never confented

XXVI. That the King of Remans (that was the principal Person in composing this Peace) shall enter into, and be comprehended in it; as likewife all other Christian Princes and Republicks that will, keeping the Obedience and Submiffion that of Right they owe unto the Emperor. This being fign'd and feald by the Emperor and French King, and the other above-nam'd, these following Articles were al-

XXVII. That Francis should restore to the Heir of René Prince of Orange the Principality thereof in that manner that Philibert Chaulon en-

XXVIII. That to Philip Croy Duke of Arefchor, entire fatisfaction should be made for all his pretenfions, according to the last Treaty of

XXIX. That the King shall restore to the Duke all the Goods that on his Fathers and Mothers fide belong'd to him in France.

XXX. That if Maximilian of Burgundy gain his Suit in Law, the Places belonging to him shall be restor'd.

XXXI. That the Ranfom which George of Austria promis'd, shall be annull'd and made void. And this was the fubstance of the League agreed, they should defend the ancient Religiconcluded at Crefpie, 19 of September, 15.44. Be- Sept. 16. fides which Articles, I find by fome, that it was on, and reform the Court at Rome: Whereof the Pope being advertis'd, was not yet much troubled; as knowing their Interests so diverse, that they could not long concur. Nevertheless, he hastened the intended Council at Trent, both as the Emperor defired it, and as he thought it fafor to reform himfelf, than to be reformed. Therefore, having underflood that both the Emperor had commanded the Divines of Levain to reduce Religion into fome Method and Arti-cles; and Francis also had enjoyn'd the like to the Sorbonists; he without more delay appointed the Sorbonifts; ne without more using appoint the Council to begin March 15, 1545, and his Popes Le-Legates there to be Giovanni Maria di Monte, gates go Legates there to be Giovanni Maria di Monte, gates go Legates there to be Giovanni Marcallo Cermino again to Bishop-Cardinal di Palestina, Marcello Cervino again Priest-Cardinal di Santa Croce, Reginald Peole Deacon-Cardinal di Santa Maria, (all faithful to him, but Marcello most vers'd in Affairs,) with Infruccions at first, only to observe the Emperors Motions, and govern themselves accordingly.

For as he knew the Diet at Worms would shortly follow, he thought it concern'd him to be attentive; and the rather, that he was jealous left the Emperor, French King, and Protestants should agree upon some form of setling Religion among themselves, and not a little fearful also left our King should intervene: Besides it troubled him much how to comport himfelf with the Affembly at Worms, as doubting, that if he fent a Legate thither, he might be neglected: Wherefore he commanded the Cardinal Alexander Farnese (his Grand-child) to take that place as in his way to the Emperor, and his Nuncio refident with Ferdinand, to go along with him to the Diet. And now to shew he proceeded really in calling a Council, he gives his Legares necessary for extirpation of Herene, to reform

Octob. 3.

Princes, &c. by the confent of the Council. Befides which, he gave them a particular Breve to prolong, transfer, or diffolve it, being the Arcanum of keeping all in his Arbitrement: Nor Bishops only of his Party, as thinking they would be the better prepar'd when the rest came

But to return now to the Emperor: The Treaty betwirt him and Francis being concluded, he fent to Spain to be refolv'd by the Prince and his Council, which of the two Marriages were most convenient. But all came to nothing by the death of the Duke of Orleans, within Sep. 1545. eight months following: Howbeit, fome places taken on either fide were reflor'd, and the Emperors Auxiliary Forces before Menfruel commanded to retire. Which being done, he went shortly after to Bruxels, whither his Sister the Queen of France, Charles Duke of Orleans, and the two Sons of Ferdinand came to him. And now our King expostulating the matter with the Emperor; he, for excusing himself, as well as fatisfying our King, pretended to make some overture concerning the receiving him into the League, as will appear hereafter; yet fo, as it is probable he did not much labour to effect it. The Count of Bures and the Germans being now departed (but not the Duke of Albuquerque and some Spiniards, who (against the Emperors will) remain'd in our Camp) the King com-Sept. 25. manded the Duke of Norfolk (who had made Inrodes into the Country with good Success) to raile the Siege from before Monfruel, and retire to him. And now finding the feafon to be far advanc'd, and little else to be done, our King (after he had Knighted certain Perfons of worth) prepar'd to be gone, leaving the Lord Lifte to command Boulogue with fufficient Forces, and directions what to do upon all occasions. Sept. 30. And thus the 30th of September, he took Shipping at Boulogne, and return'd: The news whereof, being brought to the Daulphin (who a good while fince had rais'd a puissant Army) made him to advance. But the Avant-Coureurs were Oslob. 1. no fooner descried near the Town, but the two Dukes and Lord Privy Seal (who were left be-

Octob. 9 ing in good order to Calais (where Shipping attended them) the Daulphin fix days after attempted between force and stratagem to surprise Boulogne. For, being advertis'd by a Spy that our Approaches were not yet flighted or le-Statagen velled, nor any of the three breaches in the of the Pr. upper Town repair'd, and that the lower Town to furprife in many p'aces lay open, he doubted not but to take it, and in it a great part of the Ordnance and Munition, which are King left there. nance and Munition which our King left there. Thus coming near with all his Forces about Midnight, he commanded Fouquefolles, Tais, Monluc, d' Andelet, Noailles, and certain French and Italian Troops under P. de Maria and others, in hind with the Army) made ready to fight, fending first yet some to offer Skirmish; but the Freich-men sted. Our Army hereupon march-fufficient number, to give on. These with their thirts over their Armour, coming suddenly near the lower Town, sent some before, who (as if in favour of us they would have given the Alarm) cry'd Bowes, Bowes: Hoping thus, that our Men, suspecting nothing, would open the Gares, and thereby give them means to feife on it rill the rest did enter. The Invention was good, and had it been handsomly pursu'd, might have endangered us. But Tais and the Italians entering the lower Town in greater number than that them to be gone; and that his Counfel pre-they could be supposed People in their Shirts, that served all: And such Rodomontades as these did

1544 the Church, to fettle Peace among Christian given. Nevertheless, they so furpris'd our Sentiness, as they shall be supported the Council. Be-Houses without much opposition, because the Pioneers (chiefly) and Victua'lers of the Camp (who had no Arms to defend themselves) were quarter'd there; our Soldiers scarce sufficing to defend the Breaches and Gaps of the upper Town. Howbeit, divers of our Men etcaping, ran to the gate of the upper Town, and there demanded Arms wherewith to defend themfelves; which therefore were cast to them over the Walls in fuch quantity, as now taking Courage, they fell on the French and Italians with that fury, as they kill'd Monsieur de Fuque folles, and divers others who retifted, and chas'd the repub'd. reft, wounding Monfieur de Tais, and taking divers Prifoners: And this was the fuccess of the attempt on the upper parts of low Boulogne. As for that towards the Sea, which Monluc undertook, not without hope (it feems) to fire fome of our Ships, the French prosper'd as little, as being kill'd and taken in great number: Only for Monluc himfelf, it may be doubted where he was in either of these Fights, since he makes no particular mention of them, nor gives any good account of his Person. For though he faith, he came to the Italians, that made a stand near the Church, it must be before our Men fell on them. As for his Allegation, that feme of the English ran away, they were no other than some part of the Corps de Gard, which went to advertise the rest; and for his telling the colours of our Pioneers Clothes (for testimony that he faw them in the dark) it makes little for him, fince with more honour he might have told the colours of our Soldiers Liveries, which were far different, had he feen them. Howfoever, he might flay fafely in the lower Town after the flaughter committed by Tais and the Italians, till our Men (as is before-mentioned) returning with Arms from the upper Town, gave them the chase; who yet could not have defeated them entirely, had not those of the upper Town fallied forth of their Breaches at laft, to fecond them. A little before which time, Minlae, suspecting (it seems) that the English (upon the Alarm given) would fall on him, desir'd (as he consess'd himself) the Italians to make good their Stand, while he kept one of the Breaches from being possels'd by the Eng-lish. But our English now charging Monlue, went further than it or the Town. Howbeit, to show his care, he faith that he fent an Horleman back, to know what was become of the *Itali-*am. But he returning answer, that they were in the Church, or dead, Monluc and some other French provided for themselves. For now Sir Thomas Poynings with a fresh Troop of English out of the upper Town had charg'd them. D'Andleta, Nadileta, and divers others hereupon were advis'd by Monlue to save themselves; as also certain Enfigns, who following his Counfel, got and a few with him, pass'd a shallow water, and fo escap'd by a longer, but a safer way. And thus the Daulphin, who prepar'd to fend succours, meeting the Run-aways, defitted, and the Town was fav'd. But Monluc, to defend himfell, faith, that for all the fear, he kept his wits flill about him, or elfe he had been in danger never to have been Marcfehal of Evance. And Reflection to commend (it feems) his direction in running ons on away, he shews how necessary it is for a Man his thise in danger not to be afraid; and fays, that all iy. the Enfigns had been loft, had he not advis'd rose to give their fellows warning, Alarm was this Gascon use, who (it feems) was a braver Man by Day, than by Night. All which I have more ! particularly observ'd out of our Histories and Records, because, notwithstanding his shameful slight, he strives so much to vilifie our Nation. But how he behav'd himfelf in this Action. may appear by the Dauphin's jearing him at his return, as himself consesset, it being certain, that though he came in later than his Fellows, it was not because he stay'd longer there, but that he went a further way about. But Monlue to excuse himself, said, it was the Dauphin's sault, that he came not in with his whole Army: And therein he spoke rationally; for had the first Attempt been well seconded, he must have carry'd the Town in all likelihood, our Breaches being open, and Men surpris'd. Nor had he better fortune at Guifnes, and other places which the French hop'd to take in; for being beaten thence, he was conftrain'd with his Army to retire, without doing more for this Nevertheless, Francis had recourse to those wonted Arts, by which as much as by Arms, he always advantaged himfelf: Therefore he defired that his Ambaffadors and the Emperors might meet with our King's at Calais, to treat of a general Accord. Which offer being accepted, the Earl of Hertford, and Sir William Paget Ochob. 12. were fent thither : But their defire being, that Boulogne might be first restor'd, the Earl of Hertford reply'd, he had no fuch Commission, and so broke off the Treaty: The Imperialists feeming nothing fcandaliz'd, that it had no better effect.

While Affairs pass'd thus in France, Barbarossa The Death did much spoil on the Coasts of Italy; taking of the Py- Towns, and carrying Captives of both Sexes to the Grand Seigneur at Constantinople, where he shortly after died of a Calenture, being above eighty years old: A great Age for fuch a Pirate as spent almost all his time in fighting either with Men, or the fiercest Elements. happen'd allo in July, this year, upon the Coasts of Gallicia, a Sea-fight between the Spanish and French, in which the Spaniard, under the command of Don Alvaro Bazan (Father of the famous Marquis de Santa Cruz) was Superiour, three thouland French (as Sandoval hath it) being kill'd. The Emperor now in his wonted necessity rate Bar-

July 25. The Spa-niards beat the French at Sea.

baroffa.

for Money, was advis'd by his Council to feife Sand 1 26. on the Revenues of the Church: For which Sand.1 :6. also he obtain'd a Breve from the Pope. Yet. as he would hear what the Religious Persons of that Kingdom could object, he admitted their Deputies, who faid, the right of the Church Goods Deputies, who that the regard to control sound was rather Divine than Humane; that the Church was Christs Spouse, and should be deck'd gloriously; that ancient Rome was Mistris of the World bereton. that ancient Rome was Milfris of the World beretofore, by S. Auguline's Confilion, because the People L5.de Ci. were so devout to their Gods, and so much bonum'd wit Dis Religion: Which reasons yet (it was thought) would not have prevail'd, had he not found o thet ways to have supply'd his wants. Nevertheless, his Son Philip the Second seised on them. though in his Will he commanded them to be

> The glorious return of our King from Boulogne gave much fatisfaction to his Subjects: Yet, as he had drawn a puissant Enemy against him, he took order to fortifie his Kingdom. And because the River of Thames was chiefly to be fecur'd, he caus'd fome Fortifications to be rais'd at Gravefind, as alfoat Tilbury, and afterwards at Dover, Portfmouth, and many other places: He took also an exact account of all his Ordnance, which he diftributed in the most necessary places, lest upon an Invasion, his Magazine being in the Tower of Landon only, the remedy should come too late. I fmall pieces of Artillery, not unlike our Drakes, for defence of his Waggons, of his own Invention, as alfo certain forms of Bulwarks; for he was a great Soldier, and befides, of a fingular capacity in apprehending all the new devices which in thefe kinds now daily appear'd: The Piltol, athele kinds now dany appear at the ratio, among others, coming this year first in request a Pirot mong the French Horse; but not the Society, the best to the state of the society of the whose manner is, not to leave their ancient form Horte eafily, when yet it were for their advantage. Let us look a while on Scotland.

About the time that Lenex, on our Kings part, invaded the West of Scotland, as is formerly related, our Men on the other side entred the Coun-Seventand. try, and took Jedburgh, Kelfo, and other places, June. and then Coldingham: Which being advertis'd to the Governor and Cardinal, they brought an Army of about eight thousand, and some Artillery, to recover the Town. But the Governor suipecting (as it was thought) fome treachery among his Men, posted away suddenly : Which caus'd fuch a consternation in the Scots, that they like-wife were ready to Disband, and leave the Artillery then planted in battery against the Steeple, had not the Earl of Anguis staid some, and with their help conducted it lase to Dunbur. This news was brought to our King at his return from Bottlogne; at which time also the Earl of Lenox came to Court, and acquainted him with his late Actions, and the Affairs of Scotland: Whereupon, the faid Earl, the Lord Dacres, and Sir Toomas Wharton were dispatch'd thither with competent Forces. For, though at the request of the Scots by Sir George Meldre (fent to him when he was before Boulogne) King Henry had granted Truce for a time; yet being newly provok'd, he refolv'd a War. These entring Scotland on the West Border, took Dunfrise, and brought home great Spoils; English inconftraining afforthe People of those parts to con-vade set-descend to a Treaty, and give Holtages for the land. observing thereof. Our Men puff'd up with this good Succes, resolve upon another Expedition.
Whereupon, Sir Ralph Evers (now Lord Evers, and Warden of the East-Marches) and Sir Bryan Layton, this Winter spoiling Tiviot-dale, and other places, and afterward returning to London, requir'd a reward for their Service: Which, by the Duke of Norfolk's Advice, being as much ground as they could win from the Scots, they entred the next Spring (1545.) but were defeated, and flain in great number at Ancram; and among them E- And are vers himself, a brave Lord: Divers also were ta- defeated. ken Prisoners, and particularly, one Read, Al-Mar.1545derman of London; which, that it may not feem strange, I have thought fit to tell the occasion : Our King, for fupply of his wants, having appointed certain Commissioners to receive a Benevolence from his Subjects, they began at London January with the Lord Mayor and Aldermen; among whom, Read refuling to pay his fhare, was fent in Alderman this Expedition, with foill fuccess to it and him- Read fend felf, as at last, he paid more than the Money im- to the pos'd on him, in a Ranfom. As for others, they refuling to excus'd themselves by their penury, in regard the pay the King had taken up to much Corn from them for benevohis use this year, without repaying the price as lence yet; fo that in effect this Benevolence pals'd with much grudging.

The Daughin and French Army being retird, as is formerly related, Monsieur de Biez Mareschal of France, having gather'd some sourteen thoufand Men together, encamp'd the 26th of Janua:-79, 154², near Pertet, a little Creek of the Sea, jan 26, about half a Mile from Boulogne; yet as he had the River of Pont-de-Brique betwirk him and the Town, it was not easie to dillodge him. His defign was to build a Fort there, for holding the Haven of find also by our Records, that there were certain Boulogne in Subjection: Which the Earl of Hert-Vol. II, Kk ford and feven hundred Horse out of the Garisons adjoyning, and with these constrained Biez to retire to Hardelot, by the way charging him often with that fury, as he kill'd many, took two Brafs Pieces, and five Iron, and much Baggage, and with it some of Monsieur de Biez, his Armour. And now Francis finding that these Enterprises fucceeded not, makes huge preparations to recofends ipr ver the Town; hoping together to win Calais, and wholly to expulse the English from those parts.

Wars for

Therefore he sent to Scotland Monsseur de la Brosse, ces to the affittance and afterwards the Seigneur de Lorges, with an Army to joyn with the Scots for invading our Northern parts. On the other fide, that he might fhew how firong he was by Sea, he commanded a great Fleet to be equipp'd; for which purpofe udin (his old Negotiator in Turkey) brought with His Power him five and twenty Gallies from the Levant : The Pope not omitting also to furnish his part: So that he had in all an hundred and fifty great Ships, and fixty of the leffer fort, befides Gallies; his defign being to keep Boulogne from being relieved by Sea, while the Land-Forces befieg d it. He thought fit to begin yet with erecting the Fort before Boulegne, which being to be finish'd (as was promis'd him) by Monsieur de Biez, before mid-ingust, he meant with a puissant Army to entrench himfelf before the Town : Having for this purpose sent to leavy twelve thousand Landskenets, and six thousand stalians; with which, and his own Forces, he doubted not to recover all the places we held in France. Laftly, for the more encouraging his Men, he refolv'd in Perfon to be in, or at leaft, not far from his Army. Coming thus to Havre de Grace, and commanding his Fleet to fet Sail, his fairest Ship (being of eight hundred Tun) taking fire, fuddenly was burnt; yet the rest went on, under the command of Mon-sieur d' Annebault Admiral of France. Coming The French thus to S. Hellens Point, on our Coast, Paulin, with land in the four Gallies was fent to discover the Isle of Wight, and the countenance of our Men; Whereupon. Wight fixty of our Ships coming out of the Haven of

July 18

And are

Portfmouth in good order, exchang'd fome shot with the French, till night parted them. The next day, the Ship which carried their Money, fank, the Money being hardly fav'd. But one of our Ships through accident was loft. Our King this while being come to Portfmouth, as knowing of what confequence the place was, affembles Men from all parts under the command of his Lieutenant the Duke of Suffolk: The French yet landed in three several places in the Isle of Wight; but were as foon repuls'd: Whereupon, d' Amebault having the wind fair, advis'd concerning fighting with us in the Haven at Portfmouth: But the Channel being thought too narrow for them to enter in any great number, they confulted of taking the Ille of Wight: But as it was requifite again to that both Men and time would be wanting. Howtoever, they refolv'd to take in fresh Water; which the Chevalier d' Ause with some Men attempting, was kill'd, and they routed; as also fome others who landed afterwards in Suffex. These bad successes made the French cross over to Portet near Boulegne, where they landed four thou-fand Soldiers, and all the Pioneers which they brought with them to fortifie those places they should have taken in England. And now the wind blowing from the Land, they fet fail again for our Coast; which our King understanding, commanded his Fleet (being an hundred Sail) to offer fight to them; which the Frenchallo had charge to accept; their King not fearing to lofe his hired Ships, as long ashe had Money to procure o-thers: The only difficulty was, in regard of the 1544. fordunderstanding, affembled four thousand Foot, Currents, how to use both Ships and Gallies to-E 5 4 4. gether; for in Calms, when the Gallies made way, the Ships could not ftir; and without them August. they durst not encounter us. And now the French Fleet having gotten a fmall wind, and their Gallies coming on, made towards us, but the wind flackning again, their Gallies fell off; wherewith the wind coming about, and our Fleet invefting them, an hot fight of two hours pass'd betwixt them : But the night parting them, the French re- Sea-fight tir'd fuddenly to Havre de Grace, and appear'd no between more. Our Admiral yet went to Treport in Nor- the English mandy, where landing, he burnt the Suburbs, who were took divers Barks out of the Haven, and io re-worlted. turn'd. D' Annebault, as foon as he came on Sept. 9. shoar, went to the King at Argues the fixteenth of August, expecting the Fort should be finished Aug. 16. before Boulogne; but it was begun eight days only before, and in another place, call'd Outreau, near low Boulogne, whence they might indeed annoy the Town, but not command the entry into the Haven. But Monfieur de Biez affuring the King yet it would be put in defence within eight days more, the French Army march'd on, being four and thirty thousand Foot, and two thousand Horfe, who shortly after encamp'd upon Mount Lambert, being fo near Boulogne, as they could shoot into it with their great Ordnance. The King yet was not in the Army, nor nearer than the Abby of Forrest Monstier, which was eleven Leagues off, whither his Son Charles Duke of Orleans coming, died (as is before touch'd) of a Pefti-lent Fever. This made him fund shortly after Claude de Annebault , and others, to the Emperor, to renew Sept. 9. his Alliance fome other way. But the Emperor, Nov. s. who had now engag'd our King and Francis to a War, and therein reveng'd himself on both, thought it fafer to be Neuter, than to declare himfelf either way: Howbeit, he told the French Ambaffadors, that he would not begin with their Mafter. In the mean while, the English Garison in Octob. Calais and Guifnes, making continual Inrodes, kill'd Monsieur Dampierre, and defeated his Men which, together with the dry answer receiv'd from the Emperor, made Francis to retire to an Abbey near Amiens; his Army yet continuing before Boulogne, without adventuring to lay clote Siege unto it. Only, as all the young Nobles and Gallants of the French Court came thither, divers Skirmishes pass'd; in one of which, Francis Duke d' Aumale, eldest Son to the Duke of Guise, receiv'd a blow with a Lance between the Eye and the Nose, which entered (as the French Writers have it) half a foot into his Head, and there broke : Nevertheless, he coming off, endur'd the taking it out, and was recover'd; divers others of their principal Persons yet being kill'd. And K. of Engnow our King refolving to diflodge them, fent land hires into Germany to levy ten thousand Lanskenets, and Germans. four thousand Horse: Who thereupon coming to Fleurines in the County of Leige, requir'd their pay, as was promis'd; but it not coming at the time appointed, they feifed on our Commiffioners, and return'd, without permitting them to depart till they were fatisfied. This while Monfieur de Biez, being commanded to enter Terre d Oye, took a little piece of fortified ground; which our Men coming to recover, were encountred by his Horse, and deseated: Yet so, as (though far less in number) they kill'd many of their Enemies. The Garifon of Boulogne finding the French Army thus departed, enterpris'd the taking of the Fort; but it was well defended, and they with fome loss constrain'd to retire. The French Army alfo, through the much rain that fell, was forc'd to leave Terre d'. Oye, being a marshy ground, and full of deep Ditches: Besides, our Men gathered towards them. And now this puissant Army re-

1544. turning toward Boulegne, did not think fit to befiege it: Which may feem the stranger, in that Kings Houlhold, a right hardy Gentleman (as Our Historians reym limit hardy Gentleman (as

Our Historians reym limit have without to different we neither had Forces in a readiness to fight with them, nor fo strong a place to defend, but that half their Army (according to reason of War) might have carry'd it in a short space: Therefore they encamp'd themselves only before Parter, until the Fortification were finish'd. This flackness made our Men fo adventrous, that an Enterprise of theirs fucceeded ill, as shall be told the year following.

Monfieur de Lorges (fermerly mentioned) ha-ving brought his Auxiliary Forces (being five thousand Men) July 2. 1545. into Scotland, many Incursions were made. Their Army yet incamped no nearer on the English side than Twede; yet as they pass'd it often, much harm was done. August. Whereupon the King sent the Earl of Hertford Hosilities with twelve thousand Men to Scotland; who debetween stroying all the Towns on the middle Marches, England and Scotpals'd thence to the West, and committed great fpoils: In requital whereof, the Scats thortly after attempted to enter England on the Eaft Borders; Septemb. but were defeated, and many made Prisoners, and among them the Lord Humes his Son, and a French Commander; and not long after the Lord Manwel's Son: But they had their revenge, for five hundred English attempting the West Borders of Scotland, for the most part were taken or tlain.

While our King was thus in War with France

July 2.

land.

Feb. 11.

1543.

Fix.

Aur.

and Scotland, he and the Emperor were not in very good terms; Ships being arrefted on either fide; upon occation (as I gather) that a Spinish Ship, coming from St. Domingo in the West-India, was taken by the English. But we had likewise our complaints. Concerning which therefore a Meeting was appointed at Borborch in Flenders; also about taking certain Imposts rais'd by the Empe-Ju. 1495. ror, contrary to the old Treaty of Commerce; which yet was little regarded, the Emperor endeavouring now nothing more than to get Money. Which the Protestants understanding, and fearing he would make use thereof to invade them, did easily accept an intimate request from Francis, for mediating a Peace betwixt our King and him: Whereupon, they fent to France, Veninger, Bruno, and John Sturmius; and to England, Bambach and John Sleiden the Historian, who at length obtain-Novemb. ing that Commissioners on both sides should meet near ardres, two Months were spent in unuseful Propositions; so that they return'd without ef-Jan. 1546, feeting any thing. Our King, besides that he would have Ardres for quitting the Arrears of his Pension, being neither willing to restore Boulegne, nor to fuffer the Scots to be comprehended in the Treaty. And now the Emperor fearing left a Peace fhould be made without him, thought fit to medi-Novemb. ate (at least in appearance) an Accord, on this occasion; King Harry having sent the Bishops of Winchester and Westminster, and Six Edward Carne to clear some Articles of the Treaty of 1543. with Charles, Francis about the fame time had fent the Admiral d' Annebault thither, as is before related. Whereupon therefore he propos'd a General Treaty, though faintly, and in fuch terms that it took no effect.

This while, Archbishop Cranmer making his advantage of Winchefters absence, endeavoured a fur-ther Reformation; which also our King once condescended to, and gave order for in great part : But before it was brought into Act, the King receiv'd Letters from him, that the League mediated by the Emperor would not proceed, if he the fifter dany Innovation; and fo nothing was done. came, and speech was had of opening the Countitle more happen'd this year worth relation (for cil. But as the Popes designs tended another way, home events) besides the Parliament business he fent the Cardinal Alghandra Errass, his Grand-(whereof hereafter) but the Death of Charles child, to the Emperor now at Wirms, to offer it yol, H. 3. k. 2 large Alligs Houmoia, a tight hardy denutement (as both of our Hifforians term him;) yet withal fo diferent of both of and affable, as he was belowd of all forts, and his observed. Death much lamented. Our King, for his more talk. Honour, causing him (at his own charge) to be honourably bury'd at Windfor.

I shall return now to declare the Proceedings in matter of Religion among the Germans, and in the Council of Trent.

The Emperor with much industry and cunning having procur'd a War between our King and Francis, did now leave them to decide their own Affairs, while himfelf attended wholly his occafions in Germany; his defigns there being much facilitated by the recession of the Turk, who leaving the pursuit of his Conquests in these Northern Parts, meant to dilate himfelf in the warmer Climes of Afia: So that the Emperor having no more business, accounted this year the most quiet of many that had preceded: Though yet he were not exempt from fundry Cares, fome Wars, and the Gout. And now, as he pretended principally to compose the differences of Re-ligion, many Offices were pass'd with the Pope for advancing the Council; which had its beginning and progress after this manner:

The thirteenth of March 1:45, the Cardinal del Proceed-Mente and Cardinal Santa Croce being received by ingoother the Cardinal of Trent, made their publick Entry into Of Trent, the City: But no Prelate being yet come, they fent to Rome, to defire that their testriction in the Bull (to the confent of the Council) might be taken away, and absolute power given to propose, determine, &c. as is before recited: Which the Pope granted. The place chosen was the Cathedral Church, capable of about 400 Persons. Ten days after, Diego de Mendozo the Emperors Ambaf-fador in Venice came, and † fhew'd his Instructi- Mer 23. ons; being, First, to promise that the Spinish Bi. 1 Max. 27 shops should shortly be present: Secondly, to procure, that Reformation in Discipline and Manners should be handled before Points of Doctrine. The Legates hereupon fent to the Pope to have publick Dispatches (when occasion were) to shew Mendoza, and other private Letters to follow. The eighth of April, Ferdinand's Ambaffadors came, the April ?. number of Bithops yet being very few. The first Controversie was concerning the Spanish Ambassadors pretence to precede the Cardinal of Trent : But the business was order'd so as no advantage appear'd. This preparative for a Council being divulg'd, produced divers and contrary effects; fome refolving to believe all they faid, others little or nothing, others again intending to diffuguish those parts that pleas'd them, from the rest. Howfoever, the Protestants in the Diet of Worms The Preprotested against it, as partial and factious: While testant Francis, for the more endearing it, proceeded with gainst Arms against the few Waldonses that remain'd in his them at Kingdom, in that violent manner, as without o- the Diet of ther warning or inftruction, he permitted his Sol- Wiscon, diers (having first committed all infolence in the Mar. 24. mountain parts where they dwelt, towards Prevence and Languedoc) to deftroy more than four Soove thousand Persons which made no resistance. In the mean time, the Cardinal of Trent, for the more fecurity of his City, defind a Garifon from the Pope: But was answer'd, that the Council could not then feem free; which more imported him, than the fafety of the City did the Cardinal. Matters being thus advanced, Cardinal Peri

May.

a Refor-

1544. June.

Strid

1545. large contribution of Men and Money for suppreffing of Hereticks; promifing also to procure help from other Italian Princes; and to proceed with Spiritual and Temporal Arms. He reprefented also how ill the Pope took the late Speech of a National Council, and that the Emperor in this Diet had promis'd another for the fetling of Religion, in case the Council of Trent took no order therein; in the mean while protesting, that he would fooner yield up his Keys to Saint Peter, than fuffer fuch an Affront. Besides which, he had private Infiructions to procure that the right of Inheritance of Parma and Piacenza might be invested in his Brother Ottavio, Son to Pietro Alogsio Farnese (natural Son to the Pope) now Duke thereof, in regard the faid Ottavio had married Marguerite natural Daughter to the Emperor: Which at last also, upon the exchange of Camerino, was granted. And now towards the end of May, there were twenty Bishops, five Generals of Orders, and one Auditor de la Ruota affembled; yet as the Council began not, the Pope being defirous first to see the success of the Diet at Worms, the Bishops defir'd to be gone, but were not permitted. Neverthelefs, Mendoza return'd to his former Ambaffage at Venice, defiring nothing might be done in his absence. The Bishops also weary of their fray, or expense, refolv'dat laft to depart: Which the Pope taking notice of distributed some Money among them. This while Herman Archbish-Archbilth op of Colegne, having made a private Reformation of Religion in his Dominions, by the means lers begins of Martin Bucer and Philip Melantiben, his Clergy oppugning it, complain'd to the Emperor, who cited the Archbishop: With which, though the Pope was offended, yet he did not so much expostulate the matter with the Emperor, as defire to conferve his own Authority: Therefore he cited

July 18. the Archbishop too.

And now in the Diet at Worms the Emperor requir'd aid against the Turk; which the Protestants refus'd as fearing it would be imploy'd against them) unless first good security were given for Peace in the Empire, and that this Council at Trent should be no prejudice to them. But to this the Emperor answer'd, that he could not exempt Buttothis them from the authority of the Council (efpecially, being call'd for their fakes;) yet if they had any just objections against it, that they should come and produce them openly in the Council, and they should have an equal hearing. But the Princes and confederate Cities continuing to except against it, protested those were not to judge of their Caufe, who had already condemn'd it: Therefore, if a Council were had, they should make one part, and Pope and Roman Catholicks the other: And as for the manner and order, that the Emperor and Princes should be Judges; but for the merit of the Caufe, that it should be de-termined only by the word of God. The Emperor finding thus no likelihood of Peace, diffembled his displeasure till he had made Peace with the Turk, (which he did by the means of Francis. this year, in October.) And so the Diet ended the fourth of Lugust, with a Decree to hold another at Ratisbome in January following. For which purposethere should be a Conserence of four Doctors and two Judges on either part, in December, to prepare matters of Religion against that time. And Anguer they again rejected the Council, faying, it was the Protein flants as goad the without other pretext that it could be thought to Canachor be in Germany, than becaute the Bihop of Treat was a Prince of the Empire: Beides, that the Pope (being a Party) should not preide in it. in Trent, and by the Popes power and command, had its Authority. But this reference of the Emperor to a future Diet, as it displeas d the Pope and his Legates, fince the Council was imminent, and appointed for deciding Controversies; fo it made the Bishopsagain take leave to be gone: And in effect, by the end of September sew re-Septemb main'd. The Pope sinding their distinctions, knew not well what to refolve; yet when motion was made for holding it in Germany, he refus'd, but fent to the Emperor to advise with him concerning the opening the Council, or fuspending it, or transferring it to Italy. The Emperor (as Affairs then flood) not much approving any of these Propositions, at last (in October) gave consent the Council should open: Yet so, as they should treat of matter of Reformation, and not of Doctrine, for fear of provoking the Protestants. This, again, gave the Pope no little jealousie, lest the Emperor would make his Ecclesiastical Authority obnoxious to the Diet and Conference. Howbeit, he commanded the Council should begin the thirteenth of December: The French Pre- Olobar. lates, being but three, having written to their King moft of thefe Palfages, were fent for home; yet, at the interceffion of the palfages, were fent for home; The direcends of December being come, Dec. 13. the Legates (after a folemn Feaft and Proceffion) meeting in the Cathedral, open'd the Council, TheCoundeclaring, that it was affembled for three Caufes; cilopen'd. 1. Destroying Herefie. 2. Reforming Discipline. 2. Setling Peace: Exhorting the Bishops to labour feriously herein. After which, the Emperors Instructions to Mendoza (formerly mentioned) being again exhibited, the Legates faid, they would advise thereof: And so appointing the next Session to be held January seventh following, they arose, and presently sent to the Pope, declaring what was done, and defiring to know how they should begin; whether with Herefies, and if so, whether they should touch the Heresies, or Per-fons, or both? Whether they should fend forth a Declaration that the Council was begun, and invite the Princes and Nations that would, to come? Whether they should hasten or delay their Proceedings: In what manner the Suffrages were to be collected? &c. The eighteenth of December Dec. 18. they met in Congregation, and began to treat of a Reformation of Manners, Habits, &c. The Pope hearing thus the Council was open'd, writes, that concerning the matters to be handled, he is not yet refolv'd; in the mean time, that they should infift on the usual Preambles: That they should follow in their manner of Suffrages, the last Lateran Council: That they should invite no Prince or Prelate, fince the Indiction of the Council was fufficient: As for the charges of the Bishops, some exemption from payment of Tenths was granted, and some other Benefits, and Money given to the poorer fort: All which I have set downwith more particularity, that it may appear, both what a flow and uncertain beginning this great Council had, and what a different end it took, from that it now feem'd to promife.

a Council should be first discussion, and whence it

1545.

I will conclude this year with the business of our Parliament; which began the 23 of Novem-Novemb. ber, 1545. Which, as it was the laft the King Parlia-call'd; to, supply of Money being the principal ment Affair, it feem'd to comprehend all that could be given, at least of other Mens; neither was there other excuse than the Kings Necessities, which every Man must think violent, when they trench'd upon the reverend Foundations of Colledges, Free-Chappels, Chantries, Hospitals, Fraternities, Brotherhoods, Guilds, and flipendiary Prietts which had continuance in Perpetuity, together with all their Manors, Lands, and Hereditaments, Therefore, that the form and manner of holding which now the Parliament committed to the Kings of others being yet fav'd, and divers Provisions made. For motive whereof, the Kings great charges in his Wars with France and Scotland were alledg'd; as also the abuses of the Rulers and Governors of the faid Colledges, &c. Upon which therefore, and his folemn promife to the Parliament, that all should be done to the glory of God, and common profit of the Realm, the Act pass'd.

Aug. 4.

Several

In another Act it was declar'd, how offenders

Acts pass. in Usury should be punish'd; and a certain proportion of ten in the hundred was limited. Which yet, had it been lower, would have made Lands more valuable, Merchandize and Victuals cheaper, and adventuring by Sea more frequent : That lazy way of thriving being more opposite than any thing else to that Industry by which all Kingdoms fubfift and flourish. That Doctors of the Civil Law, although Laymen, whether Married or Unmarried might exercife all manner of Ecclefiaftical Jurifdiction, to which they shall be deputed. That two Churches, being not above a Mile diftant, and one of them not above the yearly vathe of fix pound, may be united into one.

That where a full Jury did not appear, a Tales might be granted de Circumstantibus: And this was much for the expedition of Justice,

That whereas the Lord Chancellor of England, Lord Treafurer, Lord Prefident of the Kings Council, Lord Privy Seal, and the two chief Justices, or five, or four, or three of them should have power by their discretions to set the prises of all kind of Wines, as by the Act 28 Hen. 8. 14. appeareth: The time was now specified to be be-twixt the twentieth of November and last of De-cember: And that if any Wine-feller should fell his Wine in gross at any other price, that the Mayor, Bailists, Aldermen, &c. may enter into his House, and fell it according to the rate fet down.

A Subfidy also was granted by the Spiritualty of fix shillings the Pound, and by the temporalty of two shillings eight pence the pound in Good and four shillings the pound in Lands, to be paid all within two years. And so the twenty-fourth Dec. 24.

Of December the Parliament was prorogu'd: At which time, the Speaker of the Lower Houfe making an eloquent Oration, the King in Perfon made this enfuing Answer; being the more memorable, for that it was both full of good Intention and Advice, and the last he ever spake in that place.

The K's A Libergh my Chanceller for the time being both he-laftspeech of fore this time us d very eloquently and fulfitanti-tohis Far ally to miske answer to such Orations as have been set liament. forth in this High Court of Parliament; yet is be not so able to open and fet forth my mind and meaning, and the fecrets of my Heart, in so plain and ample manner, as I my self am, and can do. Wherefore, I taking upon me to answer your elequent Oration (Mr. Speaker) fay, that where you, in the name of our wel-below d Commons, have both praised and extell d me for the no-Comments, owere over years a ene extou a me for the no-table qualities that you have conceived to be in me, I most beartily thank you all, that you have put me inre-membrance of my Duty, which is to endeavour my self to obtain and get such excellent qualities, and necessary vertues, as a Frince or Governor should or ought to have; of which Gifts I recognize my slif both have and havren: But of such small qualities as God hath indued me withal, I render to his Goodness my most humble thinks, intending with all my Wit and Diligence, to get and acquire to me such notable Vertues and Princely Qualities, as you have alledg'd to be incorporated in my Person.

dispose, and that they should be in the order and sure, but for your defence; not for our gain, but toour survey of the Court of Augmentation; the Right great cost which we have lately sustained, as well in great cost which we have lately sustained, as well in defence against our and your Enemies, as for the conquest of that Fortress which was to this Realm most different pleasant and mostome, and shall be (by Gods Grace) berustive to our Nation most prostable and pleasant,) have freely of your own minds granted to us a certain Sulfish; ber jour out a different which we'll we take in and tower, wearding more your kindness, thus the in good part, regarding more your kindness, than the profit thereof, as he that skitch more by your loving Hearts, than by your Substance. Besides this hearty kinds kindness, I cannot a little rejoice, when I consider the perfect trust and considence which you have put in me, as Men having undoubted hope, and unfeigned belief in my good doing and just proceedings for you, without my defire or request, have committed to mine order and my define or requely, have committed to mine order and all position all Chimtries, Colledges, Hospitals, and other places specified in a certain Act, firmly trusting that I will order them to the glary of God, and to the profit of the Commonwealth. Surely, if I (contrary to your expectation) should suffer the Ministers of the Church to the American American Could be the sure of American Country to the contrary of the contrary to the contrary of the contrary to the contrary of the contrary decar, or Learning (which is to great a Jewel) to be minished, or poor and miscrable People to be unrelieved, you might stay, shat I being put into so special a trust as you mignt 1935, time to ting put mo to permission, at am, in this cafe, were no trufty friend to you, nor charitable to mine, even as a Christian, neither a lover to the Publick-wealth, nor yet one that feered God, to to the runner-weath, nor yet one rout feared Goa, to whom account muft be rendered of all out doings. Dends not, I pray you, but your expectation shall be ferril more godly and goodly, than you will miss or defer, as bereafter you shall plainly precieive. Now, shit is find such kindness in your part towards me, I cannot confe but love and favour you; affirming, that no Prince in the World more favoureth his Subjects, than I do you; nor no Subjects or Commons more love and obey their Soveno Subjects or Commons more love and oby their Sover-reign Lord, than I perceive you do; for whose defence my Treesure shall not be bidden, nor (if needsty re-quire) my Person shall not be unadvocurred. Yet al-though I wish you, and you wish me to be in this persect love and concord; this friendly amity cannot continue, except both you my Lords Tenaporal, and my Lords Spi-ritual, and you my loving Subjects study and take pains to amend one thing, which surely is amis, and sir out of order; to the which I most bearily require you; Which is that the which I most be to a mone? wou, but Which is that Charity and Concord is not among & you, but Discord and Dissention beareth rule in every place; Saint Paul faith to the Corinthians, the thirteenth Chapter, Charity is gentle, Charity is not envious, Charity is not proud, and so forth in the said Chapter, Bebold then, what love and charity is amongs you, when one calleth another Hervick and Anah, pitis; and be calleth him again Papis, Hyporite and Pharise? Be these tokens of charity amongst you? Are these signs Be toge tokens of country among the year to the figure for fraternal love between your No, no, I affire you, that this lack of Charity among your selves, will be to bindrance and assuring of the servent love between us (as I said before) except this meant be said and clearly made whole. I must need yudge the fault and occasion of this discord to be partly by the nigligence of you the Eathers and Preachers of this Spiritualty: For it parine Enteres and Frencotts of unsignatury. Fingle I know a Man mibic liverth in Adultery, I muft judge him a Lecherous and Carnal Perfor: If I fee a Max booft and liveg himfelf, I cannot but deem him a groud Man. I bear daily, that you of the Clergy preach one against another, without charity or discretion; some be too stiff in their old Mumpsimus, others be too busse too jetj in there is a Mulliplimus, starts we too stage and curious in their new Sumplimus: Thus all Mea, almoss, be in wariety and discord, and five or none preach truly and sincerely the word of God, according as they ought to do. Shall I judge you charitable Persons de-ing this? No, no, I entmor so do: Alan, how can the ng total 10, no, 1 canno 3 our Anis, our variation for a-meng (them, in your Sermons, debate and disport?) Of you they look light, and you bring them to dinkness. Amend these Crimes, I celort you, and set forth Gods Toole thanks for your loving admonition and good coun-fel fulf remembred; I efilosos thank you again, because that you considering our great charge, (not for our plea-dinister here, will fee these Divisions extinct, and these 2545. Enormities corrected according to my very Duty, or elfe

I am an unprofitable Servent, and untrue Officer. Although, I fay, the Spiritual Men be in fome fault that Charity is not kept amongst them: Yet the Temporalty Charity is not kept amough them: Tet the temporally be not clear and uniforted of Malite and Envys. For you rail on Bifthers, speeck, florderensly of Priests, and rebuke and tount Preachers; both convary to good order and Christian Fraternity. If you know sheety that a Bifther are Preacher erectly, or teacheth perverse Destrine, converand declare it to some of our Council, or to us, to whom is committed by God the high Authority to reform and crcommittee by weat the new amounty to rejorm and the fuels caules and Belowciours: And be not Judges of your felves, of pure phantifical Opinion and vain Explicion. In Jude high Caules you may lightly erre; and although you be permitted to read holy Scriptures, and to bave the word of God in your Mather-Targue, you must understand, that it is licensed you for one of the sound to dispute, and more Children and Emiliee; and not to dispute, and more Scripture a vailing and tanning flood, against Priess and Preachers, as many light Persons do. I am vary furry to know and hear, how uneverently that most precises fourly, the Werd of God, is disputed, vimid, Jung, and jangled in vary Albertse and Trunn, contrary to the time meaning and deivine of the same: And yet I are even as much sorry, that the Readers of the same follow it in doing to faintly, and so coldly. For of this am sare, that Charity was mover so faint amongs you, and vectuous and odly living was never less und. der fuch Caufes and Behaviours : And be not Judges of you, and vertuous and godly living was never less us d nor God himself among Christians was never less reve-Therefore, as I said before, rene'd, bonour'd or forv'd. be in charity one with another, like Brother and Brother; love, dread, and serve God, to the which, I, as your Supream Head and Sovereign Lord, exhort and require you : And then I doubt not but that Love and League that I Spake of in the beginning, shall never be differed or broken between us. To the making of Laws, which you have now made and concluded, I exhort you the Makers, to be diligent in the putting them in execution, as you were in the making and furthering of the same; or else your labour shall be in vair, and your Commonwealth nothing reliev'd. And now to your Petition concerning our Royal Affent to be given to fuch AEls as have pals d both Hou-Jes, they shall be read openly, that you may hear them. Ind so they being read, the King effected, and rose.

The Parliament thus ended, and notice given to both Univerfities that the Colledges were at the Kings dispose, that of Cambridge first implor'd his favour, befeeching him to defend their Poffef-Oct. 15.46 fions from the covetous and greedy minds of those The Univ who knew not Learning. That of Oxford also Petitioned to this purpose; and Doctor Richard Cox Dean of Oxford, the Princes Tutor, writ to Secretary Paget, to represent the lack of Schools, Preachers, Houles of I ivings for Orphans. And fince the disposition of Chantries, &c. was in the Kings hands, to obtain that the Clergy might be provided for honeftly, left Beggary should drive them to Flattery, Supersition and old Idolatry: Which (faith he')! I peak not, as if I distrusted the Kings goodness, but because there are such a number of importune Wolves as are able to devour Chantries, Cathedral Churches, Universities, and a thousand times as much: Adding in conclusion, that Posterity will wonder at us. Which particulars being in an Original from Cox, I have the rather inferted, that it may be gather'd what he was, to whom the tuition of the young Prince was committed by the King. But much intreaty needed not for the Universities; for in Od 1546, our Records, a Letter mentions, that the Univerfities did humbly thank his Highness for the continuance of their Houses with their Lands;

ving advis'd once of placing all the Civilians in Oxford in one Colledge, and the Physicians and Chyrurgions in another. Howfoever, nothing was ftirr'd or alter'd, that I can find; the King being fo far from diminishing those famous Nurferies of Learning and Piety, that he rather help'd to increase and augment them. Though yet foreign parts were astonished not a little, why our Parliament should put them in this hazard, they being useful on any part, and their Endowments not to be alienated without fingular prejudice to their Founders; who having feparated them for the fervice of God, and publick Education, laid heavy Imprecations on any which should divert them from that use; as appears in the ancient Charters.

The Earl of Surrey (who now commanded in 1545.

Boulogne) hearing that a Convoy of Victuals was coming to the Fert at Oultreau, refolves to intercept it: But as the Rhingrave with four thousand Lanskeneets, tegether with many French under the Marefehal de Bicz, flood firm, our Men, not able to break them, were difcomfited, and Sir Edward Pornings, with divers brave Gentlemen flain; the Earl himself also being constrain'd to fave himfelf as he could. Nevertheless, by a Letter of his to the King, Jan. 8. 1546. it appears Jan. 8. there were many kill'd on the other fide; which Earl of yet did fo little fatisfie our King (who lov'd no surreptails) and notie but of Victory) that he ever after disaffected him: For which cause also he was shortly removed, and the Earl of Hersfird appointed to succeed. Whereupon Sit William Peget omitted not by Letter to admonish him to seek some eminent place in the Army, under the faid Earls command, left (as he faid) he should be unprovided in the Town and Field. But the Earl desirous in the mean time to regain his former favour with the King, Skirmishes with the French, and puts them to the worst: But when together he certified that Records, the French had made Canon of a greater Calivre than had been yet seen, wherewith they hop'd to beat the Town to Powder, and that it was worthy Confideration, whether low Boulegne should fland, as being not defensible, the Kings Coun-March. cil wish'd him to repair home, that he might be further heard concerning these Points. Where-upon the Earl of Hertford and Lord Admiral were sent over with an Army of nine thousand and three hundred Men; whereof one thousand five hundred were Spaniards, two hundred were Italions, three hundred Clevois, and three thousand Lanskeneets, under Conrad Pfenning; a greater number of foreign Soldiers certainly than stood with exact reason of War, where there is no asfured ground of a vertuous emulation. With thefe the Earl encamp'd at Hambleteufe, betwixt Calais and Boulogne: For as the Freuch intended to inter-cept all intercourse betwixt both places, they would have fortified there; but our Men got it two days only before they came, and built two Forts on that Coast. Some fights pass'd at Sea this while, whereof one is memorable, of feven or eight English in a fmall Vessel, who being mafter'd by a far greater number of French, entred their Ship, as pretending to fave themselves out of their own Barque, which now began to fink; but finding certain Lime-pots there, they by cast ing water on them, rais'd fuch a fmoak, as, through their continual throwing of them, blinded the French, and at last made them run under Hatches, where at length being that up, their Ship was brought away. Much fighting also pals'd betwixt our Ships and the French Calleys, in Calms, while through the benefit of their Oars figure which though, I believe, the King never meant they took and left as they pleas'd. And now, as they to take away, yet I find two of the Professions the Strangers in our Army began to take head, twere in danger of being remov'd, the King hat

Feb. 14 Records. verfities rice that all rheir Majeffres disposal.

falling on the English; but the Spaniards standing stice; which shall be made plain by Letters of firm to our fide, all was compos'd. The 2r of May the French Army came and encamp'd beyond Boulogne, near the Church on the Hill, their Fleet being in the Road under them: This made the Earl of Hertford come up and Skirmish with them. The 23d ke fought again, and took divers Prisoners of note. And now each fide attending his advantage to fight, a Surfeance of War for five or fix days was concluded, and after it a Peace: Which, that it may feem less ftrange, I shall not fo much alledge (for reason) that our Kings Treasure was exhausted (which the French pretend,) as that the confideration of the imminent Council gave all Christian Princes occasion to desire good intelligence among themfelves, and our King particularly; who was advertis'd, that Cardinal Poole and others would labour to procure a Decree against him and his Po-fterity: Which, though our King regarded not otherwise than became a Prince of his Courage; yet he thought it more confiderable than the Popes fingle Bull; therefore he endeavour'd to get him Friends: And because he was in good terms already with the Emperor, who for the fetling of Religion eachwhere mediated a General Peace, he thought fit also to take in Francis; and the rather, that among certain private Conventions in the following Treaty, Francis had promis'd his affiftance on all occasions: And thus the Peace Which I find was fo politickly handled by our King, that had his Predecessors obferv'd the rule he now held, the French Writers could never have fo much gloried in their Treaties. For as he capitulated to hold the Town for eight years next ensuing, he got the present advantage; which as the eternal Maxim in matter of Treaties, to frame Counfels by, I recommend to the Genious of our Country; fince by the practice thereof only, I dare fay, the French have usurped and won so much upon us; as knowing it impossible, but that betwixt Neighbouring Princes, in a little space, those occasions may be found or urg'd, which will help them to come off when-foever they are dispos'd. There will be no danger therefore to retort this Maxime: Not yet that I approve a facility in diffolving Leagues, which should be inviolably kept, especially while the causes remain; but that they being dissolvid, we may prevail our felves of the prefent occasion; not omitting yet any Circumtances, to which in

I. That all Injuries and Affronts fince the be-ginning of the last War, should be forgotten, and

Peace and Friendship re-establish'd.

II. That neither should invade, nor procure, nor permit to be invaded any of the Dominions, or Lands, or Cities which are now in the hands of the other.

III. That the Subjects of one shall have free commerce through the Dominions of the other, and free passage without safe conduct, so they exceed not the number of an hundred arm'd Per-

IV. That during this Peace all Impositions which either Prince hath laid on the Subjects of the other, within twenty years last past, shall be releas'd, and no new ones impos'd.

V. VI. That Rebels and Traitors shall not be entertain'd or protected: But deliver'd to their Sovereign within 20 days after requificion. VII. That no Letters of Reprifals or Merque, or counter-Merque should be granted but upon and against the principal Delinquents and their tain'd in the Treaty of the date of April the sist. Goods, and that, in case of open denial of Ju- 1515, with this alteration, that although by the Summonition and Requisition. And if any thing during this Peace should be done contrary to it by any Subject of either Prince, the Ossendorsto be punish'd, and the Peace to remain.

VIII. That the Christian King shall pay the King of England all Pensions due to him during his Life, and also to his Successors for ever, according to the Treaty at More, 30 August 1525. As also that Pension of Salt agreed on the 30th of April, 1527. and afterwards reduc'd to a certain Sum of Mony, (viz.) 10000 Crowns, which isto be paid yearly at two payments, during the natural life of Henry VIII. if the faid payment appear not to be perpetual: But if it be found to be perpetual, then the French King and his Heirsand Successors shall continue the said Pension for ever.

IX. The French King shall pay to the King of England on the Feast of Saint Michael (or within ten days after that day) which shall be Anno Domini 1554. for Arrerages, as well of Pensions not paid, as for his charges in Fortifications within the Town and Country of Boulogne, fince the beginning of the last War, either already rais'd, or to be built betwixt this time and the faid 1554. the fum of two Millions of Crowns de Soleil; upon the payment whereof the faid most Christian King shall be free from all former Arrearages whatfoever.

X. Because the King of England, by vertue of certain Letters of the French King, dated 29 Jan. 1529. claims as due unto him, the fum of 500000 Crowns de Soleil, 22 Sols and 6 Deniers: It is agreed that there shall be Commissioners appointed on both fides (within three Months hence) to hear and end that cause; which sum the King of France (if it be so adjudg'd) shall pay when he pays the two Millions aforesaid. But if the Commissionners conclude nothing, the matter shall be devolv'd to four Lawyers that are Subjects to neither Princes, to be chosen by them, and that shall ftand which three of them determine.

XI. That the King of France shall fuffer the King of England quietly to enjoy the Town of Boulogne, and the Castles and Territories thereof, within the Bounds following: viz. the Haven of Boulogne, with the farther shoar, as far as the highest water comes; and the Land in length as far as Pont de Brieque, which shall be the limit on that part, the River there remaining common to both Princes: All within these bounds the King of Princes: All within these bounds the King of point of Oath and Honour we are obliged. This England shall quietly possess, until the King of present Treaty (concluded the seventh of June, 1546. at Campe, a place betwixt airdres and Guispers) was of this Tenor:

XII. That when the faid Sums are paid, at the fame time the King of England shall surrender Boulogne, with all the Territories taken by him in the late War, and all Fortifications built there by him fince the taking thereof, fo that no Fortifica-tion shall be impair d. Neither shall the King of England be bound hereby in the restoring of the faid places, to leave behind him any Moveables.

XIII. That from the date hereof, to the day of St. Michael, 1554 neither of the two Princes shall raise any new Fortification within the County of Boulogne (but those that have been begun already they may perfect.

XIV. The Emperor is comprehended by both the Princes, by force of the perpetual Confedera-

XV. The Scots are comprehended in this Treaty, against whom the King of England shall not wage War, unless new occasion be given; in which case, this present comprehension of the Treaty ded hetween Henry and Francis.

May 23.

May 24.

1546. faid Treaty of 1515. fifteen days only were pre-ferib'd to the French King to intimate the faid Comprehension to the Scots, yet now, by reason of the distance of place, there is allow'd the space of thirty days, next following the conclusion

> XVI. This Treaty shall be ratified within forty days after the date hereof.

Commissioners for our King were, John Viscount Lifle, Admiral; Sir William Paget, Secretary; and Doctor Nicholas Wotton, Dean of Canterbury.

And on Francis his part, Claude d' Annebault Mareschal and Admiral of France ; Pierre Raymond, premier President de Rouen; and Guillaume Bouchecel, Secretary.

This Peace being proclaim'd in London upon the thirteenth of June, a general Procession was there made, and all the richest silver Crosses out of the feveral Parish-Churches carried, and the bravest Copes worn, for the greater Solemnity: But our Historians note it as fatal, it being the last time they were publickly us'd, since our King call'd them in shortly after, together with the Church-Plate, into his Treasury and Wardrobe, without that other cause appear'd thereof, than that he fuspected the War would break out again betwixt him and Francis, of which also this overture was given. The Eurl of Hertford being certified (during the Treaty) that the Clause of not making any May 25. new Fortification, would be prejudicial, was commanded by our King immediately to raife a Fort according to a Plot given; but such was the prevention of this diligent Earl, that he had already begun it about the thirteenth of May. Our King in the mean while protefting that he liked not the Article. But the French as little liking our Fort, (as collecting thence we meant not to re-ftore Boulegne) fome difficulty was interpos'd. Though as our King answer'd, he could not so much as hope to keep the Town, for the term agreed, unless he had means to secure ir, the Treaty held in the manner above-mentioned, and both Armies were dissolved; the French yet first, as our King required, retiring. And so he remained in quiet possession thereof, after the expense (as I find in our Records) of 586718 li. 12 s. 3 d. !;. in the winning thereof. The charges in keep-In all 1342552 li. 3 s. 7 d. ... An excessive Sum, especially to reap no benefit thence, but a Landing-place in France, which Calais formerly afforded. This Peace was feconded by a kind Invitation of Francis to our King to Christen the Dauphins Daughter, which being as lovingly accepted, Sir Thomas Chenney was fent over, and the Child call'd Elizabeth. The two Admirals also were sent by their feveral Kings, to receive the Oaths requir'd for observance of this Treaty; and, being richly rewarded, return'd. Howbeit this Peace was not intire; for if our King conceiv'd it law-ful to finish the Fort he had begun before the Treaty, the French wanted not pretexts for the like; therefore, when upon their creeting a Fort at Portet, near the entry to the Haven (which they call'd Chaffillons Garden) our Men took exceptions thereat, the French for their best Title alledg'd that Monficur de Biez had formerly begun it by entrenching his Men there; yet as this did not fatisfie our King, who knew well the diffe-rence betwixt a Trench and Fortification, he com-

A Fier our most hearty Commendations to your good Lordship, this shall be to signific unto the same, that the Kings Majesty being inform'd that the Frenchmen begin to fortifie at Portet, which by their Treaty men begin to fortife at Portet, which by their Freaty with his Majesty they ought not to do, required your Lordshipto speak with the doers of the said Works, and to tell them it shall be best for them to stay working any further, until they shall hear from their Muster; which without doubt, it like to be very shortly; for that his Majesties Ambassade hat be charge to speak with him in the same immediately. And in case they shall answer again, that either they will not, or dare not leave working without the knowledge of Monsieur de Biez, or ing neithout the knowledge of Moniter to Dice, or (peradventure) of fuch other whom they shall name to have the charge of the Works; and so go forwards shill in their Works: Then his Majesty pleaseth, that if you shall find your selves able emongly for the feat, you shall in the night overthrow that which they have wrought. And in case you shall find your selves not able enough for the same Enterprise; then to forbear the doing of it until such time as a stronger force come to you from bence, which shall be fent over with all diligence possible.

This 5th of Septemb. 1546.

This also was sign'd by the King. Neverthe-Sept. 6: 10 lefs, upon better advice, the King thought fit to Lord 6: 10 order'd to fend Sir Thomas Palmer with a Message to the Lord order'd to Grey, commanding him immediately to demolish the French the Fort; who thereupon made that hafte, as be-Fort fore the Letters came, he arriv'd at Boulogne, be-building ing the very day of his dispatch; and presently, at Portet. by the affiftance of the Lord Grey, Mr. Popnings, Sept. 6. and some others, the French-mens Work was levelled: and so Palmer return'd to certifie what was And now the Kings Letters being deli- Sept. 7. done. ver'd, the Lord Grey writes, that before the receit of his Letters, he had (upon fuch relation of his Majesties pleasure, as was made by Sir Thomas Palmer) overthrown the Work at Portet, and there-fore desires his Majesties Pardon. Which passage I have related more particularly out of our Records, that I might correct the error of fome of our Historians, who would have our King deliver Paimer a Meffage and Letter that were contradictory: Whereas it appears by our Records, that the Message was first deliver'd, and the business done before the Letters came. Though I will not deny, but the Lords of the Council, knowing the Letter was fent, but not (perchance) any thing of the Message, might have occasion to think the Lord Grey more forward, than that he could well justifie it. Howfoever, Monsieur de Biez complains hereof to the Lord Grey, and defires to know whether it were done by his Majefties command. What he answer'd, I find not: Records. But it appears by the Instructions given to Nicholas Wotton the Kings Anibassador with Francis, that he had charge to palliate the bufiness as handsom-ly as he could; which also so prevail'd, that no new Fortification was erected by the French, during our Kings time. Besides, our Records tell us, hope was now given, that Francis would reus, nope was now given, that Francis would re-nounce the Popes Authority in his Kingdom: Hopes. Which, though much entertain'd at first by our chat Fran-is would king, and judg'd the more probable, that the renounce Emperor and Pope did wholly govern the Counte Pope's cil, was not yet so throughly embrac'd, less (per-Authori-chance) by Confiscations, Suppressions, & Francis might grow greater than flood with the interest of State or Neighbourhood: And for Paget, he faid openly, it was but a trick to get Boulogne again; Francis being not able to give any fecurity for performance of this offer, which might countervail the immediate furrendring of that manded Sir William Paget to write thus to William, Place. Howbeit, Arguments wanted not, that Lord Grey of Wilton, who now commanded in he was in carneft, both as he treated of a Confe-

Taly August

Sept. c.

Fox

August.

Crammer

for the French

Thuanus

Elizabet

p opos'd

riage to

of Spain

Hift.

compiles a Form

1546. deration with the Protestants at this time; who And moreover a Seat was particularly appoint- 1546. vet (as I find by our Records) rejected it, unless he relinquished the Papal Authority: And as he lived in such Jealousy of State with the Emperor; which together with the apprehension of the Affembly at Trent, now daily increasing, might for more than one reason dispose him to feek Friends elfewhere, as well for defending himself against his Enemies, as establishing an ab folute Power and Jurisdiction at home. with this concurs that which Fox relates: That during the stay of d' Annebault in this Court, Treaty was had betwixt both Princes of changing the Mass in their Realms unto a Communion : And that both were fo throughly and firmly refolved therein, that they meant to exhort the Emperor to do the like in Flanders, and other his Dominions, or elfe to break with him; and that our King particularly had willed the Archbishop Cranmer (as himself confessed) to pen a Form to be fent to the French King to confider of. But through the death of both Princes succeffively not long after, these and all other their Designs ended: Though yet for the time which of Divine Worship remained, their former Love and Correspondence was fo reviv'd, as Francis is faid (by the French Writers) never to have rejoiced heartily after the News of our King's Death was brought him. But I leave the cenfure of these Passages free to the

Let us now fee what was done by the Emperor, and the Council of Trent.

Reader's Judgment, without delivering any Opinion, otherwise than as the Collections out of our Records feem to infer.

THE Emperor in the latter end of 1545 being in Flanders, the Bishops of Winchester and West minster (formerly mention'd) resided with him on our King's part : And because one of the bufinesses of the French about this time was to offer a Match betwixt the Prince of Spain and the Daughter of Francis, our King commanded Winebester to hinder it, and propose the Lady Eliza-The Lady beth. Also Speech was had of a Marriage betwixt our Prince and one of Ferdinand's Daughters: But because neither of these took effect, I shall mention them no otherwise. Yet the Bishop of Westminster return'd not home, as being imploy'd by our King into Germany, to give intelligence of that which pass'd. For now in 7anuary, 1546, the Protestants met at Frankfort; and as they knew the Emperor intended a Voyage into Germany, they confulted concerning their mutual defence, knowing that both the Spiritual and Temporal Sword should be drawn against

> This while the Affembly at Trent holding, the Breve for exempting the Bishops from payment of their Tenths came: Yet as this did rather accommodate than fecure them, 200 Foot and fome Horte, being gather'd out of the County of Trent, were appointed to make a Guard as they paird to Church, being now, beindes the Legats and the Cardinal of Trent, four Archbishops, twenty eight Bishops, three Abbats, and four Generals, (in all forty three;) among which was Richard Pace, heretofore Ambaffador to the Emperor for our King, but now fallen to the Pope, vince the Lutherans, who believed it as well as and by him flil'd Bilhop of Worcefter; and Robert the Catholicks: Befides, that it were to confess, Vinant, titular Archbifhop of Wornegh; together that they durft not handle the controverted Points, with Olaus Magnus, Archbishop of Upfaile; all or treat of a Reformation. But upon further which had been some Years entertain'd with dispute hereof, it was resolved by the major part Penfions from the Pope: Besides, there were for the Affirmative; and in the third Session about twenty Divines, which though they had (Reb. 4.) the Creed was barely recited: The Car- Feb. c. no Seat in the Council, were admitted to fland dinal de Monte diffiking that any Point flould be $6f, 117 there; as a fo ten Gentlemen the Neighbourhood, of the Cardinal of Trent's Election: follow. The next Session was adjourned to April Vol. II.

ed for the Ambafladors which should affift there. And now question being of the Stile of the Council, the few French which were there, requir'd, that to Sancro-fancta Synodus thould be added Universalem Ecclesiam representans; but this was rejected; both to exclude the Protestants admittance under this Title, as alfo all Laicks; and as it might be thought in some fort prejudicial to the Pope's Supream Authority. And to, Jan. 7. Jan. 7 (being the fecond Seffion) they decreed an Exhortation to the Priests and People to serve God in Prayer, Alms, Sobriety, &c. The rhirteenth Jan 13 of January it was moved, that they would come to the Points contained in the Bull, being the Extirpation of Herefy, Reformation of Difcipline, and Establishing of Peace. And concern- Jan 18.

ing this, there were four Opinions. The Imperialitis faid, before they touch'd matter of Doctrine, it was necessary to take away those Transgressions whence Heresies have

The fecond Opinion was, To begin with Doctrine, fince Faith being the Bass of Religion, it was a greater Sin to err therein, than in Manners: And therefore that the Pope had placed it first in his Bull.

The third was, That the two Points of Reformation and Faith should not be dif-join'd, there being no Doctrine which hath not its Abuse, nor Abuse that draws not after it an ill Interpretation of fome Doctrine. And that this was the best way to give a speedy and happy conclusion to the Council, which they should chiefly endeayour; there being no Advantage likely to enfue to the Pope or Court of Rome by the protracting thereof.

The fourth fort (and among them the French particularly) would have had the Point of Peace first treated of, and that other Princes might be requir'd to fend their Ambaffadors and Prelates thither: And that the Lutherans might be invited to come and unite themselves to the rest of Chrifendom. The Legates having heard their Opinions, and commended their Wifdom, faid, that because the Hour was late, the Deliberation important, and the Opinions various, they would think upon it. Order also was taken to hold their Congregations weekly on Mondays and Fri-days. The Legates hereupon advertis'd the Pope of that which passed, desiring his Advice, and that he would take order for supporting of the poorer Bishops; it being better they should not be there, than ill satisfy d. Howbeit, the Pope delay'd his Reply, as having his Mind wholly bent to War, according to the Treaty which Car-dinal Farnese had with the Emperor the Year pre-ceding. This much perplex'd the Legates, as not knowing how to proceed : Nevertheless, up- Jan 22 on private Conference among themselves, they agreed to treat of matter of Faith and Reformation together; but withal, entertain'd the time, upon pretence that many Prelates were on their Cardinal Poole proposed, that fince in all Cardinal way. ancient Councils fome Symbol of Faith was pub- Peole prolished, they should do the like in this: But con- poles maccerning this Symbol of Faith there was some dif- New Council of Irens confifts only of 43 Per-fon:

Jan. 5.

The Jin 27.

April.

Death.

1546. the eighth, upon the aforefaid pretence, that ma-~ ny Prelates were on their journey.

The Court of Rome, who now understood of that which passed (though heretofore much startl'd at the Name of a Reformation, as knowing not how far it might extend) yet generally lik'd this late Decree, as being worthy the Proceeding of a General Council: Others yet approving it only as it was dilatory, while there wanted not fome, who took occasion to palquil it.

This while the Emperor being in Flanders, pre-pares for Germany, both as the Diet and Conference of Divines was appointed at Ratisbonne, and as the Council of Trent did hold: Yet, left he should alarm the Protestants, he took with him only his ordinary Guard, being 500 Horfe. And now the Conference holding, and divers Propo-ficions being made on the Emperor's part, the Affair infifted on was matter of Religion; where the Point of Juffification being brought in queftion, took up much time, without having other conclusion, yet, than perplex'd and abrupt: Infomuch, that the Duke of Saxe recall'd his Di-Mar. 20 vines, and Martin Buer return d to the Landt-grave of Hesse; which, whether it were that the Protestants foresaw the Emperor's Intention was to amuse them with Conferences, while himself prepar'd for War; or that otherwife they found no hope of coming to an agreement, is uncertain: Howfoever, the Emperor, when he came to the Diet, feem'd much offended at their departure; though, as during thefe Conferences Martin Luther died in the LXIII Year of his Age, he doubted not more eafily to appeale Controversies, as believing Luther to be of so violent a Spirit, as would interrupt any moderate Accord. Howbeit, for declining an Affront, in case the Protestants should come to no Agreement at the future Diet, he made preparations for War; which yet he could not keep to fecree, but the Protestants understood it, and fortify'd themselves. Whereupon also Philip Count Palatine, Nephew to Frederic the Elector, was di-fpatch'd into England to intreat for Succours: He had besides, his private business; which (as Padip Para our Records tell us) was to obtain the Princets fires the perform certain Conditions required of him: But as this took no effect, I shall come to the particumarriage. lar of his publick bufiness, treated chiefly by John Bruno; which was a Confederation projected betwixt our King and the Protestants. The Conditions proposed by our King were to this effect:

Records That if the faid Princes would find some wife and discreet Agents fully instructed, and with them the Names of the Members of the Leegue, and what Aids Confide. Names of the extensive of the Leggie, and want runs runs from every one is beamd to give, and in what eafer, and proposel whether they will fland to the old Rates or to near, total from our to be made when his Majefty flall enter the refinit.

I Leggie; his Majefty would be pleded to outer a Leggie.

With these definition with eld May and be all Princes in Section of August 2018 and for all by King Caufes, and will be bound to fuch a rate of ziel as may bofit his Honour and Quality: So that he may have the first Honour and Quality: So that he may have the first place in the League, which for more Honour should be called, The League Christen: With such Conditions likewife, that no other should be admitted to this Longue, but fach as are already enter d into the time, methout his Mojeff,'s Confort. And because they readd lock for a greater All at his M. jeff,'s hands than of any other Prince or City in this League, his Aligify would lock by Covenant to have in all Meetings concerning the Confederacy, three Voices to two of m of the Prime. Concerning the Union of the faid Primes to, then all in Polers to, then all in Doctrine of Religion, his Majelfy with them all in Doctrine of Religion, his Majelfy thanks them the or are co on to follow the Advice of his M jefty ut-on such Considerations and Conferences as their learned 1546. Men and his shall have together in his Majesty's Pre-Sence, following the holy Scripture, or the determination of the Primitive Church, or General Councils had before five or fix hundred Years : For which purpose his Majesty promiseth to take pains to be present himself, Majelfy promifer to take pains to be prefest himfelf, and truffeth (fuch Men being sent from them as be learned, and Men of upright fudgments, without Affection, and of good Conformity) to be the Causer of such a Conjunction in Religion in all Christendom, as Bull tend to the Glory of God. For the which purpose his Majesty requirest them now when they shall send Commissioners to conclude the League Defensive, to send the the May of the which when the send of the May of the which when the whole of the send of the May of the which when the send of the May of the whole of the whole of the send of the May of the whole of the whole of the send of the May of the whole of the who alforthe Names of ten or truelve Men, to the intent bis Marefly may chule four, five, or fix ous of the fame; which bis Mayefly requirest to have fent hither according to the Promise already mode, as soon as may be. To which the Protestants finally answer'd, That if our March 27. King would deposite an hundred thousand Crowns in Their some part of Germany, where they might take it Answer. when they were invided for Religion, then they would April 10. prefer his Friendship before the French, who now treated with them. But this again was rejected by our King, fince for a bold Demand they offerd no-thing equivalent; yet he continu'd his Treaty with the Palatine, fo far forth as he might detain the Protestants from suffering the French to gather Men in Germany for the recovering of Boulogne, and from submitting themselves to the Council of Trent, and encourage them to frame their Religion according to the Word of God, which, he faid, was the true Rule. But the Germans, who knew at what diflance our King liv'd, did not much regard any Advices which were not feconded with Money : Therefore they trufled to themselves, and "our King (as aforesaid) made Peace with the French. On the other fide, as the Emperor's Prefence operated much in Germany, fo the Match which Ferdinand had made of his Daughter Anne to the Son of the Duke of Bavaria, and Mary to the Duke of Cleves, did not a little strengthen his Skid. L. 17. Party. Befide, the Pope offer'd him twelve thou-fand Foot, eight hundred Horfe, and 300000 Ducats in Money (as Sandoval hath it) and to procure him affiftance from others, without omitting particularly to promife his best affistance in a spiritual way; while, to make the Prote-stants more culpable of drawing this War upon them, he fent to his Legates in the Council of Trent to proceed calmly (without beginning any The Pope new Difficulties) in matter of Faith; and to orders his make no hafte in point of Reformation, though Legates urged by the Emperor. Hereupon the Legates not to hacommanded certain Fryars and Divines to extract much in those Articles out of the Lutherans Books, which Reformfeemed contrary to their Faith. Where (among ingothers) the Authority of the holy Scriptures and Feb. 22. Traditions was first examined. And here their Divines differ'd; fome affirming they were all one, the Scripture it felf being deriv'd unto us but by Tradition: Moreover, St. Auftin's Words were urged, That be should not believe the Scriptures, but for the Authority of the Church. Which therefore should first be setled, and then used for deciding of Controversies, and convincing the Lutherans. But then the Question was, Which, and what was the Church? And whether the Hierarchy, and more properly the Council whereof the Pope was the Head? But it was not thought fate to call these things into doubt. Then they fell again to treat of the Scripture and Traditions; and whether it hath a cidentally come to pais, that it being all taught, fome part was not put in writing: Some holding, that the Church had its Perfection before any of the Apoflles writ, and would have continu'd fo, if nothing had been fet down in Writing. But that this Question and which clause was check'd by Cardinal Pool, who faid, It was fitter for a Conference in Germany, than . Council: Adding, that one of two things was to be done, that is, either the Lutherans brought to receive : If the Roman Doctrine; or when they would not, that all their Errors should be discovered, to show the equal to

Conditi-Conf. de-

The Cadeter

HI

IV.

Sell: IV

Then it was refolved, that a Catalogue of the Canonical Books of the Scripture should be made as they are accepted by the Roman Church, without regarding whether the Jews received them or not. But here fome difficulties were urg'd; fome of those Scriptures having been always receiv'd, others (though doubtful) having by use yet obtain'd Canonical Authority: That is to fay, the Epistle to the Hebrews, that of St. James, the second of St. Peter, that do St. John, that of St. Jude, and the Apportly/c, and some particles of the Evangelists. Besides which, there were in the Old Teftament feven Books never averr'd, and fome Chapters of Daniel and Hefter, and especially the Book of Baruch, as wanting his beginning; though fome March 8 efteem'd it a part of feremiab. At length, all the Books usually put in the Latin Bible were Tradition judg'd Canonical, and Traditions to be of equal Authority with the Scripture : Nevertheless , Authority with the competer doubts were rais'd concerning putting the Books of the Scripture into order. This while Petrus of the Scripture into order. This while Perms Paulus Vergerius, Bishop of Justinopelis in their, coming to the Council, was repulsed: For, as he had been imployed in Germany against the Lutherans with so little advantage to the Pope, as while he labour'd to confute the Protestants, himself became one; so they would not admit him, though he pretended his bufiness was only to purge himself, but remanded him to the Pope, who shortly after depriv'd him of his Bishoprick.

And now that being declar'd without more ado to be holy Scripture, which the Roman Church had received, question arose concerning the Translation of it. Some saying, that to underfland only the Latin Text, was not to receive the infallible word of God, but that of the Translator; and therefore that the Originals should be viewed, and a Translation made which the Council should declare Authentick. But if this should feem a long work, it were good (at least) to verifie their Latin Translation with the Original Text: Howbeit, the greater part faid, it was necessary to hold the Latin Translation to be Divine and Authentick, fince otherwise they would be obnoxious to the Lutherans, and a gate The Bible open'd to innumerable Herefies: For if Men might examine Translations, all would be reduc'd to Pedantifm, and new Grammurians would give the Law. Befiles that, Inquifitors could not convince Hereticks without knowledge of the Original Tongues. Many other Points coincident hereunto, were likewife handled, too long to be here rehears'd.

Then they came to the Exposition of Scriptures, and the ancient Fathers were declar'd as the Rule thereof

In conclusion, it was requir'd, whether all thefe determinations were to be enacted under the zinathema: In which, after much doubt, a middle course was held. So that the eighth of April, Seffion IV. two Decrees were read; one to Authorife the Scriptures read in the Roman Church, and the Traditions receiv'd there, both concerning Faith and Manners: The fecond to declare the vulgar Translation to be Authentick, and ars; and these again objecting the neglithat it should not be expounded contrary to the Bishops, and idleness of Parish-Priests. fence deliver'd by the Church, and unanimous at laft, was (in a fort) reconciled, the Bishop being the like being not formerly proposed by the Lu-confent of the Fathers: The Penalty in the first thereas, might well be omitted for Peace fake; Decree being Abathana, in the focond fuch as Comein of the rathers: The remarky in the min Decree being abathama, in the fecond fuch as pleas'd the Ordinary. And so the next Session was deferred till the seventeenth of Jan, and these Decrees Printed; which at length, being publish'd in Gorman, it was chought stronge, that sive Cardinals, and NLVIII to shops only, should fo easily determine these great Points, with-out hearing what could be objected to the con-

> About this time our King was certified by T.J. mund Harvel, his Ambassador at Venice, that the French labour'd to procure a Censure against him in the Council. But as the Peace formerly men-tioned between King Henry and Francis, was there-ly after concluded, for this took no effect. And now the Pope thought fit to add divers to the number of those Cardinals and Prelates at Rome he used to advife with concerning the Council; admonthing the Legates together at Ta-P-ra Tour, First, Not to publish any Decase hance forth, without approbation from Rom. Second Legate Not to frend time in Points not composed. ted. Thirdly, Above all things to take heed of disputing the Papal Authority. Which being A ill in done, he required the Bishops and Abhats of the Swifs to come to the Council: He also proceeded against the Archbishop of Celegne, Condem- April 16. ning, Excommunicating and depriving him for adhering to the Lutherans: Furthermore, he intreated the Emperor to execute the Sentence. But he conceiving the Archbishop was at his Devotion; and belides, knowing that fuch a rigorous proceeding would but alarm the Protestants, and force the Archbishop to colleague with them, neglested to perform this request: And the rather, that the Duke of Saxe had fignified unto him, that he faw clearly the Popes intentions were wholly bent to establish his own Authority: And therefore, that it was time to affemble a National Council in German, or to treat ferioully of matter of Religion in the Dict.

And now the Council in Congregation pro-Countries of the Point of Original Sin: But the Spanish May a. Prelates defir d rather a Reformation of the abu- Original they had express Letters from the Emperor, not to enter yet into matters of Doctrine: Which also the intelligence found in our Records, doth particularly affirm. The Legates, (on the other lide) urg'd the Popes Bull. In conclusion, both Points were refolv'd, and the Theologians enjoyn'd to handle matter of Faith among themselves, and with the affiftance of fome Canonifis to treat of a Reformation. According to which order, Lectures and Preaching being first spoken of, some May, differing appear'd: The Bishops desiring the ordering of these things should immediately depend on them: But the Legates contending to maintain the Pontifical Authority, by which these duties were committed to Fryars Mendicants, &c. This Controversie finding no Issue, the Pope writ unto the Council, that they should begin with Original Sin; observing yet a due respect unto the Emperor. Notwithstanding, the Legates thought fit the business of Reading and Concern-Preaching should first be dispatch'd, which was ing Read not without fome contention: For as it bath ing and been an ancient Arcanum Imperii among the Popes for conferving their Jurisdiction, to exempt Bifhops from their Archbishops, and Abbats and Fryars again from Bishops, & to some wrang-ling passd; while each part strove to maintain its Authority: The Bishops complaining of the Vanity and coverousness of the Preaching Fryars; and these again objecting the negligence of brought into Examination, Cardinal Pacceo a Sp. niard, faid, it was not yet time, nor until the business of Germany were riper. Neverthelefs, the question was urg'd; yet so as it was protracted, Diet held both by the many difficulties of it, and the Diet at Ratisbonne; which, beginning towards the end of May, made the Prelates intentive to its Pro-May. ceedings. Our King not omitting also to inform himself of what should pass by the Bishop of Westminster's means, whom he had imploy'd thither. But little good follow'd of this Diet: For while the Roman-Catholicks would not allow that Controversies of Religion should be decided in a National Council (as the Protestants desir'd;) nor they again fubmit to the Council of Trent, being, in their Opinion, a most partial and factious Affenibly, the Emperor knew not what well to refolve: He would have been glad of fuch a Peace as might have conferv'd his Authority, without earing much to hear of Errors discover'd in either of the opposite Parts; or that they had found out some witty and new diffinction. But there is not any thing more hard than to devise how a free and equal Council may be held, or who should be a competent Judge of the emergent differences; fince, as any ly when they would hold it as from the Pope. After which, the Point of Original Sin being vene; in which case, certainly the Spirit of God would preside.

The Emperor this while having made many feerer Provisions for War, certain notice thereof came to the Protestants at the Diet, who because he had made Peace with France, and Truce for prote. one year with the Turk, did easily conjecture it was intended against them; especially it being related that the Pope and Ferdinand did arm; fo that every thing was in confusion. The Emperor us'd much industry to draw all those Proteflants who were not Colleagu'd with the rest at Smaleold, unto his Party, telling them this War was only against Rebels, and promising them the

of those who are Parties in the business, cannot properly exercise that Function; so, to appeal to any other that were of a different Religion, should be not only to call the parts, but the whole into question. Nevertheless, it may be demonstrated, that a more even courfe may be kept herein than hath been hitherto practis'd, and a more indifferent for all Mankind: Which as it is deeply concern'd in all the rigid Decrees of Religion, fo in some fort or other should interexercife of their Religion.

The Protestants, on the other fide, declar'd in a publick Remonstrance, that the Emperors intentions were far other than he pretended; exhorting therefore both them and one another to fland firm.

This while the Council held the Fifth Seffion, Two De and two Decrees pals'd: 1. Concerning Original the Cource past Sin, and the Benefit of Boptifm, &c. 2. Conthe Cource cerning Lectures and Preaching; wherein the Bishops and Clergy were commanded to be diligent and careful. This being done, the French Ambaffador Petrus Den fius made a long and eloquent Oration, shewing the affection their Kings had ever born to the Christian Religion: And how that Gregory the First had for this cause given the Title of Cathelique to Childebert; and that his King had therefore fent him Ambaffador thither, defiring first, that some determination might be made in Religion; then, that those Priviledges should be conserved, of which Lodovieus Pius was in Possestiton, and all the sequent Kings; and that the Priviledges and Immunities of the Church of Fr. nee might be confirm'd. To whom no Aniwer was given but a Complement.

The Decrees being now Printed and Published 1546. 1746. being allow'd Authority over the Regulars, onin Germany, gave much occasion of discourse and unsatisfaction. The Emperor himself not liking that in the business of Reformation, the smaller Points had been handled, and the greater pretermitted; and that the Controversies in matter of Faith had been thus flirred, and especially that of Original Sin, as being almost reconciled in tome former Conferences in Germany. And now July 26 the Cardinal of Trent having absolutely concluded that League betwixt the Pope and the Emperor against the Protestants, and those which sleid by refus'd the Council of Trent (which by the Cardinal Furnese his means, was formerly treated of) all sides prepar'd for War: The Pope also fending Men and Money in that propertion which Connection ing Men and Money in that propertion which Connection is above-mentioned, or (as fone will have it) joyas besides the twelve thousand Foot, only five hun-with the dred Horse, to be maintained for fix Months at Emperor his charge, and access Creating in Months at Emperor his charge, and 200000 Crowns in Money. against the Pre-Moreover, he granted the Emperor (for the pre-testants. fent year) the half of all the Revenues of the Churches of Sp.sin, and that he might alienate of the Rents of the Monasteries of these Kingdoms, to the value of five hundred thousand Crowns, upon condition that during the faid fix Months, the Emperor might make no accord with the Protestants without him; and that of all which was gotten, he should have a certain Portion: And that when the time was expir'd, if the War did continue, they should treat of new Conditions. It being free for the Emperor (in the mean while) to try all fair means for reducing the Protestants to fubmit to this Council: For which end also he treated with them, professing that he did not undertake this War for cause of Religion, but skid ! 17 respects of State, and because some deny to obey his Laws, and had confederated themselves mutually, with Strangers against him, and usurp'd other Mens Possessing, and chiefly Ecclesiastical, procuring to make Bishopricks and Abbeys hereditary to their Families; and that having divers ways endeavour'd to reduce them, they were still more insolent. The Protestants, on the other fide, did strive to clear themselves un-to the World from imputation of Rebellion, thewing, that Religion only was cause of this War, which the Pope and Council of Trent had kindled against them : Requiring from the Em- July 40 peror performance of the Oath he took upon receiving his Dignity in Francfors, which they pre-tended he had broken in this abrupt making of War. They fent also to England and France (be-July-ing now newly reconcild to borrow Mony. But our King answer'd, that the course of things being now alter'd, he could not refolve on any thing without better information. Neverthelefs, that upon their standing firm together, he might furnish some Money upon sitting Conditions. This caus'd the Protestants to make new Levies at home: And the rather, that the Pope had about this time by Bull publish'd, that the War was for Religion.

And now Philip Landrgrave of Hiffe having July 11. his Forces ready, comes into the Field, and the July 20. Duke of Save after; whereupon they both were fle proferib'd by the Emperor (then being at Ratif-garve of bonne) who breaking up the Diet, commanded a-Hoff and nother to be held the first of Feb. 1547. ny take the

This while the Council of Trent fitting, the Se-are proceedings of the Legates) that ferible. the next point to be examin'd, was that of Di- June 18. vine Grace; and they shall the rather follow this Order, because it was us'd in the Augustan Confeffion, which they intended to condemn. Nevertheless, the Imperialists urg'd still a Reforma-tion: But being over-rul'd, certain Theologiprepares War a-Stants.

Tune.

1546.

oncern ng Justi-Faith and a Prote

That of Justification, Faith and Works was propos'd in XXV. Articles. But when the point of Justification by Faith was urg'd, the word FAITH was found ambiguous; yet at last all FALTH was found ambiguous; yet at fall an agreeing, that Juffifying Faith was an affent to all things reveald by God, and propos'd by the Church as neceffary. It was further diffinguilh'd into a folitary, dead, meerly Hiftorical Faith, and a lively one working by Charity. Then was disputed which of these did justify; and some affirm'd both: The first whereof was to be understood yet as the Bais and Ground of the latter: And here many School-fubtilties arifing, were hotly purfu'd by the Deminicans on the one fide, and Franciscans on the other; the former holding (with Lucher) that all our Works without Faith are Sin; the Franciscans opposing, that Man by his natural free-will may observe the Law, and do good, and thereby prepare himself, ex congrue, for Grace, since God sails not him who doth what he can. After this they sell to examine the nature of Grace, of Justification, of Imputation, &c. Concerning which the Reader may find more in Concilio Tridentine. Only I thefe Disputes were thus purposely spun out, April 27 could not be awaken'd in sourced days days partly by the procurement of the Emperor, who and nights, finding himself yet afterwards as it nights. ftill desir'd that nothing should yet be decreed he had taken but one nights rest. in matter of Faith; and partly by the industry. The Duke of Saxe and Lan of the Court of Reme, who studied to hinder the reformation in Discipline.

Maurice D. of Saxony, Protestants, encourageth Maurice Duke of Same, Cofen-German to the Elector, and Son-in-Law stant, sides to the Landtgrave, to invade the States of thefe Emperor. prescrib'd Princes: To which also he was suffi-ciently dispos'd. This while the Pope did a lit-tle temporize: For though he knew the Emperor would be obnoxious to him, as long as there was so manifest an use of his Assistance; yet with-al, he did not defire Charles should be too absolute in Germany, left afterwards he should turn his Arms upon Italy, and give the Law to his Country and Religion, upon pretence that there was no other way to conferve Peace. Neither were the Catholicks themselves in Germany overforward to take his part, left under colour of reducing Religion to its former flate by Arms, he Forces passing by Trent into Germany, another way of Prelates was handled, and many good things than the Protestants expected, they at last at said, but the means how to observe them were Landshut in Bavaria joyn'd with the Emperor; as little found, as how to bind their Superiours ans were appointed to gather the Lutherans Opi- who bestow'd upon Ottavio Farnese (their Gene- 1546. ral) the Order of the Toison, and took a muster of his Men: The Protestant Army being at Donawert, which they had newly taken, and in that readiness, that they attended only their advantage to fight.

But we will leave them in this posture a while, Aug 7 But we will leave them in this pointiest willie, wight to tell a notable accident which happen'd at Min 70 Barline in Brabant, 7 Angulf, 1546. Certain Barrels Powder of Powder, to the number of feven hundred, blowdays being flow d in the bottom of a great. Tower, Malica 2000 and 100 Min 100 Mi Lightning falling thereon, and kindling it, the Tower was rais'd from his foundations on high. and featter'd in the Air; the ftones whereof fly ing every way, threw down two hundred Houfes in the City, and as many in the Suburbs, kill'd five hundred Men, and hurt two thousand; the wind whereof broke Glass-windows every where, and open'd many Locks. Befides which it had this prodigious effect, that it dry'd up all the water in a ditch adjoyning, being a Pike deep, and levell'd the Earth, rooting up togethermany Trees; of which kind, it was observed, that those which lost only their leaves and fruit. budded again, and bore in Autumn.

But it feems more firange which Stow relates, Stow. er may find more in Cenetio Iridantine. Only 1 hat it England this year a Potter falling alleep. One fleep find of the anguler of in fourteen days fourteen

The Duke of Same and Landtgrave of Heffe, who commanded the Protestant Army, being compos'd of feventy or eighty thousand Foor, The Emperor now, that he might divide the and ten thousand Horse, and an hundred Canon. thought it unjust to begin the War till they had fent the Emperor a Defie : Stiling him yet therein not by that name; but as a pretender to be Emperor. He on the other fide, little regarding the Language, endeavour'd one while to overthrow, and another while to divide them. The whole paffage whereof may be feen in Luys d Avila, to whom I refer the Reader. And rather, that his Excellence Prince Maurice de Nasfau, did recommend the Book to me, more than once, as a Master-piece in its kind.

While these Armies coast each other, the Legates in Trent (now free from the Soldatefoue) advis'd how to delay the time, admitting new matters, which also their intemperate disputes did furnish. The Cardinal Santa Croce projectoucing reeignon to its former thate by Arms, he did furnish. The Cardinal Santa Croce project-would overthrow their Eiberty. For preventing, ing also, that the former Controversies should be renew'd of Preparatory Works, Observance of the Protestants (that the Council of Tront was affembled only to condemn them) he sent again will was brought into question, and certain Opi-TheCounto the Pope, to desire that the Council might make believing and the Legates might treat only of a Reformation. To which, because he knew some believing and not believing were finel therefore were averse, he directed a particular Message And many things were said thereupon, (it seem-will-upon the Cardinal Santa Croce, telling him relating at 181 stores and the former Controverses should be renewed. were averley in effected a particular Menage and many times were and thereupon, (it teems are unto the Cardinal Santa Croce, telling him, that ing at alf equally abfurd to believe all things to be in our Power, and nothing.) These Points cause him to be thrown into the River Adige, again begor distinctions, and at last brought in Continues the Council; writing yet to the Lecture and Divines in a being disputed by nation. Gates, that they should entertain the time: And the Prelates and Divines in a hundred Congresion. for this purpose Fastings, Prayers, and a Jubile gations, and afterward reduc'd into a form of (now publish'd for the good success of this War) Decree by the Cardinal Santa Croce: Yet he had The Prodid ferve. Neither was it without caufe; the Proteflandar tedlants Army being now drawn near Tiroll, of much adoe to content all fides, that from the tedlants Army being now drawn near Tiroll, of much adoe to content all fides, that from the beginning of September, to the end of November, but the Italians from joyning with the Imperative, and the Italians from joyning with the Imperative, and the Italians from joyning with the Imperative, and the Italians from joyning with the Imperative of the Italians from joyning with the Imperative of the Italians from joyning with the Imperative of Biftops, many were defirous to retire, while fome fled from the Council. But the Cardinal of Trent newly return'd further than all parts might fit and apply it from Pears conferred thole which remained and the total content all parts might fit and apply it to their own Onitions. from Rome, comforted those which remain'd. And to their own Opinions. In the point of Refor-Resonance the Popes and other the Italian Auxiliary mation, the qualities requir'd for the Promotion tion.

Vol. H.

Aug. 15.

Refidenproduc'd that Controversie, as in the year 1562, and 1562, came to a great height. The present Contention was between the Spanish Prelates; who for the magnifying of the Epifcopal Digmity, held that Refidence was Ex jure Divino; and the lt. ltan Dilhops, who for fuffaining the Popes Authority, faid, it was commanded by him only, and therefore might be difpens'd with, &c. only, and therefore might be dispensed whith Cer-But this diffute being put off by the Legares, the Ancient Canons for Reidency were revived, and fome new ones enacted, which were the

The Emperor new having heard that our King Seatemb. treated with the Protestants, exposulated the matter with him. But the king deny'd, he intended any Aid to the Protestants; saying yet, that if he fought friendship abroad he was not to be blam'd, fince the Emperor in his new Treathe Council of Trent; wherein, though the King Record. were not particularly named, yet that he was taken for a Lucker. Neverthere is that he treated not with the Protestar is, and therefore wish'd the Emperor to have a better epinion of him, fince if he would have given credit to his Advice, he needed not to have entred those dangers he was in. And now the Pope hearing how things pass'd, commanded the Cardinal Faruese to return. For though the Emperor by fecret fomenting the emulation for Command which pais'd between the Duke of Same and Landi-grave, was in a good way to compais his ends; yet because he made not an overt War of Religion, the Pope both recall'd the Cardinal, and permitted fome of the Italian Gentry to come O 201.13. with him. Nevertheless, about the midst of October, the two Armies met fo near together about Giengen in Suabe, that only a little River parted them. Where also the Protestants omitted a notable Opportunity of falling on the Imperialifts; fome blows yet pass'd, and Donawert was regain'd by Ottavio Farnese: Shortly after which, the Duke of Sane was constrain'd to retire to his own Country, for the defence thereof, against Ulme was one; where also the Emperor winter'd, Nov. 23. Ferdinand and Maurice who invaded it; and the Landigrave, to his. Of which our King was particularly advertis'd by Somerfet his Herald, who accompanying Bruno, (now returning from England to the Protestant Army) observed all Occurrences. The Protestant Forces now being withdrawn, divers Princes and Cities of that League treated of an Accommodation with the Emperor when they might have fome honeft caution for the exercinng of their Religion. But the Emperor would give none by writing, though ofor too thus the Emperor recover'd much great Ordhard for nance, and huge fums of Money from fome Cities. I guage and Doctrine to be found in some of them, the Protectics by way of Reparation for their faults, and and that he would introduce his own, or at least lan ac.

from the Pope to a lawful Council in Germany) and active Archief of furrender his Archbishoprick. Which state of things being advertis d hither, our King thought for it. Beides, the Queen her fell did this year suburnt for it to comply with the Emperor, for this purpose as a council in him with some Passages, and the council in the co Ollober.

1546. to do always that which was fitting. So that af- lous of Francis. For though (by the advice of 1546. ter divers Diffeourfes, it was thought fit to leave the Cardinal of Tournon) to make his Authority off this Point. Much was faid allo, concerning at home more entire, he had lately condemn d Matters of Refidency: The particulars whereof bin'd for a private Reformation in Religion, Shidan, yet he treated with the Protestants at this time.

The Pope also hearing of that which pass'd began to think of his own Affairs, before all Germany were reduc'd to the Emperors Obedience: Infomuch, that though his Forces were much diminish'd, (between those that return'd with the Cardinal, and others that run away) he yet recall'd the rest about the middle of $D\epsilon$ -D:cemb. But this dispute being put off by the Legates, he had favid the Madele of De-Dremb. the Ancient Canons for Residency were revived, and some new ones enacted, which were the more willingly accepted, in that the abuse of Exemptions of Regular and Secular Priests the Charge. But this being ill taken by the Empron the Jurisdiction of their Ordinary, was moderated. for his further Justification, reply'd, that he was and Emnot made partaker of the Accord betwirt the Emfer dif-peror and the Cities and Princes: And that it was much to the prejudice of the Catholick Faith, in tolerating Herefie, which might have been exterminated. Befides, that according to the be blam'd, fince the Emperor in his new trea-partitional Bolloco, and accounting to the twith the Bifhopof Reme, had agreed to fall Articles of their Treaty, he should have particion those that refused the Bifhops Authority, and pated of the Profits and Spoils of the War. And the Council of Treat; wherein, though the King not content herewith, he deny'd the Emperor the further Revenues of the Spanish Clergy. So that though the Imperial Ministers at Rome told him, he had done nothing unlef, he perfected his Work, they could not prevail. For further testimony also of his displeasure to the Emperor, raising a Faction in Genous against the Dercaes, being the Emperors friends. Neither did he (as some have ir) fear, that the Emperor (having fo much to do in Germany) could hastily invade him, or trouble him, otherwife than by according with the Protestants, and causing them to repair to the Council of Trent, which yet he thought not fit to dissolve, though feven Months had paft, without publishing any thing treated therein. So that, notwithstanding he knew that the Emperor would be discontented at his rigid proceedings in matters of Doctrine, he us'd the Florentine Motto, Cofa fatta cipalia: And thereupon writ to the Legates, that they should hold a Session, and publish the De-Jan 13. crees already made; which also was done, the Protestants yet questioning the Authority of them. Among the Cities of Germany that Submitted, with intention to continue War the next Spring; which the Protestants understanding, thought fit though once fuing for Peace) to fend feveral Ambaffadors into England and France to demand Succours (though in vain) both Kings dying shortly after. While business of Religion was thus treated of July 8-abroad, our King by Proclamation did feverely Translation of the New Techanism on of the forbid the Translation of the New Testament, Bible forby Tindal and Coverdale, or any other than is bid by K. permitted by Parliament : As also the English Ho therwise promise was made by the Imperial Mi-Book of Frith, Wiekliff, Tindal, &c. which our Reg. Th. Em-nitters, that they should not be molested. And King most studiously suppress; both because he would have his Subjects decline the bitter Lanrefted absolute Sovereign of the upper and great- a more sober Reformation. Whereof also he was er part of Germany; whereby he was enabled to the more fenfible, in that Women began now orgive Law to the reft, and to confirm Herman dinarily to dispute Controverses, and urge the Archbihop of Celegne (which had lately appeal'd) Text: Infomuch, that then eighter, a Gentlewo-July 16.

Articles Q. drawn up and by the King.

She wittily excu-felf as to her Opi-

Re.igion.

grace. Dec. 2.

Which yet the King did but impatiently hear; both as the anguish of a fore Leg he had at this both as the anguish of a fore Leg he had at this the Earl of Ormend, and a certain Lord out of time made him very froward, and as he lov'd the Scotish Isles (as he term'd himself) who had not to be contradicted in his Opinions, especially, as he said, in his old Age, and by his Wife. This again was exaggerated by Stephen Gardiner Bilhop of Winehefter to far, that by reprefenting the hazard fhe incurr'd by contravening the Six Articles, and the late Proclamation, in reading of forbidden Books, and teaching openly her Doctrine, the King gave Winchester, and Wrinthefley the Chancellor, and others leave to confult about the drawing of Articles against her, against the which they fail'd not to present unto the King, who subscrib'd them : Insomuch, that her Enefubfcrib'd mies expected only a Warrant for carrying her by night to the Tower. Which the Queen accidentally having notice of, fell into that paffion and bitter bewailing her Misfortune, that the King hearing the perplexity she was in, fent his Physicians, and after came himself to her Chamber, where compaffionating her eftate, he us'd fuch kind words as did help to recover her. Informuch, that the next night, being attended by the Lady Anne her Sister, Wife to Sir Itiliam Herbert, after Earl of Pembroke, she went unto the Kings Bed-chamber, where he courteously welcomed her, and began to talk of Religion.

But the wittily excusing her felf by the weakness of her Sex and Judgment, said, she would re-fer her self in this and all other Causes, to his Majesties Wisdom. Not so (by Saint Mary) quoth the both averr'd the Articles, and manifestly accus'd King, you are become a Dector, Kate, to instruct us (as we take it) and not to be instructed or directed by happening to be merrily talking with him in his Garden, the Lord Wriothefley with forty of the Guard comes in; whom the King sternly be-holding, and after calling to him (at some diflance from the Queen) to expostulated the matter, as at last he reviled, and commanded him the Kings return, the was an humble fuiter for his Pardon. But the King answer'd no otherwife, than that she (poer Soul) did not know bow coil be deserved this grace at her hands. And thus, by her opportune submission she escaped: Though yet some believe, it was not so much the Kings intention herein to use the rigour of the Law, as to deter her from reading forbidden Books. Howsoever, if he were not in earnest, it was thought a terrible jest, especially to a Queen, that had the reputation of a vertuous, humble, and observant Wife. But Winchester, who (it was who sim'd thought) chiefly endeavoured her ruine, did himfelf not long after fall into the Kings disfavour, as her fell not long arrel ian into the tenge truine, falls as by his submission extant in our Records doth appear: Though whether on this occasion, or that he was a special friend to the Duke of Norwho was now also in difgrace with the King (as shall be told hereafter,) or any other cause, is not there determined. Howsover, the King excluded him out of the number of those whom he appointed his Executors, and Counfellors to his Son and Succeffor, Edward VI. Concerning Socist Business this year, little King: The Earl, before the Lord Chancellor

1546. thought her felf so well instructed in Religion, pass'd worth the writing, that I can find, save that the would debate with the King thereof: only that King Henry fent the Earl of Lenox into Ireland with Command, that he together with adhered to our King, should fall upon Scotland: But as the Enterprise was discovered, they were forcd to retire to Dublin, where the faid Scatish Lord, who brought three Galleys with him for this Enterprise, died.

This while Cardinal Beton perfecuting these of May 15, the reform'd Religion in that Country, was him-Cardinal self slain at St. Andrews in his Castle, by certain Beton slain Gentlemen who furpriz'd the place; and after at St. Andefended it, until the Governour belieg'd, and (at last) took it by the help of some Succour which the French fent them in their Galleys. That kind of Shipping being to built in those days, that they brook'd our Seas with no little advantage, when the times were fair.

I shall conclude this year with the disaster of the D. of Nov. renown'd Lord the Duke of No folk, and the execu-folk and his Son tion of his Son Henry the Earl of Surrey, which his Son pass'd in this manner, as our Records tell us.

The Dutchess Elizabeth, Daughter to Edward troubles Stafford Duke of Buckingbam, having for many years entertaind fo violent jealouses of the Duke her Husbands matrimonial Affection and Loyalty, as it broke out at last to open Rancour, divers occasions of Scandal were given: Infomuch, that not being content with having furmized a long while fince two Articles against him, she again in fundry Letters to the Lord Privy Seal, fome of his Minions, repeated divers hard usages He is action them, and briefly cus'd by the pretended to receive from them, and briefly his Durch (as we take it) and not to be infracted or directed by this But the Queen replying, that what he faid diffcoverd all the ordinary paffions of her offenegas was rather to pass away the time and pain of his held diffcoverd all the ordinary passions of her offenegas was rather to pass away the time and pain of his held by hearing his Anjostic learned Discourse, to receive some profit thereby. The King answerd, And is it even so (Sweet-heart?) then are we perfect friends again: Which also he construing by divers Tellimonies. But as her Maligners knew nothing of this Reconcilement, they prepared the next day to carry her to the Tower, at a time limited by the Kings Warrant. This being come, and she happening to be merrily talking with him in his again fell out in an unfortunate time: For beagain fell out in an unfortunate time: For beagain refroit and an artificial and the Lady his Dutches had now for a-bove four years been separated from him; his Son the Earl of Surrey was but newly, and perchance, scarce reconcil'd with him; his Daughter Mary Dutchessof Richmond not only inclined to Heisha out of his fight and presence. Nevertheless, at the Protestant Party, (which lov'd not the Duke) ted by the but grown an extream enemy of her Brother: So Protethat there was not only a kind of intestine division in his Family, but this again many fecret ways fomented.

Among which, the industry of one Mrs. Holland, thought to be the Duke's Favourite, appear'd not a little, as defitous (at what price foe-ver) to conferve her felf. Befides, divers at the Kings Council disaffected him, and particularly the Earl of Holland, as knowing that after the Kings death (now thought to be imminent) none was so capable to oppose him in the place he afpir'd to of Protector. All which Circumstances concurring, and being voyced abroad, in-couraged divers of his Advertaries to declare themselves: And the rather, because it was notorious, how the King had not only withdrawn much of his wonted favour, but promifed impunity to fuch as could discover any thing concerning him. The first that manifested himself was Sir Rick- Dec 4. ard Southwel, who faid that he knew certain things of the Earl, that touched his fidelity to the Wricthesley.

commit-

Depofetions to Laft

1546. Wriesbeller, the Lord St. John, the Earl of Herted in his Coat, had put a Blank-quarter in the 1646.

ford, and others, vehemently affirmed himfelf a place, but that her Brother had reaffum'd them.

True Man, defiring to be try d by Juffice, or elfe of the Duke's Coronet, was offering himfelf to fight in his Shirt with Sauth-put to his Arms a Cap of Maintenance Purple, wel: But the Lords for the present only committed them. The Duke this while, hearing his Son was in trouble, fends to divers of his Friends to Fortune: So that he was fent for, and the same day, not long after his Son, committed to the Tower. Divers Perfons also were examined concerning his Affairs. Mrs. Elizabeth Holland being ted to the difposed, confess'd, that the Duke had told her, Tower, that none of the King's Council loved him, because they were no Noblemen born themselves; as also because he believ'd too truly in the Sacrament of the Altar. Moreover, that the King loved him not, because he was too much loved in his Country; but that he would follow his Father's Lesson, which was, That the less others set by him, the more he would fet by himfelf. As also, that the Duke complain'd that he was not of the most secret (or, as it is there term'd, the Privy privy) Council. And that the King was much grown of his Body, and that he could not go up and down the Stairs, but was let up and down by a Device. And that his Majesty was fickly, and could not long endure; and the listing like to be in an ill case through diversity of Opinions. And that if he were a young Man, and the Realm in quiet, he would ask leave to fee the Vernacle; which he faid, was the Picture of Christ given to Women by himself as he went to As touching his Arms, that she had not heard the Duke speak of his own, but of his Son's, that he liked them not, and that he had gather'd them himself knew not from whence; and that he placed the Norfalk's Arms wrong, and had found fault with him: And therefore that she should take no pattern of his Son's Arms to work them with her Needle in his House, but as he gave them. Furthermore, she confest'd that the Earl of Surrey lov'd her not, nor the Dutchess of Richmond him; and that she addicted her selfmuch to the faid Dutchefs.

Mary Dutchess of Richmond being examin'd, confess'd, That the Duke her Father wou'd have had her marry Sir Thomas Seymor, Brother to the Earl of Hartford, which her Brother also defir'd, withing her withal to endear her felf fo into the King's Favour, as she might the better rule here as others had done; and that she resused: And that her Father would have had the Earl of Surrey to have matched with the Earl of Hertford's Daughter, which her Brother likewise heard of (and that this was the Caufe of his Father's Difpleafure) as taking Hertfird to be his Enemy. And that her Brother was so much incens'd against the faid Earl, as the Duke his Father faid thereupon, His Son would lofe as much as he had gather'd together.

Moreover, That the Earl her Brother should fay, Thefe new Men loved no Nobility; and if God call'd away the King, they should smart for it. And that her Brother hated them all fince his being in Custody in Windfor Castle; but that her Father feemed not to care for their ill will, faying, His Truth should bear him out. Concerning Arms, she faid, that she thought that her Brother had more than feven Rolls; and that fome, that he had added more of Anjeu, and of Lancelott Du-lac. And that her Father fince the Attainder of the Duke of Buckingham (who bare the King's Arms) where the Arms of her bare the King's Arms) where the Arms of her whether it were probable that this Man should Mother (Daughter to the faid Duke, were rayn-with powdred Furr, and with a Crown, to her judgment, much like to a close Crown; and underneath the Arms was a Cipher, which she took was in trouble, lends to divers of his Friends to demeath the Arms was a Cipher, which she took know the Caufe, and particularly to the Bishop to be the King's Cipher, HR. As also that her Detained of Winthoffer: Those Letters yet (it is probable) Father never faid that the King hated him, but fell into the King's Council's hands; but could his Counsellors; but that her Brother said, the not preferve him from being involved in his ons King was displeased with him (as he thought) for the loss of the great Journey. Which Dis-pleasure, he conceived, was set forward by them who hated him, for fetting up an Altar in the who hated him, for letting up an Alar in the Church at Boulegae. And that her Brother should say, God long save my Father's Life; for if he were dead, they would shortly have my Head. And that he reviled some of the present Council, not forgetting the old Cardinal. Also that heads to the council and the satisfication has been some or the present council to the satisfication has been some or the satisfication has been some some some satisfication. he diffuaded her from going too far in reading the Scripture. Some paffionate Words of her Brother she likewife repeated, as also some cir-cumstantial Speeches, little for his advantage; yet so, as they seemed much to clear her Fa-

Sir Edmund Knevet being examined, faid, he knew no Untruth directly by the Earl of Surrey, but fufpected him of Diffimulation and Vanity: And that a Servant of his had been in Italy with Cardinal Poole, and was receiv'd again at his return. Moreover, that he kept one Pasquil an Italian as a Jetter, but more likely a Spy, and so reputed. He mentioned also one Peregrine an Italian entertain'd by the said Earl; adding that he lov'd to converse with Strangers, and to conform his Behaviour to them. And that he thought he had therein fome great ill device.

One Themes Pope also informed the Council, that John Freeman told him, that the Duke (at Nottingham, in the time of the Commotion of the North) should say in the presence of an hundred Persons, that the Act of Uses was the worst Act that ever was made, and that Freeman affirm'd those Words before the Lord Audeley, late Lord Chancellor. These Depositions, together with others (as it feems) being brought to the King's Judges at Norwich, they fignified by their Letter unto the Lords of the Council, dated Jan. 7. that the King's Solicitor and Mr. Stamford had brought the Indictments, and that they were found true, and the Duke and his Son indicted thereupon of High-Treafon; and that they made hafte to bring the faid Indictment to London; defiring further to know whether Sir Thomas Paston, Sir Edmund Knowet, Sir John Peer, and others, should be of the same Jury. Upon the thirteenth (the King being now dangerously sick) the Earl of Surrey was arraign'd in Guild-Hall in London, before the The Earl Lord Chancellor, the Lord Mayor, and other of Surrey Commissioners. Where the Earl, as he was of try'da deep Understanding, sharp Wit, and deep Courage, defended himself many ways: Sometimes denying their Accufations as falle, and together weakning the Credit of his Adversaries; fometimes interpreting the Words he faid, in a far other Senfe than that in which they were repre- Makes a fented. For the point of bearing his Arms (a- good demong which those of Edmund the Confessor are fence related) alledging that he had the Opinion of Heralds therein. And finally, when a Witness was brought against him viva voce, who pretended to repeat iome high Words of the Earl's by way of difcourfe, which concern'd him nearly, and that thereupon the faid Witness should return a braving Answer; the Earl reply'd no otherwise to the Jury, than that he left it to them to judge, 1546. him again. In conclusion, he pleaded not guil ty; but the Jury (which was a common Inquest, not of the Peers, because the Earl was not a Parliament Lord) condemn'd him. Whereupon also Yet is be-Judgment of Death was given, and he beheaded at Tower-bill. And thus ended the Earl; a Man learned, and of an excellent Wit, as his Compotitions shew

This While the King (though his Sickness increafed) omitted not to give order to feize on the Duke's Goods, and together to inform himfelf of all which might be material against him. Not forgetting also to cause Wri th fley to advertife the King's Ambaffadors in foreign Parts, that the Duke of Norfolk and his Son had conspir'd to take upon them the Government of the King, during his Majesty's Life, as also after his Death to get into their hands the Lord Prince ; but that their Devices were revealed, and they committed to the Tower. And that for preventing uncertain bruits, they were willing to communicate the premiffes. But the Duke, who had now as much merit of ancient Service to plead for him, as any Subject of his time could pretend to, thought fit from the Tower to write unto the King in this manner.

Jan. 19.

His Letter King.

The Dukes

Goods feiz'd.

Most Gracious and most Sovereign Lord, I your most humble Subjest prostitute at your foot, do most humbly be(each your Highnes) to be my good and gracious Lord. I am sure lowe great Enemy of mine bath informed your Misjesty of some untrue matter against me. Sir, Good datic knew, in all my life, I never tolought one untru. Thought against you, or your Succession, now can no more judge or cast in my mind what should be laid to my charge, than the Child that was born this night. And certainly, if I knew that I had offended your Might in any point of Untruth, I would declare the same to your High sh, I kn (as God between the same to your High sh, I kn (as God between the form to your High sh, I kn (as God between the form to your High sh, I kn (as God between I cannot accuse my self so much as in Thought. Most robb, and merciful Servereign Lord, For all the old Service I have din you in my life, be so good and most humble Subject prostitute at your foot, do most old Service I have done you in my life, be so good and old Service I have dine you in my life, be fo good and gracious a Lord wito me, that cither my Acufers and trogether my be brought before your Royal Migfly; or if your pleasure shall not be to take that pains, then before your Council: Then if I shall not make it appearent that I am vironoffully accused, let me, without more respite, have punishment according to my deferts: Alas! most merciful Prince, I have no refuge but only at your braids, and therefore at the reverence of Christ's Passon have pity of me, and let me not be cast away by false Enemies Informations. Undoubtedly, I know not that those of Glouded any Min. or that any Man was that I have offended any M.n., or that any Man was offended with me, unless it were such as are angry with me for being quick against such as have been accused for Sacramentaries. And as for all causes of Religion, I say now, and have said to your M jesty and many others, I do know you to be a Prince of such Virtue and Knowledge, that whatforver Laws you have in times Knowledge, that whisseever Laws you have in times pass made, or hereafter shall make, I shall to the extremity of my power sick unto them as long as my life shall last. So that if any Men he argry with me for these Causer, they do me wrong. Other Cause I know not why any Man should bear me any ill will: And for this cause I know divers have done, as doth appear by casting Libels abroad against me. Finally, (most gracious Sovereign Lord) I most humbly beseed your Made to have a have as it of me and I to my recourt your grant and the same as the fire and I to my recourt your grant. cious Sovereign Lord) I most monory octoeco your man-jest to hove pity of me, and let me recover your gra-cious Favour, mith taking of me all the Linds and Goods I have, or as much thereof as pleasethyour High-ness to take, leaving me what it shall please you to ap-point; and that according as its before written, I may know what is laid to m) Charge, and that I may bear some comfortable word from your Anjesty. And I shall during my life pray for your prosperous estate long to endure. Your most sorrouful Subject,

THO. NORFOLK

To the Lords he wrote thus:

Item, Most humbly to befeeth, my Londe, The 1415 Per-might have some of the Books that are at Lamborh; time for unless I may have Books to read in 1 fall on sleep, and after I wake again, I cannot sleep, nor did not this dozen Years

Also to desire that I might have a Ghostly Pather fent to me, and that I might receive my M. ker.

Also that I might have Mass, and to be hound up n

my life to speak no word to bim that shall say Mais, which he may do in the other Chamber, and I to remain

Item, To have licence in the day time, to walk in Item, To have lieuce in the day time, to malk in the Chamber without, and in the Night to be lock dir, as I am now. At my first coming I had a Chamber without a-days. I would gladly have lieuce to find a London, to buy one Book of St. Augustinis, De Civitate Dei; and of Josephus, De Antiquitatibus; and another of Sabellicus; who dath declare most of any Book that I have read, how the Bishop of Rome from time to time hath usually dis Pewer against all Princes, by their unwife sufferance.
Item, For Sheets.

Nevertheless, the Duke remained as condemn'd to perpetual Prifon, without that his great Services formerly render'd, or his Submiffion on this occasion could restore him; which was in these Words, as I find by our Records in an Ori-

THOMAS Duke of Norfolk, do confess His Conand acknowledge my felf most untruly, fession. and contrary to my Oath and Allegance, to have offended the King's most Excellent Majefty, in the disclosing and opening of his privy and fecret Counsel at divers and fundry times, to divers and fundry Persons, to the great peril of his Highnets, and disappointing of his most prudent and regal Affairs-

Alfo, I likewife confess, That I have concealed High Treason, in keeping secret the false and traiterous Act, most presumptuously committed by my Son Henry Howard Earl of Surrey, against the King's Majesty and his Laws, in the putting and using the Arms of St. Edward the Confessor, King of the Realm of England before the Conquest, in his Scutchion or Arms: Which faid Arms of St. Edward appertain only to the King of this Realm, and to none other Person or Persons; whereunto the faid Earl by no means or way could make any Claim or Title, by me, or any of mine or his Ancestors.

T. N.

Alfo, I likewife confess, That to the Peril, Slander, and Difinherifon of the King's Majesty, and his noble Son Prince Edward, his Son and Heir apparent, I have against all right, unjuftly, and without Authority, born in the first Quarter of my Arms, ever since the Death of my Father, the Arms of Eng-land, with a difference of the Labels of Silver, which are the proper Arms of my faid Prince, to be born for this Realm of England only; whereby I have not only done prejudice to the King's Majesty, and the faid Lord the Prince, but also given occasion that his High1546. Highness might be disturb'd or interrupted of the Crown of this Realm, and my faid Lord Prince might be destroy'd, disturb'd and interrupted in Fame, Body, and Title, of the Inheritance to the Crown of this Realm. Which I know and confets by the Laws of the Realm to be High Treason.

For the which my faid hainous Offences, I have worthily deferv'd by the Laws of the Realm to be attainted of High Treason, and to suffer the Punishment, Losses and Forseitures that appertain thereunto. And although I be not worthy to have or enjoy any part of the King's Majesty's Clemency and Mercy to be extended to me, confidering the great and manifold Benefits that I and mine have received of his Highness: Yet I most humbly, and with a most forrowful and repentant Heart, do befeech his Highness to have Mercy, Pity, and Compassion on me. And I shall most devoutly and heartily make my daily Prayer to God for the preservation of his most noble Succession, as long as Life and Breath shall continue in me, Written the twelfth day of the Month of Fanuary, in the Year of our Lord God 1546. after the Computation of the Church of England, and in the thirty eighth Year of our Sovereign Lord Henry VIII. by the Grace of God King of England, France, and Ireland, Defender of the Faith; and of the Church of England, and also of Ireland the Supream Head. In witness of all the premisses, I the faid Duke have subscribed my Name with my own hand, in the presence of the Lord Wriothesley Lord Chancellor, the Lord St. John Lord Prefident of the Council, the Earl of Hertford Lord Great Chamberlain, the Viscount Lifle Lord High Admiral, Sir Anthony Brown Master of the Horse, Sir William Paget Secretary, Sir Richard Rich, Sir John Baker of our faid Sovereign Lord's Privy Council, Sir Richard Lister, Sir Edward Montague, the two Chief Justices.

Without Compulsion, without Force, without Advice or Counsel, I have and do subferibe the premitfes, fubmitting me only to the King's most gracious Pity and Mercy, most liumbly befeeching his Highness to extend the fame unto me his most forrowful Subject.

B) m THO. NORFOLK.

Thomas Wriothelley Chancellor, William St. John, Anth. Brown, John Lifle, Rich. Rich, William Paget, Rich. Lister, John Baker, Edward Montague. E. Hereford.

Notwithstanding all which Submission, joined with the Merits of his Services, it was thought that the Duke would hardly escape, had not the ving long labour'd under the burden of an ex-tream fat and unweildy Body, and together being afflicted with a fore Leg, took (at the Palace of Westminster, in January, this Year) his Deathbed; being for the rest not without sense of his present condition. For he both caused a Church of the Franciscans in London (lately suppress'd) to be open'd again, and made a Parish-Church, endowing it with 500 Marks per annum; and be-March flow'd both the Ground and Buildings of the faid 1500 Haster Covent, as also the adjoining Hospital of St. Bar- founds tholomew, on the City, for the relief of the Poor: St. Bertiz-Where now is the fair Hofpital called Christ-Church: honer's Suppress'd the Stews on the Bank-fide, and made Holpital his laft Will and Testament, the Original whereof yet having not feen, I shall mention no otherwife.

As for Sanders's affirmation, that he was not defirous to be reconciled to the Roman Church; and that his Courtiers (especially those who had profited themselves of Abbies) did divert him; and that the Bishops rested doubtful what to anfwer, left they should be entapped; and how Winchester did cunningly evade the Danger, I leave to his Credit. Others affirming, that he defir'd to fpeak with Crammer, who yet not coming fooner than that the King was fpeechlefs (though in good memory) the King extended his hand to him; and that thereupon Cranmer befought him to give fome Sign of his trust in God by Christ, and that the King should strain his Hand. ever, it may be collected, that he died religiously Jan. 28. and penitently, when he had reign'd feven and thirty Years, nine Months and fix Days; and after he had lived five and fifty Years and feven His Death Months; and was carried to Hindfir, where he had began a fair Monument, and founded a College for thirteen poor Knights, and two Priefts to pray for his Soul.

And now if the Reader (according to my manner in other great Personages) do expect some Character of this Prince, I must affirm (as in the beginning) that the course of his Life being commonly held various and diverse from it fell, he will hardly fuffer any, and that his Hiftory will be his best Character and Description. Howbeit, fince others have fo much defam'd him, as will appear by the following Objections, I shall strive to rectifie their Understandings who are impartial Lovers of Truth; without either pre-fuming audaciously to condemn a Prince, here-tofore Sovereign of our Kingdom, or omitting the just freedom of an Historian.

And because his most bitter Censurers agree, His Chathat he had all manner of Perfection either of racters Nature or Education; and that he was (besides) of a most deep Judgment in all Affairs to which he apply'd himfelf; a Prince not only liberal and indulgent to his Family, and Court, but even to Strangers, whom he willingly faw; and one that made choice both of able and good Men for the Clergy, and of wife and grave Counfellers for his State-Affairs; and above all, a Prince of a Royal Courage: I shall not controvert these Points, but come to my particular Observations. According to which, I find him to have been ever most zealous of his Honour and Dignity; infomuch, that his most question'd Passages were countenanc'd either with home or foreign Au-thority: So many Universities of Italy and France maintaining his repudiating of Queen Katharine of Spain; and his Parliament (for the reft) authorizing the Divorces and Decapitations of his following Wives, the Diffolutions of the Mona-King's Death, following thortly after, referved theres, and divers others of his must buanded him to more merciful times. For our King ha-Actions: So that by his Parliaments in publick, TheKs Ellnefs purs off his Punifikaneat. and Juries in private Affairs, he at leaft wanted mort Colour and Pretext to make them specious to the World; which also he had reason to affect:

Outward Esteem and Reputation being the fame to great Persons which the Skin is to the Fruit, which though it be but a slight and delicate Cover, yet without it the Fruit will presently discolour and tot.

Implication of the world in many: Doing therein like cunning to the Wrestlers, who to throw one down, first take him four to great Persons and Affairs, which disposed him easily to think the world. Whereas it is a greater part of Widom to preven, than to suit of the colour and tot.

As for matter of State, I dare fay, never Prince went upon a truer Maxim for this Kingdom; which was, to make himfelf Arbiter of Christendom: And had it not cost him fo much, none had ever proceeded more wifely. But as he would be an Actor (for the most part) where he needed only be a Spectator, he both engaged himfelf beyond what was requifite, and by calling in the Money he lent his Confederates and Allies, did often difoblige them when he had most need of their Friendship. Yet thus he was the most Active Prince of his time. The Examples whereof are fo frequent in this Hiftory, that there was no Treaty, or almost Conventicle in Christendom, wherein he had not his particular Agent and Intereft; which, together with his Intelligence in all Countries, and concerning all Affairs, and the Penfions given for that purpofe, was one of his vaft ways for fpending of Money.

Again, I observe, that there never was Prince more delighted in Interviews, or (generally) came off better from them. To which allo, as his goodly Personage and excellent Qualities did much dispose him, so they gave him a particular Advantage and Luttre. Howbeit, as these Voyages were extreme costly, so when he made use thereof to conclude a Treaty, it did not always fucceed; especially where Credit was yielded to any single and private Word. Insomuch, that at his latt being with Francis (where he intended, upon his bare Promise, lier la partie for the most important Affairs of Christendom) he found himself so much frustrated and deceived.

At home it was his manner to treat much with his Parliaments; where, if gentle means ferv'd not, he came to fome degrees of the rough; though the more fparingly, in that he knew his People did but too much fear him. Besides, he understood well, that foul ways are not always paffable, nor to be used (especially in suspected and dangerous times) but where others fail. How-ever, it may be noted, That none of his Predeceffors understood the temper of Parliaments better than himfelf, or that prevail'd himfelf more dexteroully of them. Therefore, without being much troubled at the tumultuous beginnings of the rasher fort, he would give them that leave, which all new thingsmust have, to settle. Which being done, his next care was to discover and prevent those privy Combinations that were not for his fervice. After which, coming to the point of Contribution, he generally took ftrict order (by his Commissioners) that Gentlemen in the Country should not spare each other; but that the rrue or (at least) near approaching value of every Mans Goods and Lands should be certified. And this he did the rather, because he knew the Cuftom of his People was to reckon with him about their Subfidies, and indeed, rather to number, than to weigh their Gifts.

His Faults As for his Faults, I find that of opinionate and wilful much objected: Infomuch, that the Imprefficions privately given him by any Court-whift-perer, were hardly or never to be effaced. And her in the Perfons near him had a fingular Ability; while beginning with the Commendations of those they would differace, their manner was to infinuate fuch Exceptions, as they would different works a hardown.

up. Befides, this Wilfulness had a most dangerous quality annexed to it (especially towardshilatter end) being an intenfe Jealoufy almost of all Perfons and Affairs, which disposed him easily to think the worst. Whereas it is a greater part of Wisdom to prevent, than to suspect. These Conditions again being armed with Power, produc'd fuch terrible effects, as filled him both at home and abroad by the Name of Cruel; which also hardly can be avoided; especially, if that Attribute be due, not only to those Princes who inflict capital Punishments frequently, and for small Crimes, but to those who pardon not all that are capable of Mercy. And for testimonies in this kind, fome urge two Queens, one Cardinal (in rhind, former age two vaccins, one caramin'd, though abfent) Dukes, Marquiffes, Earls, and Earls Sons, twelve; Barons and Knights eighteen; Abbats, Priors, Monks and Priefts feven-ty feven; of the more common fort, between one Religion and another, huge Multitudes. He gave fome Proofs yet that he could forgive; tho' as they were few and late, they ferv'd not to recover him the Name of a Clement Prince. As for Covetoufness, or Rapine, another main Fault observed by Sanders, as extending not only to a promifcuous overthrow of Religious Houses, but a notable derogation of Title of Supream Head of the Church in his Dominions (and the rather, that he ftill retained the fubiliance of the Roman Catholick Religion) nothing, that I know, can on those terms palliate it, unless it might be collected, that the Religious Orders in his Kingdom would have affifted those who threaten'd Invasion from abroad, and that he had no other extraordinary means than their Revenues then left to defend himfelf. For certainly, the publick pretext, taken from their exceffive numbers in proportion to a well compos'd State, or the inordinate and vicious life of the general fort, cannot fufficiently excuse him; fince, together with the supernumerary and debauch'd Abbeys, Priories and Nunneries, he subverted and extinguished the good and opportune; without leaving any Receptacle for fuch as through Age or Infirmity being unapt for fecular bufiness, would end their days in a devout and a retir d life. Neverthelets, as he erected divers new Bishopricks, increafed the number of Colleges, and the Stipend of Readers in the Universities, and did many other pious Works, it is probable he intended fome Reparation. Though (as the Romen Catholick Party conceives it) they were neither fatisfactory for, nor equivalent to the Defolations and Ruines he procur'd, when yet he should pretend that the Revenues and Number of the Gentry and Soldatesque of the King-dom were augmented thereby. Howbeit, as in this Act of overthrowing Monasteries, his Parliaments were deeply engag'd, it will be dange-tons to question the Authority thereof, since things done by Publick Vote, where they find not Reason, make it; neither have many Laws other ground than the Constitution of the Times; which yet afterwards changing, leave their Interpretation doubtful: Infomuch, that Posteriry might justly abrogate them when the Caufes thereof ceas'd, had they the Power to do it. For which regard also I shall not interpose my Opinion otherwife, than that this King had mer with no occasion to do that which hath caused fo much Scandal to him and his Parliaments. But whereas Sanders hath remarked Covetouflity; while beginning with the Commendations of those they would disprace, their manner was not as a great Vice in this King, I could wish it to infinuate such Exceptions, as they would display the commend a Man more in few Words, than comted the other extreme (being Prodigality) for th

200

pregnant in the Kings Father and himfelf. first, by an exact inquiry into the corruptions and abuses of his Officers and Subjects, and the prevailing himself thereof to bring all into good order; and the getting of Money together, whother by ordinary or extraordinary means (only when they were not manifeffly unjust) and lastly. by frugality, acquiring to himfelf the name of by negative, acquiring to infinite the man of purificing at home, and puiffern abroad; as being known to have in his Coffers always as much as would pay an Army Royal. Whereas this King, fo often exhausting his Treasury, that he was constrain'd at last to have recourse to unufual and grievous ways for relieving his wants, did not only difaffect his Subjects in great part (as appear'd in the Rebellion of the Northern Men and others, though to their Confusion) but expos'd his Kingdom to the Invafion of his Neighbours: Who knowing (as all Princes do) to about how much their Neighbours Revenues amount, and that there remain'd no longer any ready way to improve them, did collect thence what forces he could furnish; and confequently, would have affail'd him at home, but that their mutual divisions did hinder them. Whereby it appears, that what in Henry VII is call'd by some Covetousness, was a Royal Vertue: Whereas the exceffive and needless expences of Henry VIII. drew after them those miserable Consequences which the World bath fo much reproach'd. Howbeit, there may be occasion to doubt, whether the immense Treasure which Henry VII left behind, were not (accidentally) the cause of those ills that follow'd: While the young Prince his Son, finding fuch a mass of Money, did first carelelly fpend, and after ftrive to fupply as he

As for the third Vice, wherewith he was juftly charg'd, being Luft and Wantonness; there is little to answer, more than that it was rather a personal sault, than damageable to the Publick. Howbeit, they who reprove it, ought not only the greater fault: The examples of both being for pregnant in the kings Father and himfelf. The first, by an exact inquiry into the corruptions and abuses of his Officers and Subjects, and the prevailing himfelf thereof to bring all into good order; and the getting of Money together, whether by ordinary or extraordinary means (only when they were not manifeltly unjuft) and lattly, by frugality, acquiring to himfelf the name of prudant at home, and puissant abroad; as being himfelf the means as would pay an Army Royal. Whereas this King, so often exhausting his Treasury, that he kingdom, rather than any thing elfe.

With all his crimes yet, he was one of the He was most glorious Princes of his time: Infonuch, most glorious Princes of his time: Infonuch, most glorious dom did court him, but his Subjects in general Princes of did highly reverence him, as the many tryals he his time, put them to, fufficiently testifie: Which yet expir'd so quickly, that it may be truly said, all pur them to, sufficiently restlife: Which yer expir'd so quickly, that it may be truly said, all his Pomp died with him; his Memory being now expos'd to that obloquy, as his Accusers will neither admit reason of State to cover any where, or necessity to excuse his Actions. For, as they were either discontented Clergy-men (for his relinquishing the Papal Authority, and overthrowing the Monasteries;) or offended Women (for divers severe examples against their Sex) that first opposid and cry'd him down, the clamour hath been the greater: So that although one William Thomas a Clerk to the Council to Edward the Sixth, and living about the latter times of Hemy the Eighth's Reign, did in great part defend him in an Italian Book, printed Anno 1552, it hath not avail'd.

But what this Prince was, and whether, and how far forth excufable in point of State, Conficience, or Honour, a diligent observation of his Actions, together with a conjuncture of the times, will (I conceive) better declare to the judicious Reader, than any factious relation on what fade whatfoever. To conclude; I wish I could leave him in his Grave.

The End of the Reign of K. Henry VIII.

King Edward the vi

THE

LIFE and REIGN

K.EDWARD VI

By Sir 70HN HAYWARD Kt. and Doctor of Law.

Prince Fd.

Sixth of that Name, of the Nor-man Race, was born at Hampton-Court the 17th (a) of Offober, 1537. being the only furviving Son of King Henry the Eighth, by Jane his Third Wife, Daughter to Sir John Septer K. And becaule King Henry did take her to Wife after Wife, Daughter to Sir John Seymer Kt. And because King Henry did take her to Wife after brought forth, were by the ancient Romans the Death of Katherine his First Wife, from dwhom he had been divorc'd, no Question nor DWARD King of England, the | Conceit was cast, but that this Issue between Anno 1537. them had Right to fucceed.

All Reports do constantly run, That he was not by natural Passage delivered into the World, but that his Mother's Body was opened for his Birth, (b) and that she died of the Incision the

(a) All Historians, with one Confent, state the Birth of this Prince to be on the Eve of St. Edward, (whence

(a) All Historians, with one Consent, state the Birth of this Prince to be on the Eve of St. Edward, (whence 'tis likely he had that Name given him) that is, Other 12. except No. Sanders, who purs it at the Sixth of the Ides of Others, which answers to the 10th of that Mont; in unwilling, perhaps, that this Prince should have so fortunate an Onnea, as to be born on the Eve of that English Saint and King.

Three Days after, wize the 15th Day of Others, with very great Solendor and Solemnity, he was baptival, those of the highest Nobility, the Bishops, Abbors, Dignisy'd Clergy, and Chaplains, with abundance of Knights and Gentlemen, being summond to be present. The Prince was carry'd from his Lodgings to the Chapel by the Marchiness of Exerc, with a most illustrious Attendance. The Two Princesses, the Lady Mary and the Lady Elexabers, were in the Retinue, and affisted. The Gostiathers at the Font, were Archbishop Crammer and Thomas Duke of Northella, which was goodfaster at his Constitution the same time that the Duke of Sandhik was Godfaster at his Constitution the same that the Constitution of the Bishops, his Name was aloud proclaim d by Garier King at Arms, and call'd Prince Edward, Duke of Cornwall, and Earlo Clester: And so have been supported by the Arms, and call'd Prince Edward, Duke of Cornwall, and Earlo Clester: And so have been supported by the Arms, and call'd Prince Edward, Duke of Cornwall, and Earlo of Other next following, that is, twelve Days from the Birth of the Prince, the Queen's Chamber.

On the 24th of Other next following, that is, twelve Days from the Birth of the Prince, the Queen's Chamber.

On the 24th of Other next following, that is, twelve Days after the Delivery; and by this Author, who affigns her Death to be four Days after; wherein he himself! is single; (b) As he is also in that which follows, our. That his Mother's Body was open d, to make way for him, by Incidion: And he laws, All Reports de companity run so For none of our Historians, that wrote before Hoyard, give any Cou sum 1537. Pliny writeth; Auspicatius enecia matre nascuntur, Plin. lib. 7. Fight Stepho Africanus prior natur. These were Plin. lib. 7. called Casenus, and alterwards Casares, as Pliny, cap. 9. Fights Pompeius, Solimus, and Titius Probus, Fest, lib. 3. affirm, Quia casso materia utero in lucem prodif-Solin. ca. 4. Sent

rer. mem. Prob. in epit. l. 10. Valerii. lib. 13. caffig. Plin. loco end

Lib. 7.

before his Translat. of Demost. Orar

In this Manner was Cafe Fabius born, whom Livy reported to have been thrice Conful, epic.l. 10. In the proportion of nave of the control of the view Armilius, next with Sp. Furius, Valerii. Liv. Dec. 1. and thirdly with T. Virginius. Thus also was lib. 2. Scipio born; who, by reason of his brave Atherements in Africk, was surnamed Scipio his lib. 13. Hermo, in Africanus prior: But in that Pliny affirmeth, that he was the first who was called Cafar, à cafe matris utero, he feemeth to have made a flip; for before him, and somewhat before the Wars with the Samnites, one Claudius was furnamed C.efar, because he was in that Fashion brought into the World.

In ancient times these Births were esteemed facred to Apollo, as Servius noteth out of these Words in Virgil:

Inde Lycham ferit exectum cum matre perempta, Lib to Et tibi Phabe facrum. -

And therefore Asculapins, because he was ripped from his Mother's Womb, was feigned to be the Son of Apollo; as Servins upon another Place of Virgil hath observed. For this Cause also, in the ancient State of Rome, Things confecrated to Apollo were kept by the Family of the Cafars. That Julius Cafar was fo born, it is an uncontrolable Report; but that he was the first of the Family of Cafars who was fo either named or born, it is a thick misty Error, supported chiefly by some Men of excellent Judgment in their own Profeffions, but childishly unskilful in any thing befides. Pliny writeth, that his Father was furnamed Cæsar; who having born the Office of Prætor, determined his Life by sudden Lib.7.c.53. fides. Death.

> What would have been either the Fortunes or Endeavours of K. EDWARD, he never attained to Years of Proof. Affuredly both for tamed to 1 ears of Proof. Antifectly both for Jeege, but specific the Time of his Age and Reign, he is rather Italian Languages; having always great Judge to be admired than commended, whereby he ment in measuring his Words by his Matter; raifed an high Expectation for Times to enhis Speech being alike, both sluent and weighty, fue. In one point he was like the like-born such as best beleemed a Prince. As for nature

Julius Cafar: For as Cafar in the midst of his Anno 1543 greatest Actions wrote an exact and curious Commentary of all his notable Enterprises by Arms, fo this Edward during all the Time of his Reign, but most especially towards the End, kept a most judicious (b) Journal of all the He writes a most principal Passages of the Affairs of his Journal of Estate. These Memorials, written with King Edward's Hand, (which now shall be the Ground of this History) were imparted unto me by the Great Treasurer of English Antiquities, Sir Robert Cotton Kt. & Bar. who, as Sir Robert he hath been a most industrious both Collector Cotton and Conferver of choice Pieces in that Kind. fo is he most ingenuously free to communicate the Use of them to others.

This young Prince was brought up among The Prince's Nurses, until he arrived to the Age of fix Years: Instructors. When he had passed this weak and sappy Age, he was committed to Dr. Coxe, who after was Coxe. his Almoner, (c) and Mr. John Cheeke, Men Cheeke, of mean Birth; (d) but so well esteemed for Virtue and Learning, by reason of the Place of their Employment, that they might well be said to be born of themselves. These having equal Authority for Instruction of the young Prince, and well agreeing, bare equal Stroke in divers Faculties; Dr. Cose for Knowledge of Divinity, Philosophy, and Gravity of Manners; Mr. Cheeke for Eloquence in the Latin and Greek Tongues: But for other Sufficiencies (fo far as it appears by the Books which he wrote) Pedantick enough. (e) Others also were appointed to acquaint him with the Use of the most respected Foreign Languages; all jointly endeavouring to infuse into him Knowledge and Virtue by fome mixture of honest Delight.

Under these Teachers the Prince thrived so His great well, that in short time he spake the French Proficiency. Tongue perfectly. In the Latin Tongue he could declaim upon the fuddain no less both readily and purely than many who were reputed amongst the most learned of these Times. He attained not only commendable Know-ledge, but Speech in the Greek, Spanish and Italiam Languages; having always great Judg-ment in measuring his Words by his Matter;

⁽b) This Journal is now printed among the Collections, at the End of the Second Volume of the History of the Reformation, by the Bilhop of Sorum, taken from the Volume Narsy, c. to. in the Carion Library. It commences from the Year 1537. The Year of his Birth, and to proceeds more largely from the Year of his Accellion. to the Crown, viz. 1547. unto the End of November, 1552.

⁽c) And Mafter also of his Requests.

⁽d) Sir Anthony Cook Kt. was also a great Guide of his Learning and Manners in these his early Years, and his chief Instructer. In saying, the two other were of mean Birch, the Historian wrongs one, if not both: For Cheek's Family was ancient, and of good Wealth. This Cheeke was sprung from the Cheeker of the Isle of Wight; the Antiquity of which Family is trac'd as far backwards as King Rithers' the Second's Time, when a Cheeke married a Daughter of the Lord Mannague, as appears in the Heralds Books.

⁽e) Upon Check's Books and Learning, as well as his Birth, he leaves a Blot; faying, he was Pedantick enough. He translated two Orations of St. Chryfoffom into elegant Latin. He wrote The trans subject to the Redel, in the Time of the Insurrection under this King. And there were Letters in Latin passed between Bishop Gardiner and him from Combridge, concerning the right pronouncing of the Greek Tongue; which were afterwards published; with some positions, other Letters, printed occasionally: Which no Man can depart from the reading of, but with very high Opinion is great Ingenuity and Gravity. He was a Man of great Reading; an excellent Plainfi, Orator, and Philosopher; one of the first Restorers of good polite Learning in Cambridge. Dr. The Wylfon, Secretary of State to Queen Eleasth, and his Contemporary at the University, and one that knew him well, call'd him, Test vare Learned Man, and Singular Ornamens of the Land.

my, and other Liberal Sciences, his Perfections were fuch, that the great Italian Philosopher Cardane, having tasted him by many Conferences, and finding him most strongly to encounter his new devifed Paradoxes in Philosophy, feemed to be aftonished between Admiration and Delight, and divulged his Abilities to be miraculous. (f) These his Acquirements by Industry were exceedingly both enriched and enlarged by many excellent En-dowments of Nature: For in Disposition he was mild, gracious and pleafant, of an Heavenly Wit; in Body beautiful, but especially in his Eyes, which feemed to have a ftarry Liveliness and Lufture in them; generally he feemed to be as Cardane reported of him, A MIRACLE OF NATURE.

King Henry's Death.

King Edward comes

When he was a few Months above nine Years of Age, great Preparation was made either for creating or for declaring him to be Prince of Wiles, Duke of Comral, and Count Palatine of Chefter. (g) In the midst whereof King Henry his Father ended his Life of a Ang Henry his Father ended his Life of a Dropfy, accompanied with a fireading Scar of his Thigh. Hereupon Edward Earl of Hersford, and Sir Anthony Browne Kt. of the Order and Mafter of the Horfe, were forthwith dispatched, by the Residue of the Council, to the young King, then lying at Hersford. (b) These came unto him, and the next Day brought him to Enfield, neither with Prepara-tion nor Train any more than ordinary. Here they first declared unto him and to the Lady Elizabeth his Sister the Death of King Henry their Father: Upon which Tidings they both brake forth into such unforced and unfeigned Paffions, as it plainly appeared, that good Nature did work in them beyond all other Respects. Never was Sorrow more sweetly fet forth, their Faces feeming rather to beautify their Sorrow, than their Sorrow to cloud the Beauty of their Faces. Their young Years, their excellent Beauties, their lovely and lively Enterchange of Complaints, in fuch Sort graced their Grief, as the most Iron Eyes at that time prefent were drawn thereby into Society of their Tears.

mmo 1546. ral Philosophy, for Logick, Musick, Astrono- London, the Earl of Harford siding next before Anno 1547 him, and Sir Anthony Promne believed. The fame Day he was proclaimed King, and his Lodging was prepared within the Tower. He there was received by the Constable and Lieutenant on Horseback without the Gates, and upon the Bridge next the Ward-Gate by all the chief Lords of his Council. Thefe attended him to his Chamber of Presence, and there fware Allegiance unto him.

Here he remained about three Weeks; and The King's in the mean time the Council appointed unto Unite Protehim by his Father's Will daily fate, for order-dar ing the Affairs of the Kingdom. Among thefe, the Earl of H reford was elected, * and tele s. forthwith proclaimed Protector of the Realm, and Governor of the King's Person, until he should accomplish the Age of eighteen Years. To this Office he was deemed most fit, for that he was the King's Unkle ! y the Mother's Side, very near unto him in Blood, but yet of no Capacity to succeed; by reason whereof his natural Affection and Duty was less easy to be over-carried by Ambition. A few Days after, * the Lord Protector knighted the King * Febr. 6. within the Tower, and immediately the King flood up under his Cloth of State, took the Sword from the Lord Protector, and dubbed the Lord Mayor of Lordon Knight. Here-Honours conhence * enfued divers other Advancements in ferr'd. Honour: For Sir Edward Seymer, Lord Proce-Honour: For Sir Edward Sepmer, Love Proce the Day after ctor and Earl of Hertford, was created Duke of the Day after Somerfet; the Lord William Parre, Earl of Effex, of King was proclaimed Marquels of Northampton; Henry's Es. Sir Thomas Seymer, the King's Unkle, was made neral. Lord of Eudley and High Admiral of England; Sir Richard Rich was made Lord Rich; Sir William Willoughby Lord Willoughby of Parreham; and Sir Edmund Sheffield Lord Sheffield of Buterwike. And because high Titles of Honour were in that Time of the King's Minory sparingly granted, because Dignity then waited upon Defert, which caufed it again to be waited on by Refpect, every of these testified for others, that it was the Pleasure of the King's Father before his Death, that these Titles should thus be conferred.

ety of their Tears.

During this time the Body of King Henry King Henry Log the last of was with honourable Solemnities (i) convey-19 Financial. January, the young King advanced towards ed from London to Sheene, * and thence to Febr. 14. Not Sheene Windsor, but Ston.

where the Corps and

(f) Bur this Philosophical Conference of the King with Cardan, was not now at the Beginning of his Reign, but some Years after, when he was fifteen Years of Age.

(g) L. Herbert writes, this Prince was made fo but fix Days after his Birth; at which Time there was a Creation of two other Earls, viz. Hertford and Southampton: But this indeed the Author took from this King's Journal, that mentions great Preparations for it about this Time.

(b) Hollingfield makes the Place of the King's prefent Refidence to be at Hatfield: But our Author follows herein the King's Journal, wherein those two Noblemen are said to come to him to Hartford.

(i) Because these Honourable Solemnities are not in any of our Historians particularly set down, take this short Ac-

(i) Because these Homonable Solemnities are not in any of our Historians particularly set down, take this short Account of it, from a Volume in the Office of Arms.

The Chef wherein the Royal Corps was laid shood in the midst of the Privy Chamber, with Lights, and Divine Service said about him, with Masses, Obsequies, and continual Warch, made by the Chaplains and Gentlemen of the Privy Chamber, in their Order and Course, Night and Day, for five Days, till the Chapel was a goodly Hearse, with eighty square Tapers, every Light containing two Foot in Length, in the whole 1800 of 111.

Weight of Vax, a souther Relation writeth about 2000 Weight, a granished with Pensils, Estonomous, Banners and Bannerols of Descents; and at the four Corners, Banners of Saints, beaten in fine Gold upon Damask; with a Majesty thereover of rich Cloth of Tillus, and Vallance of black Silk, and Finge of black Silk and Gold; and the Barriers without the Hearse, and the Sides and Floor of the said Chapel, covered with black Cloth to the High Alta; and at the Sides and Ceiling of the sild Chapel, severed with black Cloth to the High Alta; and at the Sides and Ceiling of the sild Chapel set with Banners and Standards of St. Gorge and others. The 3d of Relation of Corners and Floor of the Sides and Ceiling of the sild Chapel, by the Lord Great Master and Officers of the Houthold, and there placed within the Hearse, under a Pall of rich Cloth of Tillus, garn shed with Elchorobons, and a rich Cloth of Gold set with precious Stopes thereon. It continued there twelve Days, with Mister Vol. II.

Armeral

March.

King Ed-

tues

ward's Fir-

1:4- Hindjir, and there buried within the Colthrew them into the Grave ; but at their Return to the Tower, new Staves were delivered unto them. This solemnity being finished, the King, on the 19th of February, 1547. rode in great Nate from the Tower to the Palace of Bidbuigher; and the Day following was Crowned by the Archbifthop of Canterbury, affifted with other Bifthops, and all the chief - F. ward Core- Nobility of the Realm, about the 29th Year of the Timpire of Charles V. and the 23d of the Reign of Iranes I. of France, and in the 5th Year both of the Reign and Age of Mary Coren of Scatland.

The fame Day a general Pardon was granted to all Perfons, as it hath been ufual at Corenations: But by some envious Opposions, or for some other Causes unknown, fix only were excepted, the Duke of Norfolk, Cardinal Potto, Edward le Courtney, eldeft Son to the Marquis of Exeter, Dr. Pates, Mr. Fortefeue, and Mr. Throgmorton: But they overlived that Envy, and had their Pardons afterwards, in the first Year of the Reign of Queen Mary. A few Days after * the Larl of Southampton, * The 6th of Lord Chancellor of England, for being Opinative, (as it was reported, and obstinately oppolite to the rest of the Lords in Matters of Council) was removed both from his Office of being Chancellor, and from his Place and Authority in Council, (k) and the Great Seal was delivered to Str William Pawlet, Lord St. John, who was Lord Great Master of the King's Houshold: But this Wound of Dif-grace never left bleeding, until it was stopt by the Protector's Fall.

It is certain, that from the first Entrance of of this King to his Reign, never was King either more loving to others, or better beloved generally of all: The one whereof pro-

I the other from many Graces and Virtues illu-Anno 5417. strious in him; for, besides his excellent Beauty and Modelty befeeming a Prince, besides his fweet Humanity, the very Life of mortal Condition, besides a natural Disposition to all Literature, whereto he seemed rather born than instructed, many noble and high Virtues feedbald with the conditions of the condition of the condit sparkled in him, especially Clemency, Courage, Care, and Knowledge in Affairs of State.

